NOW.

The present, the present is all thou hast
For thy sure possessing;
Like the patriarch's angel, hold it fast
Till it gives its blessing.

Like warp and woof, all destinies
Are woven fast,
Linked in sympathy, like the keys
Of an organ vast.

Pluck one thread, and the web we mar;
Break but one
Of a thousand keys, and the paining jar
Through all will run.

O restless spirit! wherefore strain
Beyond thy sphere?
Heaven and hell, with their joy and pain,
Are now and here.

Back to thyself is measured well
All thou hast given;
The neighbor's wrong is thy present hell,
His bliss, thy heaven.

Then of what is to be, and of what is done,
Why queriest thou?
The past and the time to be are one,
And both are now.

PURITY.

Oh that the age could learn afresh the grandeur, the beauty, the nobleness, the blessedness of purity. This grace includes all others and measures all others. More than all things else the world about us needs to be taught the meaning of Christian knighthood, the beauty of holiness.

Let men learn the old, old, truth that a gentleman is always a pure-minded and a pure-hearted man. Let our maidens learn that of all culture and of all adornment the loveliest and best is heart culture in holiness. Show me a woman who has this hope, indeed, and I will show you a Madonna soul on which the beatific and beautifying light has shone and is still shining.—Samuel Smith Harris.

MR. AND MRS. ISAAC M. YONAN.

Mr. Isaac Malek Yonan, of Oroomiah, Persia, belongs to the family of Maleks, a title given to them by the government as well as Nestorian patriachate, and it is ecclesiastical as well as political. The family of Mr. Yonan have had this office for about six hundred years. After one Malek's death, it is conferred on the eldest son of the nearest relative that is qualified for the office. At the time that the first American missionaries went to Persia about 1835, Malek Aghabey, the great uncle of Mr. Yonan, was the Malek of the Nestorians in Oroomiah. He was one of the first men who gave the hand of fellowship to the missionaries, and was considered one of the most pious and gentlemanly of his day. After his death, Malek Yonan, the father of Isaac Yonan, was favored with the title of his uncle, and has occupied that office actively for many years. Malek Yonan, is well known in the missionary annals because of his active work in the Nestorian mission as an educator and as a profound preacher. Any one reading "Woman and Her Saviour in Persia," a book written largely about the work of Miss Fidelia Fiske among the Nestorian women cannot but be impressed by the sketches of the work of this gentleman.

When he was a boy twelve years of age his father took him to the missionaries to be educated. Mr. Stoddard, in his life, says that he was given to his care. He speaks of him as very bright and efficient in Bible knowledge and very spiritually-minded. When he was old enough he went to college at Seir and from there he graduated. He was taken then by Fidelia Fiske to be a teacher in her school. There he remained as teacher for twelve years. During the week days he was busy teaching, and from Sabbath to Sabbath would go like an evangelist to the villages around carrying with him copies of the Bible. There he would establish Sunday-schools and preach revival sermons. After that he accepted a call to the pastorate of the church in Geogtapa, his native village, and there he preached for twenty-five years. During his pastorate many revivals occurred. Afterwards he was called to occupy the place of his uncle, Malek Aghabey, and gave up his active ministerial work, giving himself largely to the official duties of the Malek, and in looking after the needs of his persecuted people, and pleading their cause in the Persian court. At the same time he preached almost every Sabbath in different places. He is now seventy-four years of age. His sight is dim and he rests from active duties at his home, constantly looking forward with great delight to his home above.

Malek Yonan has five sons and two daughters living. The youngest is Mr. Isaac M. Yonan who was educated in Oroomiah College and graduated in the year 1891. Shortly after that he was married to Miss Mary Babona, the daughter of an active preacher in our mission service who has been actively at work for the Master for thirty-six years. He still has charge of two churches and is doing a good work for the Lord. Mr. Yonan, about six months after his marriage left his wife with his parents and came to this country to get an education in preparation for the ministry of the Gospel. He lived thus separated from his wife three years.

In the fall of 1895 Mrs. Yonan joined her husband in this country. They will remain together until they are ready to return to their native land.

Mr. Yonan spent his first year of study at Westminster College, Fulton, Mo. He was introduced to Rev. Dr. Marquess the president of the college by Mr. Moorhatch, a brother-in-law of Mr. Yonan, who was in this country studying for the ministry. The year in Fulton was spent in acquiring a knowledge of the English language and in some other studies. The year after Mr. Yonan followed Dr. Marquess to the Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary, then in its first session. For three years he continued to study in the seminary that he loves so much and under professors whom he esteems most highly. Last May he graduated, taking a full course and the degree of bachelor of divinity. He spent the summer with his wife partly in Virginia, and partly in North Carolina, preaching for the benefit of missions. He has returned to Louisville for the winter and will spend the year in studying medicine, at the same time taking a post graduate course in the Seminary. The next year, God willing, he will be ready to return to preach for his people or anywhere the Master may call him. Mr. Yonan is in his 26th year, young and vigorous and may reasonably hope for a successful future. Mr. and Mrs. Yonan have a boy in Persia whose name is Josiah. He was born about six months after Mr. Yonan left that country and has never seen his father. When Mrs. Yonan came last fall to the United States she was compelled to leave him with her husband's parents. It has been a sore trial to both of them to be away from their child. The lad is now four years old and will come to this country to be educated. The family of Malek Yonan, father of the subject of our sketch is well represented in America. One son, in Chicago studying medicine in the Rush Medical College, is devoted to the Young People's Christian Endeavor work. A grandson, who has spent one year in Pantops Academy, Virginia, is now studying at Davidson College, N. C.

O Lord, let me have anything but thy frown, and anything with thy smile.—Cecil.

"THE PROMISE IS UNTO YOU."

Turning to the Sabbath-school lesson notes in our issue of this week, our readers will find brief reference to these words. They are worthy of more extended notice and further study. They were spoken by Peter at Pentecost when telling the inquirers what they must do to be saved from the pangs of conviction wrought in their hearts by his preaching in the power of the Holy Ghost. He said, Be baptized in the name of Jesus for the remission of sins and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. "For the promise is unto you."

Plainly this promise is the gift of the Holy Ghost. It is not in order to regeneration, they were to receive the gift, for they were told to repent, which is an act of the regenerate, and to be baptized which is an outward sign and open seal of their confession of Christ already believed on as Saviour. Therefore this text is improperly used as proof of the right to administer baptism to children albeit of the covenant. It does bind the New Testament to the Old Testament. It does link a fulfilment in the new dispensation to prophecy in the Old. It therefore yields a fair, just and important inference that the blessings of the old dispensation are inherited by the new, and that children have covenant privileges the same in both. The proofs are elsewhere. This yields inferential corroboration.

This promise was given in the prophecy of Joel. It was repeated and amplified by Christ. It began to be fulfilled on the day of Pentecost. It continues after Pentecost, not to the apostles as such, nor to the disciples assembled and filled with the Holy Ghost, as if once for all, but to those who heard Peter preach and cried what must we do, and "the promise is unto you, and to them that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."

To this promise our Lord referred in both the accounts made by Luke in the Gospel and the Acts. In Luke xxiv: 49, in connection with the statement, "ye are witnesses." He says further: "And, behold I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high." The record in Acts 1: 6, referring again to the disciples as witnesses, and manifestly of the qualification for that, the words of our Lord, are "But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you." So when they were all filled with the Holy Ghost they began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance and many cried: what shall we do? Acts ii: 4.

As to the conditions for the fulfilment of the promise, recall Luke xi: 13; "How much more will your Heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him." Consider that the disciples were all with one accord in one place, manifestly in the upper room of the first chapter and "with one accord in prayer and supplication," "these all continued." Peter commanded the inquirers repenting, to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ. This is to be interpreted further by the words of verse 36: "God hath made that same Jesus both Lord and Christ. Connect this again with verse 33; "Therefore being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, He hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear." Take once more Galatians iii: 14, "that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith."

From all this we may gather. That the promise of the Spirit was beside and beyond His work of regeneration, and sanctification, and comfort. That Christ received the right to bestow the promise by His finished work of redemption and exaltation as Lord to the right hand of God the Father. That He gave it as a baptism, an enduement of power. That the disciples believed the promise and waited for the fulfillment with one accord in prayer and supplication. That those who received the gift of the Holy Ghost were thereby witnesses with Christ by their patience, courage, and faithful words, even in all Judea, and Samaria and unto the uttermost parts of the earth.

It is just the want of this gift, the neglect or failure to wait in prayer and supplication for the fulfillment of this provision that has made our churches seek success by worldly methods, our members cold and careless and the results of testimony and teaching in our times so unsatisfactory. In surrender to Christ as Lord, in trusting Him to give, and in waiting of prayer and supplication may we this year know the power of the Holy Ghost.

SOME PERSONS whose opinions are entitled to the greatest respect believe that Protestantism in this county has in any event nothing to fear from Romanism. They believe, we do not say affect to believe, that the type of Romanism in this country is essentially different from that which dominates Spain, Brazil, Mexico, and to a very large extent all Roman Catholic countries. They sincerely believe that the American idea of liberty and respect for individual rights, patriotism in short, so thoroughly imbues even the Romanist mind and heart, that no attempt to interfere with the liberties or laws could find support or countenance. The opinion does credit to their charity, but at the expense of their wisdom, we must believe. They venture nothing more than a supposition founded on a most hopeful view of the situation and directly in the face of facts of current history. Even in this country the disposition of the Romish hierarchy has been exhibited in a way to show that they have both the will and the power to destroy those of their own faith who stand in the way of their plans and purposes. Dr. McGlynn with a boldness amounting to defiance withstood them for awhile, but finally Dr. McGlynn was brought to ask for pardon on his knees. No Roman Catholic publisher now dare seriously differ on any point with the bishop of his diocese under penalty of temporal and eternal ruin. But our neighbor, Canada, illustrates most positively and unmistakably what we are to expect when Rome holds the balance of power at the polls, or in the Legislature of this country. The Protestanism of Canada it must not be forgotten is, every whit as thoroughly saturated with the idea of liberty as is that of this country, but it has to contend with the power of Rome in the attempt to exercise the authority of civil government. The late election in the Dominion of Canada decided the school question in a way that was not satisfactory to the Roman hierarchy and elected as premier Mr. Laurier, a Roman Catholic of liberal view and fully pledged to restore the separate schools in Manitoba. Quebec is a Roman Catholic province, and here the Romish priests constitute an autocracy. Only last week a newspaper, L'Electeur, published in Quebec, was silenced by "a mandament issued by the Roman Catholic bishops of Quebec, forbidding faithful Catholics to subscribe for, read, circulate or otherwise encourage the newspaper L'Electeur, published in Quebec city, under pain of being deprived of the benefits of the church." Quite a stir has been caused by this action and appeal to the privy council has been threatened. But the bishops know their power and there is little doubt but that they will triumph. The offence of L'Electeur was publishing a pamphlet upholding the doctrine of the supremacy of the State in state affairs and denying the right of the Church to dictate to electors how they shall vote upon political questions.

One paper threatened with punishment for opposing the hierarchy has published its regrets for its course and promised henceforth to support the views of the bishops.

But even this is not all. In the election contests tried before the civil courts, witnesses have sworn that they voted under the direct influence of the bishops. Bishop La Flèche, it is alleged, charged his congregation that Mr. Laurier, the Liberal leader, was guilty of error condemned by the Church, and that Catholics could not vote for him or for his candidates without committing sin.

There is a general belief that the hierarchy of Quebec province will shortly issue a mandament forcibly denouncing the Manitoba settlement and threatening disaster to any Catholic member of Parliament who does not protest against it.

These things show what we may expect in this country so soon as Romanism gets in position to dictate terms to our politicians, or to carry elections by the influence of the priesthood.

BANK FAILURES are passing like an epidemic over the country and too often the cause of failure is not because of decline in values, which in a reasonable sense would be business-like failures, but it sometimes is from neglect of directors to discharge their obligations to those who have placed implicit confidence both in their willingness and in their ability to direct; oftener still it would seem these failures are due to the dishonesty of those who have misappropriated—in other words not quite so gentle have stolen—the money and appropriated it to their own use.

Those who have been criminal have in every case been above suspicion, otherwise they would not have been trusted, and they have not infrequently been men specially prominent in religious circles, which is in no wise discredits religion, but the rather magnifies it as showing that respect for it is so universally regarded as evidence of integrity.

Usually no doubt the career of crime is entered upon in full belief that a return to virtue will be fully practicable before detection. The first step appears to be so easy to be retraced, that another and another is taken until the poor victim at last finds that restoration is absolutely impossible. Thenceforth remains nothing but the desire to postpone the day of revelation as long as possible and to this end every resource of wit and cunning and hypocrisy is practiced.

The effect upon the public of every revelation of crime long concealed is disastrous in occasioning loss of confidence. We are fast getting to a point where we will not know whom to trust. The thought is not calculated to encourage optimism, especially as along with it goes failure of justice to redress the wrongs suffered by individuals and society. Calling attention to these things can do but little good. They, alas, are too well known already, and yet it will not do to throw up our hands and give up all for lost. Let us do what we can. God reigns, and though for reasons known only to himself he permits wickedness to run riot, He will yet cause the wrath of man to praise him and the remainder of wrath He will restrain.

We really think our

is a most desirable article to have in any household where the PRESBYTERIAN is taken. It holds the successive issues together in most convenient form, costs no labor and requires no special pains in its adjustment. What a fine Synodical Album a year's gathering would thus constitute!

IF THE FRIENDS of the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN could realize how great a favor they would confer by sending in their subscriptions promptly, we are sure our coffers would be comfortably replenished, and our burden thereby lightened.

AND NOW ANOTHER word to our friends who would like to help us: It depends upon you whether the paper for 1897 shall go into families not now having the benefit of it. If you appreciate the paper try to send as many new subscribers as you can. If you can send one new name send that. If you will canvass for a number write us and we will make compensation satisfactory.

THE FOLLOWING from Ruskin can apply to the study of no other book so well as to that of the Bible:

"When you come to a good book, you must ask yourself, 'Am I inclined to work as an Australian miner would? Are my pick axes and shovels in good order, and am I in good trim myself, my sleeves well up to the elbow, and my breath good, and my temper."

By these last words we suppose the gifted writer to mean—Have I the spirit of perseverance and of patience.

HAMPDEN SIDNEY NOTES.

Perhaps to those who are interested in the removal of the Seminary to Richmond, the most pleasing bit of news in the large new year's edition of the Richmond Dispatch, was contained in the announcement that the Board of Trustees of the Seminary, at its meeting in Richmond on the last day of the old year, has authorized the issue of bonds to the amount of $75,000 in order to get the money with which to prosecute at once the erection of the new buildings. These bonds are well secured and it is thought there will be no difficulty in getting the desired amount of money. This means that in all probability Union Seminary will begin its next session in its new home in Richmond. One of the main buildings is already nearing completion, and the purpose is to push the work as fast as practicable on others. There will be many sad hearts over leaving the old place and the old surroundings, but every lover of the Seminary should feel thankful for the bright prospects for the future of this the oldest and best theological school of our Church in the South.

The Christmas holidays—that we didn't get—had few charms for seminarians this year. True our esteemed and beloved professors seemed to sympathize with us in our affliction, and a good many of the students were dined with them and their families on Christmas day, and we have had specially kind attention from the village people, but it all did not suffice to allay the horrors of examinations on every other day, and lessons on the days between, during all the festive season when our friends of the college over the way were revelling in the pleasures of home and friends. The inducements, however, were not sufficient to keep all the seminarians on the hill, and the following spent their Christmas at home and some of them at other places perhaps dearer even than home.

Mr. W. L. Lingle, our genial and popular young tutor in Hebrew and Greek, paid a visit to his mother and other relatives and friends at Mill Bridge, N. C.

Mr. S. S Oliver, is resting up for a few days at his home, Madison, N. C. While there he will visit Stokes county where he did some mission work last summer.

Mr. R. M. Williams, another North Carolina boy spent his vacation at Middlebrook, Va. Mr. S. H. Williamson, of Yanceyville, N. C., who has been at his home for a month or more is expected back soon. Mr. Allen Jones, Jr., Jonesboro, N. C., will not return to the Seminary before the first of March. Mrs. W. W. Moore and children are spending the holidays with her parents at Salem, N. C. J.

YOUR PRESENT SPHERE.

If you be engaged in an upright business, then you may serve God in it as acceptably as does he who occupies the pulpit. There are some Christians who foolishly suppose that one cannot best serve God unless he be engaged in some purely, distinctively religious sphere. This is a mischievous mistake. God wants every Christian to serve him in just the place and sphere that he is in. If a Christian be in a sort of business in which he cannot honestly ask God to bless him; then he ought to get out of it in a hurry. C. H. Spurgeon said: "God is glorified by our serving him in our proper vocations. Every lawful trade may be sanctified by the Gospel to noble ends. Turn to the Bible and you will find the most menial forms of labor connected either with most daring deeds of faith, or with persons whose lives have been illustrious for holiness. Therefore be not discontented with your calling. Whatever God has made your position, or your work, abide in that, unless you are quite sure that he calls you to something else. Let your first care be to glorify God to the utmost of your power where you are. Fill your present sphere to his praise, and if he needs you in another he will show it to you." Some men have left a calling which we designate as secular and entered the ministry, under the plea of doing more good, whereas they should have remained where they were and honored God in their work.

PERSONS AND PAPERS.

Many persons are disposed to think that they are not Christians because they have so much trouble over their sins; but they forget that the best of saints have had similar experiences. David and Paul had to fight the good fight unto the bitter end. There is also the consolation in the fact that the season of triumph will assuredly come. He who has begun the good work in us will perform it unto the day of Christ Jesus. The regenerated shall be the sanctified and the glorified of the Lord.—Presbyterian.

Not in the achievement, but in the endurance of the human soul, does it show its divine grandeur, and its alliance with the infinite God.—E. H. Chapin.

Giving money to the Lord is just as much an act of sacred service as offering a prayer, or singing a hymn of praise, or teaching in a mission school, or coming to a sacramental table. In the Bible, the consecration of our substance is not made a mere incidental, it is put in the fore front of our religious duties.—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

If God be my Father, He loves me. That means everything to me. It means provision for my necessities, protection in all my vicissitudes, guidance in all my perplexities, friendship in my loneliness, comfort in my sorrows, success in Christian work, victory over my temptations, triumph over sin, and at the last an abundant entrance into His Heavenly kingdom. — American Friend.

Make up your spiritual account daily; see how matters stand between God and your souls. Frequent reckonings keep God and conscience friends. Do with your hearts as you do with your watches: wind them up every morning by prayer, and at night examine to see if they have gone true all the day. Call yourselves often to account; keep your reckonings—that is the way to keep your peace.—Thomas Watson.

This truth comes to us more and more the longer that we live, that on what field or in what uniform or with what aims we do our duty matters very little, or even what our duty is, great or small, splendid or obscure. Only to find our duty certainly and somewhere, somehow do it faithfully, makes us good, strong, happy, and useful men, and tunes our lives into some feeble echo of the life of God.—Phillips Brooks.

JAMES SPRUNT INSTITUTE.

The James Sprunt Institute is the name of the High School for girls and young boys of Wilmington Presbytery, and the cut here is a front view of the building in which this school is conducted. The initial step, looking to the establishment of a Presbyterial school was taken at the spring meeting of the Presbytery, held last April in the First church, Wilmington. At that meeting a committee was appointed to consider the matter. Since then the school has become an actual fact. The James Sprunt Institute came into existence on the 11th of October. We predict for it a long, useful and successful career, for the following reasons:

A school of the kind has been long a felt want of the Presbytery; and, but for difficulties, would have been established years ago. Other Presbyteries, seeking to establish such a school, have had the expensive and perplexing question, of securing a suitable building. Through the liberality of Mr. Henry Faison and James W. Blount, M. D., citizens of Kenansville, a large roomy and convenient building, containing eleven class rooms, all lately repaired and beautified, has been placed at the disposal of the Presbytery for school purposes. This building is beautifully located in a grove, on a hill commanding an extensive view, of the surrounding country. A competent staff has been secured in the following teachers: Miss McFarland, of Mississippi, a lady of large experience in the work, especially prepared for teaching in the famous State Institute of Ohio. Miss Tipping of Staunton, Va., makes specialties of Latin and music, in both of which branches she has an enviable reputation. Miss Loftin, of Duplin, N. C., is a graduate of Greensboro Normal where she stood among the first for diligence and ability. She has also had experience in actual teaching. All our teachers are well equipped — thorough, enthusiastic and determined to succeed and the result of their work is already giving the greatest satisfaction, to the patrons of the school.

The tuition ranging from $1.50 to $3 per month is low, and board can be had among the citizens for from $6 to $10 per month. Latin, music and stenography are extras.

Kenansville, in which this school is situated, is a beautiful little town, the county seat of Duplin, and one of the healthiest towns in eastern Carolina. Being a little way from the railroad it is free from some objectionable features of small railroad towns. Its citizens are intelligent, cultured, law-abiding and hospitable.

Parents having girls and boys of tender years to educate, would do well to experiment with this school ere sending their children to much higher priced institutions, that offer no greater educational, social or moral advantages.

The spring term begins the first Monday in January, 1897. Persons wishing to know more about the school should apply to Miss Carrie Pipping, Kenansville, N. C., Mr. Henry Farrior, Kenansville, N. C., or Rev. P. McIntyre, Faison, N. C.

SINGING AS AN ACT OF WORSHIP.

Singing is an important part of public worship. It has been so esteemed in all Biblical times and throughout the Christian Church. It has been exalted to its high place in the religious service, not on the ground of the sensuous gratification produced by music as such, but because it is an effective medium for the communication or emphasis of the truth.

The church is not the place for personal display, nor for the merely artistic musical performance. That singer has not only missed her opportunity, but has perverted it, who has simply attracted attention to hereelf and to her music, instead of using her musical ability to attract attention to Jesus Christ. It is not oratory for oratory's sake; not music for music's sake; not art of any kind for art's sake; but everything, eloquence, singing and every gift and grace, for the sake of Christ. He is the end to which all things else are but to be consecrated means.

Not long since we heard a fine quartette choir. They were musical artists, all of them. This was the judgment of those who had secured them and of those who were musical critics of acknowledged standing. But their performance, while it might have been in place on the concert stage, was sadly inappropriate and out of place as an act of worship. People were not brought nearer to God by it. Christ was not made to appear more winning and attractive. The Holy Spirit did not have easier access to hearts by means of their effort. The minister did not find the hearts of the people any better prepared to receive the Gospel message on account of their singing. The sounds were pleasing, or at least some of them, but as a means for awakening devotion, promoting worship, or impressing the truth of the Gospel, the performance was as barren as Sahara. Scarcely a word had been understood. Not an expression had found its way to the mind and heart of the people. It might as well, all of it, have been in an unknown tongue. It was sound and nothing more; sweet sounds, we will not deny, but still sound and only sound.

Paul said that he would rather speak five words in such a way as to teach others than ten thousand words in an unknown tongue. There is no use for the unknown tongue in our Christian services. Let Roman Catholic priests mutter their masses in a dead language if they wish. Far be that from us and ours. Let us speak and sing to edification. Let us speak so that we may be understood and may win the hearts of the people. Let our singers speak their words distinctly, and they will be effective instruments for bringing the truth to bear upon the heart and consciences of those who hear them.

There are men and women, by the thousands, in our churches who are doing noble and blessed work in leading in the service of song in the sanctuary. They render the services more attractive; they teach and touch the hearts of the people; they help to prepare the way for the entrance of the Gospel message from the lips of the preacher to the minds of the people; they themselves sing the very Gospel and leave it throbbing in the midst of those who listen as they sing. God bless these earnest and efficient men and women. They are doing beautiful and important service. With distinct utterance, sweetness of voice and spirituality of heart, they may be largely instrumental in persuading human beings to love and follow Christ.—Herald and Presbyter.

SELF DENIALS FOR JESUS CHRIST.

BY THEODORE L. CUYLER, D. D.

The first lesson to be learned in the school of Jesus Christ is the lesson of self-denial. He placed it at the very gateway of his kingdom. "If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow Me." These words, if translated literally, would read—if any man wishes to go the way I am going, let him say no to himself. The reason for this command is that "self" is naturally so selfish and monopolizing, and Christ as King will not accept the mere corner of any one's heart. He demands the throne.

If self-denial is the first lesson to be learned, it is always the hardest grace to practice. It treads on our corns; worse than that, it often cuts us to the quick. The daily battle with every Christian is to subdue that artful, greedy house-devil, self; and the highest victory of our religion is to keep our divine Master enthroned in our heart. "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me?" Peter's noble answer to this test question ran on through a long life of toil and sacrifice, and ended up with a sublime martyrdom for his Master. The occasions in which you and I can make a sacrifice that deserves to be called heroic are very few; but in the little acts of our humble every-day lives we can put Christ above self, and we ought to do it, and to love to do it. The business man who is content with a smaller profit rather than even seem to be grasping or over-reaching, practices a Bible self-denial. The Christian who suppresses a joke or a witticism because it might burlesque sacred things practices the same grace. When we speak out a bold, but unpopular truth, we honor our Lord at the expense of cowardly self. It is easy to swim with the current; a dead fish can do that. Christ's injunction to His followers is to "come out, and be separate" from the world. That often requires us to cut loose and be accounted singular, and provoke a stare, or a sneer, or a scoff. Slavery to a false public sentiment and to worldly fashions is a subtle snare from which the Church is suffering most sadly. This world can never be converted by a compromise.

We frequently meet in the street an old hero who limps on a crutch, or carries an empty sleeve. These are the honorable witnesses that these maimed patriots counted not their lives dear that the nation might be saved; it was sublime self-sacrifice. Yet there are thousands of professing Christians who are unwilling to deny themselves the paltry gratification of a glass of wine on their tables or at a social entertainment. They cannot but know that this use of intoxicants is an evil example to others, and may cause a "weak brother to stumble." They know that they are aiding those drinkusages which underlie all the drunkenness and dramselling and misery which flow from those usages. Because it is fashionable to partake of wine or other ensnaring drinks and to offer them to others, they do not hesitate to do both. They actually countenance and practice what is manufacturing drunkards and damning human souls! The Apostle laid down an infinitely nobler principle when he said: "It is good neither to drink wine nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth or is made weak." He enjoins self-denial for the sake of our fellow-men; and until those who profess to be followers of Jesus are willing to give up every indulgence that is a direct temptation to others, Christianity will be shorn of much of its power. When every pulpit trains its artillery against both decanter and dramshop, when every Christian realizes that he is his "brother's keeper," when Sunday-schools teach total abstinence, and parents banish the temptation from their own doors, we shall see a revival of the temperance reform that will revolutionize society and save countless souls.

If we look facts squarely in the face we must acknowledge that the chief hindrance to the progress of Christianity is sheer selfishness; and the only real progress in saving our fellow-men lies in the road of self-denial. A witty minister once said to me: "I have no trouble in getting my people to do—everything they like to do." It is the duties which pinch the hardest that pay the best. No pastor finds it as agreeable to spend an hour in a squalid tenement house, or beside the bed of a fever-patient, as to spend it over a new book on a lounge. Christ is pleased in the one; self is pleased in the other. Gifts are weighed in this same pair of scales. The newspapers chronicle the donations of certain millionaires as "munificent;" in Christ's sight they are not as large as the hard-earned dollar which the poor needlewoman drops into the collection plate. Out of the slums will come heroes and heroines who will find a seat alongside of Judson and John G. Paton and David Livingstone. All crucifixions of pride, and covetousness and love of ease, all immolations of self for Jesus' sake are a sacrifice that has the savor of a sweet smell. "Ye did it unto Me" is the benediction with which Christ pays His servants on the great day of reckoning. He will be the richest who surrenders most for Him.

"Lovest thou Me more than all these things?" is Christ's scale of measurement. Giving up in order to please him counts as much as any taking up; in fact, the pinch on selfishness oftener comes in the former way than the latter. Paul's keeping his body under for Christ's sake was as grand a service as his sermon on Mars Hill. One of the hardest things for our selfishness is to give up having our own way and to let God have his way. The essence of loyal obedience lies just there; and it is just there that selfish pride and willfulness must be met and conquered. We have got to say "no" to self before we can say "thy will, oh Lord, be done!" Whoever is perfectly willing to let Christ give every casting vote has attained to the much-talked-about "higher life."

With Christ once enthroned in the heart, everything becomes tributary to him. That is the search-light to be turned on your heart; do you love him more than your money? Then he will hold the key to your purse. Do you love him more than your ease? Then you will be found at some tough mission work on Sunday afternoons rather than on your sofa. Pray for the grace that pinches self! If it cuts down pride and cleans out covetousness all the better. This battle with self will go on to the last; and it is not to be a mere "beating the air." Every victory makes you stronger. Every blow that gives self the "black eye" will make you look better in the eye of your Master. Whatever you and I may gladly lose for Christ's sake will be laid up for us as our eternal treasure in Heaven.—Independent.

CURE FOR HEART SICKNESS.

True it is that a "heart knoweth its own bitterness." There are feelings which we can not make known to others, and would not if we could; feelings of grief or disappointment too sacred to be passed from lip to lip. But into these hiddên recesses of the heart let Christ come. He knows our troubles. He can be touched with the feeling of our griefs and disappointments. He proves unfaithful to no confidence reposed in Him. The burdened heart can find relief by making Christ its trusted Friend.—Associate Reformed Presbyterian.

I love that tranquility of soul in which we feel the blessing of existence, and which in itself is a prayer and a thanksgiving.—Longfellow.

Rev. J. W Heagan, from Blackburn, Mo., to Little Rock, Ark.

Rev. W. J. Lewis, from Cleveland, Tenn., to Jonesboro, Tenn.

NORTH CAROLINA.

High Point:—Christmas day was a happy one for the Presbyterians of High Point. At 7 seven p. m., a large congregation assembled for the first time in the beautiful new building on Fayetteville Street; the annual entertainment by the Sunday-school was held at that time and was a decided success. The building was crowded with an intensely interested audience. On Sunday following, at the morning service two members were received by certificate and two by profession; one of the latter was baptized. God owned and blessed this first preaching service in the new church by bringing these members into our fold at that time. In the evening, we held a union praise service. All the pastors in the town and one aged brother of the M. E. Church who is waiting lovingly for the Master's call, were present and took part in the service. The remarks of these brethren were strikingly happy and the occasion was one long to be remembered by those present. We thank God for His great goodness and go forward in His name.

Red Springs:—Three more members have just been received, making thirty-six additions to our church during the last year. The Ladies' Missionary society held a praise service in the afternoon of the third Sunday of December, and the thanks offering, outside of their regular contributions, amounted to $21.25.

Greensboro:—During the past year sixty-four persons have been received into the First church, twenty-two upon profession of faith, and forty-two by certificate Rev. Dr. J. Henry Smith, and Rev. Dr. Egbert Smith, pastors.

Mooresville:—There is talk of a new Presbyterian church being built here at an early day, and we hope there is something in the talk. Mooresville has never witnessed a more prosperous year than the one just coming to a close, and a new church would be in exact keeping with her steady progress. Work on the A. R. P. church will, we learn, commence soon.—Charlotte News.

First Church, Concord:—At our Communion in the First church Concord, N C., we had a large and attentive congregation and a tender solemn service An interesting summary of the work of the past year was read:

1. A new pastorate in and around Concord has been established, Rev. A. K. Pool, has been secured for it and $500 toward his salary raised by the First church.

2. Three protracted meetings have been held, viz: In the First church, at Beulah in Stanly county, at Patterson's Mill. At the two last named points the meetings were held by W. C. Alexander, and A. K. Pool. At Patterson's Mill there were over fifty professions of faith in Christ.

3. One church and school building has been erected (at Patterson's Mill) at a cost of $900.

4. One Presbyterian church has been organized with about thirty members and is in a flourishing condition.

5. One Presbyterian day school with 2 teachers, has been established through the liberality of the Home Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America.

6 Three Sabbath schools have been organized, viz: at Cannonsville with an enrollment of over 130; at Patterson's Mill, and at Pitts school house.

7. A successful Home Missionary Society has been organized with over 100 members.

8. We have received 109 communicants into the First church; sixty-six of whom were on profession of faith in Christ. Of the whole number twenty-one were at Forest Hill mission under Rev. A. K. Pool.

During the year the pastor has officiated at 22 baptisms, 5 marriages, 13 funerals, has preached thrice on the Sabbath much of the time and has made over 1,000 pastoral visits. Mr. Pool has labored earnestly and acceptably in his mission work and we regret that he has decided to go to the foreign field.

Jan. 4. 1897.

Raleigh:—The following gentlemen, George Allen, Edward B. Crow, B. W. Kilgore, W. T. Harding and Chas. Wiles were ordained and installed deacons in the First Presbyterian church on Sunday, 3rd inst. The services were conducted by Rev. Eugene Daniels, D.D. (assisted by the church session) in a very impressive and solemn manner.

VIRGINIA.

Walker's Creek, Lexington Presbytery:—Twenty-three persons recently received into the full communion of this church.

TENNESSEE.

Denmark:—Rev. John D. Storment, of Tupelo, Miss., has taken charge of the church here.

TEXAS.

San Antonio:—Rev. A. G. Jones pastor—fifteen members recently received.

Jonesboro:—Rev. W. J. Lewis began his ministry of the Jonesboro group on December 17th. This group consists of Jonesboro, Leesburg, Providence and Rheatown churches.

KENTUCKY.

Ebenezer Presbytery:—Meets at Millersburg, Ky., on the 13th inst. to dissolve the relation between Rev. W. O. Cochran and Central church of Maysville Ky., and the relation between Rev. J G. Anderson and Presbyterian church of Millersburg. Mr. Cochran goes to the First church, Bristol, Tenn. Mr. Anderson to First church Tampa, Fla.

Richwood:—Rev. G. F. Robertson, of Elizabethtown, Ky., recently assisted the pastor, Rev. W. H. Davis in a series of meetings. Seven were received upon profession of faith.

PERSONALS.

Rev. J. E. Bear, of Chinkiang, China, is visiting at St. Louis.

Rev. R. G. Pearson begins a meeting in Greenville, S. C., on the 10th inst.

We see by the Central that Rev. D, C. Irwin has been critically ill for some weeks at his home in Lexington, Va.

Rev. Dr. Beattie, of Louisville will supply the church of Anchorage, Ky., for a time. This church was recently left vacant by the removal of Dr. Wm. Irvine to Bowling Green, Ky.

Rev. W. O. Cochrane, of Maysville, Ky., has been called to the First church of Bristol, Tenn.

We are glad to learn that Dr Guerrrant is again able to be at his chosen work.

Rev. L. A McLean, of Virginia, has been called to Bethel and Galatia churches, Fayetteville Presbytery.

Rev. and Mrs. S. M. Rankin, of Red Springs, are visiting their parents in Guilford county.

Rev. C. H. Dobb, Jr., has been called to the pastorate of the church at Carthage. We see that Mr. Dobbs has resigned the pastorate of McDowell and Williamsville churches with the view of accepting this call.

Rev. W. G. Vardell, pastor of the church at James Island, S. C., is visiting his son, Rev. C. G. Vardell, of Red Springs.

Rev. A. G. Buckner, of Cynthiana, Ky., writes of kind and generous gifts bestowed upon himself and family by his congregation on Christmas Eve. One hundred members have been received in this Church during Mr. Buckner's pastorate of six years.

We are pleased to learn through a personal letter from Rev. Dr. Rawlings that he is in good health and pleasantly situated in his labors near his home, Charlottsville, Va. Besides his regular ministerial duties, Dr. Rawlings gives one Sabbath each month to the relief of ministers who need his aid. He thus brings rest to many weary pastors as well as preaches the Gospel which he loves so dearly.

We are glad to state that Rev. Dr. J. Henry Smith, of Greensboro, has recovered from his recent illness and occupied his pulpit on last Sabbath.

Rev. Dr. L. B. Turnbull, of Durham has been granted a well earned vacation by his congregation in order that he may visit Palestine.

We are glad to state that Mr. Geo W. Watts will not leave Durham. The church and synod could ill afford to lose this valuable worker.

Rev. Edward Mack has returned to St. Louis after a visit to his wife's father, Dr. Kirby, of Raleigh. Mr. Mack's family are still in that city.

EDUCATIONAL STATEMENT, JAN. 1, 1897.

Amount appropriated to 207 candidates $14,830.00; amount paid to 207 candidates $5.701 25; balance due $9,128.75.

Two months have been allowed for the November collection to come in. The above statement shows what amount has been received and paid out, and what is still due our candidates. Pastors are specially requested to see that all moneys for education be promptly sent in. And if the November collection has not been taken, we earnestly ask that it may be done at once. Five thousand dollars is needed during the month of January to relieve the immediate necessity of our candidates.

DURHAM'S TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY.

[We published an account of this occasion last week, but the following contains additional items of interest.]

The Presbyterian church of Durham celebrated on Sunday, Dec. 27th, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of the church. It was a day long to be remembered. The skies were cloudless, the day perfect. Rev. H. T. Darnall, the only living ex-pastor had come to rejoice with his people in their prosperity. He preached in the morning a sermon of great beauty, full of tender reminiscences, and of stirring inspiration, from the text, 1 Sam 12:14. An historical sketch of the church had been carefully prepared and was read before the sermon by Elder R. D. Blacknall. After the service there was an interchange of friendly greetings between the people and the present and former pastors. At night Rev. J. Y. Fair, D.D., of Richmond, Va., who had preached the sermon at the dedication of the present church, preached a strong suggestive sermon from the text, "What is your life."

Monday night there was a Presbyterian "love feast," at which brief addresses of fraternal greetings and congratulations were made by representative pastors of other denominations in the town. Each of these gave expression to the spirit of Christian unity and co operation that prevails between all the churches, and which is growing stronger and deeper year by year.

Thus was commemorated the growth of a little band of earnest Presbyterians, composed of nine members, to a strong, flourishing and influential church with more than three hundred communicants, four growing missions, four hundred and fifty Sunday school teachers and scholars, supporting two pastors, a foreign missionary and contributing liberally to all the benevolent causes of the Assembly and Synod. "Consider—what hath God wrought."

NOTICE.

The requirements of the Book of Church Order having been complied with the Presbytery of Albemarle is hereby called to meet in Tarboro, at 12:30 p. m., on Friday, January 8th 1897, for the purpose of considering and acting upon the resignation of Rev. R. W. Hines, as evangelist of Halifax and Martin counties, and of granting him a letter of dismission to the Presbytery of Central Mississippi, and of appointing his successor as agent of Sabbath-schools—if the way be clear.

R. W. HINES,
Moderator.

FOREIGN MISSION RECEIPTS FOR DECEMBER.

Our Foreign Mission receipts for December were $11,760.61. These are nearly all church or individual contributions, and are an increase on the Church contributions of last December of $2,197.17.

But in the receipts of last December there were legacies amounting to $11,325.51. The sum total of receipts for December is therefore less than of last December by $9,328.34.

Our gain for the fiscal year to December 1st had been $5,981.76. The first of January therefore finds us with a loss for the fiscal year of $8,346.58.

The same rate of increase in church receipts that has obtained for the past three months will make this loss good, and enable us to reach the 31st of March without a debt. But we have been able as yet, to make only small remittances to the missions for the fourth quarter, and it takes the funds a month to reach their destination. Therefore we earnestly request all who have charge of missionary funds to send us at once what they have on hand, and not to save it up till the last week in March. Let the missionaries have what is now available, for they need it now.

S H. CHESTER.

We are advised that in the copy of receipts for the Barium Springs Orphanage sent us for publication, and which appears on the eighth page, Laurel Hill church was erroneously credited with $31.52, and Laurel Hill Sabbath school $5, both to the Support Fund. These credits properly belong to Laurinburg church. The correction of copy did not reach us before publication.

The Normal and Collegiate Institute Asheville, N. C., is having a most prosperous session. More than two hundred pupils have been enrolled in its several departments, 170 of which are boarders. The new pupils have entered higher up than ever before; valuable additions have been made to the teaching corps. There is no institution in the State where a young woman can be more thoroughly trained for teaching school or business-life, none where the Bible is more systematically and reverently studied, none where the health, habits, or morals of the students are more carefully guarded.

GOLD DUST.

"Lord, make me to know mine end, and the measure of my days, what it is; that I may know how frail I am." —Psalm 39 : 4.

Begin the day with God,
He is thy sun and day:
He is the radiance of thy dawn,
To Him address thy lay.
Take thy first meal with God,
He is thy heavenly food;
Feed with and on Him; He with thee
Will feast in brotherhood.
Thy first transaction be
With God Himself above;
So shall thy business prosper well,
And all the day be love.

REVENGE.

There is a story of an Italian nobleman, who took a terrible revenge upon one whom he hated. He set him alive in a niche in the palace he was building, and piled row upon row of bricks and stones about him, until the wall closed over his head, and shut him in his dark and awful living tomb.

Horrible as the story is, it is just what many men are doing with their souls. They are piling bricks and stones about them, walling them in, and leaving them there to die. In the very core of many a great fortune which men have gathered; in the inner chamber of many a beautiful palace which men have builded; in the deepest shrine of many a temple of honor which men have reared in their own praise; hidden away out of sight, is a grave over which God's angels weep—the grave of a soul. Many a man has buried his manhood in his business. Many a poor slave has dug a deep grave for his soul with the wine-cup for a spade. Fashion has woven the shroud and pall for many a poor girl's soul. In many a garden of beauty and pleasure, hidden among the flowers, is a grave where innocence, faith, purity, virtue, honor, and truth lie buried.—Forward.

SECRET FAULTS.

What a risk we run when we foster some secret sin, not knowing when in our weakness the hidden nature may become triumphant! Some shepherds saw an eagle soar out from a crag. It flew majestically up into the sky. But by and by it grew unsteady. At length one wing drooped, and then the other, and with a fearful velocity the once mighty bird fell to the earth. Those men sought the eagle, and found that a little viper had fastened itself upon it while the eagle rested on the crag. The eagle did not know that the serpent was there, but while the proud monarch was sweeping through the air that serpent gnawed its way through the feathers, and thrust its fangs deep into the eagle's flesh, and it came reeling down to the earth. It is the story of King David—when touching the heights of fame, his lust, like poison brought down the imperial robes into the mire. It is the story of Samson—he was God's messenger; divine and supernatural strength coursed through his veins; one day he posed, God's vice-regent, the next day, all transformed, he went down to Philistia to gratify his passion, and he lost his eyes, and he lost his life! This is the story of many a life in our day; the promise is great—sip the potion of sin, and in secret joy its pleasures! But suddenly there is the exposure of the fall! The secret indulgence of sin has long been eating its way into the heart, and at last the proud life lies soiled and dishonored in the dust.—Exchange.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

"Thoreau, the naturalist and writer had such faculty for attracting dumb animals that wild creatures would go to him of their own accord and rest contented in his hands."

"Woodman, Spare that Tree," was written by George P. Morris, the story being founded on an incident which occurred during a visit of this gentleman to the old homestead. It had passed into other hands, and the proprietor was about to cut down the fine tree which had been planted by Morris's grandfather. The poet redeemed the tree for ten dollars, and the stately oak was thus spared.

"Mere Stories," a new collection by Mrs. Clifford, has been so great a success in England that the publishers have decided to issue a cheap edition, in similar form, of the same author's previous volume of stories entitled "The Last Touches." The publication of Mrs. Clifford's new volume in this country has been unavoidably delayed, but it will be issued immediately from the press of Messrs. Dodd, Mead and Company.—From Chronicle and Comment," in The Bookman.

The great scarcity of the early numbers of "Pickwick Papers" is not difficult to understand when it is borne in mind that only four hundred copies were printed of the first part, which was published on March 31st, 1836. Before the appearance of the fourth number there was some idea of stopping the issue as the expenses were found to be in excess of the receipts. But in the fifth number Sam Weller was introduced, and the work at once sprang into unbounded popularity. While nothing positive has ever been established on the point, it is held by some writers that the original of Sam Weller was a Mr Samuel Vale, who acted the part of Simon Spatterdash in a farce called "The Boarding House," and made this character a great popular favorite. The odd whimsicality of Vale's novel comparisons is best understood on reference to the part set down to Spatterdash in the farce. Among his queer comparisons are: "'I know the world,' as the monkey said when he cut off his tail." "'I am down upon you,' as the extinguisher said to the rushlight." "'Come on,' as the man said to the tight boot." "'I am all ever perspiration," as the mutton chop said to the grid-iron." "'Why here we are all mustered,' as the roast beef said to the Welsh rabbit." Vale introduced these peculiar comparisons in his private life as well as upon the stage, and from 1830 to 1836 this style of expression became widely popular. It is not unreasonable to suppose that Dickens became, in a sense, the abstract mirror of his time, in catching the popular fun and embalming it with his choice phraseology. Of course it would be the height of absurdity to charge Dickens with being a mere copyist, or for one moment to think of Sam Weller as other than an original character. Dickens may have borrowed an idea, but he certainly made no slavish use of it, for the prevailing Sam Valerism and "the monkey that knew the world" was in no way on a par with the Sam Weller comparison: for example, in describing the elder Mr. Weller and the touter as "walking after him like a tame monkey arter a horgin."—"The Week, Toronto.

Dodd, Mead & Company, New York.

BOOK REVIEWS.

Plants and Their Children, or How to Know the Wild Flowers, by Mrs. Wm. Starr Dana is a charming book to be put into the hands our boys and girls. Teachers would find it a most excellent reading book for their classes. Without being scientific in its terms, a vast amount of knowledge is given about botany in an easy and interesting style. The children are made to know and love nature, and their powers of observation are sharpened. We enjoyed it and would like to see it in general use. The illustrations by Alice Josephine Smith are excellent. American Book Company, New York.

With My Neighbors, by Margaret E. Sangster. This delightful book of 256 pages, substantially and tastefully bound in linen, is made up of "bits of talk" on every day affairs in life. The gifted authoress is too well known not to give in all she writes that genuine helpfulness as it will prove itself to any who will become the happy possessor of this book verily filled with what seems companionable and congenial people. The poems at the close are included by request. We wish it a wide circulation, for we are sure such "Handy Helps" will prove invaluable to all its readers. Harper & Bros., Publishers, New York.

CATECHISM.

Question 28. What offices doth Christ execute as our Redeemer?

Answer. Christ, as our Redeemer, executeth the offices of a prophet, of a priest, and of a king, both in his estate of humiliation and exaltation.

Time. The Christian Sabbath, May 28, A. D., 30.

Place. Jerusalem.

INTRODUCTORY.

A marvelous miracle. An upper room, one hundred and twenty disciples of the crucified Christ together, in prayer, with one accord, waiting for the promise, "Until ye be endued with power from on high." The day of Pentecost fully come. A sound like that of a rushing mighty wind. A likeness of fire divided into shapes of tongues resting on each of them. "And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost." This, not as He dwells in the heart of each believer as Sanctifier, Teacher and Guide, but coming with power to make the disciples witnesses. "And they spake with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance." A crowd gathered and continued wondering, being amazed. They were saying one to another what meaneth this?" Others mocking said, these men are full of new wine." This suggestion of Satan went too far and gave occasion for Peter to preach the opening sermon of the Christian Dispensation. He made courteous and courageous denial of the charge of drunkenness and proceeded to show that the miracle was a fulfillment of the Scriptures, and a proof that Jesus of Nazareth was the King of Israel, the Son of David, the Messiah.

It is supposed that all the disciples testified, but only the sermon of Peter is recorded, as the substance of the testimony of all and the statement of truth convincing and saving by the power of the Holy Ghost. He exalted and proclaimed the personal risen, exalted Saviour, shedding forth the Holy Spirit. He was fearless, personal and plain, leaving results with God.

LESSON NOTES.

These cover the last part of the discourse of Peter and an account of the effect it produced.

V. 32. This Jesus, whom they had crucified supposing thus to destroy His claims. God hath raised up from the dead, and to His own right hand in Heaven. We all are witnesses, knowing what we testify and enabled of the Holy Spirit shed forth to make our testimony true.

V. 33. By the right hand of God, on His Father's throne, in honor, power and authority, "Head over all things to the Church." The promises made of the Father, through Christ prophesied by Joel and fulfilled as enduement for testifying, having received "The promise of the Spirit through faith." He, Jesus, hath shed forth this "The ministration of the Spirit."

Vs. 34. For David, to whom they had referred, vs. 25-31, is not ascended, in his resurrection body, into the heavens, but was buried and his body was in the sepulchre, while his spirit had returned to God who gave it.

The Lord, Jehovah, said unto me, that is David's, Lord, Jesus, the Messiah seen in prophetic vision or in temporary presence.

Vs. 35. Until, shows it was not a momentary exaltation, but must last until "the last enemy shall be destroyed." Thy footstool, as the custom of conquerors among the ancients was to tread on the neck of their vanquished enemies.

Vs. 36. Therefore, by a just conclusion from the facts and the Scriptures received as authoritative by all the house of Israel. Let them know assuredly, be convinced and yield to the conviction, that God, whether they were pleased or not, hath made. That the same Jesus, Jesus of Nazareth, as Saviour by the Sacrifice of Himself, both Lord, "Master and Lord" having given all things into His hands, and Christ, as the Anointed, the Messiah.

Vs. 37. They were pricked, as by a sharp instrument pierced, "They were stung with remorse and alarm," in their hearts. Convincing their reason, convicting their moral natures, convincing their wills. They cried what must we do? Not clearly asking how they could be saved, but what was their duty in the face of the facts.

Vs. 38. Repent, having such a sorrow as to seek peace, they must right about face, accept and acknowledge Jesus as Saviour, Lord and Christ and live for Him whom they had crucified. Be baptized with water as symbol of the baptism of the Holy Ghost, who had caused them to cry ont, in the name of Jesus Christ, in relation to Him, as the children of Israel were baptized unto Moses, changing relation from that as bondsmen to Pharaoh, unto Moses as their deliverer, leader and lawgiver. So baptism would signify and seal their turning from the old relation to Satan unto Jesus who had borne their sins in His own body on the tree. As Saviour Jesus He gives remission of sins, forgives them, takes them away. The gift of the Holy Ghost, was after baptism, and different from His operation, the same as the disciples had then. The endnement for service. No matter how or when received, it is distinct from His work in regeneration and sanctification and is properly called "The Gift of the Holy Ghost," for witness bearing.

Vs. 39. For the promise, "The gift of the Holy Ghost. "The promise of the Father which, saith He, (Jesus) ye have heard of me," is not the promise of salvation, but "power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you." This promise is to the Jew first and also to the Gentiles as the remainder of the verses shows.

Vs. 40. With many other words, explaining and applying the truths taught.

Vs. 41. They who received the word were baptized, in open confession of Christ. They were added, not to the Church, but to the Christ and His services, as represented by the disciples. The Church was not then founded but was composed already of true disciples.

Vs. 42. They continue steadfastly in the teaching of the apostles, in fellowship one with another, "The communion of the Holy Ghost," in the Lord's Supper, and in prayers, ('the prayers" R. V.) not merely praying secretly, but together.

Vs. 43. Fear, Reverential awe. Wonders, miracles.

Vs 44. Together, in one meeting place, as united in one body. Calling nothing their own.

Vs. 45. Sold possessions, land and goods.

Vs. 46. In temple, holding the dispensations, together.

Vs. 47. Saved, such as were being saved.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

The word church does not appear in the Revised Version, as those who were being saved were added to Christ the only Saviour.

1. They were brought to Christ by the work of the Holy Spirit.

2. They were "being saved" in a gradual sanctification, the work of the Holy Spirit.

3. They were to receive the promise of the Spirit by faith, that they might be witnesses for Christ, after the Holy Ghost had come upon them.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Jan. 17th, 1897.

BY REV. B. E. WALLACE.

Subject :

Revivals at HOME AND ABROAD. 2 Chron. 30 : 13-27.

Text for the week :

"Wait for the promise of the Father." Acts 1 : 4.

Daily Readings :

REVIVALS.

Monday, In Josiah's time, 2 Kings 23 : 1-15.
Tuesday, In Ezra's time, Neh. 8 : 1-12.
Wednesday. In John's time, Matt. 3:1-12
Thursday, In Capernaum, Mark 1 : 35-42 ; 2 : 1, 2.
Friday, In Samaria, Acts 8 : 4-13.
Saturday, In Antioch. Acts 13 : 13-44.
Sunday, Topic, 2 Chron. 30 : 13-27.

Suggestions for Leaders :

1. Let your missionary committee have charge of this meeting.

2. Have six members appointed a week ahead to prepare a brief and concise statement of the cause and result of the revivals spoken of in the Daily Readings.

3. Let the Leader state the need of Revivals.

a. In the Individual Christian. b. In the Church at home. c. In the Church abroad.

4. Have frequent prayers for the incoming of the Holy Spirit.

Notes :

The most casual observer can clearly see that there is a great need for revivals of religion in our church to day. Convinced of the need, how can it be supplied?

In Philippians 4 : 19, we have the solution.

There are two things if earnestly employed that will bring about a revival of religion in the individual heart and in the Church :

1. The study of God's word. The entrance of God's word gives light, light gives joy, joy revives the heart. The word of God gives strength, and it is the strong man that rejoiceth to run a race. God's word awakens love, love is the fulfilling of the Law, love is warming of the heart toward God and toward man, and it is the warm heart of love that flows as a peaceful river dispensing gladness and joy.

2. Earnest, Importunate Prayer. It was after John had been in the wilderness communing long and earnestly with God in prayer, that the banks of Jordan were crowded with repenting sinners.

It was after Jesus had spent the whole night in prayer that they came from all quarters to hear him.

It was after ten days of prayer that Pentecostal showers came.

It has ever been thus in the history of Christ's Church, the reformation, revivals in Scotland, in our country under Whitfield and the Tennants came after close and faithful study of God's word and importunate and agonizing prayer.

Let us study God's word. Let us pray and labor till the Master comes.

OPEN DOOR NOTES.

A Men's Aid Society has been organized in the church at Bedford City, Va., with a membership of thirty.

Rev. C. G. Vardell gave an exhibition of his stereopticon views, under the auspices of the Red Springs Sunday school, Christmas Eve. All members of all Sunday-schools in town were admitted free and seemed to enjoy it.—The Pastor.

The music committee of the C. E. Society at Red Springs have raised money to supply the church with new hymn books.

An annual subscription to the denominational paper has been given to every member in the congregation of a Bangor, Penn., church by the Christian Endeavor Societies of the church.

The Boys' Missionary Society of the First church, Wilmington, gave a very pleasant entertainment on Tuesday evening of last week, in honor of the killing of their missionary pig which they have been fattening for some time. The fatal blow was given by Master Peyton Hoge, and the contents counted by the treasurer, Master Geo. Parsley. The meeting was presided over by the president, Benj. Bell, Jr., who with the other members of the band deserve credit for their earnest efforts. This band has been without a regular leader since the death of Mrs. McMillan, but the boys have held together remarkably well.

The jug-breaking of the Sunday-school of Monroe for the cause of missions resulted in a contribution of $235.19. Rev. M. C. Arrowood delivered an address which was greatly enjoyed. We heartily congratulate our young friends upon their success.

A Junior Christian Endeavor Society was organized last Sabbath at St. Andrews, Wilmington, with nineteen active members.

All of the churches have Young People's Societies, which are being rapidly changed into Westminster Leagues. It is hoped soon to form a "Union of Westminster Leagues of Lynchburg.—Central Presbyterian.

The C. E. Society of the First church, Columbia, recently sent $20 to the Orphanage at Clinton, S. C., besides a well filled box of sundries.

The ladies of the First church, Charlotte, have placed in the church parlors a life size portrait of Dr. Preston.

The officers of the Westminster League, Raleigh, for the next six months are B. W. Kilgore, President; J. A. Bizzell, Vice-President; W. T. Harding, Secretary; O. P. Hay, Treasurer.

Immanuel C. E. Society, Wilmington. At our first gathering in the New Year we took stock. The idea of an invoice meeting was given ont a week or two before, so when we came together a great number responded. We found in examining our stock of Bible knowledge and Christian Experience there were many points of encouragement, but yet there were many channels for improvement. The meeting had a good effect and we believe new schemes are going to be employed that will greatly help our work.

McLEOD.—In Red Springs, N. C., at her home, on Dec. 8th, 1896, Mrs. W. J. McLeod. She was a most excellent Christian woman, faithful and affectionate in the home, a kind neighbor, and an humble servant of God. She leaves a husband and six children to mourn their loss.

McLEOD. At the home of her son-in law, near Antioch, N. C., on October 1st, 1896, Mrs. Mary McLeod, in her 78th year. She had been a consistent Christian for many years, and during the last years of her life she had been confined to her home by the infirmities of old age; but with the increase of years there seemed to be an increase of grace.

CURRIE. In Red Springs, N. C., at the home of her son, on Oct. 14th, 1896, Mrs. Flora Currie, in the 80th year of her age. One of the mothers in Israel has gone to her reward. She joined Antioch church when it was organized about sixty-three years ago, and spent her years in faithful and loyal service to her Saviour and church.

McNAIR The subject of this sketch was called to his rest and reward several weeks ago. At the time appropriate resolutions were drawn up and published by the session of which he had been a member, but it is the desire of the writer to give a fuller accounnt of a life which had in it so much that adorned the doctrines of God our Father.

Mr. Nathaniel McNair was born in St. Paul's, Robeson county, N. C., on the 8th of March, 1818. His early years were passed in the town of his birth, but when about twenty-nine years of age he moved to Alfordsville, in the same county, and there settled in the home where he spent the remainder of his life. Upon settling in Alfordsville, Mr. McNair became connected with the Presbyterian church, and not long after he was elected as an elder, and in this capacity he served the congregation faithfully and efficiently till his death. Mr. McNair's life was a quiet one, and its external features might be summed up in a few sentences. Yet those quiet years were filled with something better than the events which give form and note to many lives. In all that time there was moving on, in its varied relations, this life which seems never to have brought an unpleasant thought or a painful feeling to any one, but which was everywhere felt as an influence for good. During fifty years in Alfordsville, in the churches, in business, in society, Mr. McNair seems never to have given offense nor to have gained the ill will of any party; while to many his life was a quiet benediction, giving comfort and help. The full benefit of such a life to a community cannot be measured here the records above may give it, but it is certain to be great. Mr. McNair's strong, consistent religious life influenced others to better things; his kind words and acts cheered and comforted many hearts; his wise counsel helped to guide the church in the right way. In reference to this last, there is reason to regret that his retiring disposition did not allow him to take a more prominent part in the direction of church affairs; as it was, no member of the session had greater influence when he chose to exert it, and the course which his wisdom favored was usually the one taken by the session. When he was finally called away the whole congregation felt that the loss was one which could not be repaired. Mr. McNair was twice married: first, on Dec 23d, 1847, to Miss Mary Ann McCallum, who died twenty-five years later. On Dec. 9th, 1874, Mr. McNair was married to Miss Elizabeth, Blue, who with one daughter survives him. The bereaved family have the sincere sympathy of the congregation and community.

WORTH. On December 31st, at 12.20 p. m., Mary Elizabeth Jessie, wife of B. G. Worth, aged 69 years and 3 months.

This estimable lady passed painlessly into rest. For years she had been in feeble health and for more than a year her decline has been steady, but the end came at last after only a few days of confinement to her bed.

Mrs. Worth was by birth Mary Elizabeth Carter, the daughter of John Paine Carter and his wife Cornelia Murphey. She was born at her father's place, "The Oaks," in Davie county, near Mocksville, Oct. 1, 1827. On the death of her father when she was three years old, she went with her mother to live with her grandfather, Judge Murphey, at his country seat, the Hermitage, near Haw River, in Orange county. Her mother died when she was about ten years of age and she returned to the place of her birth to live with her uncle, Archibald Carter. Here she was educated and spent her girlhood until she went to live with her first cousin, the wife of Mr. Jonathan Worth (afterwards Governor) in Asheboro. Here she met Mr. B. G. Worth, and they were married June 20th, 1845. In 1858 they came to live in Wilmington, and with the exception of a few years after the war, have lived here continuously, so that they have long been reckoned among our oldest citizens as they have been among those most valued and respected

Mr. and Mrs. Worth have been blessed with a large family. Our readers will recall the interesting occasion summer before last of their golden wedding, when all their children and all but two of their grandchildren gathered to honor them. At that time the remarkable circumstance was noted that there had never been a break in the family by the death of either a child or grandchild. Their sons present were Mr. Archibald Worth, of Cresskill, N. J. Mr. Joseph B. Worth, of Petersburg, Va., and Mr. W. E. Worth, of this city, and their daughters, Cornelia, the wife of Geo. R. French, Mary, the wife of W. J. Woodward, both of this city, Eunice, the wife of J. Weller, of Covington, Ky., and and Julia, the wife of W. S. Herring, of this city. All of these survive her except Mrs. Herring, who died in August, 1895. From this loss Mrs. Worth had never recovered.

Mrs. Worth's protracted ill health, lasting for twenty-five years, caused her to lead a very retired life But she was very strong in her friendships and devotedly attached to those within the circle of her friends. She was full of kindness and charity and used freely to give up the society of those dearest to her that they might engage in ministerings to others in which she could not share herself. She early gave her heart to the Saviour and was a devoted member of the Presbyterian church. Its services were her greatest happiness while she was able to attend with regularity, and the rare occasions when she was able to attend of late like oases in her life. One of these occasions was within the past few weeks When the shadows were falling over her mind almost her last conscious act was to engage in prayer with her pastor and family on Christmas day. The funeral took place from the First Presbyterian church, Wilmington, on Saturday last.

Your anxiety is for your delicate child; the child that in spite of all your careful over-watching, keeps thin and pale. Exercise seems to weaken her and food fails to nourish. That child needs Scott's Emulsion with the Hypophosphites—not as a medicine, but as a food containing all the elements of growth. It means rich blood, strong bones, healthy nerves, sound digestion. No child refuses Scott's Emulsion. It is pleasant and palatable.

THE DIAL OF TIME.

Two slender hands upon Time's dial plate
Go creeping round, and mark the hours of man,
Unconscious of his momentary plan
In all the circling years of Time's estate;
Nor fast nor slow, nor pause for small or great,
An hour for Cæsar or Napoleon;
And so it was since first Time's march began.
The lover cries, "My soul, it cannot wait;"
The murderer, "That hour will bring my doom;"
The sick man sighs, "To morrow and the tomb;"
While empires crumble like the cliffs to sand
Before the waves of years, and planets cold
Are clothed with life, and virgin spheres grow old
Beneath the dial balanced in God's hand.

LEARN TO MAKE THE DAILY LIFE DIVINE.

"I am so tired! Always the same ceaseless round of duties—never an excursion, never a holiday; nothing but drudge, drudge, drudge, from morning till night"—and my little friend laid her head down upon her sewing machine, and the tears that sprang unbidden to her eyes flowed freely.

"Learn to make the best of it," answered another woman with a sweet Madonna-like face, made beautiful by trials bravely borne. We each have our work to do! It is best to do it bravely like the little brook singing cheerily over its rocky bed than to stand and droop like the weeping willow, that something always seemed to me nature's monument of discontent."

We were seated in an old room in an old-fashioned house down in Frenchtown; there was nothing very cheery about the room, I'll admit, nothing but the presence of this bright woman who rose happily and moved about adjusting the faded furniture and drawing aside the curtain to let the sunshine in.

I looked from one to the other, and as I rose to go I could not help but think what a beautiful trait of character it is never to quarrel with fate, to be able to make friends with circumstances, to bring one's self into harmony with one's surroundings! Thought is the most potent form of creative force, and often as one thinks of one's circumstances and surroundings, so do they beco e. When the the unexpected happens it is best to make friends with it. Often with this unexpected something has been taken away that one cares for very much, but as a wise philosopher says. the very fact that one thing is removed makes way for something else, and perhaps better. If one is wise he will fix his thoughts on the new possibilities and develop them into new and more satisfying combitions.

Nothing but drudge, drudge, drudge—nothing higher, nothing sweeter, nothing holier? Ah! no, "If your hands are left empty," says Emerson, "it is only that they may be filled with better gifts." Therefore vitalize the new hope and faith and love. Thus shall a magnetic atmosphere be generated that shall draw to itself all those qualities which are hoped for, and of whose existence, perhaps, one holds the clear conviction. The new circumstances—the new conditions—are they depressing, narrow, undesirable? All the more, then, must one make them desirable, for life is not being lived according to its best possibilities unless lived with the thrill and exaltation of devotion to duty—no matter where it calls. One should under such circumstances do one's work in a state of exhilaration. The days should be high and noble and poetic and beautiful. They should be peopled with hopes and enthusiasms." "Every touch should thrill," as Emerson says, for only in this intense yet serene exaltation is there achieved the better possibilities that may daily be realized by each and all. How beautiful are those lines of Elizabeth Barret Browning:

"Let us be content in work—
To do the thing we can—and not presume
To fret because it's little."

And this is the answer to every tired heart.—Picayune.

FRICASSEE OF OYSTERS

Drain fifty oysters free from all liquor. Put them in a bowl ready for the table; stand this by the side of the chafing dish, set a cup containing yolks of two eggs, a butter pot and a tablespoonful of finely chopped parsley. In the chafing dish have one tablespoonful of butter and of flour, rubbed together, and half a pint of milk. When seated, light the lamp and stir, constantly until you have a smooth sauce, then add the oysters; bring to boil, add a teaspoonful of salt, dash of cayenne, the yolks and parsley. Stir a minute, put out the lamp and serve from dish.

BEGINNING OF THE NEW YEAR.

Lord Dundas, being wished "A Happy New Year," replied: "It had need be happier than the last, for I never knew one happy day in it."

Wilberforce said: "The last year has been the happiest of my life."

Romaine's New Year's wish for his people was: "God grant that this may be a year famous for believing."

There exists a very beautiful custom in one province of Germany which it would be well to imitate everywhere. On the first day of the new year, whatever may have been quarrels, or estrangements, between friends and relatives, mutual visits are interchanged, kindly greetings given and received—all is forgotten and forgiven. Let this custom begin with reconciliation to God, then friendship and fellowship may be found that is blessed and lasting.

What a happy New Year it will be to us if its hours, as they come and go, find us not minding our own good solely, but also the good and joy of others. Let us educate ourselves to think of what others need, of what will sweeten life to them. This care for the happiness of others, this thought about them, will make us happy indeed.—Exchange.

JANUARY.

Though the long, frosty nights of the Winter are here,
This month is the dawn of a happy new year.
The old year has vanished—has faded and died;
Yet onward and forward on life's flowing tide
The new one will bear us with laughter and joy,
With music and sunshine for each girl and boy;
And may you all live to see many more years,
Free from sorrows and troubles and worries and tears.

THE MISCHIEVOUS BROWNIE.

A FABLE.

Once upon a time there was a little boy who had for a companion a Brownie out of the woods. This Brownie was a pleasant fellow, I can tell you; he knew how to cool the air in midsummer, and how to keep you snug in winter time. If you were tired, he rested you; if you were cross, he lulled you to sleep; he persuaded you to put off hard studies, and read only pleasant books; he insisted that long walks were not good for you, and that it was some other fellow's business to do all things you did not want to do.

One day, when Boy and his mother were out walking, they met a man in a sorry plight; he was ragged and dirty and faint with hunger.

"What is the matter?" cried Boy.

"Alas!" said the man, "that mischievous Brownie" (calling his name, which I haven't told you yet), "made me believe he was my friend, but presently he brought a wild beast out of the woods which has torn down my house, and almost destroyed me: the beast's name is Poverty."

Soon after this Boy heard of one who was so ignorant and stupid that no one could trust him with work.

"Was he never taught to work?" Boy asked.

"They tried to teach him when he was young," one answered, "but he would do nothing but play with the mischievous Brownie, who tore up his books and broke his tools."

There came a dark night when came a robber into Boy's, intending, perhaps to murder as well as steal; fortunately they seized and bound him, and when he was asked what brought him to do such wickedness, he groaned aloud and said it all came of listening to the Brownie.

"Come, Brownie!" cried Boy at last, "you have got to go! I will not listen to you another day."

So Boy's mother gave him a whip with three lashes; one was Industry, one was Patience, and one was Perseverance. But the curious thing about this whip was that Boy had to use it on himself! When he did this faithfully, the mischievous Brownie fled howling away.

Did the whip hurt when Boy used it on himself? Well, just at first it stung a little, but by and by it ceased to hurt at all, and only gave Boy a delightful glow and a bounding pulse.

Now I have told you this story about the mischievous Brownie because I have heard, dear little listener, that he has been seen prowling around your house! I want you to beware of him and of his snares forever. And his name is Idleness.—Elizabeth P. Allan, in The Presbyterian.

A SEA STORY.

"The story the sea is going to tell you to-day," said papa, "is of an animal that sees without eyes, hears without ears, eats without tongue or teeth, and walks without feet."

"Oh, papa, you are making fun," said George.

"No, here it is," said papa, and he pointed to a bright colored flower growing just under the water. It had a thick stem and a crown of beautiful pink leaves.

"But that is a flower," exclaimed mamma.

"Do you think so?" said papa. "Can a flower be afraid? Look here!" He touched the thing, and in a minute all the long leaves had curled up, and it looked like an ugly knob. The children watched and presently it uncurled again, the stem swelled and it was a wide open flower.

"Can a flower eat?" asked papa. "Look here!" He caught a little shrimp, and dropped it just over the pink leaves or tendrils, and—would you believe it?—they snatched the shrimp and sucked it down into the middle, where papa said it would be digested.

"You see this animal, which men call the sea-anemone, has no eyes or ears, but it saw and heard the shrimp coming, no tongue or teeth, but it has eaten up Sir Shrimp; no feet, but when it pleases it can get off the rock to which it seems to be fastened, go off to another and fasten itself there. Now let us remember that God has filled the earth and sky and sea with marvels like this, and greater than this; that we can look up to Him this morning and say, 'O, Lord, how manifold are Thy works! In wisdom hast Thou made them all.'"—Sunbeam.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Mr Editor I am very sorry that our questions have been asked and we send you some more. We children have a society called "The Kirkland Band." It is a missionary society and we have twelve members. We meet once a month. Edward Finley is President, Edmund Robinson Treasurer, Ella Finley Secretary. We will be very much pleased if you think our letters worthy of publication this week. I will try to get you a subscriber.

RUTH G. PILSON.
North Wilkesboro, N. C.

Dear Presbyterian: Will you let a country girl join your happy band once more. I like to read the many letters from our cousins and I will let you hear from me again. I have written several letters to "Home and Farm," but they never did publish one of them and it put me out of heart. I wrote a letter to your paper not long ago. I was rejoiced to see it in print, so I am writing again. My Aunt takes the PRESBYTERIAN and we have pleasure of reading it every week. I like so much to read the children's letters. We have a nice little Sunday-school about one half mile from our house, we have about twenty-five scholars. If it would not take up too much space I would write more. I will close, hoping to see this in print. Best wishes to the PRESBYTERIAN.

Your friend,
KATIE COLLINS.
Burgaw, N. C.

Dear Presbyterian: I want to tell you how we are spending Christmas at the Orphans' Home Old Santa Claus did not come the night before Christmas, but he came on Christmas night. He brought me a doll dressed in pink, a vase, pencil tablet, handkerchief, candy, oranges and a game of "Puss in the Corner," but I have not learned how to play it yet, I think I will soon learn how. Miss Banie has a game of "Bible Characters" we like to play very much. We have a new matron, Miss Maggie Montgomery, she likes to stay here very much. We had a nice dinner Christmas day. We had turkey, dressing, rice and cranberry sauce, and cake and ambrosia for desert.

The cocoanuts and oranges came in a box, twelve nice cakes came from Hickory and some from Statesville. The Boys Club, First church, Greensboro, sent our boys some fire works and they shot them off last night. And we had an oyster supper last night. Mr. Ives sent the oysters to us, they were so nice. We have received so many nice things that I cannot name them all. And there are so many children here that we all cannot hang our stockings in the same room so Santa Claus came to all three of the houses. Hoping you all had a merry Christmas.

Your true friend,
BLANCHE AUSTIN.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I am a little boy five years old. I go to the Infant Sunday-school. We have several teachers. Mine is Miss Lilian Foust, I do love her, she is so good and nice to us. We have nice little chairs to sit in, and we always have such nice entertainments Christmas. We sing and recite. I just wish you could hear about forty little ones from three to eight years old singing, some behind and some before. I have a little friend just across the street, just six years old, come by for me every Sunday afternoon. Her name is Mildred McCubbins. She is so sweet and pretty too. Dr. Rumple is our pastor, and he is always with us in our Sunday-school. We love him and he does love little children. He has something nice always to say to each one. I have a pet dog, his name is Saso. Mr. Editor this is my first letter to your good paper, if it don't do throw it in the waste basket and I will try again when I get older.

Your little friend,

SAY SOES.

The feather duster, say the physicians, should be abolished. They do not remove dust but stir it up and set it floating, bringing the germs it contains where they may be inhaled. At least the dust settles somewhere else and has to be stirred up again.

Do not wear impermeable and tight-fighting hats that constrict the blood vessels of the scalp. Use Hall's Hair Renewer occasionally, and you will not be bald.

Because love does not arrive at its conclusions by a local process is no reason why its conclusions may not be logical.

HOW TO MAKE A LITTLE MONEY?

Send eleven (11) two cent stamps to the Watt Mfg. Co., 48 Third St., Cincinnati, O., who will send you by mail a "Morris Towel Rack," a wonderful dainty household article that is screwed into the wall, and by a button fastens the towel securely so it can not be pulled out or fall out. It is nickle plate and very ornamental. With this sample go around and take orders, and you will be surprised to see how many people want just such a useful thing. Most families will buy five or six of them, so every person can have his own towel and towel rack; saves washing as the towels do not lie on the floor. Any lady or gentleman can easily make from $6.00 to $8.00 a day by canvassing with this little wonder. The stores will buy them as well as the families. It is much easier to sell an article like this that does not cost much, as everybody will buy. Our readers should secure the agency for the "Morris" at once.

When the gambler wins a dollar he spends two.

THINGS USEFUL.

Arrow-root Wafers.—Beat half a pound butter to a cream; whisk the yolks of six eggs] to a stiff froth, add them to the butter, stir in half a pound of flour, a little at a time, and beat the mixture well. Break all the lumps from six ounces of arrow-root and add that with half a pound of white sugar to the other ingredients. Lastly, add the well-beaten whites of the eggs and any preferred flavoring—a few blanched almonds, beaten to a smooth paste, with a few drops of rose or orange water is a delicate flavoring—and bake. The secret of thin, crisp wafers is to spread the paste on the baking-tins as thinly and evenly as possible, and bake in a hot oven. If the wafers are baked in one sheet, when half done draw the pans to the oven door, and with a sharp knife cut the cake into pieces about four inches square, then roll and bake crisp.

Cheese Fingers.—Take some fine, richly flavored cheese: cut it in pieces about three inches long, and one inch wide; season very lightly with salt and pepper, dip in salad oil, and leave to soak for half an hour; then dip each piece, or finger, into a rich batter and drop it into boiling lard; fry until a golden-brown has been acquired, then drain carefully, sprinkle with finely-grated cheese, and serve on a folded napkin, garnished with sprigs of parsley. Serve hot.

Try cleansing the hands with ground mustard and warm water, instead of soap, after having handled any strong smelling substances.

IN THINE OWN HEART.

Though Christ a thousand times
In Bethlehem be born,
If he's not born in thee,
Thy soul is still forlorn.
The cross on Golgotha
Will never save thy soul;
The cross in thine own heart
Alone can make thee whole.

Whate'ver thou lovest, man,
That, too, become thou must;
God, if thou lovest God,
Dust, if thou lovest dust.
Go out, God will go in;
Die thou, and let him live;
Be not, and he will be;
Wait, and he'll all things give.

To bring thee to thy God.
Loves takes the shortest route;
The way which knowledge leads
Is but a roundabout.
Drive out from thee the world,
And then like God thou'l't be,
A heaven within thyself.
In calm eternity.

Let but thy heart, O man,
Become a valley low,
And God shall rain on it,
Till it will overflow.
Oh shame! The silkworm works
And spins till it can fly,
And thou, my soul, wilt still
On thine old earth-clod lie!

Man, if the time on earth
Should seem too long for thee,
Turn thou to God and live
Time free, eternally.

—Angelus Silesius (1624.)

Henry M. Stanley, the noted African explorer, recently said: "When I was at Lake Victoria, eighteen years ago, there was not a missionary there; now there are forty thousand Christians and two hundred churches. The natives are enthusiastic converts, and spend their last penny to acquire a Bible."

I love that tranquility of soul in which we feel the blessing of existence, and which in itself is a prayer and a thanksgiving.—Longfellow.

REV. BENJAMIN E. WALLACE.

The pastor of Immanuel Presbyterian church in this city, whose face we introduce to our readers this week, was born at Soddy, Tennessee, January 19, 1868. His parents, Isaac Alexander and Nancy K. Wallace still live. His father is an elder in the Soddy church, which, since the war, has sent out seven ministers, including the subject of this sketch. His grandfather, Rev. Benjamin Wallace, was the pioneer of Presbyterianism in East Tennessee, and the first pastor in Hamilton county. Two uncles, Rev. James A. Wallace, D. D. and Rev. J. Albert Wallace, D. D., are in the ministry in Tennessee. Mr. Wallace studied at Soddy Academy, and King College, stopping out two years, and graduating in 1892. He took his Theological training in Columbia Seminary, S. C., completing the course in a class of sixteen in the spring of 1893. In the summer vacation he worked in the mountains of North Georgia. As evangelist of the First church, Wilmington, he began work in the Chapel in January 1895. In a few months this mission was organized into a church, of which Mr. Wallace was called to be the first pastor. He was ordained and installed as pastor early in 1896. The church has had a steady and healthful growth in his ministry. He takes great interest in the work for the young and has active societies of different names and aims, but all for Christ and the church. Two things should be emphasized:

1st. That Mr. Wallace was dedicated to the ministry in his childhood.

2nd. His home church is a fair sample of the importance of keeping the little country churches supplied with the preached word. They give us many of our best preachers. The seven who went out from Soddy church to preach the Gospel are Rev. J. A. Wallace, D.D. of Highland Park, Chattanooga, Tenn; Rev. J. Albert Wallace, D. D., President of King College, Bristol, Tenn.; Rev. Mr. Wallace now of Kansas; Rev. R. C. Reed, D. D., of Nashville, Tenn.; Rev. J. D. Wallace, of Brownsville, Tenn., and Rev. A. L. Patterson, of Walterboro, S. C. A third thing should be said in closing, that Mr. Wallace has acted wisely in taking a wife as an helpmeet, and has been most fortunate in his marriage in October to Miss Isabella Heinsberger, who had wrought and continues to work wisely and well in Immanuel church.

THE FREE HORSE.

Everybody has heard the old saying about riding the free horse to death. Poor horse! He was overworked just because he was so willing. The lazy, hard bitted, obstinate horse was left in the stable, and had a good, easy time. If he had horse sense, it is no wonder that he did not reform. If he had become a good horse, he would have been abused just because he was good. We all see the injustice in the case of the horses, but are not some of us doing the same thing in our homes and in our churches? We overload with responsibility the willing workers, and we let the shirkers shirk just because it is so hard to make them do anything or give anything. When an extra collection must be taken up to meet some emergency, to whom do the collectors go? Do they appeal to the man who, with a $2,000 income, gives ten dollars a year to church expenses? No. They say he is so stingy that it would be no use. They go, instead, to the man who, with a $1,000 income, gives fifty dollars a year. Now, this is all wrong. It is unjust and injurious to the stingy as well as to the benevolent. It encourages the former in their stinginess, and discourages the latter in their liberality.—Senex Smith, in Herald and Presbyter.

FEELING HURRIED.

Probably nothing tires one so much as feeling hurried. When in the early morning the day's affairs press on one's attention beforehand, and there comes the wonder how in the world everything is to be accomplished; when every interruption is received impatiently, and the clock is watched in distress as its moments flit past—then the mind tires the body.

We are wrong to drive ourselves with whip and spur in this way. Each of us is promised strength for the day, and we must not wear ourselves out by crowding two days' task into one. If we can only keep cool and calm, not allowing ourselves to be flustered, we shall be less wearied when we have reached the eventide. The children may be fractious, the servants trying, the friend we love may fail to visit us, the letter expected may not arrive; but if we can preserve our tranquility of soul and of demeanor, we shall get through everything creditably.

A NEW HEAVEN NOW.

We may still retain that hope of, nay, that sure belief in, a new heaven and a new earth in the eternity which is to be. But now, at the beginning of this new year, the question is, whether it need to be a hope only. * * * Is it wholly impossible for us, here and now, to spread over our heads some of the azure of that new heaven, and to make the new earth begin at least to blossom as the rose? * * * Yes, it is possible; it is in our power, if through the o'er-arching azure we can gaze into clear openings of the empyrean, and there by the eye of faith see Jesus standing at the right hand of God. * * * Yes, it is possible to the sincere, the humble, and the faithful, to all who feel and have experienced that love and duty can make a little heaven even on this sad earth.—Canon Farrar.

WRESTLING JACOB.

It is quite commonly said that Jacob wrestled with the angel that night at Peniel. That is a mistake and would take away the meaning of one of the most blessed passages of Scripture. For in Genesis xxxii. 24, it is said: "And Jacob was left alone, and there wrestled a man with him until the break of day." This is the culmination of God's dealing with Jacob to give him the possession of the birthright.

Jacob and Esau though brothers were quite unlike as brothers now-a-days often are. Jacob was a bargain maker. He even said when he had the vision of angels ascending and descending on the ladders that "if God would be with" him as offering not to trust God, but to make a bargain with Him, to serve God on his return if God would treat him well meanwhile. Esau was easy-going, at times reckless of his rights. So when Esau came from hunting, faint and hungry and wanted some of the pottage, Jacob proposed a bargain, to trade a mess of pottage for the birthright, Esau made the bargain. "Thus Esau despised his birthright."

Now the birthright belongs to Jacob. But how can he get possession? We know how his mother meant to help him, but only to drive him an exile to her kindred, never to see her face in this world again. Fleeing Jacob offered to make the bargain with God as we have seen and he made bargains with Laban, only to be beaten at his own game. All this time the birthright was his and he might have had possession in God's way. But he was not willing to give up his own way.

At last he leaves Laban to return to his home. He has wealth, wives, children, servants and cattle. He thinks of meeting Esau and shows he has not the birthright which would have been lordship over Esau, for he fears his brother and speaks of him as "my lord Esau." He sends messengers to salute his brother as "my lord." He prepares to propitiate him with presents. He divides his all for safety. Thus he is left alone.

Here our point is taken that the angel wrestled with Jacob and failing to subdue him touched his thigh and put it out of joint, and the sinew shrank. Thus Jacob was helpless, being subdued by the angel At this point his name is changed from Jacob the bargainer, by nature, to Israel, the prince to have power with God and men and prevail by grace. Jacob resisted this angel who wrestled with him, we may well suppose. But it was the angel who wrestled; Jacob prevailed, not by wrestling but simply by holding on, saying: "I will not let thee go until thou bless me." "And he blessed him there."

The next day Jacob met Esau whom he feared, and found him friendly. Esau even insisted on acting as escort for Jacob through the dangers of the way. So Jacob, though not conscious of his possession and addressing Esau as lord, had the power over him. And long after when Jacob was an old man and went down to Egypt to Joseph, and was introduced to Pharaoh, the proud monarch of the mighty throne of that great people, Jacob blessed Pharaoh.

All this meaning for the Christian who has the right to the birthright, but has not gained possession, because of the old nature, sinful and self-willed, refusing to yield to the Angel wrestling to subdue and bless. The self, the flesh, the carnal nature will not surrender to the power of the Lord Jesus Christ and receive the possession from His hand. Instead the bargaining goes on, as if any man could get a blessing as the price paid from God for some so-called service that is full of self and sin. Or the Christian resists the claims of absolute authority of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Angel of the Covenant. To give full possession of the birthright of Christ must often take away strength and make helpless that the helpless one may only be able to hold on and say: "I will not let thee go until thou bless me." Then and in that the name shall be changed with the nature, and the Christian hitherto without power may henceforth "filled with the Spirit" be blessed and made a blessing." "Yield yourselves unto God."

GOV. ALTGELD, of Illinois, who has just retired from office, takes to himself great credit for having pardoned fewer criminals in proportion to the number of convicts in prison than any other governor during the past twenty years; and he has found persons to commend him therefor. But the question is not how many were pardoned, but who were pardoned and why. Those pardoned by Gov. Altgeld were in many cases the most notoriously unrepentingly criminal—the Hay Market anarchists for instance, and just now one or more desperadoes the terror of the police of Chicago.

WE HAVE SEEN it announced recently that although President McKinley, good Scotch name as it is, is not a Presbyterian, but a Methodist—which isn't so very bad after all—still Mr. McKinley is a good staunch believer in the pentapuncted prinoiples of Presbyterianism; if so the country still is safe beyond a doubt. If that be so we are the more fully prepared to believe, and to rejoice in the belief, that the wine bottle will be banished from the White House during the incoming administration as it was during the administration of President Hayes.

The Southern Presbyterian comes to us this week in a new dress and form. The smaller size book form is much more convenient to handle, and we have no doubt but that our esteemed contemporary will find it advantageous.

We really think our

is a most desirable article to have in any household where the PRESBYTERIAN is taken. It holds the successive issues together in most convenient form, costs no labor and requires no special pains in its adjustment. What a fine Synodical Album a year's gathering would thus constitute!

Sent to any address for forty cents.

IF THE FRIENDS of the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN could realize how great a favor they would confer by sending in their subscriptions promptly, we are sure our offers would be comfortably replenished, and our burden thereby lightened.

WE ARE SURE our friends, especially those interested in the societies of the Church, will find a contribution anent the societies of Charlotte most interesting reading We thank our contributor for this pleasure and will be glad to hear from her often.

DAVIDSON NOTES.

Many former students will hear with regret that our oldest citizen, Mr. James Allison, "Uncle Jimmie," as a thousand students have familiarly called him, died on January 8th, and was buried to-day. The stores were closed and recitations suspended during the hour of the funeral, and a large audience gathered in the church to honor the memory of one who was a sincere Christian, a kindly neighbor, and an upright citizen.

For the information and pleasure of numerous friends I send a list of first honor students for the fall term. The number is unusually large, even for the short term, and should it remain undiminished for the whole year, would be unprecedented.

TO THE RESCUE!

Friends of the orphans and the Orphans' Home at Barium Springs. The Superintendent of the Orphans' Home informs me that the wal's of the long desired "Centre Building" are finished and ready for the roof and that the building fund is exhausted. The sum of one thousand dollars is needed at once to cover it in and secure it from damage during the winter. It is impossible for us to send out an agent to make personal solicitation for funds and we are compelled to appeal to our ministers and churches and individuals to help us in their own way at once. A few churches that have been visited have responded liberally, but it is impracticable to visit all. We therefore earnestly ask that you take immediate action, and secure and send in funds to relieve embarrassment and prevent loss. Send in sums, large or small to Mr. Jno. E. Oates, Treasurer, Charlotte, N. C.

Yours fraternally,

J. RUMPLE,
President of Regents.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our Regular Correspondent.
Washington, D.C., Jan. 6th, '97.

It is apparent since Congress reassembled that the Senators and Representatives, especially the former, have taken notice of the unmistakable trend of public opinion against any action on the part of Congress, in dealing or attempting to deal with Cuba, that would be likely to involve the United States in war.

Those who believe that the upper ten of society offers proportionately as good a field for missionary work as the lower ten thousand, will be pleased to know that Mrs. John W. Foster, wife of the ex-Secretary of State proposes to duplicate some of the remarkable missionary meetings held in the picture gallery of the large house occupied by Postmaster General and Mrs. Wanamaker during the last administration. Mrs. Foster has invited a number of society ladies to attend a meeting at her house Friday morning, to hear an address from Mrs. Booth Tucker, of the Salvation Army, who is to be accompanied by Brigadier Susie F. Swift, a graduate of Vassar College, and Dr. Frederick Nice, once a surgeon in the German army and now an humble ensign in the Salvation Army, who is known far and wide as a skilled player of the violin.

Bishop Satterlee this week gave a very interesting description of his recent trip to Russia for the purpose of presenting an American petition in behalf of the Armenian Christians to the Czar. When he first arrived at St. Petersburg and announced that he wished to present this petition in person and without the intervention of the American minister, because it was desired that the presentation should be devoid of even the appearance of political significance, he was told that it would be impossible. However, he persisted and, as usual when people determine to persevere until a good deed is accomplished, he succeeded. He was received by the Czar and his wife with such simplicity that he says he could hardly realize that he was in the presence of the absolute monarch of the country in which all the outward pomp and circumstance of royalty finds its fullest expression. In addition to presenting the petition, Bishop Satterlee spoke to the Czar of the anxiety all civilized nations felt about the Armenians and Russia's probable action towards them. But he left without an idea of how the Czar felt towards them; he listened closely, but the answers he gave were short and diplomatically non-committal.

Turn where you will and the rum evil will still confront you. A government Indian inspector—Mr. J. G. Wright—who has recently returned from an official trip among the Chippewa Indians at White Earth Agency, Minnesota, after speaking of the manner in which the 7,000 (or thereabouts) Indians on that reservation spend their time, added significantly: "Their morals in a general way are very good. They have a warm attachment for their wives, and would give but little or no trouble if whiskey could be kept from them." Kind reader, how many white men do you know of whom that last sentence might also be truthfully said?

A week of prayer for the Presbyterian churches of Washington, especially intended to bring the churches closer together and to strengthen the bond of sympathy between them, was inaugurated Sunday afternoon by a union communion service at the church of the Covenant. Every day this week prayer services are held in all the Presbyterian churches.

February 17th, 18th and 19th, are the dates which been set for the meetings of the coming National Convention of Mothers, and arrangements have been completed for the convention to meet and to make its headquarters during the convention at one of our prominent hotels. Meanwhile the headquarters of the committee in charge are located at 1400 New Hampshire Avenue, where all inquiries for information concerning the convention should be addressed.

University Park Temple, located adjacent to the grounds of Howard University and formerly a mission of the First Congregational church, was on Sunday dedicated as an independent church, the morning services being conducted by the pastor, Rev. S. N. Brown, and those in the evening by Dr. Rankin, President of Howard University. Several new features, including a free kindergarten, a penny savings bank, a mending bureau and a sewing and cooking school, for the many poor colored children in its immediate vicinity, are to be put into operation by the new church, and they will he watched with the greatest interest by those who are interested in the betterment of the children of the poorer sections of our city, and of all other cities. INK SPOTS FROM VIRGIL.

Here it has been said is the anguish of all partings:

Siste gradum teque aspectu ne subtrahe nostro.
quem fugis? extremum fato quod te adloquor, hoc-est.
talibus Aeneas ardentem et torva tuentem lenibat dictis animum lacrimasque ciebat

Stay! oh stay! withdraw not from my sight. Whom do you fly? this is the last time Fate permits me to speak with you.

"This brief space o'er,
Fate suffers us to meet no more.
Thus while the bitter tears run down,
The hero strives to calm her frown."

Here too is the old story: "Oh would it had not been"—vain lament over the inexorable past.

Felix, heu nimium felix, si litora tantum numquam Dardaniae tetigissent nostra carinae.

"Happy! oh how happy! had the Trojan never touched my shore."

And these memorable lines that tell the ever sad brooding over the sorrows that cling to the mortal race, and the vain attempt to fill the mind with the empty picture of past scenes.

Sunt lacrimae rerum et mentem mortalia tangunt.
solve metus; feret haec aliquam tibi fama salutem.
sic ait, atque animum pictura pascit inani
multa gemens, largoque umectat flumine voltum.

"E'en here the tear of pity springs,
And hearts are touched by human things
Dismiss your fear, we sure may claim,
To find some safety in our fame,
He said and feeds his heart
With shapes of unsubstantial art
In fond remembrance groaning deep
With briny floods his visage steep."

He was looking at pictures on the temple at Carthage, portraying scenes in which he had part in ruined Troy.

How pathetic the picture of the women kissing and embracing the door posts of the halls they were to leave forever.

Tum pavidae tectis matres ingentibus errant, amplexaeque tenent postes atque oscula figunt.

How well put this sentiment of pity:

Non ignara mali miseris succurrere disco.
Sic memorat; simul Aenean in regia ducit tecta.

Not ignorant of misfortune myself I have learned to succor the miserable. At once she leads Aeneas into her royal palace.

STUDIES IN CHURCH HISTORY.

CHAPTER X.—THE DAWNING LIGHT.

BY REV. A. J. MC KELWAY, FAYETTEVILLE, N. C.

Despite the increasing corruption of the Catholic Church during the dark ages, there were many humble homes, where the saving truths of redemption were known, where God was feared and his commandments kept. And there were many priests and monks whose lives of purity and godly zeal were true examples of Christian faith and love. But as the Church drew away from its holy traditions it was opposed more and more steadfastly by these true and earnest souls, until at last the separation was complete and the Protestant Church was formed. All honor to the "Reformers before the Reformation!"

In the eleventh century there arose a sect in Europe called the Cathari-Puritans. In spite of their perversion of true doctrine, in many particulars they were a standing protest against the immoral lives of the priests. In France they were called Albigenses, and their lives of severe asceticism and moral earnestness made a profound impression upon the people, and contrasted strongly with the superstition, ignorance and vice of the clergy. They openly opposed the Roman Church. They divided themselves into two classes—the believing, and the perfected. Their doctrine of perfection seems to have been closely akin to that of our so-called "sanctified" brethren. The Roman Church declared against their doctrines and in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries persecuted them to extinction. In spite of the abuse of the Roman writers there must have been a great deal of good in the Bons Hommes.

The Waldenses are of special interest to us, not only from their glorious history, but because a colony of that Church has recently become identified with our Synod. The Church of Lyons held a prominent position in Gaul, and was noted for the ability and piety of its bishops. In the latter part of the twelfth century, Waldus, a rich citizen of Lyons, had the Bible, which was read in Latin, translated into the dialect of the people. The reading of the Bible led to a more Christ-like life, and Waldus and his followers gave away their property to the poor and began to preach the Gospel in the houses and streets. They were finally forbidden to preach and expelled from the city. But they scattered over that part of France where the Albigences had already labored, and penetrated into Switzerland and northern Italy. In those secluded valleys they may have found kindred spirits in those whose fathers had never departed from the purity and simplicity of the early Church, and thus have linked themselves directly with the Apostolic age. "Prove the contrary" was the challenge which their representative gave, before the meeting of our Synod in Tarboro.

After the Council of Toulouse in 1229 forbade the laity to read the Bible, the breach between the Waldensians and the Roman Church widened. Their preachers, sent out two by two, often disguised as peddlers, scattered the translations of the Bible everywhere. They rejected Purgatory, masses, prayers for the dead, and saint-worship. They had their children baptized by the priests and did not require a re-baptism upon admision into their sect. Of course they were persecuted for their faith by the Church of Rome, but in spite of persecution they were numerous and widely represented at the time of the Reformation itself. They were soon brought into fellowship with the Reformers, and the Church has survived its terrible persecution and is making rapid progress now in the evangelization of Italy. A Waldensian pastor preaches in a church in Rome near enough to the Vatican for the Pope to hear his voice if he cares to.

The Bohemian Church is also worthy of note in this connection. Christianity was established in Bohemia in the tenth century. It always claimed independence of Rome. The Bible was given to the people, and the celibacy of the clergy was disregarded. In 1348 the University of Prague was established which educated John Huss and Jerome, of Prague, in the principles of the pure Gospel. In the fifteenth century these two great men were burnt at the stake and the Bohemian Church after severe persecution was nominally united to that of Rome. But the people had laid too a firm grasp upon the truth, and when the Reformation came the Bohemian brethren arose and claimed their kinship with Luther and Calvin. A terrible persecution depopulated the whole country, and the Bohemian Church was outwardly destroyed. But as late as 1760 Protestants were condemned to death for selling religious books, and after the edict of toleration in 1781, Protestant churches immediately sprang into existence. The Moravian Church is the worthy daughter of the old Bohemian Church and has become the example to Christendom of the true missionary spirit.

When such faith and piety could be found among the common people it was only natural that there should be men of learning and genius who saw the corruption of the Roman Church and its wide departure from the word of God. It might have been said of almost every great forerunner of the Reformation, "His name is John." John Rusbrock, John Tauber, John Stanpitz, John of Goch, John Wesel and John Wessel, all held more or less clearly the faith once delivered, and by their expositions of Scripture and writings on theological themes, prepared the minds of the people for the religious revolution. John Wickliffe and John Huss are more famous still. Wickliffe was the morning star of the Reformation. He was born in England about the year 1320 and was educated at Oxford University. He became the great champion of the people against the encroaching power of Rome abetted by the English Church. Courtenay, Bishop of London, was Wickliffe's main opponent, but Wickliffe was too strong with the people to be overthrown. He was not only a professor in the University, but often a member of Parliament and he accomplished a great deal as the rector of Lutterworth church. He organized a body of itinerant preachers who made, as he did, the Bible itself the matter of their preaching. But his great work was the translation of the Bible into English, the most of which was done by himself, though the work was not completed until after his death. The influence of this translation of the Bible upon the life of the English nation is beyond all estimate. The followers of Wickliffe were called Lollards and many of them suffered martyrdom, the most prominent being a friend of Wickliffe's, Sir John Oldcastle.

John Huss was a student of Wickliffe's writings and became the earnest advocate of his doctrines in Bohemia. Huss was the rector at Prague and very popular with the students there. He was finally led to an open breach with the Church of Rome, by his denunciation of the sale of indulgences, the practice that caused Luther a century later. Huss was brought before the Council of Constance in 1414, and condemned to be burnt at the stake as a heretic. The sentence was executed in June 1415. The same Council decreed that the bones of Wickliffe should be dug up and dishonored. Jerome of Prague, Huss' friend, was at first led to recant, but afterwards repented and faced a martyr's death, being burnt at a stake in 1416. One-hundred and one years later, Luther nailed his nine-five theses to the church-door in Wittenberg, and the Reformation began. Was it not time? Was there not need?

LETTER FROM DR. WORTH*

CHINKIANG, China }
Aug. 12, 1896 }

Two mails have arrived this week, so we will hear to-morrow and again the day after. The "Messenger" comes regularly and I read almost everything in it, even the little clippings from the different papers all over the State in hopes of seeing a notice of some friend or other

Last week we had a very pleasant visit to Nanking. Mr. Woodbridge took his children, Sam and Louise, and the big coolie Long Teng. We left here about midnight going second class, just like the Chinese passengers. The little second class, bare, cabins were very hot and reeking with opium smoke, so we pitched our camp on the hurricane deck along with about one hundred Chinese. We spread our beds on the floor and were soon sound asleep, with nothing but the stars over us. At daylight, or soon after, we sighted Nanking and arrived at the steamer landing at about six o'clock. We got a little snack in a foreign store at the landing and took a carriage (foreign carriage) for a splendid ride over a road as good as the turnpike at home. Strange to say it was built entirely by the natives, and has a nice wooden, painted bridge over a wide canal. This road is twenty or twenty-five feet wide with a nice walk on each side, and is eight miles long, soon to be extended to ten or twelve miles. Nanking is the largest city in the world, they say; the walls are thirty-three miles in circuit, though the population is not more than half a million. It looks like an immense, beautiful country neighborhood enclosed with a wall. One part of the city near the South Gate has a great deal of business. The Chinese Government has a naval college there and we saw three of their cruisers (foreign built) also a big arsenal where breech-loading small arms and cannons are made. The latter is entirely in charge of Chinamen (foreign trained). Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson of the Northern Methodist mission, friends of Mr. Woodbridge, received us very cordially and treated us finely in their nice home. Mr. Ferguson has charge of the Methodist University there. There were one hundred and twenty young men present last term and they certainly have fine grounds, buildings, and equipment. The grounds are one-half mile in circuit. The buildings would do credit to a first class college at home. He has a first class equipment. We visited the missions of the Northern Presbyterians, the Northern Methodists and the Disciples or Christians. The latter have a very fine location and a large hospital. We went over there one morning and were soon seated in Dr. Macklin's office. There were present Dr. Macklin and Dr. Butchart of the Disciples, Mr. Best of the China Island mission, Mr. Ferguson of the British Bible society, Mr. Houston of the Northern Presbyterians, Mr. Ferguson (No. 2) of the Northern Methodists, Mr. Woodbridge and I. It was quite a gay crowd, and under Dr. Macklin's leadership (he is an Irishman), we cracked jokes and had a good time for an hour or so. Then the Doctor showed me his hospital (about seventy beds) and then several of us, in fact, all except Mr. Ferguson No. 2, took dinner with him. It was a very pleasant and instructive trip. I met all the missionaries, saw their stations, chapels and hospitals, besides seeing the famous city. Another result of the trip may turn out to be of material advantage.

Do you remember reading a year or two ago about a large piece of ground in the mountains of Central China that was bought by missionaries to use as a summer resort, but the officials would not confirm the sale and attempted to break up the whole plan? Well, the foreign power forced the mandaris to keep their hands off and to ratify the purchase so that about one square mile of land, 5,000 feet above the sea level is now in the hands of a company and has been divided into lots 250 feet by 150, and these are being sold very rapidly. I have heard much about the place lately. Mr. Ferguson has just come from there and showed us a map of the place. It has many beautiful clear streams on it. The thermometer has not been above 76° this summer, and often drops into the sixties. The land is on the top of the mountain range and one lot seems about as good as another. After thinking it over I concluded to buy one. Over one hundred lots have been sold and only twenty are left. Missionaries own and manage the place. The purchase money of the lots is being used for building a good road up the mountain and opening roads about the "preserve" up there. They say the view is grand and the air very fine. If I remember the elevation of Blowing Rock correctly, this place (Kuling—Old Tomb) is 1,000 feet higher. Mr. Ferguson examined the whole place and selected two lots but decided not to purchase, as his mission had reserved fifteen lots for its members, (his mission is at the head of it.) He let Mr. Woodbridge and myself have his claim on these two lots. We have opened negotiations and hope to settle the matter very soon. I feel that it is a providential matter. The place has forty missionary inhabitants this summer and several houses have been built, others are building. Only those who have spent a summer here know how trying it is and I am determined to take the best possible care of our little family and myself. The lot costs $150 Mexican, about $81 gold. Mr. Sydenstricker is thinking of buying; the other members of our mission being distant from this place, probably know little or nothing about it. We would probably have known very little more if we had not gone up to Nanking. The place is situated fifteen miles from the city of Kinkiang, which is about forty hours journey from here up the Yangtse river. It can be easily reached from Kinkiang, which is a large open port. It is probable there will be no lots left by the end of the summer and it is very important that our mission should have one or two places there. For my part, I hope that we will be able in a year or two to buy the top of one of the little mountains on our lake and there spend the summer without having to get out of touch with our work and having to spend so much money during the summer that our winter expenses have to be cut down. That is what it amounts to in many cases. People must care for themselves in July and August or the result will be disastrous in many cases. Many people are obliged to spend a good deal of money in getting to a healthy place for the summer, so the expenses in the winter must be reduced, or worst of all, they are obliged to get away from their work and leave their churches and schools and inquirers. This is very detrimental but it is necessary. So I hope that we can live near home. Still this lot at Kuling may be of great benefit to us and certainly will be to somebody.

We are just as happy as can be. God is certainly good to us and is answering the prayers that you all are sending up for us.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

The Fleming H. Revell Co., of New York and Chicago, have now in press a work upon the Holy Spirit, entitled "Another Comforter," by Rev. A. D. McClure, of Wilmington, N. C. Mr. McClure has given the mission and personality of the Holy Spirit deep and consecrated study for some time and we look forward to his work with pleasure and bespeak for it a large circulation.

"Old Ironsides," Dr. Holmes' most stirring lyric and the one which brought him recognition as a poet was first printed in the Boston Advertiser in 1830. Dr. Holmes was then twenty-one. He had been graduated from Harvard the year before, and his mind was filled with enthusiasm for the achievements of our navy. The frigate Constitution, the conquering hero of many a sea fight, lay at Charleston Navy Yard and had been condemned by an unsentimental department to be unseaworthy.

There was nothing deliberate about the composition of the poem, it was wholly impromptu. Dr. Holmes says that to the best of his recollection he wrote it on a scrap of paper with a lead pencil while standing one day before the fire place in the old house at Cambridge. Without dreaming of the great popularity it would win he sent it to the Advertiser. As it gave eloquent sentiment to the voice of the whole country its success was both sudden and universal. At Washington it was struck off on handbills and distributed through the city. The grand results was the preservation of the Constitution.

Horatio Hale, an authority on Indian dialects, died on December 31st at Clinton, Ohio, aged eighty years. Mr. Hale was a graduate of Yale University. In 1844 he was philologist of the Wilkes expedition sent out by the American government and to discover the Antartic continent and was the author of the Iroquois book of rites and several other works relating to the Indian languages and customs of America.

Queen Victoria will personally dictate and revise a biography of her majesty, which will appear in 1897.

The charming child's story of "Cinderella, or the Glass Slipper," is probably of Egyptian origin, says an exchange. The hieroglyphics tell of Pti, a captive Persian princess, who one day was surprised on the banks of the Nile by the approach of a youth as beautiful as the Sun God. The youth would have caught the princess, but the lovely Pti was swift of foot and made her escape. However, she left behind her a tiny glass slipper, which the handsome youth treasured and set about finding an owner for. As the youth was no other than a prince of the blood royal, Rameses II, the original of the great statue of Memnon, the singing statue on the banks of the Nile, the Princess Pti fled no more when her princely lover found her. It may be said that Rameses' quest was a comparatively easy one, as the Persians alone made shoes of glass in those days.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Wilmington Churches.—St. Andrew's: The week of prayer was observed with good congregations. Eighty-five dollars was raised at Sunday morning's service for the primary department.

First Church:—Week of prayer observed. Communion services on the Sabbath. Four names were announced as having been received by certificate and one upon profession.

Immanuel Church:—The Week of Prayer observed with large attendance, especially the meeting on Sabbath evenning. Two professed their faith in Christ.

Patterson Mills, Concord Presbytery:—We received three members into our church at Patterson's Mill on profession on Sabbath, Jan. 10th, and baptized three infants. Our day school under Miss Mary Spinning is in a flourishing condition and we all feel that it could not be in better hands. She is rapidly winning the confidence and affection of the entire community. Our Sabbath school is steadily increasing in numbers. We are greatly enjoying our new organ sent us by friends in the North; it is an excellent one. We have our communion at this point next Sabbath.

W. C. Alexander is the pastor.

Burgaw:—On the first Sunday in January Mr. Richard L. Player was installed ruling elder and Mr. Don C. Saunders was ordained and installed deacon of Burgaw Presbyterian church. It was communion service.

Pike Sunday School:—Little Martha Sidbury, who is only seven years old, made a perfect recitation of the Mothers' Catechism repeating the Ten Commandments in verse for which she received a nice Bible from her Sunday-school teacher. This speaks well for teacher and pupil.

VIRGINIA.

Second Church, Norfolk:—Rev. Dr. W. S. Lacy, pastor. Nine persons received at last communion by letter.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Second Church, Greenville:—During the year's pastorate of Dr. S. R. Preston, seven persons have been recived on profession and twenty-one by letter.

GEORGIA.

Thomasville:—Rev. E. D. McDougall, pastor. Seven persons were recently received by certificate and three upon profession of faith.

Central Church, Atlanta:—Rev. Theron H. Rice was installed pastor on the 27th ult. The constitutional questions were propounded by Dr. Gaines, of Decatur, Dr. Barnett and Rev. Chalmers Fraser of Atlanta, delivered the charges the pastor and people.

KENTUCKY.

Madison Avenue Church, Covington:—The pastor, Rev. Joseph Rennie, recently announced the names of nine accessions to this church. Six by letter and three upon profession.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Horton:—The new church here was dedicated on December 20th. Rev Holmes Ralston, pastor.

MISSOURI.

Lawson:—Rev. J. S Sibley, pastor. Services recently conducted by the pastor, assisted by Rev. Xonophon Ryland resulted in seven persons being received into the church by profession and three by certificate.

TENNESSEE.

Presbytery of Memphis:—Rev. Dr. E. M. Richardson, Rev. R. R. Evans and G. W. MacRae, Esq., the committee appointed by the Presbytery of Memphis to arrange a program for the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the Westminster Standards at the next spring meeting, has agreed upon the following:

1. History of the Westminster Assembly. Its calling, organization, constitutional elements and methods of work. By Rev. W. S. Cochrane.
2. Its Doctrinal System. By Rev. Wm. McE. Alexander.
3. Its Relation to Education. By Rev. S. S. Gill.
4. Its Relation to and Effects Upon Civil Liberty. By Rev. N. M. Woods, D.D.
5. The Present Status of this System of Doctrine and Polity. By Rev. E. A. Ramsey, D. D.
6. The Catholicity of the Symbols of the Presbyterian Church. By Rev. J. H. Lumpkin.

GENERAL.

Mr. Moody has been holding special services in Carnegie Hall, New York, for some time, which meetings he will continue on Sundays. He will spend the week in Boston, conducting mid-day services. Rev. Dr. A. C. Dixon and Mr. Sankey have begun a meeting at Cooper Union to be continued during this month. In February Rev. L. B. Meyer is expected to assist them.

The following bit of news from Miss Claude Grier, will be appreciated by our readers: Honolulu, Sandwich Islands, On board steamship Doric, Dec. 17th, 1896. We made this port on the 16th at 9 p. m. Went on land this a. m., and were delightfully entertained by Mr. Damon of the Chinese Mission. Are just launching awayward. Our letters go back by pilot. Twelve missionaries no board; all well and cheerful. Hope to reach Yokohama on 28th. This is a gloriously beautiful country and the Christian fellowship we have enjoyed has been most refreshing. [In our Mission Notes it is stated that the party reached Yokohama at stated time.]

The Right Honorable and Most Reverend Frederick Temple was enthroned as Archbishop of Canterbury and Primate of England on the 8th inst.

PERSONALS.

Rev. S. M. Rankin, of Red Springs, N. C., is making arrangements with Rev. D. W. Snyder, our missionary to Africa, to visit his churches in the spring. Mr. Snyder is at present supplying the church at Tampa, Fla.

Rev. D. W. Humphreys, of Lake City, Fla., has resigned his charge.

Rev. J. M. Rose, D.D., of Morganton, was in Raleigh last week in consultation with Dr. Lewis the oculist. We trust Dr. Rose will soon be entirely relieved.

Rev. G. W. Lawson, of Gordonsville, Va., has been called to the church at Makemie, Accomac county, Va.

A call has been extended Rev. W. B. Jennings, pastor of the Central church, Louisville, to the Compton Avenue church, St. Louis.

A joint committee of the Presbyterian, Baptist and Methodist churches of Pensacola, Fla., are making preparation for a series of meetings to be held in that city by Rev. R. G. Pearson, of Asheville in the first part of Febrnary.

We regret to note the sickness of Rev. P. R. Law, of Lumber Bridge, N.C., but learn he is out again.

Rev. Ivanhoe Robertson has returned to his labors at Burgaw, N. C., after a short visit to his former home in Virginia.

Rev. John A. McMurray, of Smithfield, is holding a protracted meeting at Kenly, N. C.

Rev. G. W. McMillan, of Burgaw, spent the holiday season with friends at Kenansville, N. C.

Rev. L. O. Spencer, of Princeton, Ky., has received a unanimous call from the church at Henderson, Ky.

The aged mother of Rev. Messrs. R. S Arrowood of Cool Spring, M. C. Arrowood, of Marshville and W. B. Arrowood, of Laurinburg, died recently at her home near Charlotte. A beautiful record of her life is that three sons have given their lives to disseminating the Gospel.

The meeting in which Rev. Wm. Black was to assist Rev. Mr. Coppedge at Rockingham has been postponed on account of the sickness of the former. We hope to hear at an early day of Mr. Black's complete restoration to health.

Our sympathy is extended to Rev. T. J. Allison, pastor of Sugar Creek church, upon the death of his father, Mr. James Allison, of Davidson.

Rev. Wm. Caldwell, of Baltimore, Rev. A. H. Caldwell, recently of Memphis, Rev. R. S. Caldwell, D. D., of Hazlehurst, Miss., recently met at Senatobia, Miss., the guests of their venerable father, the Rev. Dr. A. H. Caldwell, of Senatobia.

Dr. Marion Hull, of Athens, Ga., will devote his life to the missionary work in Corea. Dr. Hull graduated with honor from the University of Virginia and Georgetown and is at present completing his course at Bellevue hospital New York.

We are glad to learn from the Southwestern Presbytern that Rev. Dr. Mallard of New Orleans, who has been ill is recovering.

FOREIGN MISSION COMMITTEE NOTES.

The Executive Committee of Missions met in the Secretary's office, Nashville, Tenn., Tuesday morning, January 5th.

Present at the session: Dr. J. H. McNeilly, Chairman; Maj. Joseph Hardie, Dr. J. W. Lupton, Dr. Angus McDonald, Rev. G. W. Patterson, Dr. James 1. Vance, Rev. F. F. Webb, Mr. H. H. Baskette, Dr. R. C. Reed, Mr. W. H. Raymond, Dr. W. C. Clark, and S. H. Chester, Secretary.

The meeting was opened with prayer.

A letter was presented from Rev. S. Phillips Verner dated "Kassai River, five days from Luebo, Sept. 14th, 1896," and containing the following: "This steamer cannot get up to Luebo, on account of the extremely low water, and so I am obliged to send this back by it before being able to say anything of the direct condition there."

The committee was informed of the progress of Revs. W. H. Morrison and J. S. Crowley towards the Congo Mission, via Antwerp.

The Auditing Committee was authorized to renew the loan of $8,000 of the Congo Boat Fund.

A letter from Rev. W. M. Thompson, of Caxias, Brazil, showed the character of some of the work being done there. He states: "There are persons in our church who, from the day they first heard the Gospel have continued firm until the present hour, in spite of persecutions at home and in the streets."

Rev. W. C. Porter in a letter dated Nov. 7th, reported a mission school started at Natal, Brazil, the week previous, under the care of Miss Rebecca T. Morrisette and Mrs. Porter. He also reported an increase in the demand for Bibles, one new church member, one candidate and an awakening in several country places.

An earnest request was received from Mrs. Cathrina D. Cowan, of Araguary, Brazil, to have Miss M. Blanche Dunlap sent to aid in school work. The committee favored the request, but postponed action on account of lack of funds.

Rev. Charles R. Morton, of Araguary mentioned in his last letter the expected opening of the new railroad to that place on Nov. 15th.

The committee received a communication from the Directors of the Theological Seminary of the Synod of Brazil, thanking them for the recent action taken towards aiding that work.

A request from Miss Eliza M. Reed to be permitted to re-open school work at Pernambuco, Brazil., was postponed on account of the state of the treasury.

A telegram was received the morning the committee met, announcing the arrival of the steamship "Doric" at Yokohama, Japan, on Dec. 28th, this being the vessel on which Rev. J. Mercer Blain, Rev. Will F. Junkin and Miss Emma McKnight sailed for China, and Miss Claude L. Grier for Japan. This party first arranged to go via Tacoma on the "Olympia," but the steamer proved unsatisfactory and after a delay in this country for a little more than two weeks, they sailed from San Francisco on the "Doric" of the Occidental and Oriental Line.

A letter dated Dec. 14th, from Rev. G. W. Painter, brought the news of the safe arrival of Dr. and Mrs. Edgar Woods, Jr., and himself, at Shanghai, China, after an unusually rough and stormy voyage.

One of our elder and experienced missionaries in China sent in the following as his conclusion on a subject often discussed: "The church of Christ cannot be planted in this field by the force of the civil authority. I believe that all appeals to Consuls and Ministers are fraught with failure in establishing the Spiritual Kingdom. At any rate, I have acted on that belief and may suffer personally for it yet, if it pleases my God; but the Chinese may stone me to death as Stephen was stoned, or beat me, as Paul was beaten, but I will never, by the help of God, ask aid from the secular government. That was the plan of Christ and His Apostles. Again, if my goods are all destroyed or burnt by a mob, I will ask for no indemnity. If my life is taken, I wish the Church to take no action. If I am imprisoned for Christ's sake, I want no reprisals."

Rev. H. B. Price, of the Japan Mission was delayed in this country until after April 1st, on account of low state of finances of the committee.

A letter dated Seoul, Korea, Nov. 7th, from Rev. Eugene Bell, reported all the mission well. They were making preparation for the future work, besides looking after what was at hand.

Appropriations were made for the Mexico Mission for 1897, amounting all to $7,088.

The report of Mr. Erskine Reed, Treasurer, for December, showed $386.11 on hand at the close of the year. It is estimated that an average of about $12,000 per month will be needed during 1897, to carry on the work as it is at present.

The committee adjourned to meet again February 9th. Closed with prayer

LINCOLNTON NOTES.

As the holidays drew near unusual interest developed in Presbyterian circles at Lincolnton. The first of January was the 25th anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. R. Z. Johnston, and the session had made order that it be observed with appropriate services.

On the evening of the 23rd day of December a wedding of unusual interest took place in the church. The bride Miss Bessie D. Johnston, daughter of the pastor and the groom Mr. John W. Saine, a rising young physician, a native of Lincoln county. The bride had been a pupil in our academy, then for several years a teacher and was greatly beloved by the children she had taught and was a justly popular lady. The groom has many friends endeared to him by reason of his professional services in sickness and his many good qualities of mind and heart. Their marriage attracted a great multitude that crowded the church to its fullest capacity. Beautiful order prevailed and the young people that stood with the bride and groom displayed such grace and loveliness as to make the evening one of gladness and joy to everybody. The presents on the happy occasion were many, varied and very beautiful.

The anniversary exercises were conducted according to the following programme:

25TH ANNIVERSARY,

January 1872—January 1897,

Rev. R. Z. Johnston, pastor,

Friday, Jan. 8th, 1897,

Reception at the manse in charge of the ladies from 3 to 9 p. m.

Saturday, Jan 9th, 1897, 11 a. m., Historical papers and letters—short addresses by visiting ministers, 3 to 4 p. m.

The Young People's Society received their friends at the manse.

7 p. m., Sermon—Sunday, Jan. 10th.

11 a. m., Anniversary Sermon—3 p. m., young people's service. History Sunday-school—Addresses.

7 p. m., Sermon by Rev. J. J. Rhen, P. E., of Shelby District M. E. Church.

The weather was propitious for this season, there being sunshine enough to moderate the first severe cold days of the new year, and moonlight to make the evenings delightful.

No such social reunion has occurred here for years, as the reception on Friday afternoon and evening gathered at the manse around the pastor and his family. For six honrs a stream of visitors in their best robes and best humor, representing nearly every family of the town and surrounding country, of all churches and all professions poured into the old manse and were received and served by the ladies, who were rejoiced to see them in their pastor's home. Most cordial greetings and hand shakings and sweet music were in order and a delightful opportunity of bringing the whole community in touch and of giving expression to their deepest thoughts and best feelings.

Cordial invitations had been given neighboring ministers to attend and some disappointment was felt when only one of the pastor's presbyterial brethren appeared, the Rev. G. A. Sparrow. On him devolved the responsibility of presiding and conducting all the public services except the last. Many letters were received from the absent pastors announcing their inability to attend and expressing a profound interest in the unusual occasion and many kind words for the pastor. Many of these were read to the congregation during the progress of the exercises by Mr. Sparrow.

Bro. Sparrow preached two able and appropriate sermons Saturday night and Sunday morning; by his easy manners, pleasant address and pious zeal he contributed much to the interest and enjoyment of the exercises.

The families sweetly attested their loving confidence in the old pastor in many ways. A number of presents were given Mr. and Mrs. Johnston. At the Saturday evening meeting Mr. Sparrow in behalf of the congregation presented the pastor an elegant cane, engraved "R. Z. J., 1872—1897."

At the Sunday afternoon meeting S. W. McKee, Superintendent of the Sunday-school read an interesting paper giving the Sunday-school history for twenty-five years.

At night a sermon was preached by Rev. J. J. Rhen. His sermon was appropriate to the occasion and listened to with rare interest.

Remarks were then made by Revs. Sparrow, Womble, Rhen and Johnston; the congregation sung the hymn Rock of Ages and were dismissed.

Thus passed into history a very interesting occasion. A pastorate of such length is very unusual, it speaks well for a pastor and people that they labor together for so long a period.

FAYETTEVILLE PRESBYTERY PROVIDES FOR HER DAUGHTERS.

SOME ADVANTAGES OF RED SPRINGS SEMINARY.

Among the recent movements in North Carolina for the higher Christian education of women, there is none of greater interest than that set on foot by Fayetteville Presbytery. A careful survey of the field convinced them that there was an imperative demand for a seminary of high grade at the lowest possible rates of tuition and board. To meet this demand, they proposed to erect, at some suitable place, a seminary which would include these two features: 1st. The highest type of Christian education. 2d. The lowest possible cost.

Bids were called for, and Red Springs, Robeson county, was selected as the site. The following gentlemen were elected as a building Committee: Rev. S. M. Rankin, H. H. Hodgins, and A. B. Pearsall, also, the following trustees: G. B. Patterson, Esq., chairman; Hon. J. W. McLauchlin, J. L. McMillan, M. D., Rev. W. F. Thom, Rev. W.B. Arrowood, and Rev. S. M. Rankin.

Under the direction of the building committee, a handsome, commodious, and convenient building was erected.

Carefully considering the prime object of this institution, viz., the highest type of Christian education, the trustees chose for president, Rev. C. G. Vardell, a live, energetic man, who was for five years the beloved and successful pastor of New Berne church.

This election was the more happy because Mrs. Vardell is so eminently qualified, both by nature and education, to direct the musical department of the seminary. Mrs. Vardell accepted the position of director of the musical department, and Miss B. Brant Krider was elected to assist her.

To assist Mr. Vardell, Miss Ellen E. Dill was elected to the chair of Mathematics and Natural Science; Miss Nannie M. Seawell to the chair ot Latin, English Language and Literature; Miss Christiana McFadyen to the Primary Department; Miss Maggie Rose to the Art Department, and Mrs. J. D. Rumple to the department of Physical Culture. Miss Emma Blue was chosen matron.

The trustees then turned their attention to the matter of cost, and fixed on the following low, and, in the judgment of some people, seemingly impossible rates, viz., for tuition, board, light, heat, laundry, medical fee, $125 for the entire scholastic year. The rates for music and art are proportionately low. The charge for music, for the entire year is $40 under the director; $30 under the assistant. Drawing $25. Painting, $30.

The result proved the wisdom of the Presbytery's action. The enrollment for the first term reached eighty, of which number twenty-eight are boarders. The public were not slow to appreciate the unusual musical advantages offered. as is proved by the fact that the time of both music teachers was fully occupied at first, and subsequently both were obliged to give extra time.

The school being successfully launched, the burning question that occupied the minds of trustees and president was, "Can the school be sustained under the exceedingly moderate charges fixed?" That question has been answered. The first quarter, which was necessarily expensive, has closed. All bills have been promptly met, teachers paid in full, and a balance, small indeed, but still a balance, left in the bank. It was repeatedly asserted that it was impossible to board the girls at $8 per month. This has been done, and the fare has been superior to that usually given in boarding schools. This is the testimony of those who have had wide experience in the matter.

The trustees were guided in wisdom in their choice of a president. Mr. Vardell is a most earnest and enthusiastic worker, "full of good works" and good words. He has won the highest esteem by his successful management of the business of the school, and the devotion of the girls to their president proves his ability and fitness to guide them, developing, by a kind but firm hand, the highest principles of action as standards of right and wrong.

It is due to Mr. Vardell's indomitable energy, with the determined aid of Rev. Mr. Rankin, that the school, overcoming every obstacle, opened on schedule time.

The prospects for the future success of the institution are very favorable. It is expected that when work is resumed after the holidays the building will be filled to its utmost capacity. A considerable increase of patronage in the musical department may demand a reinforcement of teachers. Plans are on foot for the erection of a new building to be ready at the opening of the new school year.

The successful development and growth of this institution is confidently expected, and that not without an "earnest of the things hoped for." No nobler work than this could have been projected by the Presbytery, none more needed than the Christian training of those who influence and mould to a great extent the homes of the land. Surely the blessing attending the successful achievement of this purpose will return fourfold to those who planned the work, and the church must feel the benefit of the broader knowledge and Christian culture of the women who take advantage of these opportunities. S.

SPECIAL REPORT ON COLORED EVANGELIZATION.

TO THE SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA:

Your special committee appointed in the absence of the permanent committee, to bring in a report on Colored Evangelization, would make the following report:

It appears from the reports of the six Presbyteries, for the year ending April 1, 1896, that there are some indications of the work, which point to more hopeful prospects and results in the future.

One is the increased number of churches contributing to the cause, although the aggregate amount contributed is scarcely as much as was contributed last year.

Another indication to hopefulness and encouragement is the apparent increase of time, attention and interest given to the discussion of this great cause in the meetings of Presbyteries. These are hopeful indications, and combined with other favorable features of the work are matters of devout thankfulness to God.

But on the other hand, there are features of the work which are very depressing in their nature, and very discouraging. The great and growing need of funds, the meagre contributions, and the total lack of any visible prospect of organizing a single Presbytery within our bounds are matters to be greatly deplored.

These facts became apparent from the following:

Albemarle Presbytery now has no work in hand. During the year she organized a church and ordained a minister, but both have been transferred to the Cape Fear Presbytery of the Northern Assembly. She has one candidate for the ministry at Tuscaloosa Institute, and contributed $129 as against $106 last year.

Mecklenburg Presbytery will soon have no work in hand. The Rev. Mr. Morrow and his church, it is understood, will soon be transferred to the Northern Assembly. This Presbytery contributed $382, as against $470 last year.

Concord Presbytery has no work in hand, and contributed $125, as against $114 last year.

Fayetteville Presbytery has no work in hand, and contributed $158, as against $128 last year.

Wilmington Presbytery has no work in hand, and contributed $65, as against $115 last year.

Orange Presbytery alone has work in hand and men in the field. She has two ministers and one candidate at Tuscaloosa Institute. She has also contributed $251, as against $240 last year.

The Rev. S. G. Walker, a faithful and consecrated man, is doing a good work at North Wilkesboro and elsewhere, under the most trying and difficult circumstances, in his efforts to teach and preach the Gospel to his people, and at the same time to firmly establish and equip the Industrial school. He needs the encouragement, sympathy and help of the Synod.

THE FALL OF THE LEAF.

Perhaps you never stopped to wonder why most plants get rid of their leaves before winter comes on, but you feel pretty sure now that there is some good reason for a habit that is adopted by nearly all the plants that live in this part of the country.

When we were talking about the way in which leaves defend themselves from different dangers, we found that evergreen leaves, the leaves which hold fast to the tree and keep fresh all winter, manage to keep their water safe inside their cells by wearing a very thick skin and by not having too many little leaf mouths. For where a leaf has a thin skin and a great many mouths its water leaks away very quickly. And if many such leaves should remain upon a plant into the winter, might it not happen that they would let off all its water at a time when its roots could not find any more in the frozen ground? And then might not the leaves kill the plant by draining it quite dry? So you can see why it is well for most plants to shed their leaves before winter comes on and the roots' drinking water is turned into ice. But when a plant is about to shed its leaves, it takes care not to waste the precious food which they hold. This food it draws back into its stem and roots, laying it away in safe places beneath the buds which are to burst another year. That which is left is usually yellow or brown or reddish and gives the leaves the beautiful colors we see in the October woods.

So whenever you see the woods changing color, losing their fresh green and turning red and yellow, you can be sure that the trees have begun to prepare for winter. You know that they are stowing away their food in warmer, safer places than can be supplied by the delicate leaves. And when all food has been drawn out of the leaves and packed away in the right spots, then the plant finishes a piece of work it began some time before. This piece of work is the building up of a row of little cells just where the leaf stalk joins the stem or branch. When this row is complete, it acts almost like a knife loosening the stalk from the stem.

Then the leaf's life work is over, and with the first breeze the empty shell, which is all that is left, breaks away from the parent plant and drifts earthward.—Plants and Their Children, by Mrs. William Starr Dana.

HE SHARES OUR BURDENS.

I knew a Christian lady who had a heavy temporal burden. It took away her sleep and her appetite, and there was danger of her health breaking down under it. One day, when it seemed especially heavy, she noticed lying on the table near her a listle tract called "Hannah's Faith." Attracted by the title, she picked it up and began read it, little knowing that it was to create a revolution in her whole experience. The story was of a poor woman who had been carried triumphantly through a life of unusual sorrow. She was giving the history of her life to a kind visitor on one occasion, and at the close the visitor said, feelingly:

"Oh, Hannah, I do not see how you could bear so much sorrow!"

"I did not bear it," was the quick reply; the Lord bore it for me."

"Yes," said the visitor, "that is the right way. We must take our troubles to the Lord."

"Yes," replied Hannah, "we must do more than that; we must leave them there. Most people," she continued, "take their burdens to Him, but they bring them away with them again, and are just as worried and unhappy as ever. But I take mine, and I leave them with Him, and I come away and forget them. If the worry comes back, I take it to Him again; and I do it over and over until at last I just forget I have any worries, and am at perfect rest."—Southern Churchman.

Subject.—The Lame Man Healed.

Golden Text. "His name, through faith in his name, hath made this man strong, Acts iii: 16.

CATECHISM.

Question 24. How doth Christ execute the office of a prophet?

Answer. Christ executeth the office of a prophet, in revealing to us, by his Word and Spirit, the will of God, for our salvation.

Time. A. D., 30.

Place. Jerusalem—The Temple.

INTRODUCTORY.

This lesson is the beginning of a new section of the book of the Acts. In our last lesson a passing remark is that many signs and wonders were wrought by the apostles. One of these is selected be cause of the results that flowed from it. This is one of the means used for the spread of the Gospel which now grew in various ways. This miracle was to confirm the claims of the Gospel and to give endorsement to the ministry of the Word. It carried an intimation that the ministry of this salvation is for the health of the body as well as the saving of the soul. But multitudes were not healed to show that the ministry of healing was secondary, and any miraculous healing was not to be expected as common or necessary. We have in this history the manifest power of the Holy Spirit and the preaching of Peter and the other apostles awakening intense interest and made the agent and means of the conversion of many. Then came the wonders and signs wrought by the Spirit through the apostles, showing the power of God and His mercy to commend His love in Jesus Christ as preached by the apostles. In studying the lesson the remaining verses of the chapter should be carefully considered as a part of the section and the connecting link with the next lesson.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 1. Peter and John. The two chiefest among the apostles, the oldest and the youngest of the college of apostles. They were friends at Bethsaida, partners a fishing on the Lake of Galilee and disciples of John the Baptist. Both had followed Jesus from the first, were with Him on the Mount of Transfiguration and in the Garden of Gethsemane. They were different in disposition, but alike in principle, devotion and purpose Went up R. V. "Were going up," on the way to worship, ascending the terraces into the temple, because they were Jews and felt that the Christian's duty was not to break with the faith of their fathers, but to have it confirmed and fulfilled in Christ the true Lord of the Temple. The love of prayer. When incense was offered. The ninth hour. About three o'clock in the afternoon.

Vs. 2. A certain man lame. He was lame from his birth, with a weakness of his feet and ankles, he could not walk, he was poor, and over forty years of age, each item making the cure the more remarkable. The gate.....called Beautiful. There were ten gates to the temple. This was probably the one of magnificent doors of Corinthian brass, described by Josephus, leading from the court of the Gentiles into the court of the women. Alms. Is a noun in the the singular, meaning a gift of charity. That entered into the temple. Not the building but the inner courts.

Vs. 3. Seeing Peter and John. Well known frequenters of the temple, but not as to their real possessions of Christian charity and apostolic prerogatives.

Vs. 4. Fastening his eyes. With intent gaze. Look on us to see what we will do and to trust and obey.

Vs. 5 He gave heed. As their look and words inspired confidence.

Vs. 6. Then—"but." Silver and gold have I none. He had given up all for Christ. Such as I have, which is far better, give I thee. In the name, means with the authority and by the power of Jesus Christ. This was a submission of their claims for the approach of Christ whose ministers they thus claimed to be. Of Nazareth. Is added to make clear to whom he referred and that it was the once crucified, now risen Messiah. Rise up and walk. R. V., simply, "walk."

Vs. 7. Took him up by the right hand. Not so much to strengthen his limbs as his faith, and then the cause of lameness was removed.

Vs. 8. Leaping up....walked Showing not only strength but ability to use it. Praising God. As the first and proper expression of gratitude to the real Healer.

Vs. 9. All the people saw him. As the miracle was public at a time when the multitudes came together for the evening sacrifice.

Vs. 10. They knew. Recognized and identified with him, so that there could be no denial of the fact of the miracle

Vs. 11 Held Peter and John. To show their gratitude and fixing the attention of all on the workers of the miracle. The porch that is called Solomon's was a cloister extending along the eastern side, nearly six hundred feet, of Herod's temple, but not in Solomon's or the vision of Ezekiel

Vs. 12. Peter saw the rush of the crowd. He answered. The wonder of the people. As he was a great fisher of men he used the cure and the wonder as bait. Why marvel ye at this? He saw the fixing of attention on the miracle and he turned away to Christ the worker. He also disclaimed and personal holiness in them as agents to account for the cure.

Vs 13. The God of Abraham. He said to catch the thought of the worshipping Jews and to show that they were not breaking away from ancestral faith. Hath glorified his Son Jesus, by raising Him from the dead and giving Him the authority as His own hand right to work this miracle.

Vs. 14. The Holy one and the Just. Their Messiah whose claim God approved by working this miracle in His name. Desired a murderer. Barabbas. As a proof of their moral character.

Vs. 15. Killed the Prince of Life. Who "brought life and immortality to light through the Gospel," that they might "have life, and have it more abundantly." We are witnesses. As Jesus had said they would be. Acts, i: 8.

Vs. 16. His name, Stands for Himself, representing His character. Through faith. Ours as apostles. In working the miracle the Spirit also wrought faith in the man. Whom ye see and know. The facts are before you. Judge the issue.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

1. Some of our best opportunities, to serve Christ in helping others, come as this Peter and John, when we are in the way to other duties.

2. The best works of the Gospel cannot be done with silver and gold. Think on that.

2. Only what a person has can be given to others.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Jan. 24th, 1897.

BY REV. B. E WALLACE.

Topic:

OUR FAILURES AND SUCCESSES. Luke 5: 1-11.

(A question-box meeting suggested.)

Text for the week:

"Forgetting those things which are behind ...I press toward the mark." Phil. 3: 13, 14.

Daily Readings:

Monday, Failure through lack of Faith, Mark 9: 14-29.

Tuesday, Failure through Fear, Num. 13: 19-23.

Wednesday, Failure through Pride, Gen. 11: 1-9.

Thursday, Success through Earnestness, Mark 10: 46-52.

Friday, Success through Wisdom, 1 Samuel 18: 10-16.

Saturday, Success from God, Judges 7: 1-8.

Sunday, Topic, Luke 5: 3-11.

Suggestions for Leaders:

1. Have a box on the table for questions.

2. Study in connection with the reference Phil. 3: 13, 14.

3. Study Peter's relation to Christ and show the secret of this great draught of fishes.

Notes:

Failure and success make up our daily lives with failure ever in the lead. Why is it thus?

1. Because we are imperfect.

2. Because we are proud, selfish and independent.

3. Because we do not trust in God's strength.

What was the secret of Peter's success? Obedience to Christ's Word.

What is the secret of any success? "AT THY WORD."

Whenever we distrust God then we have failure. So let us launch out into the deep and at Jesus' word let down the Gospel net for the precious souls of men.

OPEN DOOR NOTES.

A Y. M. C A has just been organized in Japan, controlled by natives.

The Secretaries of Georgia, Alabama and South Carolina Associations will meet in Selma, Ala., on April 26-28.

The officers of the Winston Westminister League for the next six months are: C. G. VanZandt, President; Geo. T. Brown, Vice President; John C. Griffin, Secretary; and Miss Mattie Jones, Treasurer.

The International convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations will be held at Mobile, Ala., April 22-25. It is expected that 500 or 600 delegates will be present. The last meeting, two years ago, was held at Springfield, Mass.

In India two Y. M. C. A. buildings have just been completed at a cost of $25,000 and $60,000.

Quite an enjoyable birthday party was given under the auspices of the C. E. Society, of Black River chapel, December 31, 1896.

A great many brought more cents in the little sacks we sent out with the invitations than years they were old, which was an excellent method of honoring old age. The program though short was enjoyable. A bountiful supper was provided and the young ladies and gentlemen who donned the apparel of waiters served acceptably. A number of visitors were present which added to the success of the evening socially and financially.

As the guests were departing the strains of "Mizpa" rang out through the old building, where years ago our forefathers worshipped, which now serves as an academy.

As a financial result of our "birthday party" our organ was presented on last Sabbath to the church free from debt.

B.

THE SOCIETIES OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCHES OF CHARLOTTE

The Presbyterian Churches of Charlotte are thoroughly though variously organized into working societies, embracing all ages, sexes and conditions of individuals, and all objects.

There are six missionary societies in the First Presbyterian church, two are foreign mission ones; the Gentlemen's, upporting Dr. Davis; the Ladies' raising trom four to six hundred dollars a year for our board in Nashville.

The other four are: The "Randolph," composed of the young married ladies to a good extent, and pledged only to support a Chinese girl in our mission school, but educating a young girl from the Home Mission field and accomplishing other good; the "Young Ladies," helping another young lady in our mountain country to get an education; the "Boys" helping a boy in the same region, besides other work; and the "Girls" ministering, I think to the needs and happiness of one of our orphans at Barium Springs.

The late Dr. Preston enrolled almost all his members into a "Congregational Society," as it might be called, to see after the sick, strangers and everything else needing seeing after, and though summer and the lack of a pastor this fall interrupted its meetings, the work has never been dropped.

The Second church rejoices in its two Christian Endeavor societies, which leave unaccomplished nothing that earnest, active Christians see ought to be accomplished for Christ and His cause. The juniors have undertaken the support of a child in one of our mission schools. The Ladies' Foreign Missionary society raises its four hundred a year, and the Christian Workers (in conjunction with a similar body from the First church) take charge of the Rescue Home—a haven for children rescued in His name.

The Sabbath-school in the last six months has raised about $300 for Barium Springs; truly there is a bright outlook for the future with such enthusiastic liberal-handed young people growing up in the church.

Besides the various societies mentioned there are three or four chapels with their Sunday-schools and Christian Endeavorers or Boys' Brigades sustained by the First and Second churches among the factory people.

Graham Street church which is itself composed almost entirely of factory workers is not behind the older, stronger churches in the matter of organizations; her Y. P. S. C. E. is flourishing; her gymnasium and reading room having a strong hold on the young members. May the Holy Spirit direct all our many activities!

WILSON.—In Burlington, N. C., Jan. 2nd, 1897, Miss Jennie Wilson, in her 24th year, fell asleep in Christ. Her life had been fading for some months, but toward the end the decline was so rapid that her friends were startled by her almost sudden departure In her early girlhood she gave her heart to the Saviour and followed in His footsteps ever afterwards. Her duties were faithfully performed, her burdens nobly borne. She sang in the gladness of her trust through the dark places of her pilgrimage. She is singing still in the Master's presence. May the God of all grace comfort those who weep.

PASTOR.

College Park, Ga., Dec. 17, '96.

K. L. Shellaberger, Esq.,
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:—Some eight or nine months ago we purchased some 200 rods of your 50 inch No. 1 Cabled Field and hog fence and some 60 rods of the 50 inch Poultry fence. With the hog fencing we placed the post 15 feet apart. It was easily erected and makes a very substantial fence, and for general farm purpose where it is desired to turn both small and large stock, can cheerfully recommend it as a neat; strong, durable and cheap fence. We consider your Cabled Poultry fence the best for the purpose, that it has been our pleasure to see and investigate; the cables being horizontal with the fence and the heavy stay pickets but six inches apart, keep the fence in good position without either top of bottom rail and with posts twenty feet apart. As it requires no rail, poultry do not seem to judge the height, hence we find the 50 inch fence ample high. Considering durability we find your fencing more economical than wood fencing and it certainly adds much more to the beautifying of the grounds. We take pleasure in recommending your superior fencing to those in need of such goods, as we have found their quality to be as stated in your catalogue, and your prices very reasonable.

Respectfully yours,
W. S. Cox, Bus. M'g'r.,
Southern Female College.

Our Assembly designates not merely the first, but all five of the Sabbaths of January as times for making contributions to the all important work of Assembly's Home Missions. Let it be remembered that the Church is the Missionary Society organized by our Lord to have His Gospel preached to every creature, and every communicant is a member of that society. The argument if often made that the Church as a whole, will not, for the lack of spiritual life and love, perform its work, and that it is necessary to gather the spiritually minded members together and to organize them into a Missionary Society other than the Church that the Master organized. It is lamentably true that probably not over one-fourth of our communicants do give to missionary work Will pastors and officers, shepherds of the flock allows this stigma to rest upon the churches under their care. Cannot every member be brought to help, and to enjoy in January this privilege of aiding in the Assembly's effort to evangelize our more Southern and Western sections?

Envelopes and leaflets for each absent member can be obtained from the Secretary, Dr. Craig, of Atlanta, Ga. Let the Church do its duty, enjoy its privilege and receive Master's blessing.

Anæmia means "want of blood," a deficiency in the red corpuscles of the blood. Its cause is found in want of sufficient food, dyspepsia, lack of exercise or breathing impure air. With it is a natural repugnance to all fat foods. Scott's Emulsion is an easy food to get fat from and the easiest way of taking fat. It makes the blood rich in just those elements necessary to robust health, by supplying it with red corpuscles.

MISS ALFARD.

All the brave women did not die with Joan of Arc, remarks one of our exchanges, and the English people are grumbling because the Home Secretary did not mention to the Queen the name of Miss Alfard for the Albert medal, given for heroic conduct. It is the universal opinion that she deserved it.

Miss Alfard is a nurse in Kimberly, South Africa, and was sent to attend a case of pneumonia in Bechuanaland. When she arrived there she found herself in the midst of a smallpox epidemic. She had no one to help her, but she was not in the least dismayed.

She immediately started a hospital on a rude plan, and nursed, unaided, two hundred native and twenty white patients, losing out of that large number only one woman and two children—a record of which many physicians, with all modern conveniences and a corps of trained assistants, would be proud.

EUGENE FIELD'S HOME.

HIS MANY QUEER CLOCKS AND HIS LIBRARY OF RARE BOOKS.

One should not always judge a man by his house, but in the case of Eugene Field it seemed as if his house were a part of him. It is an old-fashioned two-story farm house with a wide porch, to which has been added a large circular wing with an outside chimney such as the Southerners love. As you enter the hall you notice an elaborately ornamented old English tall clock of the kind usually known in this country as "grandfather's clock." It is one of three such clocks in the house; a second stands on a stair landing, after the manner of Longfellow's "Old Clock On the Stair," and a third was in Eugene Field's sleeping room. The last one has a gong in it like a country dinner-bell and clangs the hour with a loud metallic ring. In the same room he had a "freak clock" made entirely of wood, that ticks like a hammer striking hard wood. In the library there is a quaint little one made with a seesaw—a wee boy and girl sitting upon a log to regulate the pendulum. This is a very well behaved little piece of mechanism, as it makes no noise and is really pretty. Contrasted with it, standing near Field's writing table, is a plain New England kitchen clock such as our grandmothers used in their light, airy kitchen. It is a medium sized affair of mahogony with a glass door, on the lower half of which are painted impossible red roses and forgetmenots. It is a good old domestic clock, and went on faithfully ticking away when the others were cranky and would not keep the time regularly.

As you enter the house the library is on the left hand. All around the walls of the room are bookcases. Suppose we look at the case beyond the window, which might be called the fairy corner. Here are gathered books of fairy lore from all parts of the world, for there was hardly an old bookstore in London, Paris or Berlin which Mr. Field did not know well. In this wonderful fairy corner are Cossack fairy tales, eastern fairy tales, legends of Ireland, Norway, Germany, Spain, New England and all of the modern English fairy stores—Mary J. Reid and Henrietta Dexter Field in St Nicholas.

"Down Brakes, and Reverse!"

When a train is discovered rushing on to a frightful collision, it is a thrilling instant as the engineer whistles "Down brakes!" and reverses his lever. Brakes alone are not enough; the whole propelling power of the engine must be reversed and made to work in the opposite direction. That is how it is sometimes with disease. There are times when the system is flying along the track of disease at such a frightful pace that no ordinary methods will prevent disaster. There are plenty of medicines which act merely as brakes to "slow up" the disease and put off disaster for a little while; but that isn't enough. What is needed is a medicine that will instantly reverse the entire wasting, degenerating process.

When people are losing flesh and strength and vitality, with the life oozing out of them day after day, they need Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which acts directly upon the vital forces, completely transforms the entire nutritive organism and totally reverses the wasting, debilitating process which is at the root of all diseases.

It enables the digestive and blood-making organs to supply the circulation with an abundance of pure, healthy, red blood. It stops the wasting of tissue, builds up solid muscular flesh and healthy nerve-force.

Miss Mary Whitman, of East Dickinson, Franklin Co., N. Y., writes: "For nearly ten months I have had a bad cough, and instead of getting better, it grew worse, until I was advised by a friend to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I hesitated at first, for it seemed to me nothing would give relief only death. My parents were anxious about me, and I was said to have consumption. I tried your medicines, and before I had taken many doses there was a great change. When the second bottle was empty I had no cough and was a great deal stronger."

SELECT CATALOGUE OF CHOICE BOOKS
SABBATH - SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS

ATTENTION.

We wish to place in every Sabbath-School in our Church a copy o above catalogue.

No book has been placed upon this list that has not been carefully read by some thoroughly competent person: most of them by Rev. W. A. Campbell, D. D

None have been placed upon the list that failed to meet these requirements, viz:

The Best Moral and Spiritual Teaching
Sound Scriptural Theology.
A High Literary Merit.
Freedom from Political or Sectional Allusions.

Any selection may be made from this list with confidence that nothing will be found to which anyone can object

A brief description is given of most of the books as an aid in making selections.

On all orders for libraries, whether selected from this catalogue, or from the lists of any publishers of Sabbath-School literature, we will give 30 per cent. discount.

If desired, we will ourselves make, careful selection, or will send to any order one-fourth more books than may be needed for a library, with the privilege of returning any that are not wanted.

We ask that every pastor will send the name of the Superintendent of the Sabbath-School that we may supply him with the above catalogue.

Also Sabbath School Supplies, Class books, Records, &c., on the best terms.

BLANKET STREET.

O come with me, baby, to Blanket Street,
'Tis a famous place dear, for tired feet;
Up Stairway Hill, across Landing Ridge,
Past Banister Lane, and then Kissing Bridge,
Where somebody always you're sure to meet.

Over the bridges and at last we are there,
Right in the middle of Little Crib Square;
The street is as white as the driven snow,
But warm like the blossom-tide snow, you know—
Warm to toes that are pink and bare.

And speaking of toes, 'tis in Blanket Street,
That the five little pigs so often meet,
And the littlest always goes squeak, squeak, squeak,
Though the weather is never so cold and bleak—
For 'tis always summer in Blanket Street.

And the yellow bird talks as well as sings,
And the bumble bee hums but never stings,
And the love-lamps burn like stars all night;
O come, and be sure to listen right,
For the Blanket Street birds say wonderful things.

A GREAT SURPRISE.

It was just too queer for anything! Tommy was walking slowly down behind the barn, with his usually merry face all scowls. And Teddy was peeping through the slatted fence into Tommy's garden, with a whole great family of wrinkles in his little forehead. And what do you suppose that it was all about?

Out in Teddy's yard grew a great, tall, horse-chestnut tree, and one crisp October morning a shower of pretty brown nuts came tumbling out of their thick green shells—down, down, down, until at last they reached the broad gravel walk and smooth green lawn. Tommy spied them as he came hurrying home from school that noon, and then the scowls came to make him a visit.

"That new boy has everything!" he exlaimed crossly. "He has tops, an' a bicycle, an'—an' now he's got the horse-chestnuts! 'Tain't fair, so it isn't!" And poor little discontented Tommy looked crosser than ever.

But Tommy didn't realize that down in his garden grew something that that new boy Teddy had always wished for and longed to have—a bouncing yellow pumpkin! How Teddy did wish that his papa had bought Tommy's house, and Tommy's garden, and Tommy's pumpkins,—all three!

Teddy sighed as he thought of the splendid Jack-o'-lantern that he could make if he only had one of those wonderful yellow treasures for his very own. It was a very loud and sorrowful sigh, and Tommy heard it, and he discovered the new boy peeping through the fence.

"Halloa!" called Tommy quickly. Teddy jumped. He didn't know that anybody was near.

"Don't you like living here?" inquired Tommy. "You look as if you were homesick. Won't you come over and look at my pumpkins? I've got a dandy lot of them, and they are all my own,—every one."

Teddy sighed again,

"I've been a-wishin' for a pumpkin for years an' years," he said sadly; "but they don't have gardens with pumpkins in them in the city, an' so I never had any."

Tommy looked surprised.

"Would you like one?" he asked quickly. "'Cause I'd be delighted to give you one of mine, if you would. Come over, an' I'll give you one right now."

Teddy climbed over the fence in a hurry, and he smiled and smiled as Tommy took his jack-knife out of trousers pocket, and cut off one of his biggest pumpkins with a snap.

"You have everything—don't you said Teddy regretfully. "You have pumpkins—a whole garden full of them—an' apples, an' grapes, an'"—

This information was a great surprise to Tommy.

"I have everything!" he said in astonishment. "Why, I thought that you were the one that had everything a few minutes ago! You have tops, an' balls an' a bicycle, an' horse chestnuts!" he said.

"Why, so I have," answered Teddy thoughtfully. "I wanted a pumpkin so much that I 'most forgot everything else. I didn't even remember the horse-chestnuts. Maybe you would like some—would you?"

Tommy's eyes danced with delight.

"You can have a big bagful" declared Teddy. "An' if you'll get me some toothpicks, I'll show you how to make a Brownie man."

"An' I'll help you make your lantern after school," said Tommy. "We'll help each other an' divide our things—won't we? An' then we can both have everything, really an' truly."

"Why, so we can!" said Teddy.

And then those bad scowls and naughty wrinkles had to run away in a hurry. They ran away to see if they could find two cross, discontented little boys. I do hope that they didn't find you.—Margaret Dane.

IN THE MASTER'S NAME.

A little barefooted boy about ten years old was standing before a shoestore on Broadway, in New York, the other day, peering through the window and shivering with the cold.

A lady riding up the street in a beautiful carriage, drawn by a pair of splendid horses, observed the little fellow in his forlorn condition, and immediately ordered the drivee to draw up and stop in front of thr store. The lady, richly dressed, alighted from her carriage, went quietly to the boy, and said:

"My little fellow, why are you looking so earnestly in that window?"

"I was just asking God to give me a pair of shoes," was his reply.

The lady took him by the hand and went into the store asked the proprietor if he would allow one of his clerks to go and buy her a half dozen pairs of stockings. She then asked him if he could give her a basin of water and a towel, and he replied, "Certainly," and quickly brought them to her.

She took the little fellow to the back part of the store, and, removing her gloves, knelt down, washed those little feet, and dried them with the towel.

By this time the young man had returned with the stockings. Placing a pair upon his feet, she purchased and gave him a pair of shoes, and, tying up the remaining pairs of stockings gave them to him, and, patting him on the head, said: "I hope, my little fellow, that you now feel more comfortable.

As she turned to go, the astonished lad caught her hand, and looking up in her face, with tears in his eyes, answered her question with these words: "Are you an angel?"—Church Bells.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Presbyterian:—I will write another letter to let my dear friends know what a nice time I had Christmas. Dear old Santa Claus brought me a nice air gun and a stocking full of candy, apples, oranges and nuts and he brought my sweet little sister a nice little piano and you just bet we had a time. Also my Sunday-school teacher gave me a nice present, and last Monday night we all met and had a grand treat, that is all the Presbyterian Sunday-school. Our pastor, Mr. Lowrey was there and Prof. Curtis tendered him with a nice present in the way of a comb and brush and I tell you he enjoyed the jokes and fun very much. We also had some nice recitations from the little girls and grown people which was very nice. Well I am going to start to school next Monday. So I must close for this time. With best wishes for the PRESBYTERIAN, I remain

Your little friend,
WILLIE A. MCDONALD.
Shelby, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor:—As you were so kind as to publish my first letter, I will write again. Every week when your good paper comes, I meet papa and get it from him. Then I turn right to the children's page. This is the last letter I will write in 1896. I have made a great many good resolutions for the new year. I am afraid the one not to be late to breakfast will be hardest to keep. I have a little fat squirrel, which is very tame. He won't let anyoody carry him about but me. But school will open next Monday, and I hate to see the holidays close. I received a great many nice presents Christmas. Some of them were books. I got "Scottish Chiefs," and Christmas books, and a splendid water-color paint box. As papa is an artist I know something about drawing and painting.

Your friend,
MARY EUGENIE HARRIS.

SECULAR NEWS.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Hon. Daniel L. Russell was inaugurated governor of North Carolina on the 12th inst. A most cordial and handsome reception was given the governor and party by the Capital Club, Raleigh, that evening.

Hon. A. Leazar whose recognized ability placed him high in position in legislative rolls has achieved fresh honors by his management as superintendent of the farm work of the penitentrary. Thro his efforts the penitentiary has become, for the first time, self-sustaining.

A handsome stone lodge has replaced the lodge at Oakdale Cemetery, Wilmington, which was destroyed by fire last summer. The work was done by Messrs. H. A. Tucker & Bro., of this city, and the architect, Mr. H. E. Bonitz, also of Wilmington. The brown stone is North Carolina stone. The lodge has the plan of a chapel and with necessary offices.

Another instance of the evil of cigarette smoking comes from Salisbury in the death of a lad only thirteen years old.

Lumberton suffered a most terrible fire last week The estimated loss is $50,000 with some insurance. Among the buildings destroyed was the Masonic Hall and Robesonian office. The Robesonian was an up to date paper and we hope that it may soon be republished.

The new bank at Charlotte conducted upon the Canadian plan, with the privilege of establishing branches throughout the State.

Vessels drawing nine feet of water can now pass through the channel near Ocracoke. The work of deepening this channel was begun two years ago, and it is hoped to make a depth of fourteen feet.

Up to Christmas more leaf tobacco was sold in the Statesville market than for the whole of season last year.

DOMESTIC.

Three of the largest mills in Lake Charles, La., have resumed work on full time.

A canning factory will be opened at Green Cove Springs, Fla., on April 1st.

The Tennessee Centennial is an assured success. A committee has been formed to formulate a memorial to be presented to the Legislature of North Carolina for an appropriation. Rhode Island and Ohio have appropriated $10,000 each. Other States will probably soon come in.

The Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company, of Chattanooga, have shipped 80,900 tons of iron to Europe since August last. They now have an order for 10,000 tons for Yokohama.

It is stated that the partisan feeling for the Cuban insurgents is so strong in Florida that it is almost impossible for the officials to make much headway in their investigations.

The Atlantic Coast Line will begin the running of the through Florida special on the 18th inst.

Suicide was the result of enforced idleness in the penitentiary of Sing Sing last week. Since the law has been passed against convict labor, the prisoners are kept in their cells except for exercise each day. The officials fear other tragedies will be the result.

The entire town of Louis Creek, Mo., is under water, the Osage river reaching eighteen inches above high water mark.

FOREIGN.

It is reported that Queen Victoria has decided to commemorate the fact of her having enjoyed the longest reign in English history by abdicating in favor of the Prince of Wales.

Smallpox is extending to an alarming extent in the town of Pinar del Rio and at Guanajay, yellow fever continues, but is decreasing in violence and number of cases.

Lady Henry Somerset has sent a London lady doctor and two trained nurses to Bulgaria to help take care of the Armenian refugees, who are in great need. The work is to be done and a refuge to be built under the auspices of the World's W. C. T. U.

The last twenty of the 388 Armenian prisoners in Constantinople have been liberated. There are still in prison twenty-five persons condemned to death, one of whom is Bishop Arabgir. As to the number of Armenian priests in the provinces condemned to death, only two have up to the present time been mentioned to the Patriarchate as worthy of pardon. Sixty-five Armenians, who had sought refuge in Varna, returned and were delivered without difficulty to the Armenian Patriarchate.

SAY SOES.

If people knew the value of red pepper as a health giving ingredient, it would, no doubt, be used more freely in soup. It stimulates the liver, destroys malaria, and is an excellent preventive of chills and fever.

A person is prematurely old when baldness occurs before the forty fifth year. Use Hall's Hair Renewer to keep the scalp healthy and prevent baldness.

For hives in children, rub the irritated skin or the pustules with castor oil, applied with the tip of the finger. Baby will pass from fretting to slumber while the process is going on, the relief will be so great and quick.

Some men are born great and grow smaller every day of their lives.

HOW TO HAVE TENDER STEAK.

Many people do not know that the most juicy, nutritious and wholesome steak is the cheapest one sold. It is known as the round steak and is cut from the rump, another is the chuck; these steaks sell for five or six cents less in the pound, but they are apt to be tough. Send nineteen 19) two cent stamps to the Watt Mfg. Co., E. Third Street, Cincinnati, and get a "Victor Meat Tenderer," which is the only really practical invention for properly tendering meat; on the surface are a large number of points that penetrate the meat, it does not tear, or cut, or pound, it is noiseless. Try one of the above cuts of meat and use the "Victor," and you will have better meat on the table and save its price in a few days. The "Victor" is just what agents have long been wanting, it is needed in every family, and can be sold in every house and every store. Any lady or gentleman can easily make from $8.00 to $12.00 a day, and not work hard either. Dealers buy these of the agents by the dozen Any reader of this paper who is needing money or who would like to make good wages in a nice profitable business, should write to the above Company and secure the agency for the "Victor." Such hard times as these an opportunity like this should not be neglected.

To whiten the teeth, take a leaf of "common or garden" sage and rub well on the teeth. It has a wonderful effect.

THINGS USEFUL.

Steamed Fig Pudding.—Take a half pound of the best figs, wash them and chop them fine, two tea cupfuls of grated bread, half a cup of sweet cream, one cup of sweet milk and half a cup of sugar; beat all together and steam for three hours.

A wonderful remedy for pain in the teeth is recommended by dentists It consists of cocaine, chloroform and oil of cinnamon, and when applied to the aching tooth acts like magic. Every particle of pain is instantly, though not permanently, taken away.

Georgetown Rice Bread. — Take one quart of rice flour, and one pint of sweet milk, three teaspoonfuls of butter, and three eggs. Beat in a bowl your eggs, whites and yolks together, until light, into this stir gradually a part of the flour and all of the butter, which must be first sifted. Grease a deep cake pan, pour in the mixture and bake for three-quarters of an hour in a moderate oven. Eat this hot with butter for either breakfast or tea.

To cure a ring-worm rub the spot with milk from milk-weed, which grows wild. In a few days if this is persevered in the spot will entirely disappear. When the milk-weed is not to be had put a copper penny in a tablespoonful of vinegar and let it remain until it becomes green; then wash the ring-worm with this liquid several times a day until it disappears.

WHY?

Why hath God tuned my soul to sing
Like bird on wing,
Yet hemmed me round
With jarring sound?

Why doth the light of summer skies
Make tears arise?
And buds that blow
Make my heart glow?
To what intent—
Since life is spent
In close walls pent?

Why have my fingers facile grace
To weave and trace,
Yet only know
Tasks hard and slow?

Why do I feel the stirring sense,
The vehemence,
Of love intense,
Yet find no way
My love to say?

God's mysteries
Are all of these;
He gave me life, and set it round
With forces strange. In him is found
The reason full, complete, profound!
—Helen F. Morris, in Sunday School Times.

The truth-loving habit should be assiduously cultivated from infancy both as to the arts and sciences, as well as in its moral aspects. Much of the laxity in the business world in reference to the discharge of obligations is owing to a failure to cultivate such habit. Thus instilling a love for truth in all its aspects from the earliest dawings of the soul's activities, will lay the foundation for honest and veracious lives in after years. "A good and honest heart," that is a truth-loving heart, such as our Lord himself possessed and which all must have before the attainment of Gospel blessings, should therefore be cultivated constantly, since it is the soil in which alone the word of truth may find such lodgment as shall bring forth "fruit unto perfection."—Christian Oracle.

REV. DANIEL J. CURRIE.

Rev. Daniel Johnson Currie, the youngest of six children, was born near Laurinburg, in Richmond county, N. C., Jan. 10th, 1865. His father, Neill A. Currie, the first and for some time the only elder in Laurinburg church, is of Lowland Scotch descent, while his mother, Christian D. McLaurin, was descended from the Scotch Highlanders. There is a large and important family connection on both sides, consisting of the Currie's of Robeson county, and the McLaurins of Richmond county, of Marlboro county, S.C., and also of Mississippi.

With such parentage, the very best home training might be expected. He was dedicated to God in baptism May 14th, 1865, the ordinance being administered by Rev. Daniel Johnson. This was followed by careful training in the truths of religion as contained in the catechisms and standards of the Church. He was led to consider deeply his spiritual condition by reading, all alone, some religious literature. After deep conviction, his trust was placed in Christ, and he united with the church May 11th, 1879, in his fifteenth year.

When he was two years of age, the family moved to Mississippi; but after six years returned to Richmond county. In the neighborhood schools and in Laurinburg High School his early education was received. This latter institution was then, as now, under the excellent management of Prof. W. G. Quakenbush.

After preparation for college, he was enabled by the kindness of a noble-hearted relative, to enter the University in the fall of 1885. While in this institution, he was elected one of the annual representatives of his Literary Society in 1888; was the successful contestant for the Essayist's medal given by the Literary Society, and won the Phillips mathematical medal the same year, and was graduated June 1889 as valedictorian of his class. During his college course he yielded to the call of God's Spirit, and decided definitely to enter the ministry.

After graduation, in order to discharge obligations incurred while securing his education, two years were spent in teaching in Marlboro High School, Tatum Station, S. C.; the last year as principal of the school. While here he was instrumental in organizing and erecting a neat Presbyterian church, and served as one of the deacons.

Near the beginning of the second year's teaching, he returned to Chapel Hill for another prize, the most highly valued of all won while in college, whose presentation had been delayed; Miss Stella Hogan, daughter of Dr. John R. Hogan, to whom he was united in marriage, Aug. 21st, 1890.

He entered Columbia Theological Seminary in the fall of 1891, and after a regular three years course, graduated May, 1894. In his junior year he was successful in winning the Hebrew prize.

After graduation he entered at once the pastorate composed of Chapel Hill and New Hope churches. He was ordained by Orange Presbytery at a called meeting at Chapel Hill, Sept. 29th, 1894, and was installed pastor of both churches on the day following. Though the duties connected with this pastorate, including as it does the State University, are peculiarly arduous, and of such a nature as requires an unusual combination of gifts, yet his success has been very marked. At both churches much substantial progress has been made. He is a close thinker, a clear, logical and impressive speaker, rising at times to the truest eloquence. He loves the souls of men, and his "heart's desire and prayer to God is that they may be saved."

The pure in heart see God in every thing, and see him everywhere, and they are supremely blessed.—J. G. Holland.

The growing Christian founds his hopes upon Jesus, loves him as Saviour and Friend and seeks His glory. Day by day his zeal increases. He is more and more in sympathy with his Lord. He strives continually to imitate him in all respects. He spends his energies in the extension of his kingdom. He upholds his cause, frequents his house, delights in his worship, waits upon his ordinances, makes his Word the man of his counsel and the guide of his life, stays his soul upon his promises, works for the conversion of sinners and dies daily unto sin and lives unto holiness.—Presbyterian.

Girlhood and young womanhood are such pure and sweet and beautiful things when they are what God intended them to be that it fills one with unspeakable regret to see a young girl's life falling short of its appointed beauty. And every young girl's life falls short of this beauty if it lacks in modesty, in dignity, in purity of thought and speech, in gentleness and kindliness. The bold girl of pronounced dress and speech, the girl who sets at naught the opinions of others, the girl who is noisy and who seeks to be "dashing," the girl whose parents sorrowfully admit that she is "beyond them"—this girl is treading on dangerous ground and her life is falling far short of the appointed beauty and sweetness of girlhood.—J. L. Harbour, in Our Boys and Girls.

COPYING CHRIST.

Jacob must be made helpless and surrender, only to hold on and claim the blessing. Thereafter his life in the terms of the gospel would be called a consecrated Christian life, of a child of God copying Christ. It would be properly described as a daily desire and faith to have fulfilled in him the words of Jesus: "If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow Me." Matt. xvi. 24.

These words have been much misunderstood, or received only in an apparent surface meaning which is seriously near to trifling with their solemn and searching instruction and important application. Once received and appropriated in their truth and power, the life will become humble, the mind more docile and the heart more loyal and true. To "come after" Christ is not merely to copy His example or to live as He lived. To follow Him is not simply to walk in His footsteps as we lightly think. To deny himself is not the vain thing called self-denial, which is oftenest the most subtle kind of pride. This very thing begets the pride of humility. Taking the cross is not bearing, however patiently, the things we call crosses, which are often self-imposed, or the merciful chastening of our Father to restore us from backsliding.

No, no. A thousand times, no. These words of Jesus are fundamental in establishing the Christian character. They are radical in producing Christian conduct. They are vital in supporting Christian graces. This will appear to any who will patiently and prayerfully study the connection in which the words are found, and the conditions needing them. The circumstances calling them forth should be studied in the records of the three Evangelists, Matthew, Mark and Luke.

In "the coasts of Caesarea Philippi" Jesus asked His disciples, "Whom do men say that I, the Son of Man, am?" This called forth the words of Peter, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," For this Christ commended Peter and forthwith appointed him to open the doors of the new dispensation. Perceiving the effect on the disciples, that they would mistake the nature of the kingdom and would fail to realize the necessity of His death, our Lord began to speak more plainly, and repeatedly of that death at Jerusalem. Now Peter had been impressed with his importance, as we, poor mortals all, are liable to be by any commendation even by Christ. So Peter began to rebuke the Master, (pity the man,) and to urge Him to think of His personal comfort and safety. This called forth that terrible word of the gentle Jesus: "Get thee behind me Satan." The words with which Peter sought to rebuke Christ, to dissuade Him from what he thought needless suffering and death are translated, "That be far from thee Lord." But the margin of our Bibles shows the Greek to mean: "Pity thyself."

It was this word of Peter that called forth the words we have quoted at the outset. In this view they must mean something like this, or at least this much. If any of you will come to the kingdom I am to set up and be qualified to fill its offices near to Me, you must go through preparation such as I will in laying the foundation, you must deny all consideration of self-interest, self-importance and self-trust. You must deny self. You must take the cross as the symbol of the crucifixion of self; and as a sign that the sentence of death to self has been entered and you bear that cross to the place of death, of self. When you have done this you are following Me, and in doing this, you are meeting the only condition of copying My example.

Now let us earnestly and prayerfully consider this and see if we can satisfy its demands by doing without a little sugar in coffee, or refusing to eat meat on certain days, or by any manner of penance, that so easily runs into claim of merit for something we may have done or suffered; or if bearing our trials however patiently can even remotely be equivalent to taking the cross. This meaning of Christ, is to deny self, to have this self condemned to death, to accept the penalty of death to self, that Christ may live in us.

Here we have been asking Jesus to help us to follow Him. We have done even worse in trying to follow Him in our own strength. It is time to look to our lives, to see our failures, to consider the words of the apostles, "I have been crucified with Christ, nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me, and the life I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me." These are the words of one whose experience was in accord with the words of His Master spoken before His crucifixion. This experience is possible in fullness of power and blessing only to those who deny self, take their cross and follow Christ.

STUDY HIM WELL.

We invite the attention of our ruling elders, specially, to one of the best things we have seen for sometime taken from the editorial columns of the Chicago Interior, as follows:

"An Old-Fashioned Elder: He was an old-fashioned elder, but the people loved him and followed him with reverence to his honored grave. He was the peer of his pastor in his knowledge of the word of God, and although he seldom spoke of it he knew his Greek New Testament as some ministers have not mastered it. But far more than this, he respected the position to which his brethren in the church had called him. He was not simply above reproach, he was himself, as he expected a pastor to be, "above suspicion." He did not ask "Is this thing lawful?" He preferred to ask "Is it best?" He had no fine-spun theory about the "line" between the Church and the world, but he was always upon the safe side of the line so far that no one could doubt his right to be where he was and do what he did. He never disciplined a youthful member for a cotillion or a waltz even, but he was emphatically not a dancing man. He had no hard and fast law in regard to the amusements which are proper for an elder or a layman or a minister, but he had not himself mastered the mysteries of "high five," and he never entered into a contest for the "prizes" in a progressive euchre party. He never talked bitterly about Christians who frequented the theater—the better class of plays it is to be hoped they patronized—but at the same time he never went. Over and above all questions of right and wrong he knew there existed questions of consistency and of propriety, and he respected both. What he would not desire in his pastor he would not tolerate in himself, and his pastor found him in consequence as helpful in example as in word. The youngest child in the Sunday-school did not feel his presence to be a cloud, while the oldest pupil in the Bible-class recognized his example to be a living epistle. He is gone now; but we have, according to the last Minutes, 27,024 elders left. We wonder how many we have like this brother whose prayer and walk were equal benedictions to the pastor and the flock, and whose memory will long continue as that of a veritable man of God. It is worth a great deal to be an elder of that kind. Is it worth while to be any other?

CHANGES IN form of the religious newspapers seems to be almost epidemic now. The change too is decidedly in the line of advance with progress. The Presbyterian Journal is the very latest that has come to hand in conformity to this new movement. The improvement is decided. The copy lying before us too is decidedly attractive in presenting Bethany pictures, including the Bethany church and the interior of building of that most celebrated Bethany Sunday-school building. The Journal has a fine corps of contributors and is an excellent paper.

is a most desirable article to have in any household where the PRESBYTERIAN is taken. It holds the successive issues together in most convenient form, costs no labor and requires no special pains in its adjustment. What a fine Synodical Album a year's gathering would thus constitute!

Sent to any address for forty cents.

THE FOLLOWING which appeared in the Central Presbyterian last week from the facile pen of "Rusticus" suits other papers and other localities quite as well as those for which it was written:

"A little over twelve months ago I was seized with a severe attack of cacoethes scribendi, and thereupon joined the great army of editors. For fifty-three weeks my mill ground out regularly something to fill in space, and like the mills of the gods, it ground slowly and exceedingly fine.

Just at the time, when I was getting my hand in, and when visions of being a Greeley or Dr. William Brown had begun to assume something more than a nebulous shape, the paper was swallowed up by the Christian Observer, and now I shall write over the grave of my reputation, Ilium fuit.

But even if the play has stopped, I have been behind the scenes, and have mastered the ropes and pulleys, the paint brushes and burnt cork, and I know more of newspaper human nature than you ever dreamt of in all your philosophy.

Henceforth I shall have more charity for the poor editors, and I shall never again abuse a paper. If I can find nothing else in it, I can at least compliment the obituary notices.

As one of the quondam critics of the Church papers, and then as one of the sufferers from critics, I have been on both sides of the question, and I speak that whereof I know, when I say that the editor of the religious paper deserves all the charity his readers can muster. You abuse him for not giving Church news, when at the same time you never send him news, expecting him to make bricks without straw. Then you demand strong and clear editorials each week, when not one of you would dare to print the lecture and two sermons you inflict upon your people.

If you have not a good strong paper in your Synod the fault lies with the members of that Synod. If each man would make himself a newsgatherer instead of passing resolutions of commendation, the paper would be a newspaper, and then if each minister would have his congregation canvassed for subscribers and personally see that each family took the paper, the subscription list would assume such comfortable proportions that the editor could command the best talent in the Church.

The old Central has weathered many a storm, and under the present management many of the old barnacles have been scraped off, and improvements have been introduced, and it bids fair to surpass itself, but in order to attain this consummation we so devotedly hope for, the Synod of Virginia must do something else than vote to add subscribers. "God be with us, till we meet again."

We have taken the liberty of italicising as above.

OUR READERS will enjoy the sketch of the Presbyterian Church in Chapel Hill given them this week. They could hardly fail to enjoy anything from the pen of Mrs. C. P. Spencer whose lively and graceful contributions were wont to enrich the pages of the PRESBYTERIAN in the past.

The sketch referred to simply as a matter of history of Presbyterianism in our State is very valuable, and ought to prove an object lesson of the service the paper is doing to the Synod along this line.

For the N. C Presbyterian.

WHY?

On Monday morning as a pastor sat reading, his mind wandered away from the book he held to the services he had conducted in the sanctuary the night before. He remembered that of eight church officers only one deacon was present, and he the least able-bodied of the lot. He could account for the absence of three of the rest, but how about the remaining four? One officer was out of the community and two others unwell; but as to the other absent ones he did not know. He had noted their absence at the service (as doubtless did others) and their absence was not inspiring. His sermon seemed to fall flat and he went home not only tired from his heavy day's work, but heavy hearted and discouraged.

And now, on that Monday morning, the memory of these things was anything but pleasant and encouraging. Unpleasant thoughts arose in his mind—were those officers absent because his preaching was so tiresome and profitless that they could stand only one of his sermons a day? and had the difficult work of his pastorate (difficult, even with all the help and encouragement both officers and members could give him) fallen on the wrong shoulders? Was he thus hindering the Lord's work? Unpleasant thoughts, these!

Just then he heard the voice of an elder's wife in another part of the house, and he thoughtfully said that the reason why her husband was not out at the last night's service was because one of their little ones was sick. Whether this was said to encourage the pastor or not, it did encourage him to know that at least one elder would have been present at the service of the sanctuary, had he not been providentially hindered. But why the others were absent the pastor still doesn't know. He hopes, however, they had good reasons for being absent from the service of God's house—reasons not only sufficient to satisfy human conscience, but sufficient to satisfy the Master also.

It might encourage your pastor to tell him why you were prevented from attending the last Sunday night service, or the Wednesday evening prayer-meeting. And it may do you good and improve attendance at divine worship if you would sometimes call to mind the fact that you are under as much obligation (not to the pastor but to God) to go to the house of worship to hear the Word as your pastor is to preach it. What sort of services would we have if all should absent themselves from the sanctuary for the same flimsy excuses that keep some away? But what congregations we would have, and how helpful and inspiring it would be to the preacher, if people were only as careful to keep their engagements with God as they are to keep their social engagements with one another!

Why should not you be a committee of one to help improve these things? Why? * * *

For the N. C. Presbyterian.

IT IS OUR OWN STORY.

The story of human misery and want, of hurt and its help, which was uttered so impressively and appealingly in Christ's earth-day, is also our own story. What poor, suffering humanity needed in that day is also needed by the same sort of people in this day. The same gospel which cheered and healed wounded hearts then is a ready relief to all who now apply it to their bruised and bleeding hearts. "The Sunday School Times" says: "There is a Gospel in the miracles for us. They are parables of our human want and the divine help which supplies it. They testify that our blindness, our lameness, our leprosy, our death to the great realities, are not beyond the power and the good will of God. They tell us that if we look back upon our own lives we shall find that the Healer and Quickener has been with us in our Judea, doing the same mighty work, but in a still more gracious way. So we find the gospel story, with all its loving outgoing of power, is our own story, because it has been written, not only for us, but about us and is our biography in a very real sense. What Jesus began to do and to teach there, and with them, he is going on to do and to teach still, and with us, and it is only because our eyes are holden that we fail to see so much." When Christ bodily quit this world He did not quit helping with a healing and strengthening hand all who would ask Him to render this gracious service. What He wrought in Palestine was but a foretaste of a wider ministry in these good days.

C. H. WETHERBE.

DAVIDSON NOTES.

Dr. and Mrs. Leftwich, of Baltimore, who have been spending some weeks with their daughter Mrs. T. P. Harrison, left this morning for Atlanta. Dr. Harrison who has been confined to his room for several days with a severe attack of the grip, is up again to-day.

Dr. Smith delivered three lectures in Laurinburg last week on Christian Education and allied topics.

Within the past ten days Dr. and Mrs. Shearer have given two largely attended receptions to the tudents and their friends. The first to the Junior and Senior Classes, the second to the Sophomores and Freshmen. The Students' Home each occasion was crowded with guests, and the dining room was equipped in a style which bore ample testimony to Mrs. Shearer's skill and long experience. Her many friends in Davidson have given a warm welcome to Miss Ruth Price, a niece of Dr. Shearer's and a former visitor, who has been intrusted with the management of the Students' Home for the present session. The Home is taxed to its utmost capacity, as nearly forty students take their meals there.

Prof. Griffin, the Violin Instructor of the Charlotte Presbyterial College, is in town to-day, making arrangements for a Recital to be given in the near future.

Mr. E. L. Wilson has sold his residence on Concord Street to Mr. Flowe, of Cabarrus county, who is at Davidson for the purpose of educating his sons. L.

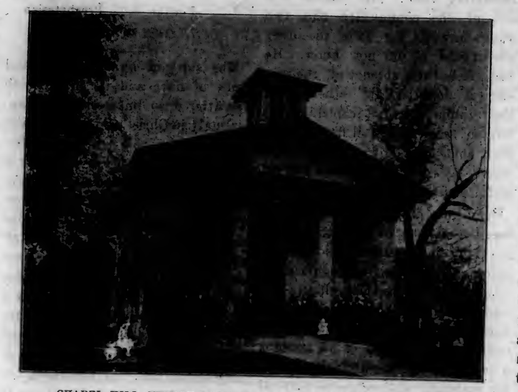
THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN CHAPEL HILL.

BY MRS. CORNELIA PHILLIPS SPENCER.

The village of Chapel Hill began when the University began. Its lots were laid off and offered for sale when the foundations of the first university building (the old East) were laid. This was in the fall of the year 1793, and in the century that has elapsed the life of the University has been the life of the town. Its temporary prostration (in the dark days of Reconstruction) was the prostration of the town. The builders of the Presbyterian church in Chapel Hill and for many years its chief officers were all officially connected with the Institution, so that a history of this church, more than that of any other in the place must necessarily make many references to the University.

The three first Presidents of the University were Presbyterians (the two first were ministers) and their administration extended through the first seventy years of its existence. The first church organization in Chapel Hill was Presbyterian, under the auspices of either President Chapman or President Caldwell. As the records of Orange Presbytery from 1770–1795 and also those from 1812–1827, were unfortunately burned, our information as to the church here is very meagre till about 1830, and for some years after that date. We know there was a church regularly constituted. In the report of Orange Presbytery to Synod, 1827, Chapel Hill church is enrolled with a membership of twenty. Dr. Caldwell, who had been ordained to the ministry in New Jersey previous to his coming to North Carolina in 1796, was stated supply.



It would be interesting to have the names of these twenty members. Charles Chalmers and Thomas Taylor are mentioned as elders between 1820 and 1830, and later Andrew Macaulay.

Elisha Mitchell became a Professor in the University in 1818, and was ordained by Orange Presbytery in 1821. James Phillips was Professor in 1826, was licensed to preach in 1833, and ordained 1835. There is no date of the admission of either of them to the church as members. There is a note of the admission of Mrs. Julia Phillips in July 1826, "by certificate."

The church is reported to Synod with tolerable regularity after the year 1827, and its assessments marked as paid. Dr. Caldwell remained stated supply till his death in 1835.

The report for 1836, mentions Rev. E. Mitchell as stated supply, and he continued to be, with some intermissions, for many years. Now and then a slight increase of membership is noted.

The church session-book, if indeed any was kept regularly till 1845, has long since disappeared. The Presbyterians had everything in their own hands for the first forty years of Chapel Hill. A Sunday-school was established in 1826, by members of the faculty, assisted by their wives and some of the pious students of the University. This was held in Person Hall, then used as the college chapel, and the only place short of Hillsboro where divine service was held. Sunday morning preaching, conducted by Dr. Caldwell and his Professors, was attended not only by the students whose attendance at that hour was compulsory, but by all the village. There the sacraments of baptism and the Lord's Supper were administered for many years.

Under the revival preaching of Dr. Nettleton in 1830, and of Dr. Baker in 1835, a deeply serious impression was made on the community. Early in the thirties, a small wooden church building was erected, chiefly at the expense of the faculty, on the spot where the Presbyterian church now stands. This was for use at Sunday evening service, Sunday-school and weekly prayer-meeting, and no sectarian doctrines being broached, the religious life of Chapel Hill was conducted on a strictly union basis. The Rev. Dr. Hooper (Baptist), Rev. Dr. Green (Episcopal), Rev. Dr. Deems (Methodist) and the Rev. Drs. Caldwell, Mitchell and Phillips, ministered here by turns to the small congregations assembled. Ex-Governor Swain succeeded Dr. Caldwell in the Presidency in 1835.

As the University grew the village population also increased, and this primitive way of worship was felt to be a little too broad to suit its wants. About 1840, the Methodists organized and provided themselves with a separate place of worship. In a few years the Episcopalians followed their example and under the guidance of Rev. Dr. Green of the University soon built a handsome church edifice. This was completed in 1848.

The Presbyterians had not looked on with indifference at seeing themselves gradually outnumbered by other sects—the Methodists and Baptists especially having taken possession of a large portion of Orange county, and outgrowing all others with great rapidity. They drew up together and blew upon the Presbyterian coal. In 1845, they reformed their session—electing President Swain and Charles Phillips elders—Dr. Mitchell being moderator and resolved that the time had come when they too must light their own camp-fires and display their own especial church banner.

The importance of Chapel Hill as the seat of the State University was growing with the growth of that Institution. The sons of Presbyterian families must not be allowed to spend the four years of college life with no opportunity afforded them of hearing defended, explained and enforced the grand tenets of that masculine form of Christian faith first delivered to the saints by Paul of Tarsus, and handed down the centuries by the Carthaginian saint, and John of Geneva.

The Rev. Dr. James Phillips whose attachment to the faith and forms of Presbyterianism was ardent and uncompromising had been chiefly occupied since his entrance in the ministry in preaching to the country churches at Little River, Fairfield and New Hope. To this last named he was especially attached, riding out there (seven miles) every Sunday morning and finding a great pleasure in ministering to the congregation for many years. He became prominent now among the handful of Chapel Hill Presbyterians in forwarding this resolve to erect a church building of their own.

After due consultation with the leading men of Orange Presbytery, and receiving the formal sanction of that body, Dr. Phillips undertook to secure the sum requisite by personal solicitation through the State. To this end he devoted his vacations from the duties of his professorship for several years, summer and winter, to visiting various sections and calling the attention of our church people to the importance of the work. By 1848, he had collected and placed in bank the sum of $3,589, and it was resolved to commence the building. President Swain, Dr. Mitchell and Charles Phillips being the building committee. The plan was furnished by A. R. Davis, of New York, a then well known architect, recommended by Mr. James Donaldson of that city who had signified his interest in the new church by the handsome subscription of $500. Of the whole sum subscribed ($3,644) $3,589, was collected, and of this, $1,400 was contributed by three members of the Chapel Hill Church, Gov. Swain and the Mitchell and Phillips families.

A lot of one acre, about the most eligible in the village was purchased from the trustees of the University upon the explicit understanding that the service of the church should be so arranged as never to conflict with the regular Sabbath forenoon service in the college chapel.

Attendance upon chapel worship was obligatory in those days upon all connected with the University, and the absence of a student was marked to his discredit as much as if from a recitation. The trustees of the early days of the University were men of various religious beliefs; but they were united on one point—that the young should be trained in the way they should go, and that one way was the hearing of at least one good sermon a week. They were persuaded that the average college boy, if left to the freedom of his own will, would prefer a very late breakfast on Sunday morning and a subsequent lounge among his fellows, or the reading of a novel, to any pulpit delivery whatever in either his mother's church or his father's. The resolve was fixed to continue divine service in the college chapel at all hazards. The heads of the Presbyterian church being all officially connected with the University readily assented and gave the required pledge.

The church building was finished and dedicated Sept. 23rd, 1849. A very large congregation of all classes and creeds was assembled. Many came in from the country, and our Methodist brethren with kindly courtesy suspended their own services for the day and joined with us, and surrendered their own pulpit to the visiting Presbyterian ministers.

Rev. Dr. Lacy preached the introductory sermon in the Methodist church, Saturday 22d. Rev. John A. Gretter gave the dedication sermon and prayer Sunday morning from Haggai 2: 9—college worship being courteously suspended for the occasion. Dr. Lacy officiated at the communion service, and again in the afternoon. Dr. Mitchell read a paper setting forth the motives which had prompted and secured this house of worship—pledging it not to conflict with Sunday morning service in the college chapel, not to assume any unbrotherly attitude towards other churches, but to assist in the advancement of Christianity, to maintain the doctrines and discipline of our own faith, and to afford religious instruction and guardianship to those young men of the University who preferred to receive it from us.

Dr. Phillips had the happiness to admit by baptism the first infant member, his own first grand child, Julia Vermeule, daughter of Charles and Laura (Battle) Phillips. (The first funeral service in the new church was that of this little one, called just as she had completed her second year of mortal life.)

Mrs. Charles Phillips and B. S. Hedrick then a student in the University were the first adult members received on examination Sept. 22d. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kirkland were received from New Hope a month later.

There were not twelve communing members in the church then constituted. In February, 1851, the roll shows but twelve, but these twelve contributed $244 to the Church Boards. In 1853, there were but twenty-three members. However"—and here we quote Rev. Dr. Rumple as good authority: "It may be said of this church, as of Presbyterianism elsewhere in the State, that its members and adherents have been among the best and most influential men and women in society, whose character, education and standing, second to none, gave their church a prominence and weight altogether disproportioned to its size."

And now a good step having been well taken, calculated to advance the best interests of the community and of the college, the Presbyterians most concerned did not allow their elation or enthusiasm to evaporate. They went on with the work. The ladies, under the lead of Mrs. R. J. Ashe, eldest daughter of Dr. Mitchell, formed a very active and successful sewing society, the proceeds of which within a year provided a carpet, chandeliers, window shades and pulpit sofa for the church. Several students of the University presented a handsome pulpit Bible. Charles Mitchell gave the pulpit cushion. Mrs. Anna Ashe gave two venerable chairs of colonial origin. Dr. Mitchell gave the stone wall inclosing the yard, and Miss Cornelia Phillips gave the stone pilllars and gates.

Dr. Mitchell was appointed stated supply, and Messrs. David L. Swain, Charles Phillips and Joseph Kirkland were ruling elders. No salary was paid to those members of the University faculty who ministered to the church. This allows for the liberal contributions to the church collections averaging $20 to the member. In 1853 there were eleven families, giving twenty-three communicants. Collections for the year amounted to $383. The Sunday-school numbered twenty. In 1859 the members were forty-eight; Sunday-school thirty. There was a steady though not large increase of membership, the congregations at the Sunday services (always in the p. m.) and at the weekly prayer-meetings were always respectable, always attracting the best scholars and most thoughtful young men from college. No special revival of religious feeling is recorded till 1856, during a second visit after an interval of twenty-three years from the venerable Dr. Baker of Austin, Texas. Eight were added to the church at this time, and fourteen soon after. A number of these were from among the students; not all, however, who were seriously impressed here united with the church here, preferring to go to their own homes. Some of them joined other denominations and became useful and honored among them.

In 1857 Dr. Mitchell met his death among the gorges of Black mountain where he was engaged on a scientific exploration. He had resigned the work of stated supply the year before, and Dr. Phillips had been chosen to succeed him. This he was able to undertake as there were no forenoon services here, and he always returned from New Hope in the afternoon. The increase of the village population had increased the church membership and there were some plainly dissatisfied with the arrangement which kept the church closed on Sunday morning while every other denomination enjoyed its own services. The new comers were unwilling to go to the college chapel where they had to worship under the critical eyes of four hundred young men, and hear every Sunday a sermon from a minister of one of the four different denominations who preached there in rotation. They appealed to the University trustees and authorities to make a change, lest "one good custom" too long adhered to should corrupt the whole.

A general move forward was made on this line and it was felt that the point should be yielded. The trustees passed an ordinance abolishing chapel Sunday morning worship, and the Presbyterian church had the yoke of conformity to it lifted from its neck. The congregation had already called a pastor. The Rev. J. B. Shearer (now President of Davidson College) was unanimously elected, and installed Feb. 6th 1859. The amount raised by the church that year was $1,353, of which $1,000 was for the new pastor's salary; which proves that the church was willing to pay for its new privileges of pastoral services and Sunday morning worship.

Mr. Shearer remained till June 1862 when his pastorate was dissolved and he returned to Virginia. The church was then served by Dr. Jas. Phillips as stated supply till his death March 14th, 1867. His son Dr. Charles Phillips, licensed in Pittsboro, 1857, ordained at New Hope 1866, was chosen to succeed him and remained stated supply till the disruption of the University in '68–'69, and his departure in '69 to Davidson College. President Swain died in 1868.

In consequence of the war and the evils resulting upon its close, the church was at a low ebb for several years thereafter. An exodus of very nearly all the best citizens of Chapel Hill took place. In 1868 only one deacon was left, Mr. Franklin Davies and there was no acting elder. In February, 1869, just before his departure to Davidson, Dr. Phillips ordained Thos. M. Kirkland and H. C. Thompson elders, and committed the church into their hands till better times. The Sunday-school was kept up, Mr. Thompson superintending. The church dues and assessments were paid, and at intervals a minister was detailed by the Presbytery to visit the deserted village and report upon the condition of things.

From 1869 to 1873 there was little or nothing recorded. The Rev. Mr. Hines, the Rev. Mr. Faucette, and the Rev. Mr. Dalton were the visiting clergy who came occasionally to open the church and administer the sacraments. In June, 1874, the Rev. P. H. Dalton appears as moderator of the session, admitting one member on examination, Miss J. V. Spencer, who had been baptized in infancy by her grandfather, Dr.

ALUM is properly a dye stuff. Lime is properly used in tanning. Neither should be used in bread. Yet it is positively true that most all the cheaply made baking powders contain these harmful ingredients used simply because they are cheap, and utterly regardless of their dangerous character. The cheap powders thereby become the infamous means whereby the unsuspecting are deluded and injured.

In all English countries and in some of our States it is unlawful to put alum in bread. The Royal Baking Powder is free from alum and lime—it is absolutely pure.

CHANGES OF ADDRESS.

Correspondents will please note the following changes of address:

Rev. G. W. Davies, from Rockport, Texas to Dobyville, Ark.

Rev. J. P. Miller, from Hearne, Texas to Watch, Lamar county, Ala.

NORTH CAROLINA.

First Church, Wilmington :—The sermons from Proverbs which Dr. Hoge gives his parishioners on Sabbath nights still continue. The last sermon on temperance, founded on the teachings found in the book mentioned was undoubtedly one of the strongest presentations possible on the subject, given in a manner strikingly original.

Immanuel Church, Wilmington :—Two members received Sunday night—one on profession and one by letter. Rev. B. E. Wallace, pastor.

Second Church, Charlotte :—Rev. J. W. Stagg, pastor. Six persons recently received.

New Hope in Orange Presbytery :—On Jan. 3rd, six members were received into New Hope church on certificate. An effort is being made to put a religious paper in every home in the congregation. D. J. C.

Chapel Hill :—Last Sabbath (Jan. 10th) was our quarterly communion service, and a precious season it was. Five members were announced as having been received since our last communion. All by letter. D. J. C.

Asheville :—Some weeks ago I wrote you of Dr. Campbell's proposing to send out a self-sustaining colony from the First Presbyterian church of Asheville, instead of accepting the offer of an assistant made him by the elders and deacons in joint session, thus making two churches with two pastors instead of one church and one pastor with an assistant who would probably not assist. I noticed that the Christian Observer commented very favorably on Dr. Campbell's action in a recent editorial as showing the true Christ-like spirit and the true Apostolic method of aggression and progression. At the request of the joint board as has been already reported to you, Dr. Campbell laid the matter before the congregation about a month ago for their consideration. To-day, after the week of prayer, another meeting of the joint board was called and their previous resolution was referred to that "there is a spiritual need of another Presbyterian church in Asheville, a need from the standpoint of the First church of Asheville, a need from the standpoint of the new Presbytery of Asheville, and a need from the standpoint of Presbyterianism in Western, N. C., with only a financial objection." And in answer to the question as to the financial objection Dr. Campbell announced that a lady, not a member of his church, to whom he had presented the whole matter, had promised to put $5,000 into the new church if the congregation would raise $10,000. The joint board, with several members absent, pledged themselves to raise $4,000; and so of the $15,000, needed to buy a lot of the right kind in the right place and to build a church for the daughter as good as that of the mother church, $9,000, of the $15,000, necessary has been pledged before the congregation is asked for a cent. The Head of the Church seems to have directed the movement from the beginning and to have removed the financial objection which is the only objection which any doubting Thomas has raised, and of course there are a few doubting Thomases every where. The matter is to be referred to the congregation on the 24th, after due and timely notice and the result shall be reported to you.

Asheville, N. C., Jan. 12th, 1897.

Smyrna :—On the first Sabbath of January Rev. A. N. Ferguson completed his twenty-fourth year as pastor of this church. Although the membership has been diminished by death and removals, yet the past year has been a most successful one, the contributions being some forty dollars in excess of any previous year. There has been no protracted service during the year, but many have united with the church, and an increase of spirituality has been manifest.

VIRGINIA.

Red Eye :—On the first Sabbath in January Mr. James A. Hutson was ordained and installed elder, and Mr. W. D. Hodges, deacon.

Walker's Creek :—Rev. W. W. Carson, pastor. Twenty-nine persons have been received since last quarterly communion.

Mt. Olive :—This church, nine miles west of Harrisonburg, was recently dedicated. The sermon was preached by Dr. Quarles of Lexington.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Rock Hill :—There were seven additions to the First church, Rock Hill S. C., on the first Sunday in January. During the year 1896, there were thirty-two added to the communion of this church on examination and eleven by letter—making forty-three in all.

MISSISSIPPI.

Canton :—Rev. John Hunter, D. D., of Jackson, Miss., assisted the pastor, Rev. C. S. Newman, at last communion service—six united with the church.

LOUISIANA.

Louisiana Presbytery :—Met in special session at Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 6th, 1897. Rev. H. W. Wallace was received from the Louisiana Conference of the M. E. Church, South, and after examination on Experimental Religion, Theology and Church Government was admitted into membership and directed to labor under care of the Home Mission Committee. He was dismissed to the Opelausas group and will enter on his work at once.

M. B. Shaw,
Stated Clerk.

Jackson, La., Jan. 9th, 1897.

KENTUCKY.

Corbin :—The "Week of Prayer" was observed in Corbin for the first time. Union services were held in the Baptist, Congregational and Presbyterian churches and were well attended. The closing service was especially interesting, "Missions" being the subject. We all feel much stronger since this season of united prayer. The ladies of this congregation have placed their pastor (Rev. W. K. Forsyth) under many obligations for several beautiful and valuable presents during the holidays for which he is grateful indeed. The Lord reward them.

Our Ladies Missionary Society, though young, is doing a noble work. Remember those women which labor with us in the gospel.

Pineville :—At the close of the service on last Sabbath evening (the 10th inst.) Mr. J. W. Clark was ordained ruling elder and Mr. Nelson Hartin ordained a deacon in this church. Rev. W. K. Forsyth, pastor.

Mount Sterling :—Licentiate J. H. Taylor, of the Senior Class of Louisville Seminary has been engaged as supply.

Nicholasville :—The pastor, Rev. R. E. Douglas, has recently been assisted by Rev. John G. Anderson in a meeting which resulted in eight uniting with the church upon profession of faith and in much spiritual good.

TENNESSEE.

Knoxville :—The funeral was largely attended on the 15th inst., at the First Presbyterian church, of Hon. Jesse A. Rayl, for twenty-seven years a ruling elder, and long a prominent citizen. He was specially active as a member of the Board of Education until failing health obliged him last fall to resign. As a mark of esteem the teachers of the city schools attended his funeral in a body and contributed an elaborate floral tribute, afterwards they passed resolutions of respect and esteem, as did also the city council. Dr. R. L. Bachman pastor of the Second church, offered the opening prayer at the funeral, Dr. James Park, the venerable pastor preached the sermon, closing with a most tender tribute to the late ruling elder and Sunday-school superintendent, and to his rare intrinsic worth as a Christian citizen, followed by the closing prayer from Rev. J. A. Duncan, pastor of the Church Street Methodist Church, South. A long procession followed the hearse to Gray Cemetery where the good man was laid to rest, his grave being covered with flowers.

GENERAL.

Rev. F. B. Meyer, pastor of Christ church, London, has been engaged by Mr. Moody to conduct a series of meetings in New York and Boston. The dates are: February 4th to 7th, inclusive, Tremont Temple, Boston; February 8th to 12th, inclusive, Carnegie Hall, New York. He will speak twice a day. He sails on his return voyage February 13th.

There has been further trouble among the worshippers at the Holy Sepulchre, Jerusalem. The orthodox or Greek church observe Jan. 6th as Christmas and the Romanists objected to their entering the church by a certain door on that day. A fight ensued which did not end until Turkish authorities intervened.

PERSONALS.

Rev. H. Tucker Graham, lately a missionary to Japan, has accepted the call as assistant pastor to Rev. A. J. McKelway, of Fayetteville. We extend a cordial welcome to Mr. Graham.

We are glad to see Dr. Chester, of Nashville, looking so well and to hear that his family are enjoying excellent health. Dr. Chester has been in Wilmington for a few days visiting the family of Mr. A. A. Willard.

Rev. J. I. Norris pastor of the Central church, Little Rock, Ark., has accepted a call to the church at Newport, Ark.

Rev. F. P. Ramsay has concluded his temporary pastorate of the Independent church, Savannah.

Rev. D. W. Snyder preached in Savannah on last Sabbath at the First and Second churches, Mr. Snyder is anxious to secure ten men and women to return with him to Africa. Not only are missionaries needed, but teachers and artisans and workmen of different kinds to teach the trades.

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR.

These are seasons when visits are usually made between friend and friend, and tokens of esteem and affection are bestowed and received. Of these tokens the writer has recently been the recipient from the good people of Hickory and Newton. During the hours when "Santa Claus" is upon his annual round of visits, some handsome and useful presents were left at the "manse;" while he made use of the U. S. mail to convey the good wishes and tokens of affection from the people of Newton. But this was not all. On New Year's night many of the good people of Hickory came in a body to the "manse" leaving many bundles, the contents of which, served to replenish the pantry and make glad the heart of the pastor and his family. An inventory of the goods is not necessary; suffice it to say there was coffee and sugar, tea, rice, prunes, peaches, tomatoes; &c., &c., and for fear the pastor, or his household might suffer during the severe cold weather which is predicted, there was added a handsome pair of blankets. Persons of other denominations united with the little Presbyterian flock in showing this kindness to the under shepherd. While thus he partakes of their temporal things, may he be strengthened in body and soul and be enabled faithfully to minister to them in spiritual things. J. A. R.

A DAY OF REJOICING AT MONROE.

The fourth Sabbath in December was a day of rejoicing and victory with the Presbyterian church in Monroe. The Children's Missionary Society held their yearly celebration on that day and counted their donations which surpassed even their fondest expectations. This society was organized among the children four or five years ago; it now numbers sixty members divided into four divisions, each presided over and encouraged in the good work by a body of members of the church. Their contributions last year were $200. This year $235.14. Next year they expect to do still better things as the whole church is inspired with the spirit of their pastor, ever moving forward in every good work. Bro. H. M. Dixon's pastorate with this church is young in years, but old in results. He continually holds up the true Bible idea of giving the tenth, and though the membership is only in moderate circumstances so far as worldly goods is concerned, yet they are rich in the grace of giving, their contributions averaging last year $16 per member, to all causes, which clearly places them the banner church of our Presbytery if not of the State in point of giving. The exercises were according to the program prepared by the Assembly's Committee for Children's Day. They were very instructive and enjoyed by the immense audience, though so crowded that there was not even standing room left.

May Bro. Dixon have many yearly exercises with the children of his church as successful in results as the one which closed the year 1896. A.

The spring term of Peace Institute opens on January 21st. Many new boarders have come in, and more are expected this week. The increase in day scholars is very gratifying. A noticeable feature is the number of graduates who have returned each year for advanced work, in special branches. Others are filling responsible positions as teachers—the "Peace graduates" having had no difficulty in securing good positions in many of our State schools. The "full graduates in music" are all employed, and will no doubt do honor to their teachers and to themselves.

The course of study in every department of literature has been much enlarged and extended during the past few years, and offer full advantages for college work of the highest order. The ornamental departments too are well equipped in every particular, and large shipment of casts, etc., have been received and arranged for use. The new China kiln has proved a great success.

We are informed that the Presbyterian High School at Mebane, N. C., has reopened with even brighter prospects than before. Nearly all the old boys are on the grounds together with a sprinkling of new ones. The first day the work for the term was outlined. Later the regular exercises proceed with the vim stored up by the enjoyment of the holidays with friends and loved ones. This year promises to even rival last in athletics.

DECIDED PROGRESS IN COLORED EVANGELIZATION.

Some years ago Rev. C. A. Baker, now dead, but then pastor of our church at Opelika, Ala., did faithful work for the colored people abont him. Soon after his death his work was taken up by Mr. J. L. Dean, his foster-son, and other members of our church. A destitute place was found in town, a lot secured, and on it has been erected a neat and comfortable building, paid for and presented by Mr. Dean to the colored work. Within some two years this consecrated elder and his associates, building on Mr. Baker's foundation, have done work that has resulted in the organization of a church. On November 28th our faithful white missionary, Rev. O.B. Wilson, went to their help, remaining till Dec. 11th. In that time he held 23 services with an average attendance of 60 persons; preached 9 sermons; delivered 13 addresses; visited 20 colored families, with 62 persons in them. He found Mr. Dean's Sunday school with forty scholars and three teachers. There were no colored Presbyterians in the place when he arrived. When he left there was an organized church of five members with two elders. Others have joined since. During his work he had the sympathy of Rev. J. J. Wool and many of his people. As an active helper he had Rev. Thos. Maclin, our colored pastor from Montgomery, Ala., who did difficult service. Here is a copy of a letter about this work that speaks for itself.

Opelika, Ala., Dec. 29th, 1896.

Rev. Mr. Maclin,

Montgomery, Ala.,

Dear Brother:—I write you to let you know what we are doing. We meet every Wednesday, and hold prayer-meeting, have very good attendance, considering the membership of the church. We also hold our Friday night society meeting, and Sunday-school, and Sunday night meeting. I think we are going to have an addition the end of this week of three more members. Oh! how I wish you could be with us! Mr. Dean tells us that we are to have a pastor here on Friday or Saturday from Birmingham. He will be here on trial for one month. We are expecting Mr. Wilson early in January. I thought these facts would interest you, as you seemed to love us so much. You don't know how much we miss you and Mr Wilson, and we hope some day to see you again with us. Love to you and yours,

Your brother in Christ,
Scott Graham, Deacon.

I held prayer meeting Sunday night and it strengthened me spiritually. Subject—"Man's chief end is to glorify God and enjoy Him forever."

It is most evident that we can reach the colored people when we go at them with a loving heart and the genuine Gospel.

"Where Doctors Disagree."

There has been a great deal of disagreement from time to time about the therapeutic value of sarsaparilla. In the main, authorities deny any particular medical value to the plant. "It's just an old wives' remedy," they say. And in the main they are right, There are about a dozen varieties of sarsaparilla, scattered through various countries, and of this dozen only one has any real curative power. So a man whose experience might be confined to the eleven other varieties might honestly say there was little value in them. The one valuable sarsaparilla is found in Honduras, C. A. Monardes, a physician of Seville, records the introduction of sarsaparilla into Spain as a result of the Spanish discoveries of the New World, between 1536 and 1545. But the root did not accomplish much. But he adds, "a better sort soon after came from Hondnras." It is this "better sort" that is used exclusively in Ayer's Sarsaparilla. And it is the use of this "better sort" that has given Ayer's Sarsaparilla prominence over all other varieties by reason of its wonderful cures of blood diseases. Send for the Curebook, a "story of cures told by cured." Free. Address J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

POWER FOR SERVICE.

BY REV. JOHN W. PRIMROSE, D. D.

The opening Sunday-school lessons of the International series for the year '97 call us to consider the gift of the Holy Spirit at Pentecost—a subject in which there seems to be a revival of interest. Most of our lesson helps will no doubt make out the baptism of Pentecost to be a baptism with power. The writer cannot accept this theory, and invites the courteous reader to join with him in a fresh examination of the Scriptures.

"Our Lord said to his disciples: "Wait for the promise of the Father which ye have heard of me. For John truly baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence." Acts 1:4, 5. He refers to two prophecies: one of John and one by himself. I indeed baptize you with water said John, but He, etc. This language leads us to expect in the baptism by Jesus the thing signified in the baptism by John. That signified by John's baptism was not power, but purification. Ritual baptism is never a sign of power but of purification. Real baptism must confer, not power, but purification. Says the Larger Catechism, Ques. 165: "Baptism is——a sign and seal of ingrafting into Himself * * * regeneration of His Spirit." Our Catechism teaches, then, that baptism with the Spirit purifies by effecting union with Christ; we are made the righteousness of God in Him; we are sanctified in Christ Jesus. And so the Scriptures teach, that by one Spirit we are all baptized into one body—into Christ. Baptism with the Spirit is regeneration.

The quotation from Acts 1: 4, 5, tells us plainly that Jesus identifies the baptism with the Spirit, foretold by John with the promise of the Father which they had heard of Him just prior to his crucifixion. Note the word 'promise.' The Spirit's presence was promised, in a sense never before realized. Promised in a sense so desirable that Jesus said (Jno. 16: 7), "I tell you the truth, it is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you." In John 7: 39 we find: "The Holy Ghost was not yet given because that Jesus was not yet glorified." Peter also, tells the multitude at Pentecost that Jesus being by the right hand of God exalted, had received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost. It is therefore, we may confidently say, indisputable that (1) the promise of the Holy Spirit was fulfilled in the baptism with the Spirit at Pentecost; (2) that the Spirit was then given in baptism in a sense never before known to earth; and therefore (3) that when Jesus breathed upon the apostles prior to His glorification saying: "Receive ye the Holy Ghost" (Jno. 20: 22), the promise of the Father was not then bestowed.

We affirm further that the only sense in which the Spirit's place in this dispensation differs from his work in the past, is found in John 14: 17: "He dwelleth with you and shall be in you." The indwelling of the Spirit, the communion of the Spirit, whereby the mystical union with a risen Christ is established, fulfils the promise of the Father—the prophesied baptism with the Spirit. In all this there is nothing about power.

But the advocates of the enduement with power theory quote Luke 24: 49, "And behold I send the promise of my Father upon you; but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high." Also Acts 1: 8: "But ye shall receive power after that(when—R. V.) the Holy Ghost is come upon you." This promise of power is quite distinct from the promised baptism with the Spirit. He had told them that this last was to be looked for "not many days hence." On this they seem to have meditated and it occurs to them to ask if at this time also, He will restore the kingdom. This He says was not for them to know, but for power to do their part He assures them they will be fully equipped after the promise of the Spirit is first fulfilled. They must wait for that, and then the miraculous power suspended since the crucifixion would be restored.*

Finally, that the Pentecostal baptism is not enduement with power for service is clear.

(1) From the fact that so far from its being true that enduement with power would not come to the disciples till the departure of Jesus, on the contrary, while He was with them they wrought miracles and when he was taken away that power was lost. And so Jesus said to them that to confirm their testimony to His resurrection, the suspended power of miracles should be restored after the promise of the Spirit was fulfilled. Observe, power for service was nothing new—as Moses and all the Old Testament saints well knew, but the predicted baptism was unknown till Pentecost.

(2) Again, the power-for-service theorists urge Christians to pray for the baptism with the Spirit, and maintain of course that many, perhaps the great majority, have never received it, whereas every believer has received it. See the word: "Received ye the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith" (Gal. 3: 2) "Christ was made a curse for us that we might receive the promise of the Spirit through faith." (Ib. 3: 13, 15). Especially this: "If any man thirst let him come unto me and drink. He that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. (This spake He of the Spirit which they that believe on Him should receive; for the Holy Ghost was not yet given because Jesus was not yet glorified)" Jno. 7: 37–39. Power for service had been given. Our conclusion appears irrefutably plain, and still plainer, if possible, when we consider

(3) The Scriptures say there is but one baptism, once only administered. If the power-for-service theory be true, then there are two and one of them many times received. By one Spirit in the one baptism are we all baptized into one body. We have all been made to drink of one Spirit. Peter tells us of this one baptism that it saves us.

They who have received the one baptism with the Spirit into Christ are exhorted to "be filled with the Spirit," (Eph. 5: 18). This may often be, and often was the case prior to Pentecost and prior to the incarnation.

*Some years ago Dr. Ingliss of the Witness wrote, that in praying for a Pentecostal outpouring people knew not for what they asked; but this highly respected expounder did not—so far as the writer knows—live long enough after this statement was made, to explain his views.

Sarsaparilla Sense.

Any sarsaparilla is sarsaparilla. True. So any tea is tea. So any flour is flour. But grades differ. You want the best. It's so with sarsaparilla. There are grades. You want the best. If you understood sarsaparilla as well as you do tea and flour it would be easy to determine. But you don't. How should you? When you are going to buy a commodity whose value you don't know, you pick out an old established house to trade with, and trust their experience and reputation. Do so when buying sarsaparilla.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla has been on the market 50 years. Your grandfather used Ayer's. It is a reputable medicine. There are many Sarsaparillas—but only one Ayer's. It cures.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Among the illustrations of The Bookman for January is an excellent cut of Prof. Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton University, who is easily ranked as one of the leading essayists and historians of the present day. Friends of Prof. Wilson's father, the Rev. Dr. Jos. R. Wilson, now of Richmond, Va., but who was pastor of the First Presbyterian church of this city for many years, are struck by the likeness of the son to that of the distinguished and venerable parent.

A short time ago a copy of the first edition of Isaac Walton's "Complete Angler" (1653) sold for $2,000 in London. This book was one of the rarest of the first editions and until the early part of this century was catalogued among the collection as "uncollected." Its original price was 1s. 6d.

The Key Monument Association of Frederick, Md., has received $5,000 appropriated for the monument by the General Assembly in 1895. This practically insures the erection of the monument which will probably be ready for unveiling by September next. Francis Scott Key was born in Frederick county, and practiced law in Frederick City prior to the District of Columbia. A collection of his poems was published in New York in 1857, but it is as the author of "The Star Spangled Banner" that he is best known. This song it will be remembered was suggested and partially written while the author was detained in the British fleet during the bombardment of Fort Henry near Baltimore.

Maarten Maartens was educated to be a barrister with the intention that he would go into politics, but he preferred the life of letters. He writes in English instead of his native tongue for artistic reasons, as well as for the sake of the larger public to be reached. Mr. Maartens thinks the Dutch is very fine for higher prose or poetry, but that for lighter literature English is superior, being more flexible and nimbler.

It is announced in London that in her capacity as governor of the Isle of Wight, Princess Beatrice will next summer publicly unveil the memorial of the late Lord Tennyson, to be erected on the cliffs at Farringford. It gives the inhabitants of the island great delight and satisfaction for the princess to appear in her official role, and furthermore, she is, like the queen, a passionate admirer of Tennyson's poetry, so that her unveiling of this memorial to the late Laureate will be something much more than a perfunctory duty. Princess Beatrice herself frequently reads Tennyson aloud to the queen.

BOOK REVIEWS.

The bi-ennial report of the North Carolina Institution for the Deaf and Dumb and Blind, Raleigh, has been issued by the principal, Mr. John E. Ray. The enrollment for the past two years has been one hundred and fifty-three white and one hundred and sixty colored pupils, a total of three hundred and thirteen. The report is comprehensive and exceedingly interesting to those desiring a knowledge of this important work.

The Red Cross Society has for years been one of the most important factors for good, but our interest has of late been enhanced and the eyes of the world centered upon this organization on account of the work of Clara Barton and her assistants among the suffering Armenians. A Special Illustrated Edition of the Armenian Relief Report has been issued by the American National Red Cross of Washington, D. C., at the small cost of 30 cents. This work gives reports, copies of letters, telegrams, maps, etc., also well executed cuts of persons and places visited and many interesting Turkish views

Jas. Phillips. The following September the church had begun to rally in common with the whole community from the prolonged period of stagnation and depression due to the distracted condition of public affairs. Mr. Dalton was called to be stated supply, preaching once a month. A tribute of love and gratitude is due this faithful servant of God lately called to his reward for his affectionate, self-denying labor of love among us at this trying juncture. His service ended in October, 1879, at which time Messrs. Thompson, Kirkland and Dr. A. R. Ledoux were elders, Messrs. F. Davies and Wm. B. Phillips deacons, and the communing members numbered twenty-six.

The University was reorganized in 1875, public confidence was restored, business revived, and from that time to this the Presbyterian church has partaken of the general prosperity.

The Rev. J. L. Currie was called to be pastor in 1880. Ended Sept. 1883. Rev. W. F. Wilhelm pastor from May 1880 to July 1888. Both of them now gone up higher. Rev. J. E. Fogartie pastor from Nov. 1890 to Dec. 1893. Rev. D. J. Currie pastor from May 1894 to——.

Mr. Currie finished his course at the seminary in Columbia after receiving the call to Chapel Hill, began his work there in May was ordained by the Presbytery at a called meeting in September, and next day (Sept. 30th) was installed by Rev. Dr. J. Henry Smith, of Greensboro.

The church roll now stands with sixty-four names, ten of whom are non-resident. Thirty have been received into membership in the past two years. The elders are T. M. Kirkland, F.P. Venable and J. A. Holmes. The deacons J. L. Love (non-resident), E. L. Harris, T. J. Wilson, E. A. Alderman and Geo. P. Butler.

This field is still, as fifty years ago, a most interesting and important one. None in the State more so. As long as the State University exists, the importance of an educated, active and devout ministry here cannot be overestimated. The pastors of the different churches recognize their duty in respect to the students; they visit them in their rooms, look after them in sickness, and endeavor by all means to win to seriousness and to regular attendance on religious services the careless and thoughtless ones.

It will be a sad day for North Carolina if she ever agrees to let the University lights be put out, and a still sadder day will rise on the University if the Church of God shall ever neglect to cherish the sacred flame on her altars in Chapel Hill.

CATECHISM.

Question 25. How doth Christ execute the office of a priest?

Answer. Christ executeth the office of a priest in His once offering up of Himself a sacrifice to satisfy divine justice and reconcile us to God, and in making continual intercession for us.

Time. A. D., 30.

Place. Jerusalem.

INTRODUCTORY.

Our last lesson closed in the midst of Peter's sermon. The following verses encouraged the hearers to hope, that as they had done ignorantly they might repent. He therefore calls them to repent for the times of refreshing had come from the presence of God. Moreover Moses had foretold of this prophet and had commanded the people to obey Him. He had foreshadowed for them certain destruction unless they obeyed. Then he pointed to the promise and assured them that they were under the covenant of promise, and that God had sent His Son Jesus Christ to bless them in turning them from their sins. The section begins with the first verse of the third chapter and includes the thirty-first verse of this chapter.

We may, in studying these lessons, consider the outer history from Pentecost. But better, we may study the inner history, the unfolding of the work of the Holy Spirit. From Him beginning at Pentecost there flowed a marvelous power, leading to confession of sin, faith and obedience, great peace, noble generosity, wonderful works of healing and help, and a higher life beyond conception until Pentecost, and bearing the fruits of the Spirit. There was also a marvelous wisdom and courage as seen in this lesson.

LESSON NOTES.

A well known lame man healed. Peter and John the agents of Christ. Great crowds come to see in Solomon's porch. The two men taught by Christ, and full of the Holy Ghost are most prominent. Peter is preaching; John stands by to encourage and inforse him.

Vs. 1. The priest whose temple service is interrupted by the results of this miracle. The captain of the temple, a Jewish officer having a body of Levites in his command to guard the temple and preserve order. The Sadducees, one of the two great sects of the Jews, religiously materialists, politically and socially, the aristocracy and the allies of foreign powers. They denied the existence of spirits, angels or men, and therefore the resurrection of the dead.

Vs. 2. Being grieved. R. V., "Sore troubled," vexed and feelings wrought up greatly. Preached, proclaimed, through Jesus, R. V., in Jesus. This phrase "in Jesus" is the prepositional phrase generally used to express the vital union of the believer with Jesus as in the phrases, "if any man be in Christ Jesus," "if ye abide in Me, "ye shall know that I am in the Father and ye in Me and I in you," "as the branch cannot bear fruit of itself except it abide in the vine" and such like. This preposition never means into or within, but expreses union, with the idea of communion. The Sadducees objected to this preaching of the resurrection from the dead.

Vs. 3. Laid hands on them, arrested them with some actual violence. In hold, in prison. Unto the next day, as it was too late to call the Sanhedrin which could not lawfully sit except in daylight. Eventide, near six o'clock.

Vs. 4. Howbeit, in spite of all the opposition many....believed on Jesus. The whole number of disciples was, R. V., "came to be," five thousand including the three thousand in ii. 41.

Vs 5. The rulers, chief priests, heads of twenty-four courses of priets. Elders, heads of families. Scribes, recognized teachers and interpreters of the law. These composed the Sanhedrin.

Vs. 6 Annas, who had been deposed from office by the Romans, but was still regarded as the high priest by the Jews and the most influential person among them. Caiaphas, the son-in-law of Annas made high priest by the Romans John and Alexander, not otherwise known, but men of influence. Gathered together from homes or residences in city or country places.

Vs. 7. Them, the two apostles and the lame man, in the midst of the Sanhedrin whose members sat in a semicircle with the president in the centre They asked, the tense means "they asked repeatedly." By what name or power, is the use of the same preposition as in vs. 2, meaning in union with or vitally related to what authority and force.

Vs. 8. Filled with the Holy Ghost, according to Christ's promise, Matt. x. 19-20, and as on the day of Pentecost with courage and yet with courtesy Peter addressed the council.

Vs 9. The good deed, claimed that they were arrested for doing good, and challenged the attention of the council to the fact.

Vs. 10. By the name. In vital relation to the authority and alone by the appointment and with the approval of Jesus Christ. The Messiah of Nazareth whom ye crucified, arraigning them to convince of the sin and bring to repentance. Whom God raised from the dead that the sinners might be saved by Him. This resurrection was also the convincing proof of the claims of Jesus Christ.

Vs. 11. The stone set at nought, refers to Psalm cxviii. 22, which Christ applied to Himself as in Matt. xxi. 42.

Vs. 12. Salvation. God, "the salvation," which the Jewish nation was looking for and all men need. This verse should be long studied and much prayed over.

Vs. 13. The boldness, apparent in fearless and faithful preaching, and confident challenge of the council. Unlearned, not trained in the schools. Ignorant, not one of the learned class, "the common man" as Luther said. That they had been with Jesus, not merely as taught by Him, having been His companions, but as participants in the death and resurrection of Jesus and possessed by His Spirit.

Vs. 14. Beholding the man, the personal embodiment of the fact of the miracle. Men healed, changed lives, transformed men and nations are the "infallible proofs" of the religion of Jesus Christ.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

1. "Neither is there salvation in any other.

2. They took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus." They had been crucified with Christ and had risen with Him. "Reckon ye yourselves to be indeed dead unto Christ—Vide: The Life of Privilege p. 100, published by F. H. Revell Co., N. Y.

3. Peter was "filled with the Holy Ghost." Every one sent of Christ, so filled, will be used as mightily as Peter.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Jan. 31st, 1897.

BY REV. B. E. WALLACE.

Topic:

ENDEAVORERS LOYAL TO CHRIST; What will they do? Jno. 13:31-38; 8:31.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR DAY.

Text for the week:

But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings. 1 Peter 4:13

Daily Readings:

LOYALTY.

Monday, Shown in Love. Jno 21:15-24.
Tuesday, Shown in Obedience. Matt. 7:21-29.
Wednesday, Shown in Truth. Mal. 2:1-7
Thursday, Shown in Earnestness. Isa. 62:1-7.
Friday, Shown in Toil. Ex. 18:13-24.
Saturday, Shown in Praise. Psa. 147:1-11.
Sunday, Topic. Jno. 13:31-38.

Hints for Leaders:

1. Observe C. E. Day. If convenient have joint meeting of the societies near you.

Let the Leader give a bird's eye view of the C. E. work during last year.

3. Impress upon every Endeavorer the importance of Loyalty to Christ, members of the O. and O. Society.

4. Let all reconsecrate themselves and pledge greater loyalty to Christ.

Notes:

The "Golden Rule" interprets Loyalty by the following acrostic

Love,
Obedience,
Yielding,
Ardor,
Labor,
Truth,
Yoke.

What a power would the Church have to-day if all the Christians were thus Loyal! Would it be long before the world would be conquered for Christ and the Church?

Loyalty is not spasmodic enthusiasm, but continuing service day in and day out till the end is come. The reward promised to the one who is faithful and endures to the end.

As a pastor, my experience is that the great difficulty in Church work is to get "STICKERS." Plenty of enthusiastic workers for a few weeks and perhaps months, but before the year is out the ranks are thinned out to the few regulars, members of the "Old Guard."

Loyalty to Christ is open confession of him. A Christian's light cannot be hid. Nothing done in secret, but what shall be revealed. Dear Endeavorers, Let us from now on lay hold upon the handles of the plow in open day and look not back sticking faithful to the end of the row.

OPEN DOOR NOTES.

Eight prisoners in the Louisville, Ky., jail were baptized on a recent Sunday. The men, one of them a murderer, had been led to Christ through the services held by a Christian Endeavor society of the city.

A convict in the Indiana State prison has written these words that are worth pondering by every Christian: "Had the same care and interest been manifested in my behalf in by-gone years, that Brother Curry and our prison Christian Endeavor society now afford me, I would never have been a convict."

A union of the five Westminster Leagues of Lynchburg, Va., has been organized. It will meet every second Sunday with the different churches in rotation. The officers are Mr J. P. Ford President; Mr. J. Wm. Kinnier, Vice-President; Mr. Blackstock, Recording Secretary, and Mr. W.M. Holladay, Corresponding Secretary, and Mr. H.M. Bowden, Treasurer.

The nineteenth annual convention of the Young Men's Christian Association of Georgia will meet in Macon on March 11th, and continue in session until the 14th.

BURLINGTON: — The Westminster League of this church was organized six months ago. The active member ship now numbers thirty six. The regular devotional meetings are held every Sabbath just before the evening service. In addition to Bible study and prayer-meeting work, the members of the League engage in practical Christian work under the pastor's direction. Last summer they placed a handsome cooler in the vestibule of the church, and placed in every home of the church a copy of the Year Book of our Southern Church. They also clothe one of the little girls at the Orphans' Home. The League has been a wonderful assistance to the pastor, a blessing to themselves and to the Church.

KIRKLAND. Mrs Elizabeth Jane Kirkland in Orange county, N.C., October 18th, 1896, in the 63d year of her age. She was an earnest, consistent member of New Hope church and bore her long suffering with true Christian patience. But there is no suffering there. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

TAIT. On Tuesday Dec. 29th, 1896, at Brunswick, Ga., Mary Burton, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Tait, aged fifteen months. Not long did this little one linger to cheer the home into which God had sent her, but it was long enough for her to become entwined around the hearts of the household and make the parting most bitter. But suffice for us that God called and we give back to His keeping this little one lent for awhile to gladden the home, knowing that in a land free from sin and pain and sorrow this tender flower has been transplanted into the garden of God. Would you ask the meaning of this Providence?

"I have no answer for myself or thee,
Save that I learned beside my mother's knee:
"All is of God, that is, or is to be.
And God is good." Let this suffice us still,
Resting in childlike trust upon His will,
Who moves to His great ends, unthwarted by the ill."

KRIDER. In Salisbury, N. C., Jan. 2d, 1897, Mrs. Margaret McKinnon Krider, widow of the late Sheriff Charles C. Krider, in the 62d year of her age.

Mrs. Krider was a native of St. Pauls, Robeson county, N. C., the daughter of the late John C. and Catherine G. McKinnon, born Jan. 5th, 1835. She finished her education in Edgeworth Seminary, Greensboro, with the late Prof. Richard Sterling, and early in life became a member of St. Pauls church. She was married to Mr. C. C. Krider, June 27th, 1859, and removed to his home in Rowan county, where she resided twenty-two years. Mr. Krider being a prominent citizen, an elder of Third Creek church, his house was a popular resort for many visitors, she dispensed a cheerful hospitality, was a kind and obliging neighbor and a willing church worker.

When Mr. Krider became sheriff in 1881 the family moved to Salisbury and became members of the First Presbyterian church. In their new home she exercised a large hospitality towards her country friends, and won the esteem and friendship of her new neighbors as well. She was an unassuming Christian woman who loved her Saviour, her church, her pastor, and her Christian friends, and her friendly greeting and womanly cordiality will be missed by her many friends.

She had been slightly indisposed for sometime, but no serious apprehension was felt for her, until about twenty-four hours before her death, when she was seized with convulsions and lapsed into an unconsciousness from which she never recovered. She could leave no last messages, but her consistent Christian life assures us that it is well with her now.

Her home was cheered by six children, four of whom survive to mourn over her removal from earth.
PASTOR.

The water hyacinth has become such a pest in Louisana that a special report has been made to the chief of engineers in Congress and steps will be taken for its removal in the navigable streams in Florida and other States where it prevails.

Scrofula is a word you don't quite understand, but if you talk with your doctor, he will tell you that it is generally believed to be due to the same cause which gives rise to Consumption. It appears mostly in those who are fat-starved and thin, usually in early life. A course of treatment of Scott's Emulsion with the Hypophosites wherever Scrofula manifests itself, will prevent the development of the disease. Let us send you a book. Free.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT.

The Mt. Holly people showed their appreciation of their pastor, Rev. E. P. Bradley, in a very substantial way by presenting him with a handsome over coat, a pair of nice gloves, and a beautiful gold watch chain as a Christmas present. This little church is few in numbers but it is brave of heart.

EDUCATION FOR THE MINISTRY.

The receipts for this cause since November are, so far, from a very few of our churches. If any funds are in the hands of church treasurers for this object please let them be forwarded at once to me, and if any have failed to present the cause or to give an opportunity to the people to give—let us redeem our fault. The following are the churches that have sent contributions to the treasurers since November, to wit: Littleton, $1; Rocky Mount, $3.02; Cann Memorial, $6.35; Goldsboro, $4 20; New Berne, $25; Washington, $32 50; Wilson $8 and Strickland, $1.

FOR THE FAMILY.

WHY HE TOOK THEM.

The flock stood waiting by the rapid river
And would not cross,
Although the Shepherd kindly called them thither,
And banks of moss

And fields of green and verdant hills surrounded
The further shore;
The danger still their narrow vision bounded
Of crossing o'er.

He stretched his kindly arms and gently called them,
They would not heed,
The deep, broad river's rapid stream appalled them,
Though He did lead.

The Shepherd took a lamb and safely bore it,
Within His arms,
To where the pastures brightly gleamed before it,
And all alarms

Were hushed. The mother heard its voice of pleading,
And crossing o'er,
The flock behind her followed in her leading,
Unto the shore.

Christ takes our lambs into His keeping
That eyes all dim
And dark with sorrows clouds and sad with weeping,
May look to Him,

And see beyond the darkly rolling river
Those gone before,
And to the fields with verdure green forever,
Cross safely o'er.

ST. GOTHARD TUNNEL.

Many people have heard of the St. Gothard Tunnel, that great engineering triumph of the nineteenth century. But few perhaps have grasped the full idea of its vastness. Beginning at the town of Goschemen in Switzerland, it extends through the entire range of St. Gothard mountains and ends nine and one-fourth miles to the south of its beginning, in the little town of Airolo, in Italy. The work consumed ten years time, the labor of over three thousand men daily, and over eleven millions of dollars. And yet it seemed a labor of love, as both Italy and Switzerland toiled unremittingly to overcome this mighty barrier which the Alps had interposed between them, eager to clasp hands in a closer union, even though it were in the depths of the St. Gothard range, 6,000 feet below the top. But the toil is over now and the journey can be easily made in six minutes by rail.

There is a pretty story of love and devotion connected with the history of the tunnel. Two orphan children lived near it, Jean and Louise Dufour. Jean, a stalwart lad, could remember when they began boring it, but they had been working longer ago than Louise could remember. She was a poor little invalid, but the doctor had said when the tunnel was finished and cars running Jean should take her to Italy and she would recover. So the children had been very impatiently waiting The boring was done at last, but the day it was completed little Louise had fainted from exhaustion. Too frightened to reason, Jean dared not wait, he thought, for the cars to get to running, so taking the money they had saved for the journey, he lifted his little, frail and still unconscious sister in his arms, and carried her the entire distance. Oh! what a black horrible night-mare it all seemed like. For fear and excitement made him speed along like the wind. Years afterward, when Louise was fully recovered, and they were both rosy and happy, Jean said "that they passed through the awful shadows of death that night in the tunnel." "And was not this sunny town of Nervi heaven?" "It had vines and sloping hills, covered with the dusky olives, and beautiful gardens full of roses, and magnolias and oranges and lemons and palms. Surely if not, it must be very much like heaven."—Jennie A. Fogelsang, in Mich. Christian Advocate.

Love has a long way to go to reach the heart of the modern up-to-date young man. When he looks for a wife, he expects a good deal. Probably he expects more than he deserves. He wants good looks, good sense, good nature, good health. They usually go together.

An observing man learns that a woman who is physically weak and nervous and incapable, is likely to be ill-natured too. The sweetest temper is ruined by continual sickness.

A woman whose nerves are constantly racked and dragged by debilitating drains and inflammation, cannot be a genial companion or happy wife; and she is totally unfitted to be a mother.

These troubles prevail almost universally among women largely because of carelessness and neglect. There is no real need of them. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive specific for the weaknesses and diseases of the feminine organism.

It cures them radically and completely. It heals, strengthens and purifies. It is the only scientific remedy devised for this special purpose by an educated, skilled physician. It is the only medicine that makes motherhood easy and absolutely safe.

Miss Lauretta McNess, of Reno (P. O. Box 723), Washoe Co., Nev., writes: "I have discontinued taking the 'Prescription' and will not take any more (at present). Last month I had no pain at all and worked every day without any inconvenience whatever. It was the first time I never had pain during that period. I cannot say too much for your medicines, especially the 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Pleasant Pellets.' I know of a lady who took one bottle of your 'Favorite Prescription' and she says she was not sick like she was with her first baby. This was her second baby. She thinks it a grand medicine. So do I."

Dr. Pierce has had a life-time of experience in this particular field. His 1000-page illustrated book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" contains several chapters devoted to woman's special physiology. A paper-bound copy will be sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y. THE DREAM TOWN SHOW.

There is an island in Slumber Sea
Where the drollest things are done,
And we will sail there, if the winds are fair,
Just after the set of the sun.
'Tis the loveliest place in the whole wide world
Or anyway, so it seems;
And the folks there play at the end of each day
In a curious show called "Dreams."

We sail right into the evening skies,
And the very first thing we know
We are there at the port and ready for sport,
Where the dream folks give their show.
And what do you think they did last night
When I crossed their harbor bars?
They hoisted a plank on a great cloud bank
And teetered among the stars.

And they sat on the moon and swung their feet
Like pendulums to and fro;
Down Slumber Sea is the sail for me,
And I wish you were ready to go,
For the dream folks there on this curious isle
Begin their performance at eight;
There are no encores, and they close their doors
On every one who is late.

The sun is sinking behind the hills,
The seven o'clock bells chime;
I know by the chart that we ought to start
If we would be there in time.
O, fair is the trip down Slumber Sea;
Set sail and away we go;
The anchor is drawn, we are off and gone
To the wonderful Dream-Town show.

THE GRANGERS—A HAPPY FAMILY.

BY RACHEL RICHARDSON.

CHAPTER I.

"The Grangers are a very happy family, "said Aunt Susie," and I would like to tell you why, children."

It was a rainy afternoon and the Holmes children could not go out, so they had gathered in Aunt Susie's room, and were begging for tales.

Aunt Susie was Mr. Holmes' unmarried sister and spent most of her time with them, but she had just returned from a visit to Sunny Side the beautiful country home of the Grangers, who were old time friends of hers.

In reply to two or three requests for "a tale." all spoken at the same time, Aunt Susie had smiled and made the remark with which our story opens, a remark that did not seem to be a very good beginning for a tale.

"Oh! Auntie, tell a sure enough tale" said Ruth, rather impatiently. "Yes! yes! and a great long one too, said Teddy—"long as the afternoon!" This was a much funnier speech spoken than it is written, for Teddy talked very slowly and dragged out those two words, "g-r-e-a-t l-o n-g," stretching his arms at the same time until they seemed themselves as long as the afternoon!

"Well, dears, you know the same kind of story would never suit you all. Ruthie wants a short fairy story, I know. Teddy wants "a great long" one about robbers and bandits, and Maude wants a quiet little story with nothing scary in it, while Allyn is anxious for a sort of historical romance, with Indians and wild animals too, so as I cannot please you all at once, I will tell you something of my visit to the Grangers and why they seemed to me the happiest family I ever knew.

I began to watch them very closely, a few days after I arrived to see if I could find the reason of it and I believe that I did.

"To begin with, there are seven children in the family, and you might naturally expect there would be a great deal of noise there, and a good deal of disputing, especially as there are four boys in the crowd.

"Well, they do make a good deal of noise out doors, and even in doors when they come home from school, but as soon as they enter the sitting room door, a little nickel-plated bell that hangs just there goes: "tinkle! tinkle!" and in a moment everybody remembers.

"The boys go to the back hall to hang up hats and school bags and the girls go to the nursery to have faces and hair ready for dinner. The boys go to their own room for the same purpose and then, the very moment the dinner bell sounds every one of them moves to the dining-room. There is no running and scuffling to get in first, or for seats, or for anything, no, not even for potatoes!"

Here a smile passed round the audience, but Aunt Susie did not say anything about it, or even wonder why!

"I must tell you the childrens' names just as they come. Rob's the eldest, then Gerald called "Jerry" for short, then Lucy, then Ethel, then Rosebud, then the twins, Marcolme and Barnett, known as Mar and Bar. The twins are just beginning to come to the table and of course, they sit, one on either side of mamma.

"Rob takes care of Rosebud, the youngest girl, and Jerry sits between Lucy and Ethel, so that he may help them if necessary.

"They do not all try to talk at once, and do not seem to find it hard for some one else to speak first, and if any one wishes to speak or to be helped while some of the grown people are talking, he raises his hand and at once Mrs. Granger says:

"Well, dear?"

But one of the most interesting things about them to me, is their beautiful table manners, and I must tell you about that."

"Oh! Aunt Susie, what's the use of table manners any how," said Allyn, people go to the table to eat, and what is the use of fussing about how they do it? All this bother about never eating with your knife, and not helping yourself first, seems like wasting time to me, 'specially when a boy is in a hurry all the time either going to school, or something else."

"What's the use of table manners!" exclaimed Aunt Susie, "What's the use of any kind of manners, any where?" I can hardly begin to tell you how useful they are, but I want to say this. There are a great many things so universally done by people that respect themselves and want to be respected by others that we can hardly argue about them. We just say this is a custom among refined and educated people, and if we wish to take our places among them we follow their customs. But it is true that there is a great deal of common sense at the bottom of most customs. "Public opinion is so strong against this habit of eating with a knife rather than a fork, that if a person should sit down at a hotel table among strangers and use his knife when custom says use the fork, nine out of ten people, who saw him would say that he was neither educated or refined.

"Now let me tell you how pleasantly and funnily they keep in mind these same table manners, that you think of no use. Just inside the dining room door is a little box hanging against the wall. It has a slit in the top, and on the front is writtten in gold letters:

"MRS. MANNERS' BOX."

If anybody forgets and talks too loud at table, or uses his knife except for cutting, or drops syrup on mamma's clean cloth; whoever sees him or her taps on the table, and he looks up and remembers! Then he drops a penny in Mrs. Manners' Box and it is put away for Christmas gifts for the poor children in the neighborhood. If anybody is late for breakfast, he drops a penny, and if anybody is studying, or reading, or playing and does not come promptly to table, he drops two pennies! "'Twould'nt do for us to have a Mrs. Manners' Box Aunt Susie," said Teddy slowly, "I'd be dead broke." Everybody laughed at this of course. "But where do they get the pennies," asked Ruth eagerly.

"Why that is one of the good family arrangements at Sunny Side. Every month their papa gives each one of them a small allowance of money, which they can spend if they do have to put it in the Box!

"One more pleasant custom of others I want to tell you of, and then I must write a letter that must go by to morrow's mail.

"When they go into the sitting room they do not take possession of it. They go there as members of the family circle, they laugh and talk and play games together, or with some of the grown people, and if it is Friday evening this goes on until nine o'clock when that wonderful little bell goes tinkle! tinkle!" and either Rob or Jerry gets the Bible for Mr. Granger, everybody stops talking, and he has prayers.

The last Friday evening in every month is particularly interesting because then the Manners' Box is opened, the money counted, and mamma's report is read and a prize given to the best behaved boy or girl.

Some other time I will tell you how Jerry lost the prize if you care to hear about it."

"Yes! yes!" came the chorus, and Allyn added: "Yes, I'd like to hear now of some of them doing something wrong—like the rest of us."

"Ah, you may be sure my dear, they do wrong, for they are human, but very noble boys and girls for all that. Now good bye."

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Presbyterian:—Most all of the girls have written to you. Now it is my time. I like to write very much. I stay at the Annie Louise Cottage We have had a very nice time Christmas. I have two dolls. I love them very much. I play with them every chance I get. I have a little brother here. He stays at the Synod's Cottage.

Your little friend,
ELLA HOOVER.
Barium Springs, N. C.

To Ethel Chester:—Some time ago I saw a letter in the PRESBYTERIAN from you and as I wanted to write a letter for the Children's Column, mama said to answer yours for she had known and loved your mama and grandmother too. When I was a wee girl I went to church at Ramah, two of my sisters and myself were baptized at that church I was baptized by Rev. A. M. Watson, deceased, and my two sisters were baptized by Rev. G. D. Parks, he too is dead. My baby sister was baptized by Rev. J. M. Grier at the academy near there. Rev. J. W. Siler is our pastor and we are going to school to Mrs. Siler. I have five studies, grammar, arithmetic, geography, spelling and history. My papa is dead and is buried at Poplar Tent church. Mama cries when she thinks of papa's grave being so far away. I will close for fear of the waste basket.

Your little friend,
BEULAH B. BRADFORD.
Davenport, N. C.

Dear Presbyterian: This is the last holiday we will have. Our school will open Monday. We had two weeks holiday. Santa Claus brought me a roach comb, a pencil and tablet and three handkerchiefs and two ribbons. I am twelve years old. We had a nice Christmas dinner. Our good friends have sent us so many nice apples and candy, nuts, potatoes, flour, walnuts, peanuts, sausage and many other nice things. Mr. Watts, one of our good friends, sent us eight new books for our library. We have a good log we ride on it, and I want to go and ride on it.

From your friend,
ONA ALEXANDER.

FOR THE FAMILY.

WHY HE TOOK THEM.

The flock stood waiting by the rapid river
And would not cross,
Although the Shepherd kindly called them thither,
And banks of moss

And fields of green and verdant hills surrounded
The further shore;
The danger still their narrow vision bounded
Of crossing o'er.

He stretched his kindly arms and gently called them,
They would not heed,
The deep, broad river's rapid stream appalled them,
Though He did lead.

The Shepherd took a lamb and safely bore it,
Within His arms,
To where the pastures brightly gleamed before it,
And all alarms

Were hushed. The mother heard its voice of pleading,
And crossing o'er,
The flock behind her followed in her leading,
Unto the shore.

Christ takes our lambs into His keeping
That eyes all dim
And dark with sorrows clouds and sad with weeping,
May look to Him,

And see beyond the darkly rolling river
Those gone before,
And to the fields with verdure green forever,
Cross safely o'er.

ST. GOTHARD TUNNEL.

Many people have heard of the St. Gothard Tunnel, that great engineering triumph of the nineteenth century. But few perhaps have grasped the full idea of its vastness. Beginning at the town of Goschemen in Switzerland, it extends through the entire range of St. Gothard mountains and ends nine and one-fourth miles to the south of its beginning, in the little town of Airolo, in Italy. The work consumed ten years time, the labor of over three thousand men daily, and over eleven millions of dollars. And yet it seemed a labor of love, as both Italy and Switzerland toiled unremittingly to overcome this mighty barrier which the Alps had interposed between them, eager to clasp hands in a closer union, even though it were in the depths of the St. Gothard range, 6,000 feet below the top. But the toil is over now and the journey can be easily made in six minutes by rail.

There is a pretty story of love and devotion connected with the history of the tunnel. Two orphan children lived near it, Jean and Louise Dufour. Jean, a stalwart lad, could remember when they began boring it, but they had been working longer ago than Louise could remember. She was a poor little invalid, but the doctor had said when the tunnel was finished and cars running Jean should take her to Italy and she would recover. So the children had been very impatiently waiting The boring was done at last, but the day it was completed little Louise had fainted from exhaustion. Too frightened to reason, Jean dared not wait, he thought, for the cars to get to running, so taking the money they had saved for the journey, he lifted his little, frail and still unconscious sister in his arms, and carried her the entire distance. Oh! what a black horrible night-mare it all seemed like. For fear and excitement made him speed along like the wind. Years afterward, when Louise was fully recovered, and they were both rosy and happy, Jean said "that they passed through the awful shadows of death that night in the tunnel." "And was not this sunny town of Nervi heaven?" "It had vines and sloping hills, covered with the dusky olives, and beautiful gardens full of roses, and magnolias and oranges and lemons and palms. Surely if not, it must be very much like heaven."—Jennie A. Foglesang, in Mich. Christian Advocate.

Love has a long way to go to reach the heart of the modern up-to-date young man. When he looks for a wife, he expects a good deal. Probably he expects more than he deserves. He wants good looks, good sense, good nature, good health. They usually go together.

An observing man learns that a woman who is physically weak and nervous and incapable, is likely to be ill-natured too. The sweetest temper is ruined by continual sickness.

A woman whose nerves are constantly racked and dragged by debilitating drains and inflammation, cannot be a genial companion or happy wife; and she is totally unfitted to be a mother.

These troubles prevail almost universally among women largely because of carelessness and neglect. There is no real need of them. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive specific for the weaknesses and diseases of the feminine organism.

It cures them radically and completely. It heals, strengthens and purifies. It is the only scientific remedy devised for this special purpose by an educated, skilled physician. It is the only medicine that makes motherhood easy and absolutely safe.

Miss Lauretta McNess, of Reno (P. O. Box 723), Washoe Co., Nev., writes: "I have discontinued taking the 'Prescription' and will not take any more (at present). Last month I had no pain at all and worked every day without any inconvenience whatever. It was the first time I never had pain during that period. I cannot say too much for your medicines, especially the 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Pleasant Pellets.' I know of a lady who took one bottle of your 'Favorite Prescription' and she says she was not sick like she was with her first baby. This was her second baby. She thinks it a grand medicine. So do I."

Dr. Pierce has had a life-time of experience in this particular field. His 1000-page illustrated book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser" contains several chapters devoted to woman's special physiology. A paper-bound copy will be sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y. For a cloth-bound copy send 31 stamps.

SELECT CATALOGUE OF CHOICE BOOKS SABBATH - SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS

ATTENTION.

We wish to place in every Sabbath-School in our Church a copy of the above catalogue.

No book has been placed upon this list that has not been carefully read by some thoroughly competent person: most of them by Rev. W. A. Campbell, D. D

None have been placed upon the list that failed to meet these requirements, viz:

The Best Moral and Spiritual Teaching
Sound Scriptural Theology.
A High Literary Merit.
Freedom from Political or Sectional Allusions

Any selection may be made from this list with confidence that nothing will be found to which anyone can object

A brief description is given of most of the books as an aid in making selections.

On all orders for libraries, whether selected from this catalogue, or from the lists of any publishers of Sabbath-School literature, we will give 30 per cent. discount.

If desired, we will ourselves make, careful selection, or will send to any order one-fourth more books than may be needed for a library, with the privilege of returning any that are not wanted.

We ask that every pastor will send the name of the Superintendent of the Sabbath-School that we may supply him with the above catalogue.

THE DREAM TOWN SHOW.

There is an island in Slumber Sea
Where the drollest things are done,
And we will sail there, if the winds are fair,
Just after the set of the sun.
'Tis the loveliest place in the whole wide world
Or anyway, so it seems;
And the folks there play at the end of each day
In a curious show called "Dreams."

We sail right into the evening skies,
And the very first thing we know
We are there at the port and ready for sport,
Where the dream folks give their show.
And what do you think they did last night
When I crossed their harbor bars?
They hoisted a plank on a great cloud bank
And teetered among the stars.

And they sat on the moon and swung their feet
Like pendulums to and fro;
Down Slumber Sea is the sail for me,
And I wish you were ready to go,
For the dream folks there on this curious isle
Begin their performance at eight;
There are no encores, and they close their doors
On every one who is late.

The sun is sinking behind the hills,
The seven o'clock bells chime;
I know by the chart that we ought to start
If we would be there in time.
O, fair is the trip down Slumber Sea;
Set sail and away we go;
The anchor is drawn, we are off and gone
To the wonderful Dream-Town show.

THE GRANGERS—A HAPPY FAMILY.

BY RACHEL RICHARDSON.

CHAPTER I.

"The Grangers are a very happy family, "said Aunt Susie," and I would like to tell you why, children."

It was a rainy afternoon and the Holmes children could not go out, so they had gathered in Aunt Susie's room, and were begging for tales.

Aunt Susie was Mr. Holmes' unmarried sister and spent most of her time with them, but she had just returned from a visit to Sunny Side the beautiful country home of the Grangers, who were old time friends of hers.

In reply to two or three requests for "a tale." all spoken at the same time, Aunt Susie had smiled and made the remark with which our story opens, a remark that did not seem to be a very good beginning for a tale.

"Oh! Auntie, tell a sure enough tale" said Ruth, rather impatiently. "Yes! yes! and a great long one too, said Teddy—"long as the afternoon!" This was a much funnier speech spoken than it is written, for Teddy talked very slowly and dragged out those two words, "g-r-e-a-t l-o n-g," stretching his arms at the same time until they seemed themselves as long as the afternoon!

"Well, dears, you know the same kind of story would never suit you all. Ruthie wants a short fairy story, I know. Teddy wants "a great long" one about robbers and bandits, and Maude wants a quiet little story with nothing scary in it, while Allyn is anxious for a sort of historical romance, with Indians and wild animals too, so as I cannot please you all at once, I will tell you something of my visit to the Grangers and why they seemed to me the happiest family I ever knew.

I began to watch them very closely, a few days after I arrived to see if I could find the reason of it and I believe that I did.

"To begin with, there are seven children in the family, and you might naturally expect there would be a great deal of noise there, and a good deal of disputing, especially as there are four boys in the crowd.

"Well, they do make a good deal of noise out doors, and even in doors when they come home from school, but as soon as they enter the sitting room door, a little nickel-plated bell that hangs just there goes: "tinkle! tinkle!" and in a moment everybody remembers.

"The boys go to the back hall to hang up hats and school bags and the girls go to the nursery to have faces and hair ready for dinner. The boys go to their own room for the same purpose and then, the very moment the dinner bell sounds every one of them moves to the dining-room. There is no running and scuffling to get in first, or for seats, or for anything, no, not even for potatoes!"

Here a smile passed round the audience, but Aunt Susie did not say anything about it, or even wonder why!

"I must tell you the childrens' names just as they come. Rob's the eldest, then Gerald called "Jerry" for short, then Lucy, then Ethel, then Rosebud, then the twins, Marcolme and Barnett, known as Mar and Bar. The twins are just beginning to come to the table and of course, they sit, one on either side of mamma.

"Rob takes care of Rosebud, the youngest girl, and Jerry sits between Lucy and Ethel, so that he may help them if necessary.

"They do not all try to talk at once, and do not seem to find it hard for some one else to speak first, and if any one wishes to speak or to be helped while some of the grown people are talking, he raises his hand and at once Mrs. Granger says:

"Well, dear?"

But one of the most interesting things about them to me, is their beautiful table manners, and I must tell you about that."

"Oh! Aunt Susie, what's the use of table manners any how," said Allyn, people go to the table to eat, and what is the use of fussing about how they do it? All this bother about never eating with your knife, and not helping yourself first, seems like wasting time to me, 'specially when a boy is in a hurry all the time either going to school, or something else."

"What's the use of table manners!" exclaimed Aunt Susie, "What's the use of any kind of manners, any where?" I can hardly begin to tell you how useful they are, but I want to say this. There are a great many things so universally done by people that respect themselves and want to be respected by others that we can hardly argue about them. We just say this is a custom among refined and educated people, and if we wish to take our places among them we follow their customs. But it is true that there is a great deal of common sense at the bottom of most customs. "Public opinion is so strong against this habit of eating with a knife rather than a fork, that if a person should sit down at a hotel table among strangers and use his knife when custom says use the fork, nine out of ten people, who saw him would say that he was neither educated or refined.

"Now let me tell you how pleasantly and funnily they keep in mind these same table manners, that you think of no use. Just inside the dining room door is a little box hanging against the wall. It has a slit in the top, and on the front is writtten in gold letters:

"MRS. MANNERS' BOX."

If anybody forgets and talks too loud at table, or uses his knife except for cutting, or drops syrup on mamma's clean cloth; whoever sees him or her taps on the table, and he looks up and remembers! Then he drops a penny in Mrs. Manners' Box and it is put away for Christmas gifts for the poor children in the neighborhood. If anybody is late for breakfast, he drops a penny, and if anybody is studying, or reading, or playing and does not come promptly to table, he drops two pennies! "Twould'nt do for us to have a Mrs. Manners' Box Aunt Susie," said Teddy slowly, "I'd be dead broke." Everybody laughed at this of course. "But where do they get the pennies," asked Ruth eagerly.

"Why that is one of the good family arrangements at Sunny Side. Every month their papa gives each one of them a small allowance of money, which they can spend if they do have to put it in the Box!

"One more pleasant custom of others I want to tell you of, and then I must write a letter that must go by to morrow's mail.

"When they go into the sitting room they do not take possession of it. They go there as members of the family circle, they laugh and talk and play games together, or with some of the grown people, and if it is Friday evening this goes on until nine o'clock when that wonderful little bell goes tinkle! tinkle!" and either Rob or Jerry gets the Bible for Mr. Granger, everybody stops talking, and he has prayers.

The last Friday evening in every month is particularly interesting because then the Manners' Box is opened, the money counted, and mamma's report is read and a prize given to the best behaved boy or girl.

Some other time I will tell you how Jerry lost the prize if you care to hear about it."

"Yes! yes!" came the chorus, and Allyn added: "Yes, I'd like to hear now of some of them doing something wrong—like the rest of us."

"Ah, you may be sure my dear, they do wrong, for they are human, but very noble boys and girls for all that. Now good bye."

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Presbyterian:—Most all of the girls have written to you. Now it is my time. I like to write very much. I stay at the Annie Louise Cottage We have had a very nice time Christmas. I have two dolls. I love them very much. I play with them every chance I get. I have a little brother here. He stays at the Synod's Cottage.

To Ethel Chester:—Some time ago I saw a letter in the PRESBYTERIAN from you and as I wanted to write a letter for the Children's Column, mama said to answer yours for she had known and loved your mama and grandmother too. When I was a wee girl I went to church at Ramah, two of my sisters and myself were baptized at that church I was baptized by Rev. A. M. Watson, deceased, and my two sisters were baptized by Rev. G. D. Parks, he too is dead. My baby sister was baptized by Rev. J. M. Grier at the academy near there. Rev. J. W. Siler is our pastor and we are going to school to Mrs. Siler. I have five studies, grammar, arithmetic, geography, spelling and history. My papa is dead and is buried at Poplar Tent church. Mama cries when she thinks of papa's grave being so far away. I will close for fear of the waste basket.

Your little friend,
BEULAH B. BRADFORD.
Davenport, N. C.

Dear Presbyterian: This is the last holiday we will have. Our school will open Monday. We had two weeks holiday. Santa Claus brought me a roach comb, a pencil and tablet and three handkerchiefs and two ribbons. I am twelve years old. We had a nice Christmas dinner. Our good friends have sent us so many nice apples and candy, nuts, potatoes, flour, walnuts, peanuts, sausage and many other nice things. Mr. Watts, one of our good friends, sent us eight new books for our library. We have a good log we ride on it, and I want to go and ride on it.

A suit is on docket against the Western Union Telegraph Co , at Maxton for delay in sending a message.

Every effort is being made to make the "Woman's Exposition of the Carolinas", a grand success. The same will be held in Charlotte on May next.

The High School of Wilmington on Monday last occupied the building of the Tileston Normal School which was presided over for many years by Miss Amy M. Bradley. On the 9th of January, thirty years ago, Miss Bradley began her work in Wilmington and thousands now love and honor her name, deeply appreciating her labors for their education.

DOMESTIC.

The growing wheat in the section of Woodstock, Va., is in better condition than it has been for many years.

A reduction of $127,000 per annum has been ordered in the expenses of the office of Collector of Customs, New York.

Edwin S. Cramp, of the Philadelphia shipbuilding firm of Cramp & Sons, has completed plans for the opening of a factory at Rockford, Ill., for the manufacture of ship padding and cattle feed from cornstalks, a patent for which was recently granted to him. Before the harvesting of the next crop it is expected that several other factories will be erected, and material which has practically worthless will become a source of revenue to farmers. The corn stalks can be secured at $2 a ton.

The negotiations among the manufacturers of white paper to pool issues have been abandoned. A meeting was held in Boston at which certain manufacturers having mills in process of construction insisted that should be given representation in the pool, upon the basis of future production, and that others contemplating such improvements should not be allowed such privileges. This was the debatable point which the manufacturers have since been considing with the result that negotiations were declared off.

The cypress lumbering business along the Ocklawaha river, Fla., is increasing. It is thought that it will take ten years to exhaust the vast cypress swamps of that region.

FOREIGN.

Hon. Albert S. Willis, U. S. minister to the Sandwich Islands died on the 5th inst., of pneumonia. Mr. Willis was a native of Louisville, Ky., and his remains will be taken there for intermeut. The body has been temporarily placed in a vault at Honolulu. The funeral is said to have been the most imposing since that of King Kalakaua.

THINGS USEFUL.

Don't throw away the yeast when it begins to sour; instead add two teaspoonfuls of sugar to each cup of the yeast, and let it stand awhile before using.

When a lead pencil is used in manuscript or addresses and it is best to set the writing so it will not rub, try holding the writing over the spout of a boiling tea kettle for a few moments; then let it become thoroughly dry before allowing it to be touched.

Banana Fritters.—Beat one egg, add one gill of milk, then stir in slowly one scant cupful of flour, quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of olive oil, one level teaspoonful of baking powdar. Cut the bananas in halves, then quarter, dip into the batter and fry. Melt two tablespoonfuls of sugar, and and pour it over the bananas half an hour before you wish to make the fritters.

Sponge Pudding.—Two cups of milk, one half cup of flour, three tablespoonfuls of butter, nearly a cup of sugar, three eggs. Mix the flour to a smooth paste with part of the milk; make remainder of milk hot in farina boiler; add the flour; cook four minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from the fire and stir in the butter, sugar and well-beaten yolks of the eggs; let the mixture slightly cool, and stir in the well-beaten whites. Pour into a well buttered pudding dish, set this in a pan of boiling water, bake one-half hour in a quick oven.

GOD AND MAN.

To Him, who from eternity, self stirred,
Himself hath made by His creative word!
To Him, Supreme, who causeth faith to be,
Trust, love, hope, power and endless energy!
To Him, who, seek to name Him as we will,
Unknown, within Himself abideth still!
Strain ear and eye, till sight and sense be dim;
Thou'lt find but faint similitudes of Him;
Yea, and thy spirit, in her flight of flame,
Still strives to gauge the symbol and the name;
Charmed and compelled thou climb'st from hight to hight,
And round thy path the world shines wondrous bright;
Time, space and size, and distance cease to be,
And every step is fresh infinity.

What were the God who sat outside to scan
The spheres that 'neath His finger circling ran?
God dwells within and moves the world and molds,
Himself and Nature in one form enfolds;
Thus all that lives in Him, and breathes, and is,
Shall ne'er His puissance, His spirit miss.

The soul of man, too, is a universe;
Whence follows it that race to race concurs
In naming all it knows of good and true,
God—yea, its own God; and, with homage due,
Surrenders to His sway both earth and Heaven;
Fears Him, and loves, where places for love is given.

—Goethe.

O, how many men would be Christians if God would make but one exception in their favor, give them one indulgence, forgive them the retention of one bosom sin.

M. B STIMSON, ELDER IN STATESVILLE CHURCH.

The subject of this sketch was born in Pittsylvania county, Va., Dec. 12th, 1820. His father Rev. Erasmus Stimson, a native of the same county and State, was a minister in the Methodist Church, belonged for a time to the North Carolina Conference, and died Dec. 31st, 1833.

His mother, Patience Forte, was a native of Wayne county, N. C. Mr. Stimson came to Statesville, where he still resides, in Sept. 1842. Under the faithful ministry of Rev. E. F. Rockwell, D. D., he made a profession of faith in Christ and united with what was then known as Fourth Creek, now Statesville Presbyterian church.

This departure from the faith of his parents was the result of his religious experience which confirmed in his mind the doctrines of the Bible as held by Presbyterians.

He is a "blue-stocking Presbyterian" of the genuine type, or as he aptly puts it, "dyed in the wool and warranted not to fade."

He was elected and ordained a deacon Oct. 10th, 1857, and made an elder April 23rd, 1858. By request of the session on account of the advanced age of the regular clerk, he acted as clerk pro tem from August 7th, 1870, to June 10th, 1876, at which time he was regularly appointed to that position in which he still serves. Being a careful business man and familiar with the requirements of the Book of Order, his records have seldom needed correction in the higher courts.

While his educational advantages were limited to the standard obtaining in the "Old-field Schools" of his time, by reading good and useful books and especially by his study of the Bible, he qualified himself not only for usefulness in the Church, but for important public trusts. For many years he was an acting magistrate, and for twenty years or more he has been clerk of the Board of Aldermen and treasurer of the town in which he lives.

Though near his 76th birthday, he still moves with the quick and light step of youth and has lost none of his usefulness as an elder in the Church, or as a citizen in the community. His seat is rarely vacant at the regular services in church. An earnest follower of his Master who "went about doing good," he is an efficient teacher in two Sabbath schools, one meeting in the morning the other in the afternoon, every Sabbath—a constant attendant at two different prayer-meetings during the week, and a co-laborer with the pastor in visiting the sick and afflicted, and in admonishing the wayward. If "to be useful" is "to be good," he may surely be called a good man.

In January 1843, Mr. Stimson married Elizabeth Craig Wilson, the mother of his children, who was called away from the duties of her responsible trust to her reward, Oct. 28th 1858.

Nov. 20th, 1865, he was happily married to Julia Augusta Vanoy nee LeQueux, sister of Rev. H. D. LeQueux.

His children, three sons and two daughters, forcibly illustrate that familiar verse in Proverbs, the truth of which has sometimes been doubted—"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

Of his three sons, one is a minister, Rev. R. D. Stimson, lately called from the Synod of Virginia to the pastorate of Hopewell church in Mecklenburg Presbytery, one is an elder, S. W. Stimson, one a deacon, Logan Stimson; the two last named being officers in the same church with their father.

Never fear to bring the sublimest motive to the smallest duty, and the most infinite comfort to the smallest trouble. Don't say things. What you are stands over you all the while, and thunders so loud that I cannot hear what you say to the contrary.—Emerson.

HOW GOD OFTEN ANSWERS PRAYER.

We are oftentimes blind and foolish in our asking, and our desires are often for things which would prove exceedingly hurtful to us. But if the prayer for these has been conceived in the right spirit, acknowleding ignorance in the asking, and remitting the decision not only to the supreme will but to the infinite wisdom of our Father in heaven, the prayer is answered in the very denial of the special petition. Thus we stumble upon one of those paradoxes of which the Gospel is so full; for in every instance when a true prayer from a Christian heart is denied, there is in that denial itself the answer which he really craved.

Oftentimes, too, God may deny what we desire, in order the more effectually to wean us from the weak and beggarly elements of the world and teach us to set our affections on things above, where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God. So again, our prayer is answered; not in the communication of that specific good for which we ask, but in the substitution for it, in God's higher wisdom, of a good that is immeasurably greater. God, in the plenitude of His wisdom and in the exuberance of His love, goes beyond the measure of our thought, and bestows upon us a blessing, the greatness of which we had not the power to imagine.

Or, it may be, we ask for things which are in themselves right and proper, which God intends ultimately to bestow; but He may see fit to exercise us in the graces of patience and faith, and makes us conspicuous witnesses of those passive virtues which, after all, are the highest adornment of the creature. For let it not be forgotten that beyond all the glory which attaches to man's activity, by reason of the fact that he is a creature, always depending upon a power and a life superior to his own, the passive virtues, such as fortitude, patience, humility, gentleness—those graces which secure the highest encomiums in God's blessed Word—are the graces which most conspicuously adorn the man.—Dr B. M. Palmer.

The wages of sin is death, no matter how promptly we pay our pew rent.—Ram's Horn.

"THE GOOD WAY."

Our readers know the text of Jeremiah vi. 16, and the exhortation there: "Ask for the old paths." We suppose that not all are careful students of the Word and some who are may not have noticed thought fully the words we have taken from the same verse as our subject. In any event these words of Scripture are very important.

The prophet Jeremiah lived in troublous times. The people had sinned grievously and deserved the chastening so near at hand. The prophet was sent to show the people their sins and to warn them of their danger that he might call them to repentance; and this verse is one part of that call. The people would not heed and repent.

This page of history of the olden time is given for our learning upon whom the ends of the world are come. Spiritually we are exposed to the chastening of God even as His people for our backslidings and wanderings. God is calling us to return to Him with repentance and faith. He is also calling sinners to come to Him.

To all, this Word comes. "Thus saith the Lord. Stand ye in the ways and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls." Each one comes to the parting of the ways. There the call is to stop and consider. There are several ways before. Some of these are old, some are new. But first of all a path is a way for travelers to take to reach some distant place. The first thing to consider is the place to which the travelers wishes to go. Then comes the selection of the surest and safest way to that place.

At the parting of the ways there are but two old ways though many new ways are tried or sought.

We all mean to go to Heaven. Of the two old paths, the good way is the one to Heaven. It is a strait and narrow way. The way to destruction is broad. Which shall we choose? We all intend to go to Heaven, but have we ever stopped to "ask for the old paths, where is the good way?"

If the good way is found and according to the conditions of the Lord of the way we enter that way, the Word comes to walk in it. Heaven is the end of the way, not at the beginning. We may not enter the gate and sit down, as though we had already attained, either were already perfect. We must press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. By-paths and new ways appear and seem to be nearer or pleasanter paths to the city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God. We must beware of these. Those who walk in them wander from the good way and sooner or later get into danger or death. All these new leadings of human reason unsanctified and not under the power of the Spirit of God, these theories of modern science contrary to the Word of God, these humanitarian pleadings and fallacies about the mercy of God without taking into account His holiness and justice, these schemes of salvation without atonement and the shedding of blood are new paths to destruction.

The good way is the way of God's goodness; His mercy and love in sending Jesus to satisfy divine Justice and reconcile us to God, His long-suffering and patience in restoring the wanderers. His gentleness that makes great. His tenderness or severe chastening that leads to repentance, or His love of the Spirit that renews and sanctifies the sinner. It is the way of human goodness, preserving and caring for the children, giving woman her right place as daughter, sister, wife and mother, caring for the sick and suffering, the diseased and dying; making refuges for the needy, the incurables, the mentally or morally deranged, going out to seek the lost, and to take the message of salvation, with healing for the whole man to the ends of the earth. It is the way of forgiveness, kindness, help and grace.

THE JUST WALK IN IT.

ON WEDNESDAY of this week, the 27th inst., we presume, (at this writing we can not know it,) Dr. Edwin A. Alderman was inducted into the office of President of the University, Governor Russell being chief of ceremonies, and many distinguished visitors among them Dr. W. R. Harper, of the University of Chicago, and Dr. J. L. M. Curry, President of the board of trustees of the Peabody fund being present. We acknowledge the courtesy of an invitation to the exercises.

ON MONDAY of last week the General Arbitration Treaty between this country and Great Britain was signed by Secretary Olney and Sir Julian Pauncefort. It is one of the victories of peace far more renowned than those of war, by which the English speaking world can be maintained in peace by measures and methods of arbitration. It seems strange that there should be any doubt of its ratification by the Senate of the United States; but it has been made a subject of contention and there is reason to fear its failure. We have no political bias in the matter, and do not know the full merits or demerits of the controversy, but with the light before us it does seem that rejection of the treaty would be a mistake fraught with many most serious ill consequences.

OUR READERS will find our Leipsiz letter from Mr. T. W. Lingle on Christmas in Germany most interesting reading.

WE SOMETIMES make mistakes by publishing church news gleaned from secular papers, and, even at the risk of being considered slow, we have prevented mistakes by delaying publication of supposed news until it could be verified. For these reasons we beg our readers, especially our ministers and ruling elders, to give us news from their churches directly and as promptly as practicable.

We really think our

is a most desirable article to have in any household where the PRESBYTERIAN is taken. It holds the successive issues together in most convenient form, costs no labor and requires no special pains in its adjustment. What a fine Synodical Album a year's gathering would thus constitute!

DAVIDSON NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. Graham were called to Charlotte last week by the serious illness of the latter's mother, Mrs. J. P. Irwin, and have not yet returned. Dr. Shearer, therefore, filled our pulpit yesterday morning, and in the evening the services were placed in charge of the College Y.M. C. A.

Base ball is beginning to attract those who are inclined towards out-of-door athletics. Our numerous tennis courts have helped fill up the interval between foot-ball and base ball.

A word of explanation as to the Honor Roll published last week may be advisable, It contained the names of all students who averaged 95 or over on a scale of 100. These are technically called "1st Honor" men. The three named as Sophomores and Freshmen were not regular members of those classes, but were placed with them because a majority of their studies belonged there. Of the regular members of these classes, the following have won first and second places during the past session.

Sophomore Class: H. Stokes, Munroe, Lenoir, N. C.; Wade H. Thompson, Anderson, S. C. Freshman Class: W. M. Walsh, Charlotte, N. C.; Wm. E. Hill, Wilmington, N. C.

To-night in the Association Hall Dr. Smith lectures on Stanley's memorable tour across Central Africa in search of Emin Pasha. The lecture will be illustrated by fifty colored stereopticon views from photographs taken during the expedition. The proceeds are to assist in the purchase of electrical apparatus.

INK SPOTS FROM VIRGIL.

Here is a passage I never read but I think of the Christian struggle and the reward:

Revocate animos, maestumque timorem mittite; forsan et haec olim meminisse invabit.
per varios casus, per tot discrimina rerum
tendimus in Latium, sedes ubi fata quietas ostendunt, durate, etvosmet rebus servate secundis.

"Come cheer your souls, your fears forget,
This suffering will yield us yet,
A pleasant tale to tell.
Through chance, through peril, lies our way,
To Latium, where the Fates display,
A man's son of abiding stay—
Bear up and live for happier days."

* * *

The brave but unfortunate warrior:

Disce, puer, virtutem ex me verumque laborem, fortunam ex aliis.

"Learn my son valor and labor from me, fortune from others."

* * *

The new woman was in Virgil's time also going even faster and faster and fiercer than on the bicycle:

Hos super advenit Volsca de gente Camilla agmen agens equitum et florentis aere catervas, bellatrix, non illa colo calathisve Minervae femineas adsueta manus, sed proelia virgo dura pati cursuque pedum praevertere ventos.
illa vel intactae segetis per summa volaret gramina nec teneras cursu laesisset aristas, vel mare per medium fluctu suspensa tumenti
ferret iter celeris nec tingueret æquore plantas.

Last marches forth—
Camilla fair the Volscian maid.

"A troop of horsemen in her wake,
In pomp of gleaming steel arrayed
Stern warrior queen. Those tender hands
Ne'er plied Minerva's ministries;
A virgin in the fight she stands,
Or winged winds in speed outvies.
Nay she could fly o'er fields of grain
Nor crush in flight the tapering wheat
Or skim the surface of the main
Nor let the billows touch her feet."

The dead youth:

Hic iuvenem agresti sublimem stramine ponunt, qualem virgineo demessum pollice florem
seu mollis violae seu languentis hyacinthi, cui neque fulgor adhuc nec dum sua forma recessit;
non iam mater alit tellus viresque ministrat.

"There high on rural couch displayed
The body of the youth is laid;
So cropped by maiden's finger lies
A hyacinth or violet;
Its graceful mould, its glowing dies,
Undimmed unwasted yet
Though parent-earth afford no more
The vital juice it drank before."

That is a striking passage in which Virgil personifies the Nile as a mighty woman opening her robe to hide Cleopatra's fleet after her defeat and flight.

Contra autem magno maerentem corpore Nilum pandentemque sinus et tota veste vocanten caeruleum in gremium latebrosaque flumina victos.

Exquisite is the passage where Iris is sent down from heaven to put an end to Dido's lingering death:

Ergo Iris croceis per caelum roscida pinnis, mille trahens varios adverso sole colores,
devolat, et supra caput astitit, 'hunc ego Diti
sacrum iussa fero, teque isto corpore solvo, sic ait et dextra crinem secat: omnis et una dilapsus calor, atque in ventos vita recessit.

"Dewey Iris drawing a thousand various colors from the opposite sun shoots downward through the sky on saffron wings &: * * * She said and cut the lock with her right hand and all at once the vital heat was dissipated and life vanished into air."

* * *

How vivid this picture of the warrior covered with blood and dust from the battle field, plunging into the deep stream. We hear it gurgling round him, see it laving, cleansing, and bearing him up, returning him refreshed to his friends—

Tum demum praeceps saltu sese omnibus armis in fluvinm dedit: ille suo cum gurgite flavo accepit venientem ac mollibus extulit undis et laetum sociis abluta caede remisit.

In spite of Carlyle the Aeneid seems to me the most beautiful poem almost, ever written and if we could get the music of its lines as the Romans did, we would realize that its music was as charming as its grace, beauty and pathos.

OUR BIBLE PREMIUM.

At length we find ourselves with pride and pleasure, able to offer a Bible premium to workers for the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN. The size and quality type of our Bible is represented by the cut here given:

David's thirst for God. PSALMS. He praiseth God for his grace.

10 Trust not in oppression, and become not vain in robbery: [1] if riches increase, set not your heart upon them.
11 God hath spoken [2] once; twice have I heard this; that [3] power belongeth unto God.
12 Also unto thee, O Lord, belongeth mercy: for [4] thou renderest to every man according to his work.

PSALM 63.

1 David's thirst for God. 4 His manner of blessing God.
A Psalm of David, [5] when he was in the wilderness of Judah.

O GOD, thou art my God; early will I seek thee: [6] my soul thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and [7] thirsty land, [8] where no water is;
2 To see [9] thy power and thy glory, so as I have seen thee in the sanctuary.
3 Because thy lovingkindness is better than life, my lips shall praise thee.
4 Thus will I bless thee while I live: I will lift up my hands in thy name.
5 My soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness; and my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips:
6 When I remember thee upon my bed, and meditate on thee in the [10] night watches.
7 Because thou hast been my help, therefore in the shadow of thy wings will I rejoice.
8 My soul followeth hard after thee: thy right hand upholdeth me.
9 But those that seek my soul, to destroy it, shall go into the lower parts of the earth.
10 They shall fall by the sword: they shall be a portion for foxes.
11 But the king shall rejoice in God; every one that sweareth by him shall glory: but the mouth of them that speak lies shall be stopped.

PSALM 65.

1 David praiseth God for his grace. 4 The blessedness of God's chosen by reason of benefits.
To the chief Musician, A Psalm and Song of David.

1 Praise waiteth for thee, O God, in Sion: and unto thee shall the vow be performed.
2 O thou that hearest prayer, unto thee shall all flesh come.
3 Iniquities prevail against me: as for our transgressions, thou shalt purge them away.
4 Blessed is the man whom thou choosest, and causest to approach unto thee, that he may dwell in thy courts: we shall be satisfied with the goodness of thy house, even of thy holy temple.
5 By terrible things in righteousness wilt thou answer us, O God of our salvation; who art the confidence of all the ends of the earth, and of them that are afar off upon the sea:
6 Which by his strength setteth fast the mountains; being girded with power:
7 Which stilleth the noise of the seas, the noise of their waves, and the tumult of the people.
8 They also that dwell in the uttermost parts are afraid at thy tokens: thou makest the outgoings of the morning and evening to rejoice.
9 Thou visitest the earth, and waterest it, thou greatly enrichest it with the river of God, which is full of water: thou preparest them corn, when thou hast so provided for it.
10 Thou waterest the ridges thereof abundantly: thou settlest the furrows thereof: thou makest it soft with showers: thou blessest the springing thereof.
11 Thou crownest the year with thy goodness; and thy paths drop fatness.
12 They drop upon the pastures of the wilderness: and the little hills rejoice on every side.
13 The pastures are clothed with flocks; the valleys also are covered over with corn; they shout for joy, they also sing.

[1] or, we are consumed by that which they have wrongfully wrested. [2] Job 33. 14. [3] Job 28. 28. Ps. 62. 7. [4] 1 Tim. 6. 17. [5] Heb. in a scarch. Asaf. [6] Job 33. 14. [7] or, strength. [8] Heb. their wound shall be. [9] Job 24. 11. Prov. 24. 12. Jer. 32. 19. Mat. 16. 27. Eph. 5. 6. Col. 3. 25. [10] Ps. 42. 11. [11] Jer. 50. 20. [12] 1 Sam. 22. 5. [13] Ps. 42. 2.

The binding is flexible, the edges are gilt and the references within are full. The Bible contains besides 1050 pages of Scriptural text, the HELPS to Scripture reading and study including Subject Index, Concordance, a most serviceable General Topical Index, a large number of pages treating of the Titles, Authorship. Distinctive Characters, Contents, &c., of the various books of the Bible, A Description of the Inhabitants, Physical Geography, Customs and Political Condition of the Holy Land at the beginning of the Christian era, the Botany of the Bible, Glossary of Antiquities, Customs, 12 maps, etc., being the Oxford Helps, ackowledged to be the very best, besides 124 full page illustrations of the Languages, Writing, &c., of the Old and New Testaments, of the bas reliefs and the like, discoveries in archæological researches, and now in the British museum—and very much else; making altogether the most desirable copy of the Scriptures for Bible students that has come to our knowledge. The book contains over 1,600 pages.

The Bible is an offer in connection with the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN—the only medium thro which one can become well acquainted with what is going on in the Synod of North Carolina—on the folowing terms:

We will give this Bible as payment for help rendered to any old subscriber who will send us the name of a BONA FIDE new subscriber along with $2 25.

The new subscriber gets the paper very cheap—we offer it to any new bona fide subscriber for $1.50—and the worker gets amply compensated in a magnificently cheap Bible for his or her good work.

A new subscriber to get the Bible can subscribe for himself at $1.50 and then send another new subscriber with $2.25.

The Premium offered is the Genuine Edition of the Oxford Teacher's Bible.

We trust our friends will go to work promptly on this plan.

GOOD MANNERS.

Archbishop Whately says that "good manners are a part of good morals." We all acknowledge the truth of the trite saying that true politeness comes from the heart, and that it is only the outward and visible sign of that inward grace which makes us give up in small things to the comfort of others. But "assume the virtue if you have it not," for the polite person must always be more popular and give more pleasure to others than the rough and boorish one. A little courtesy costs nothing but a little thought, and it makes the wheels of society move vastly more smoothly. We do not mean that the form of good manners should take the place of the reality, but unselfishness can be cultivated, and with its growth naturally comes politeness.—Housewife.

I find more profit in sermons on either good tempers or good works than in what are only called "Gospel sermons." The term has now become a mere cant word; I wish none of our society would use it. Let but a pert, self-sufficient animal, that hath neither sense nor grace, bawl out something about Christ and His blood, or justification by faith, and his hearers cry out, "What a fine Gospel sermon."—John Wesley in 1778.

"Yes, ransom'd sinner! wouldst thou know
How often to forgive,
How dearly to embrace thy foe,
Look where thou hop'st to live.
When thou hast told those isles of light,
And fancied all beyond,
Whatever owns, in depth or height,
Creation's wondrous bond;
Then in their solemn pageant learn
Sweet mercy's praise to see;
Their Lord resign'd them all, to earn
The bliss of pardoning thee."

CHRISTMAS IN LEIPZIG.

BY T. W. LINGLE.

Next to being at home with mother and sisters, I can think of no place where I believe Christmas would have been more enjoyable than here in the historic old university city of Leipzig. It was an enjoyable season, not merely because of the so-called social pleasures in which everybody seemed to have a share, but because of the many things that a foreigner could learn and the special pleasure it afforded to see how much gladness the recurrence of Christmas brings to the millions of Germany.

Our university lectures closed a few days before the real holidays began, and tho we students endeavored to continue our usual amount of private study as if there were no holidays, we found it interesting to look about the city an hour or two each day to see what was going on. Several weeks before we seemed to notice the faces of our professors becoming more pleasant, and at their last lecture we gave them a hearty applause as they expressed their satisfaction with the work of the term, extended to us their most cordial Christmas greetings and expressed the desire, that we might begin work with renewed earnestness at the opening of the new year. Most of the German students spent the holidays at home, but the scores of Russians, Austrians, Bulgarians, Swiss, British and Americans felt constrained to content ourselves with the thought of how nice it would be if we too could go.

For a month previous the merchants began decorating their store-windows, and here in a city of 420,000 people it was interesting to walk the streets just to look at the windows of business houses. One is impressed with how the Germans seem to surpass Americans as to taste in beautifying a store-window. They have the faculty of making even a meat-shop look very artistic, and as for shoe-store windows, they are something simply elegant. It was very noticeable how many toys of all kinds were to be seen and especially such articles as would make nice presents.

On public squares and vacant lots the municipal authorities permitted the poor people to put up temporary stands that they too might sell some thing to earn some money for Christmas. It is scarcely necessary to say that every available foot of space was occupied with these stands and one could buy from them anything ranging from Frankfurter sausage to baby carriages. The day before Christmas these stands were all promptly removed and the city given a neat appearance for Christmas day.

Christmas eve matettoes were given in all the churches, Protestant as well as Catholic. Christmas day, and the following day which is observed in the same manner, services were held several times, and in some respects the days were observed in a much more sacred way than the Sabbath usually is in Europe. On these two days as well as New Year's day all stores and places of business were closed, and even a postage stamp could not be purchased. For four Sabbaths previous services appropriate to the coming event were conducted in all the churches. Whether the ministry claims that the Scriptures warrant such services I do not know. It is interesting to note how many people go to church during the Christmas season who do not go at other times.

It is the universal custom to have a family Christmas tree, tho church trees seem to be unknown. Several vacant lots in the city were set apart the week before for tree dealers and they had there thousands of pine and cedar trees to sell; so many that the scene reminded the writer of the pine forests of eastern Carolina. The tree is placed in the dining room, handsomely adorned and beautifully illuminated. No presents are ever placed on it, but on a table for the purpose. The custom of making so many presents is really a burden to the poor people. By the time a person gets a present for each member of the family and for all his intimate acquaintances, as is the universal custom, he starts on the new year with a very flat purse. After seeing the extent to which the custom prevails here, the writer all the more heartily endorses the ideas of the PRESBYTERIAN of Dec. 24th on that subject. It was my privilege to attend three family trees and to see the interest with which each member of the family would eagerly open the different boxes and look at his presents one after the other, over and over again. For a family not to have a tree would seem a disgrace.

At the boarding house where I take dinner there are number of foreign students who desire to learn the language as well as possible and we made strict rules in October forbidding the use of anything but German at the table. It was decided to fine each one two and a half cents who used a word of any other language, and the writer was elected "Richter" (judge) to see that our rules were enforced. At the table were two Germans, four Poles, two Frenchmen, three Italians, one Swede, one Bulgarian, and three Americans, but when fines became too numerous German soon became the only language. A few days before Christmas we counted the money and found that we had fines collected to the extent of several dollars. We decided that we would use it in giving a Christmas tree for three very poor children belonging to a respectable family, who otherwise would have had no pleasure on that occasion. Our landlady was pleased with the idea and the tree was given in her parlor. The children consisted of a small boy three years old and two very sweet girls five and six respectively, who sang us some Christian carols which reminded us of our own childhood days in a distant land, except that the German tongue was used. It was a great satisfaction to see how delighted the children were with their pretty tree and presents too numerous for them to carry at one time, and to know that they had just as nice a Christmas as if they had belonged to a wealthier family.

New Year's morning from twelve till two o'clock were the gayest hours of the season. The policemen were relieved from duty, except in case of crime, and everybody was permitted to make as much noise and commit as many nuisances as he pleased, provided he did not actually injure anything belonging to others. It was every man's privilege to kiss any woman to be seen unless she was protected by men. People held the wheels of hacks and prevented drivers from proceeding farther. Silk hats became common targets. Any one declining to respond to the greeting "Prosit Neu Jahr" was deliberately stopped. Such a commotion as existed for two hours can hardly be imagined, but promptly at two o'clock every policeman was on duty and the new year moved on as the old had ended.

The majority of the Germans are a laboring class of people and not wealthy like the French, English, and above all the Americans, and do not have as much variety in their life. For this reason they look forward with all the brighter anticipations to this one event of the year. Tho they celebrate it with more pomp than we are disposed to sanction, yet this should in a manner meet with our approval because of the joy and gladness that the Christmas season brings once a year to millions of German homes that otherwise might pass the year with but few rays of sunshine to enter in.

HOW LONG LORD, HOW LONG!

The heart rending cry comes from the "dark corners" of this "Christland," not from the inhabitants, for they do not know their need; but from the evangelists who are the missionaries of the home field, sent out by the churches to search out localities where ignorance and superstition prevail, where the Gospel is never heard, where the children are growing up without the knowledge of God, and God's favored people do not respond as they should.

Churches and school houses, preachers and teachers, are needed, but if both cannot be furnished, then let us have the school houses dedicated to God and His service; then send out consecrated men and women to teach both parents and children; which while storing their minds with book learning, will enable them to read for themselves the precious word of God, and sow seed for Christ which, with the blessing of the Holy Spirit, will take lodgement in their hearts, thus making them receptive to the Word as they read it. It will not be long, then, before they will cry out, "Sirs, what must we do to be saved?" Is not the sail ready, for the "men of God" to be sent out to preach the Gospel? There is a great deal of work for the laymen of the churches to do, which will greatly assist the ministers of the Gospel as forerunners. The going out to just such fields, to educate the minds, at the same time speaking the word in season for Christ their Master, is the work they can do, and it would not be very long before they would perhaps, without outside help, erect a house of God and call a pastor; yes, that is a grand work for the laymen of the churches. Let them bestir themselves, and when the question comes, whom shall we send? let the answer come, send us.

There is an inclination to stop by the way to build churches in localities where the need is not so great; for, although the Gospel is not preached from a Presbyterian pulpit it is preached from other evangelical pulpits. Is it not to Christianize the people who know not Christ, rather than to Presbyterianize them that the command goes out, "Go preach the Gospel to all nations?"

Another great hindrance to the cause of missions, both Foreign and Home, is the erection of so many fine costly edifices in the cities. O if God's people would spend less money on their own places of worship, there would be fewer "dark corners" in this beautiful Christ-land without a house where God dwells. He cannot be pleased with fine costly churches, when built at the expense of precious souls for whom Christ died, and they cannot expect Him to bless them, and why are such expensive edifices erected? Is it to honor the meek and lowly Christ who had not where to lay His head? who oftener preached on the mountain, or by the wayside; whose congregations were the poor and afflicted. He never preached where the poor could not get near Him. I am constrained to ask the question in passing: Do they get very near the preachers of to-day in these elegant churches? Is not the fact plain, that they are built more to gratify the aesthetic tastes of the congregation, than to do Him honor? That is putting it plainly, perhaps too strongly, but we will leave it with each individual who voted for a nice church to examine the motive, and see if it is not true to a certain extent at least. The motive however, harms only the individual, the results of the action, prompted by the motive, hinders the cause of missions which is the cause of Christ, and the large amount raised for the new church was raised in a wonderfully short time. Go with me to that same church when they are trying to raise money for the mission field, the amount called for is comparatively small. Take note of the length of time it takes to raise it; if raised at all how reluctantly done; the occasion is in such contrast to the other, that if it were not so deplorable, it would be most amusing to witness.

Can we expect to be members of the Church above if we are unfaithful to the interest of Christ, our avowed Master, in the Church below? If we neglect our duty in the home and foreign fields we will certainly hear the anathema, "Depart from me; inasmuch as ye did it not unto the least of these, ye did it not unto me."

He is taking note of and recording every church collection; let each congregation see to it that it will be such as will meet with a "well done" in that last day. God is waiting to crown the efforts of the evangelists, with success through His people.

Teachers and school houses, ministers of the Gospel, and churches, with Bibles and school books are wanted.

"How beauteous are the mountains;
The feet of Him that brings,
Like streams of living fountains,
Good tidings of good things,
That publisheth salvation,
And jubilee release,
To every tribe and nation
God's reign of joy and peace."

BELLE SMITH.

Augusta, Ga.

SENEX SMITH: HIS NOTES AND NOTIONS.

As I passed his orchard on my way to town, I saw my friend Jenkins cutting down some large and healthy-looking trees. I stopped and said "What is the matter with those trees? Has the codlin moth got into them? They don't show any signs of disease or decay."

"No. They grow vigorously, but they are shy bearers. Some years they blossom well, but the fruit does not mature, and I get only a quarter of a crop. I cannot afford to give such a soil as this and the best of culture to trees that don't pay. I must get rid of them, and put in thair places those that will bear full crops."

I admitted the wisdom of Jenkins' course, and yet I could not help feeling sad as I saw those noble trees falling. What a pity that they were so irregular and capricious in responding to the purpose for which they were planted and cultivated. Why was it? Other varieties under the same conditions bore regularly and heavily. There must have been some inherited defect in this case, or some want of proper care in propagation. Pomologists cannot explain this shyness, or suggest a remedy. And all the orchardist can do when he finds that certain trees, or kinds of trees, do not pay, is to cut them down as cumberers of the ground.

As I drove on I thought of the shy bearers in the garden of the Lord. Our Saviour said, in His beautiful parable of "The Vine;" "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit." The emphasis is on the adjective. When we see a tree with only a few gnarly apples on it we are tempted to think that it has been neglected. And when loaded with large and luscious apples we feel like saying that orchardist understands his business. Much fruit glorifies the cultivator. And that is the kind of glory that God seeks in our characters and lives. If we are only a little better than the worldlings around us; if we give only a small pittance of our means to the cause of Christ; if our Christian activity is occasional and spasmodic—the men who take knowledge of us will say, There is probably something in religion, but not much; for if it was all that it claims to be, these pious people would be giving a great deal more than they give, and doing a great deal more than they do.

And how sadly the Lord must down upon the shy bearers. No doubt he often feels like saying, in regard to many of them: "Cut it down; why cumbereth it to the ground?" And yet he spares us, though we so sadly dishonor him as the husbandman. Oh, if all his trees of righteousness responded to the richness of the soil in which he has planted them, and to the wise and loving culture that he bestows upon them, the world would specially be attracted by the abundance and the excellence of Gospel fruitage.—Herald and Presbyter.

God makes crosses of great variety; He makes some of iron and lead, that looks as if they must crush; some of straw that seem so light, and yet are no less difficult to carry; some He makes of gold and precious stones, that dazzle the eye and excite the envy of spectators, but in reality are as well able to crucify as those which are so much dreaded.—Fenelon.

BOOK REVIEWS.

The College of the Apostles, by Rev. James I. Vance, D. D. The reputation of the author for clearness of thought and graceful piquancy of style is fully sustained in the work before us. So meagre, with regard at least to most of the apostles, are the facts to be gathered from the Scriptures that it may well tax the powers to take these skeletons of truth, build them into living personages and present them arrayed in most attractive garb to delight and instruct the reader; this Dr. Vance has done. Occasionally one must needs run across a, clear, non-sequitur oftener still we must feel that the writer's argument is inconclusive or his treatment fanciful—but withal one feels after reading that he has increased his stock of knowledge and has been brought to look upon the Apostles in a clearer light. They take on a more substantial appearance and it seems almost as if we see them as they lived and walked over the plains of Palestine. The book may be had from Fleming H. Revell Co., for 75 cents.

The Riverside Literature Series issued by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston, are excellent little books, well gotten up and containing selections from the poems and prose work of standard authors. The one before us, Lowell Leaflets, is compiled by Josephine E. Hogdon and is many times worth the small amount charged—15 cents. Yearly subscription, issued semi-monthly from September to June, $5.00.

The sermon upon Predestination and Free Agency delivered by Rev. Robt. P. Kerr, D. D., in the First Presbyterian church, Richmond, has been published in pamphlet form by Messrs. Whittet & Shepperson, Richmond. The work is worthy of its eminent author and we would like to see it widely distributed.

The "Christian Endeavor Hour" with Light for the Leader, is on our table. It is prepared by Thomas G. Hill, A. M., and Grace Livingston Hill. It can be had from Fleming H. Revell Company. It has the C. E. Lessons, with parallel readings, hints for leaders, suggested hymns, and many valuable helps in the study of the Topic. Every C. E. worker should have it hourly by him.

CHANGES OF ADDRESS.

Correspondents will please note the following changes of address:

Rev. L. A. McLean, from 2100 Druid Hill Avenue, Baltimore, Md, to 1314 Floyd Avenue, Richmond, Va.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Wilmington Churches:—Rev. A. J. McKelway, the new superintendent of Synodical Home Missions spent a few days of last week in our city beginning his work. He solicited private subscriptions among the members of our several churches, and preached Sabbath morning in the First church and at night in St. Andrews two strong sermons which were impressive and well received.

Immanuel Church:—On Sunday night a mother presented five boys at the altar for baptism. A very touching and inspiring scene. B. E. Wallace, pastor.

Kenly:—The meeting conducted by Rev Messrs. John A. McMurray and P. C. Morton, of Roxboro, resulted in seven accessions to the church.

Laurinburg:—On the second Sunday of January three additional deacons were ordained and installed in Laurinburg church, viz: Angus Fairley, J. T. McEachin and J. M. McCormick. Our church is now well equipped with officers, and with a co-operating membership and the quickening and guiding presence of the Holy Spirit we trust to accomplish still greater things in furtherance of the Redeemer's kingdom.

The new church at Gibson, lately organized with ten members, now numbers fifteen members with seven others who have expressed their purpose of uniting with us. At the next preaching appointment they expect to organize a Sunday-school and a Men's and a Ladies' Missionary Society.

Patterson's Mill:—At Patterson'sMill on Jan. 17th, at our communion, Rev. A. K. Pool received three members on profession. At a congregational meeting on the day before, Mr. W. J. McLaughlin was elected ruling elder and Messrs. Will Morris and Arnot McLaughlin were elected deacons. This gives us three elders and three deacons for our new church.

Clinton:—Rev. P. McIntyre, of Faison, has become temporary pastor of the Presbyterian church here. He preached to large congregations Sunday morning and night. He is very popular in Clinton where he always draws large congregations He has been regularly called as pastor, but is not in a position yet to accept the call on account of some other obligations. It is probable that he will be able to accept after March 1st. —Sampson Democrat.

Mt. Horeb:—On last Sabbath one lady professed her faith in Christ. Rev.T.H. Newkirk, pastor.

Washington:—On last Sabbath was held our first communion of the year. We had a delightful day. Three communicants were received; two were gentlemen in the prime of life and heads of families, one receiving the sacrament of baptism. Last night, Jan. 20th, 7.30 p.m., was held our annual congregational meeting. Encouraging reports were received from clerk of session, secretary of the Sabbath-school, church treasurer and pastor.

Thirty-four members added during the year; $3,668 raised and expended, over $700 to benevolent causes of the church beyond our borders as a congregation. During the present pastorate (two years and four months) sixty members have been added; over $1,500 has been raised and expended upon repairs and improvement upon the church and edifice. A beautiful pipe organ has been purchased and paid for and a very nice marble font has been placed in the church. In spite of death and removals our congregations have steadily increased, and devotion between pastor and people has become stronger and stronger.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Raleigh:—The Sunday-school room, called "The Session House" has been sold, in order to commence the Sunday-school part or our new church. The work is expected to begin in March. All our church prayer-meetings, Sunday-school and League services are now held in the church, as the "Session House" will soon be taken down and removed by the purchaser. When the new Sunday school is completed we will worship in that until the new church can be built and made ready for our occupancy. The last services of the "Session House" were appropriate and pathetic. Among the interesting features being the reading of an original poem by Mr. W. S. Primrose.

Statesville:—The church here is to be lighted by electricity. Rev. Dr. Wood, pastor.

VIRGINIA.

Mattox:—Rev. L. A. McLean is assisting Rev. J. R. Rennie, pastor of the Amelia church in a series of services. The congregations have been good and much interest manifested. Several have professed their faith in Christ.

FLORIDA.

Fernandina:—Mr. Geo. Henry and Judge Hinton Baker were installed elders on Sunday, the 17th inst. On the fourth Sunday of each month, Dr. H. S. Yerger, the pastor, preaches at St. Mary's, a little town across the river, and the morning service is conducted by the Westminster League.

Tarpon Springs:—The Presbyterians of Tarpon Springs have decided to erect a new church and to transform the present edifice into a manse.—Savannah News.

LOUISIANA.

Lutcher:—A church was organized at this place on the 14th inst., with twenty members. In over a year Rev. W. C. West has been laboring in this Home Mission field, and the formation of the only Protestant church in the parish of St. James is the visible result of his work. Rev. N. Keff Smith, of Ocean Springs, recently assisted Mr. West in a ten days protracted meeting.

Louisiana Presbytery:—Met at Gloster Miss., Jan. 19th, '97. Present fourteen ministers and three elders. Presbytery by unanimous vote declined to dissolve the pastoral relations between W. D. Spurlin and the Hoyte Memorial church. The following program for centennial exercises at spring meeting was adopted, Dr. Geo. Fraser, subject: "The Westminster Assembly and its Work up to the Ratification of Parliament." Rev. W. D. Spurlin, "The Influence of the Confession on Church Creed." Rev. R. F. Patterson, "The Influence of the Confession on Civil Government." Rev. N. Smylie was detained from attendance and therefore not received.

M. B. SHAW,
Stated Clerk.

PERSONALS.

Rev. L. A. McLean, Synodical Evangelist of Virginia, will labor in East Hanover Presbytery for the present year.

Rev. A. J. McKelway will assist Rev. A. S. Caldwell, Oxford, N. C., in a series of services beginning February 14th.

Rev. Dr. J. T. Plunkett, of Augusta, Ga., is on a visit to friends in North Carolina Dr. Plunkett formerly served Steele Creek church, leaving this charge for Cincinnati about fifteen years ago.

On the second Sunday afternoon of each month, Dr. Eugene Daniel preaches at the Soldiers' Home, Raleigh, in the chapel which will comfortably seat about seventy-five persons.

Rev. B. W. Mebane, of Fredericksburg, Va., is being assisted in a series of meetings by Rev. Dr. Jones, of Pulaski City.

Rev. J. Y. McGinnis, of Wusih China, writes that all are well and that the work is going on favorably. The other missionaries stationed at Wusih are Mrs. Anna McG. Sykes and Dr. and Mrs. Geo. C. Worth.

Rev. W. McG. Shields, of Burlington-ton has accepted the call to the church, at Gastonia, subjet to the action of Orange Presbytery.

Rev. O. B. Wilson, of Tuskaloosa, Ala., is spending several months at Pensacola, Fla.

At a recent meeting of Dallas Presbytery it was decided not to dissolve the pastoral relation between Rev. J. M. Clark and the church at Denton, Texas. The decision was received with much pleasure by Mr. Clark's congregation and Presbytery.

We regret to note the sickness of Rev. Dr. W. W. Pharr, and wish for him a speedy recovery.

Rev. Dr. W. U. Murkland, of Baltimore, has returned to New York where he will remain with his wife and son for several days.

At last accounts Rev. Kenneth McDonald, of Ivanhoe, N. C., who has been ill from gripe for several days is still quite sick. Mr. McDonald is a guest of Dr. A. D. McDonald of this city. We hope to see him out at an early day.

DEATH OF MRS. IRWIN.

From the Charlotte Observer we learn the death of Mrs. Harriet M. Irwin, wife of Mr. James P. Irwin, of Charlotte. Mrs. Irwin died in that city on Monday morning last in her 69th year. She was a daughter of Rev. Dr. R. H. Morrison. Her mother was Mary Graham, sister of Hon. Wm. A Graham.

Readers of this paper have become acquainted with Mrs. Irwin from her articles in its columns.

The Observer says:

"The news of her death was a great surprise to her friends. Few lovelier women have been known here than Mrs. Irwin. She thought no ill, and spoke no ill. Her's was indeed a sweet, lovely spirit. She saw the good and not the bad in every one with whom she came in contact. She was too fond of reading to be known and appreciated as she should have been, for she spent her hours with the characters of history rather than with those of the living present. She had a deep literary spirit, and she read voluminously—naturally, therefore, she was a writer. The best known of her efforts was "The Hermit of Petrea," which appeared in book form. For years she has been a conributor to the press of the city, articles over her signature being always read closely with interest.

CALLED MEETING OF WILMINGTON PRESBYTERY.

Form of Government Chap. IV, Sec. 10, Par. 8, having been complied with I hereby call the Presbytery of Wilmington to meet in Immanuel church Tuesday, Feb. 2d, 1897, 10 a. m., to hear the report of a committee of said church, consider the same, and to take any action needed in the interest of said church. Also to receive Rev. R. V. Lancaster from the Presbytery of Concord.

K. McDONALD,
Moderator.

NOTICE.

The Colored Academical and Industrial Institute is in the greatest need of its part of the funds taken up in the December collection for colored evangelization. Up to date only one dollar has reached our hands from that collection. We have on roll about thirty-five boarders, mostly young men and women who are dependent upon us to give them work to make their expenses while in school, besides there are some debts now past due to be settled. Presbyterial treasurers should send the money at once to Mr. G. W. Watts, Durham, N. C.

Yours truly,

S. G. Walker.

WHAT IS THERE THAT WE CANNOT DO—AN INSTANCE OF UNPARALLELED SUCCESS.

(From Industrial Edition of Greensboro Record.)

It is not often that the public takes more than passing notice of a stockholders' meeting; but there was one held in Greensboro yesterday whose announcement will interest several thousand property owners in North Carolina. We refer to the annual meeting of the Southern Stock-Mutual Insurance Company. This meeting was one of unusual interest to the public, because of the public shares in the company's profits, and because the policy-holders of the company have been expecting a liberal dividend on last year's operations. This expectation was not disappointed, and a dividend was declared which will make the year's profits to policy-holders 20 per cent on annual policies and 6⅔ per cent on all three year policies that are in force.

The success of this company is something that our whole State should be proud of. When it began business in 1895, it was considered by insurance experts as a mere experiment and even its friends predicted for it a brief existence. To this distrust of our own people, which too often attends any attempt to do ourselves what we are accustomed to seeing done by outsiders, was added the relentless opposition of the most powerful combination of insurance companies in this country. Opposition and difficulty proved to be the making of the home company and it is safe to say that no business enterprise has been undertaken in North Carolina in recent years which has attained the same measure of success. This company has demonstrated beyond peradventure that we can do our own insurance and for less money than it can be done in New York or Liverpool; it has kept at home upwards of $43,000 that otherwise would have been drained out into the treasuries of foreign corporations; it has saved to the people of the State in the cost of their insurance over $6,000; and it has done all this in its first two years of a hard fought existence.

This company has saved to the people of Greensboro alone nearly $1,500.000, enough to pay their city taxes on over $100,000 00 worth of property, and has invested in Greensboro nearly $10,000 of its earnings. Such enterprises as this will, in time, make any community rich. We are specially interested in fostering any business which tends to keep at home the money we have been sending abroad, and it is with much satisfaction that the Greensboro Industrial and Immigration Association gives this testimonial to so worthy a home enterprise.

THE NEW PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN ASHEVILLE.

MR. EDITOR:—About two months ago, as you have been already informed, Dr. Campbell, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, met the proposal of the elders and deacons in joint session to supply him with an assistant by a proposal to send out a self-supporting colony, so as to have two Presbyterian churches and two pastors instead of one church and one pastor with an assistant.

Colony or no colony has been the burning question ever since. The whole matter has been considered carefully and prayerfully for two months. The officers of the church (who doubted at first) were convinced by degrees that Dr. Campbell was right and recommended the forward movement with practical unanimity. Meantime the Christian Observer of Jan. 6th came out in a strong editorial endorsing Dr. Campbell's new method of dividing a church. The York Evangelist of Jan 14th speaks of it in the same strain and recommends the Asheville method to the churches. The Philadelphia Presbyterian I learn also commends the method highly To day the matter was referred to the congregation of the First church and by a vote of seven to one they decided to send out the colony if the money can be raised to build and equip a church for it, which will make it a competitor of the First church from the start. There was some earnest opposition, but the very best feeling was exhibited, entire harmony prevailed from the very first and the advancement of the cause of Christ was uppermost in the minds of all concerned. The new church is to be the daughter of the First church in fact as well as in name, and is to be supplied with a dwelling place by the mother church in the same spirit in which a mother builds and furnishes a home for her newly married daughter. $15,000, will be necessary to do this. More than $9,000 of this had been secured before the matter came to the vote and before any canvass had been made. There seems to be no reasonable doubt that the whole amount can be raised in a few weeks, and that the new church can begin its work within a year, perhaps, fully equipped and entirely free from debt. This is a great forward movement for Presbyterianism in Asheville and in all Western North Carolina, and the method of dividing the church which was used, instead of causing friction, developed the zeal and Christian liberality of the mother church and cemented the bonds of love and sympathy among the members of the congregation, even if they had honest differences of opinion as to the wisdom of such a move in such times as these.

The New York Evangelist in commenting upon the best way to establish a new church when such a church is plainly needed in a growing town or city offers a valuable suggestion, illustrated by the example detailed above:

There is surely a better way of extending the kingdom of Christ than by inflamed debate and unseemly schism. Here is a way which we find has been the choice of a level headed Presbyterian people in Asheville, N. C.: "The officers of the First Presbyterian church will submit to the congregation the question of the establishment of another church, to be constituted of a strong colony sent out from the First church." Wise people! "Officers" who know how to guide a congregation! Criticism may not be altogether stopped, but it may be disregraded. There is a prophecy of prosperity in the fashion in which the new church is started.

REPORT ON ACADEMICAL AND INDUSTRIAL INSTITUTE.

To the Synod of North Carolina:

The Board held its annual meeting in New Berne, N. C., November 11th, 1896. A quorum of five members was present. The report of Rev. S. G. Walker for 1895-'96, which was submitted, along with the financial statement, set forth the following facts, viz:

The school was run seven months and thirty-seven pupils were enrolled, including six boarders, representing five counties. One teacher was employed whose work was admirably supplemented by the superintendent.

Two dormitories, a ten-room building for girls and a three-room building for boys, have been erected during the year at a cost of $550. Two other buildings, a kitchen and work shop, are in course of erection which, when furnished, will give us a plant of large and attractive grounds and five suitable buildings worth $1,800.

The terms of Rev. R. F. Campbell, D. D., and Rev. A. J McKelway, expire at this meeting of Synod. Mr. John Finley, of the term expiring 1898, has died, while Rev. W. D. Morton, D. D., and Elder C. E. Graham have moved without the bounds of of the Synod.

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

BY. REV. P. L. GROOME, D. D.

This Society is national and interdenominational, having headquarters at Washington, D. C.

It numbers amongst its members the clearest thinkers, ripest scholars and many of the most devout ministers in the evangelical churches of America.

The objects of the Society are:

1. To awaken increased interest in the subject of religious education in all of its phases.

2. To enlist scholars in the investigation of Biblical, philosophical, historical and other themes, as they bear upon religious education, and to make the product of their study available to the public by means of the discourse and the press.

3. To institute a series of inquiries concerning the causes of vice and crime and the facts and laws of spiritual development at different periods of life, that the cultivation of man's higher nature may proceed in a more orderly way, beginning in the earliest years and continuing to the latest age.

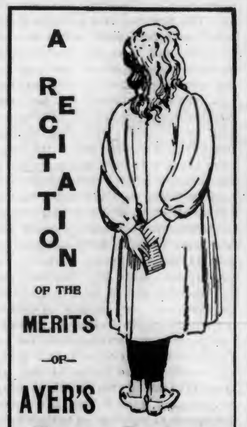
4. To encourage such investigations as will discover the principles of religious education and improve the methods of Bible study and teaching for spiritual profit.

5. To bring into helpful fellowship those earnest souls who seek the truth for their edification, and to offer them literature adapted to their needs.

6. To stimulate and assist parents in the instruction of their children, that the home may be a nursery of morals and piety.

7. To provide a system for the thorough training of Sunday-school teachers, and of those who may become teachers of the Word of God.

8. To promote the use of the Bible as a text-book in colleges and other institutions of learning, that the light of its elevating and purifying truths may be shed upon all branches of human knowledge, and help to mold the character of those who are receiving a liberal education.



Several summer schools are held under the auspices of the society, but the one of most interest to the readers of the PRESBYTERIAN is that held at Asheville, N. C., in the months of July and August. It is the purpose of the Convention Committee to erect an auditorium for the assemblies held at Asheville, as soon as sufficient funds can be secured. But the main features of the society's plans are to organize in every place Bible Reader's Unions, to be composed of all those persons who will daily read a portion of Scripture according to a plan prescribed by the society in a small manual, "The Bible Reader's Guide, costing 35 cents, which may be obtained by addressing me at Greensboro, N, C. This pamphlet will aid materially in prompting one to think about reading and its use guarantees that said reading shall be after an intelligent plan, giving a continuous and comprehensive view of the Book.

The other feature is the normal course for Sunday-school teachers, the design of which is to elevate the office of Sunday teachers by thorough preparation. This course gives a definite amount of information concerning the Bible and gives practice exercises on the lessons. Perfection in studying and teaching the Truth is the object of this course. It costs $1.25, post paid and may be had by addressing me at Greensboro. Over 10,000 teachers are using this course.

Probably no field has so large a proportion of inefficient workers today as the Sunday-school, certainly no field offers greater possibilities. To gather, appropriate and impart the Truth so that both teacher and pupil shall be fed, character be built up and a spirit of truth-seeking be developed is an art indeed, worthy to be attained at any cost.

The great need of this time is a wider diffusion of the Truth, and improved methods or enlarged methods are needed to insure this wider diffusion. Those standing in the place of teachers should be bona fide teachers, not ashamed of comparison with the teachers in secular schools. We need a nation of Bible Readers, persons daily reading God's Word. As nature has trembled through all the centuries under the mighty charge of electrical force and only found in these last days a faithful disciple to lift the latch and let us in to larger light and life; so in God's Word under God's Spirit are undiscovered truths. All that is needed is some disciple of faith who shall walk on the water, stretch forth a hand and brush aside the veil that now conceals rich stores of truth.

Again, this people must turn to righteousness as revealed in God's Word, or follow in the wake of all those nations that have ignored the principles of national perpetuity and stability and consequently gone to ruin. Let there be a universal call to daily Bible reading.

FATHER AND CHILD.

Look into the wonderfulness of this relationship. All strength and all weakness; and yet the weakness ever having a supreme claim upon the strength, and the strength ever available for the weakness. All fullness and all want; yet the want looking up to the fullness as its own, and the fullness delighting to impart itself to the want. All wisdom and all ignorance; yet the two not separate by unlikeness, but so one that hath wisdom hath a joy in coming down to lead and teach. Bringing nothing and yet receiving all. Father and child. Here is the master waited on by the servants; here are skilled hands that minister to his pleasure; artists decorate his walls; the learned have supplied the books that enrich and refresh him; here are those that add to his safety; those again who tend his gardens and bring him fruit and flowers. And within the house is a little child, with no sense or skill to render any service, who brings no gain who adds nothing to the master's greatness or wealth—and yet this little child is ten thousand times more to the father than all these, and all they can render. Look up my soul, look up to thy Father in heaven. Be bold to take it all and to triumph in the wondrous truth. "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called children of God; and such we are." (R. V.) Weak, thou canst bring nothing worthy of his acceptance. Ignorant, thou canst but dimly think of him. Little and foolish, thou canst not add to his majesty and greatness. Yet what tender, yearning, compassionate love is this that binds thee forever to his heart—This my son.—M. G. Pearse

CHEERFULNESS.

For one thing, we must remember that cheerfulness has to be learned. It does not come naturally. The cheerfulness which comes naturally is not that which our Master bids us to have. We are to be of good cheer in tribulation and this certainly is not a natural experience. Nor does Christian cheerfulness come as a direct gift from God when we become Christians. All the fine things in Christian nature and Christian culture have to be learned. Even Jesus Himself "learned obedience by the things which He suffered." We all have to learn the lessons of beautiful living. Life is a school, and God is continually setting a new lesson for us.' George McDonald says: "Till a man has learned to be happy without the sunshine, and therein becomes capable of enjoying it perfectly, it is well that the sunshine and the shadow should be mingled, as God only knows how to mingle them. When we find ourselves facing some unpleasant duty or in the presence of a new trial or sorrow, we should not forget that it is another lesson set for us.—From The Blessing of Cheerfulness, by J. R. Miller, D. D.

THANKS FOR THE THORN.

"My God, I have never thanked Thee for my thorn. I have thanked Thee a thousand times for my roses, but not once for my thorn. I have been looking forward to a world where I shall get compensation for my cross, but I have never thought of my cross as itself a present glory. Thou divine love, whose human path has been perfected through sufferings, teach me the glory of my cross; teach me the value of my thorn. Show me that I have climbed to Thee by the path of pain. Show me that my tears have made my rainbow. Reveal to me that my strength was the product of the hour when I wrestled until the break of day. Then shall I know that my thorn was blessed by Thee; then shall I know that my cross was a gift from Thee, and I shall raise a monument to the hour of my sorrow, and the words which I shall write upon it will be these: 'It is good for me that I have been afflicted.'"—Exchange.

WHAT TO DO WITH MISTAKES.

Mistakes are not to be worried over when they are once made. Mistakes already committed are to be recognized, so as to be repaired if possible, and their repetition avoided; but lamentation over them is worse than useless, it only makes matters worse by crippling energy for future success. Robertson says, "He is not the best general who makes the fewest false steps. He is the best who wins the most splendid victories by the retrieval of mistakes." The practical question in view of a manifest mistake is not "How could I have done that?" but, "What can I now do to correct that mistake, or to make it tell to advantage?"—Sunday School Times.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Rev. James Cleland has written an interesting sketch of the life of Joseph Scriber, author of the well-known hymn, "What a friend we have in Jesus." Mr. Scriber came to this country from Dublin in 1850, and settled in the neighborborhood of Port Hope, Ontario. Though himself poor, his life was spent in doing good and relieving the wants of others. The little book is published by W. Williamson of Port Hope.

Joaquin Miller recently visited the city of New Orleans, after an absence of twelve years, spent in his forest home on the Pacific. Mr. Miller is collecting views of typical Southern scenes to take to London where he will lecture. The views will be particularly from California and the Sierras.

A collection of books of the late Gen. Sherman was sold recently in St. Louis for $80. The books had been given to a carpenter by Gen. Sherman when he had his headquarters in that city. The purchaser finds in the collection many autograph letters and works of value.

Jules Verne is quietly at work at Amiens, France, and though sixty-eight years of age is as full of energy and as hard working as ever. At present he is busy in the execution of a plan to publish a series of stories bearing on different countries. Unlike many authors he thinks of the plot last, letting it form in his mind as he reads up geographical, historical and other books of a scientific nature on the part of the world he is going to treat. He rises regularly at four o'clock in the morning, and writes till noon, and generally retires at nine in the evening. As a matter of fact M. and Mme. Jules Verne have not been at Paris for eight years; and they express themselves as perfectly contented with their quiet life at Amiens.

Mrs Amelia E. Barr is greatly interested in social problems as well as in her literary work.

James Fenimore Cooper entered Yale but did not graduate. It was thought that the sea would cure his tendency to frolic, and as the Naval Academy had not then been established, he sailed on a merchant vessel for a year's cruise. This was in 1806 and Cooper was seventeen years of age. He sailed before the mast and saw hard service. In 1808 he was one of a party sent to Oswego on Lake Ontario to build a sixteen-gun brig, and in the following year was left for awhile in command of the gunboats on Lake Champlain. A short time after he was attached to the Wasp then commanded by Lawrence, who was afterwards in charge of the famous Chesapeake. Cooper saw no fighting during the three and a half years he wore the uniform of his country and in May 1811, shortly after his marriage, resigned from the navy.

I CURE FITS

When I say I cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a lifelong study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Place. Jerusalem.

INTRODUCTORY.

The members of the Sanhedrim took knowledge of Peter and John that they had been with Jesus, in a deeper sense of spiritual experience than merely going about with Him and hearing His words. They had, in sharing His sufferings and appropriating the benefits of His death, by self-abnegation, been brought to Pentecost and had received the fulfillment of the promise of the Father, and in the power of the Holy Ghost, in the name of Jesus, they had wrought this great miracle and stood fearless before the Sanhedrim. "They saw the boldness of Peter and John." The arrest of these men and their arraignment before the Sanhedrim was the first violent attack upon the disciples. The fires were kindled to destroy; but these men were like the men in the furnace of Nebuchadnezzar. The flames did not hurt them. The rulers were put to confusion. They did not know what to do, because they did not know want to do right. They had to give in, and the prisoners held on, not yielding, but gathering with the other disciples for prayer. They did not pray to be delivered from persecution, but for courage and the power of God in good works. They were given a special outpouring of the Spirit as at Pentecost.

LESSON NOTES.

The last lesson shows the shock of persecution failing to shatter the church. The present lesson shows a more dangerous attack from within. As God saved the disciples in persecution, so here we are to see how the more insidious attack from within would be overruled by victory over the evil to the good of the infant church.

Vs. 32. The multitudes. Not less than five thousand, were still a unity, in heart and soul, not necessarily in every opinion, but in love, devotion, and purpose, with mutual affection. All things common. They looked upon their possessions not as their own, but as subject to the needs of their fellow Christians and as the call of the church.

Vs. 33. With great power. Such as Christ promised of the Holy Ghost, Acts 1: 8. Gave the apostles witness, so that their testimony of the resurrection, as the great fact and essential keystone of the Christian arch, was effective in leading to faith in Christ. Great grace. The favor of God and fellowship one with another. Making favorable impression on sinners. Of course the church made progress.

Vs. 34. Any among them. The poor believers of Jerusalem or any from distant lands learning the Gospel truth were not allowed to want. Possessors of lands or houses. As the need was greater than the income, sold them, so that later we find the Christians at Jerusalem poor, but for this or any later hardships of persecution, their poverty was noble.

Vs. 35. At the apostle's feet. Showing how the apostles were trusted and as best fitted to distribute. Placed at the feet like gifts to Eastern kings.

Vs. 36. Joses for Joseph. Barnabas. Bar means son, and the name meant son of consolation, or exhortation. He probably was gifted in helpful consoling exhortation. Of Cyprus, where were the famous copper mines which Cæsar Augustus leased to Herod the Great. An ancient author makes Barnabas the son of rich parents, who sent him to Jerusalem to be taught by Gamaliel where he became a friend of Paul, and having witnessed the miracles of Christ and being converted by the healing of the impotent man of Bethesda, he was afterwards the means of the conversion of Paul's sister Mary and her son Mark.

Vs. 37. Having lands sold it. Thus proving the sincerity of his exhortations and being a comforter indeed. Those he helped would hear him gladly.

Vs. 1. Chap. v. The Church thus beautiful and bountiful was a returning Eden on which Luke loved to dwell. But Satan entered it, as in contrast with these other noble men as Ananias, with a character in contrast with his name, and Sapphira, meaning beautiful, making a similar contrast, sold a possession, meaning any kind of property belonging to them, now sold ostensibly to give the poor, but clearly to serve self.

Vs. 2. Kept back part. At the same time professing to be bringing all. His wife also being privy to it. Showing that it was not a sudden temptation but a deliberate plan.

Vs. 3. But Peter said. What he could know only by the teaching of the Holy Ghost. Why hath Satan filled thy heart? This was the opposite of "being filled with the Spirit" and was the fate of hypocrites. To lie to the Holy Ghost? The lie was both spoken and acted.

Vs 4. Whiles it remained was it not thine own? That is, there was no compulsion on him to sell it. Thou hast not lied unto men, because the offering was not claimed to be made to men, but unto God. This compared with vs. 3, makes the Holy Ghost and God the same.

Vs 5 Ananias fell down. As the direct act of God. Great fear fell upon all. The remaining verses tell how Ananias was buried and Sapphira came to a like awful death and burial because they had agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord.

Vs. 11. Great fear fell upon the Church. Awe of God, fear of sinning and great reverence of the Holy Spirit. All which led to great heart-searching, watching and prayer.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

1. The prominence of the Holy Spirit justifies the meaning of this book. "The Acts of the Holy Ghost."

2. Lying to the Holy Ghost is an awful sin when using religion as a cloak for self-interest, or attending church service only to gratify self, or offering insincere prayers, or anything in which our practice is self seeking in acts of apparent Christian zeal.

3. The punishment was severe, but deserved and necessary to save the Church.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Feb. 7th, 1897.

BY REV. B. E. WALLACE.

Sincerity; with one's self, with others, with God. Psa. 15: 1–5; Zech. 8: 16–17.

Text for the week:

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart...and thy neighbor as thy self." Luke 10: 27.

Daily Readings:

Monday, Sincerity Tested, Matt. 19: 16–23.

Tuesday, Sincerity Proved, Acts 19: 14–20.

Wednesday, Insincerity Forgiven, Psa 78: 36–55.

Thursday, Insincerity Brings Sorrow, Isa. 29; 13–24.

Friday, Insincerity Profitless, Jer. 7: 8–15.

Saturday, Sincerity in Christ, 2 Cor. 4: 1–6.

Sunday, Topic, Psa. 15: 1–5.

Hints for Leaders:

1. Define the meaning of the word Sincere.

2. Have some member briefly to cite instances proving that "Honesty is the best Policy."

3. Show how easy it is to be dishonest or insincere with oneself.

Notes:

Self deception is a very common sin of to-day, and for that matter it has ever been a common and hurtful sin. Pride is so strong in the human heart that it is hard for self-assertion to be downed. It is right because I think so. If you do not follow my policy you will make a great mistake and I will not co-operate with you.

This evil leads to yet greater evils, leads to insincerity and dishonesty To carry big I's point, judgment will be forced, conscience stultified, and principle changed to policy. Not only will one be insincere with himself, fellowmen and God, but dishonest and corrupt measures will be employed to feed false ambitious flames.

Let us be honest and sincere and hold fast to the truth even if fame, policy, ambition and wealth take the wings of the morning and fly away from us.

Truth and Policy may be at war. Policy may give transient success, but Truth will give slow and sure success.

"Truth is mighty and will prevail."

OPEN DOOR NOTES.

As I look back over a long and happy life, the only angels in the road are deeds done for Christ; and the only ghosts are the memories of lost opportunities. It is infamy to die and not be missed; but to live for our blessed Master and our fellow-men is the beginning of heaven, Rev Dr. Theo. L. Cuyler's New Year's Greeting to Christian Endeavorers.

The "Lavras Workers" of Alexandria, Va., held their semi-annual meeting on Wednesday of last week. The meeting was presided over by Rev. J. Calvin Stewart, of Richmond. This society was organized some years ago and supports, Rev. S. R Gammon in his missionary field in Brazil.

Rev. Jas. A. Dorritee, of Columbia S. C., is conducting special services for men this week at the Charlotte Y. M. C. A.

The third biennial convention of the Presbyterian chapters of the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip will be held in South Park Presbyterian church, Newark, N. J. January 29th-30th and a very attractive programme has been prepared.

The Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip originated in the Reformed Church of Reading, Pa., in 1888. It has no connection with the Episcopal Brotherhood of St. Andrew, although having some of the general principles of that organization. The Presbyterian Church branch has its own executive council, and a large number of chapters. Personal work for young men is the watchword of the whole movement. It is simply a banding together of the young men of each particular church for reaching and saving their fellows. The methods of work are diverse and are to be regulated by each particular church to suit its own needs. The Brotherhood is founded on two rules, called the rules of prayer and of service. The rule of prayer is to pray daily for the spread of Christ's kinghom among young men; the rule of service is to try to bring at least one young man within hearing of the gospel every week. It is to these simple rules that the Brotherhood attributes its success.

DIED.

☞We publish free 10 lines of Obituary Notices, of any kind—Tributes of Respect, Resolutions of Sabbath-schools, Ladies' Societies, &c. And we charge for over 10 lines at the rate of 10 cents per line. The cost may be calculated by counting the words in the manuscript, and allowing seven words to the line.

BURNS—F. H. Burns, near St. Pauls, N. C., Jan. 10th, 1897. Born Aug. 2nd, 1868. He was in ill health for about four years. God gave him kind and timely warning to prepare for death—which his nearest friends think he made good.

GILLAM.—On January 21st, 1897, Mr. Henry Gillam of Pocket, N. C., in his 57th year. He was a consistent and beloved member of the Presbyterian church. A good man is gone to his reward. The God of all consolation comfort his bereaved family.

WHITE.—January 19th, near Zion church, in Cabarrus county, N. C., Miss Susan White, aged about 84 years. A life long member of the Presbyterian church, first at Rocky River and finally Zion since its organization. She was only waiting the summons.

McKEITHEN.—At her mother's home in Aberdeen, N. C., on January 20th, 1897, Miss Maggie C. McKeithen, of Cameron, N.C., in her thirty-sixth year. Her gentle manners, kind disposition, beautiful character and lovable Christian life made her a host of friends and gave her a recognized influence for the advancement of Christ's cause. She stood at the head of the Ladies' Foreign Missionary Society for Moore county. We needed her here, but God needed her yonder.

SLOAN.—On the 28th of October, 1896, Mrs. Harriet Atwood Sloan, widow of the late Dr. David Dixon Sloan, near Garland Station in Sampson county, aged 74 years and 7 months. The deceased was the child of John Cromartie and wife Anna Harrington Cromartie, both deceased. As a child of the Covenant she was early indoctrinated in the symbols of faith held by the Presbyterian church and early in her life joined South River church in Bladen county, of which her father was long a ruling elder.

In December 6th, 1849, she was happily wedded to Dr. David D. Sloan and was the mother of six children all of whom survive her.

To estimate the worth of this good lady and to appreciate her Christian character, her domestic life should be inspected. There in that all important and useful field, with her beloved consort associated, she reared her children in ways of uprightness, ever leading them in the paths of virtue and truthfulness, as safe roads in this life, and through a crucified Saviour to eternal rest.

In consequence of a fall which injured her person severely and from which she never recovered entirely, her mind, after long and painful suffering, gave way, and for several years before her decease she was not herself, but did not lose entirely her religious convictions, in her last days she spoke of Jesus as her trusted Saviour. Let her offspring then cherish her memory and follow her bright example, as she sought and found redemption in the blood of Christ.

A FRIEND.

TO THE CONGREGATIONS GENERALLY,

And the Members Particularly of the Churches of Concord Presbytery.

DEAR BRETHREN:—The financial outlook of HomeMissions in our Presbytery demands your serious attention. While our Home Mission fields have been more fully and continuously supplied with the "preached Word" than in any previous year for the last several; and while the work of our nine laborers in this cause has been more generally blessed than usual, yet the offerings of God's people for Home Missions since April 1st, 1896, have been less than either last year or the year before during same period.

Now please listen, the whole month of February has been appointed as a suitable time for collections for this great work. We will need about $1,000 to carry on this work to the first of August—the month for the next collection. We will need absolutely, and must have $600 to end the ecclesiastical year without debt and without grievous disappointment to the self-sacrificing Home Mission workers. Scarcely one-fourth of the apportionments made to the churches for this cause has as yet been sent to our Treasurer.

Therefore, this special, loving, urgent, individual appeal to every one who can sing, "I love Thy Kingdom Lord" to remember in February our "waste places in Zion" with a prayerful spirit, a liberal soul and a large contribution.

Yours faithfully, in behalf of the Committee,

C. A. MUNROE,
Chairman.

No other oil and no other medicine has ever been discovered which can take the place of Cod-liver Oil in all conditions of wasting. New remedies come, live their little day and die, but Cod-liver Oil remains the rock on which all hope for recovery must rest. When it is scientifically prepared, as in Scott's Emulsion, it checks the progress of the disease, the congestion and inflammation subside and the process of healing begins. There is the whole truth. "NEARER TO THEE."

They were singing, sweetly singing,
And the song melodiously
On the evening air was ringing:
"Nearer, O my God, to Thee!"
In my eyes the teardrops glistened
As it stirred the twilight dim,
And I wondered as I listened
If it brought them nearer Him.

Were they like the wanderer, weary,
Song and life in sweet accord,
Resting in the darkness dreary
In that nearness to the Lord?
Had His Spirit ever sought them,
To be slighted or denied?
Had that dear song ever brought them
Closer to the Saviour's side?

I have heard its music often,
Felt its meaning deep and sweet,
And my weary heart would soften
Singing at my Master's feet,
"Nearer Thee"—O precious feeling!
Nearer Thee in gain and loss;
Nearer Thee when I am kneeling
In the shadow of Thy cross!

Nearer Thee when love descending
Falls in blessing on my head;
Nearer Thee when I am bending
O'er the graves that hide my dead!
Nearer Thee in joy, in sorrow,
'Tis the same wher'er I roam,
Nearer Thee to-day, to-morrow,
O my King, my Christ, my home!

TESTIMONIAL TO KING OSCAR.

The Swedish residents of this country are going to send a testimonial to King Oscar II, of Sweden and Norway on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his reign, which will occur September 18th, 1897. For months the Swedish artists of the country have been working on designs to be submitted to the committee in charge of the testimonial, and several days ago the last of the competitors sent in a plaster cast of his design. The work of all was then carefully gone over and two prizes were awarded to Charles Fribert, of Rockford, Ill., and August Lindstrom, of this city.

* * * * * * *

The movement to remember the anniversary of their King started among the Swedes of New York and Brooklyn in May last. The most enthusiastic over the project, were the members of the Swedish Engineers' Club, whose house is at 439 Henry Street, Brooklyn. The project really started among them, and Mr. Ernst Lundgren, a Swedish lawyer of New York and a member of the club, has been the most active worker in the cause. Mr. Lundgren was the Swedish commissioner to the World's Fair, and was knighted and decorated by King Oscar for his services at that time.

A committee was appointed to sound the Swedes West and South of which Mr. Lundgren was elected president.

* * * * * * *

The responses from the West and South were that the Swedish-Americans were enthusiastic over the project, and that if the Swedes of the East subscribed half as much money as they did the committee would be able to send King Oscar a testimonial worthy of him.

With this encouraging news Mr. Lundgren and his associates sent word to every Swedish artist and sculptor in the country, inviting him to compete for two prizes which would be given for the best designs submitted. No restrictions were placed upon the competitors and no particular design was suggested. The whole field was thrown open, the only condition being that all competitors must be Swedes.

It took Mr. Lundgren and his associates a long time to make up their minds about the designs submitted, but they finally decided upon Mr. Fribert's and awarded that artist the first prize. Mr. Fribert is a comparatively young man, and studied in Paris for many years before coming to this country. His right name is Friberg, but he changed it during his residence in Paris. The design shows two female figures representing Sweden and Norway, holding aloft the royal crown, and inscribed "1814" the date of the consolidation of the two countries. Below is a globe showing Europe and North America, while directly underneath are the flags of Sweden and the United States, crossed and supporting an eagle in the centre.

Mr. Lindstrom's design is a huge cup, which he has called "The Son of Sveat," cover of the cup holds a figure of a woman who has a small child in her arms. From the top of a lily the Goddesss of Fame reaches with a wreath in her hands to crown Sveat. At the foot of the cup sits the Goddess of History, while at one side is a picture of King Oscar II in bas-relief.

* * * * * * *

Mr. Lundgren, when seen by a reporter, said that the subscriptions from Swedish-Americans for the testimonial would amount to about $15,000, and perhaps more.

"What we want is to have all Swedes give something, so that the testimonial will represent as fully as possible the universal love which the Swedes of America have for the sovereign of the mother country. If each Swede gives twenty-five or fifty cents, or even less, the total will be more than enough, for in this country there are 3,000,000 Swedes today 75,000 of them living in New York and Brooklyn alone.

All of the money subscribed will not go for the testimonial. It will not be needed. The remainder will go to the fund which the people of Sweden are now raising to found a sanitarium for sufferers from tuberculosis. You probably know that some time ago the people of Sweden started a great subscription fund from which to purchase King Oscar a pleasure yacht. When the subscription was well under way the King heard of it and requested the people to devote the money to the building of a sanitarium instead of for luxuries for him.—New York Sun.

Mixed Mustard for Cold Meat.—Cream one heaped tablespoonful butter and one tablespoonful sugar. Add two tablespoonfuls sugar. Add two tablespoonfuls mustard mixed with one tablespoonful salt. Beat one egg very light and beat it into the creamed mixture. Heat half a cup of vinegar to boiling point and stir it in quickly and if it does not thicken the egg set the bowl over boiling water a few minutes stirring constantly until thick.

The Fountain of Youth.

We all remember the story of Ponce de Leon seeking the fountain of eternal youth; and we all sympathize with him in his search. Youth means so much. It means more than life—for sometimes life becomes a weariness. But youth—with its abounding health and vigor, elastic step, glowing cheeks, and sparkling eyes—we all covet genuine youth.

The weakness or disease which ages people before their time, is not the result of accumulated years; it is the effect of wrong living and unhealthy blood. When the blood is pure and fresh the body will be full of youth.

Thousands of people who seemed to have lost their youth by disease and suffering have found it again through the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the most perfectly natural and scientific rejuvenator of the physical forces ever known to medical science.

It gives the blood-making organs power to make new blood, full of the life-giving red corpuscles which drive out disease, build up fresh tissue, solid muscular flesh and healthy nerve force. It gives constitutional power, deep and full and strong; rounds out hollow cheeks and emaciated forms; gives plumpness, color and animation.

It does not make flabby fat like cod liver oil. On this account, it is a perfect tonic for corpulent people.

It aids digestion and the natural action of the liver, and by feeding the nerves with highly vitalized blood banishes nervousness, neuralgia and insomnia.

Where a constipated condition exists, the "Discovery" should be used in conjunction with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, which are the most perfect, mild and natural laxative in the world. There is nothing else "just as good." There is nothing that will do the work so thoroughly, surely and comfortably.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

TWO LITTLE TRAMPS.

Trippety Trot and Trudgety Tramp
Were gipsies both, who traveled all day,
Side by side in two little tents,
For the best of friends, you know, were they.
And Trudgety Tramp and Trippety Trot
Were so near alike that none could tell
Which was which, so the people said,
Who knew these queer little gipsies well.

Out in the garden, through rows of posies;
Down in the meadow, where dews lie damp;
Chasing a butterfly over the clover;
Goes Trippety Trot and Trudgety Tramp.
All day bobbing along together,
Two covered wagons of odd design,
Many hard roads do they have to travel,
Up hill and down, through rain and shine.

And five little children apiece have they
This Trudgety Tramp and Trippety Trot,
For I counted them as all together they came,
Trespassing over my own front lot;
And five little heads were sticking out,
From the front of each raggedy tattered tent,
Five little, pink little, Trippety Trots.
And five little Tramps on mischief bent.

For Trippety Trot is a dear little foot,
And Trudgety Tramp is another, you know;
And each little wagon, a worn little shoe,
With a hole in the front, I know, 'tis so,
Where five little toes come crowding out,
To scuffle the dust and feel the damp,
The rosy babies of Trippety Trot,
And the dimpled darlings of Trudgety Tramp.

—Maude Harrison Huey, in Interior.

THE WHISPERING FOOTPRINTS.

"Eddy, oh-h, Eddy, where are you?"

"Here, mother," came a shrill little voice from the back yard.

"Come here, Eddy; I want you to do something for me."

Then the back door opened, and Mrs. Taylor heard the soft thud of bare feet along the passage. But when Eddy entered the sitting-room, and stood by mother's sewing-table, she only said, "Why, Eddy, what's the matter?"

Now there were no cuts or bumps or bruises about the little boy. Why should the mother think anything was the matter? Because his brown eyes, which generally looked right up at you, like two little birds flying out of a cage, now had an uneasy look; neither here nor there, but away.

"Nothing's the matter," said Eddy, looking out of the window: "What did you call me for, mother?"

She had wanted him to run down to the village postoffice, to mail a letter, but the letter was forgotten now. Mother was silent for a few minutes; then seeing something between her table and the door, she spoke:

"I am sorry my little boy has disobeyed me about going to the apple bin without leave." Eddy gave a little start. "The reason God put me here as your mother, Eddy, is because he thinks I know better what you ought to do, and ought not do, than you do yourself."

Eddy did not answer. He was asking himself how mothers knew everything a fellow did.

"I am specially sorry that you should disobey me by sneaking through the coal room window," said Mrs. Taylor. "I would much rather have you say, 'I won't mind you,' and go in before my eyes, than go in by telling a lie."

"Why, mother, I didn't say—" began Eddy, glad of a chance to defend himself.

"Do you think you only talk with your lips?" interrupted his mother. "What do you suppose has whispered to me that you have been in the apple cellar, and that went through the coal room?"

"I can't imagine," said Eddy, honestly.

"Look behind you."

The little boy turned, and there, between him and the door, were five coal-dusty footprints on the white matting! Mother could not help smiling at the look of surprise and dismay on the little face, but it was a rather mournful smile.

"Do you think we can ever do wrong, Eddy, and not leave marks of it somewhere?" she asked. "And, oh! my little boy, the marks that sin leaves are on your heart, which ought to be clean and white for God's eyes, instead of being all tracked over by wrong doing."

"Won't they come out?' asked Eddy. He meant the footprints on the matting, but his mother was thinking about those other marks, when she said, "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin. You must ask him to forgive you, Eddy, and to take away your guilt, and to make you hate sin, which leaves such ugly footprints on your little life."

And then for a punishment, and for a reminder, mother kept the footprints on the sitting-room floor that whole day, so that Eddy might see them and remember how every wrong deed left dark stains on his little life.—Exchange.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Mr. Editor:—My mama takes the PRESBYTERIAN and we all like it very much. My papa has been dead five years and one of my brothers has been dead about four years and a half. I have three brothers and one sister living. I go to Buffalo church. We have preaching twice a month. Rev. J. McL. Seabrook is our pastor. I have on pets but one and that is a hen. She is nine months old. She has laid two sets of eggs and is setting now. I will close.

Your unknown friend,
CORNIE SIKES.
Greensboro, N. C.

Dear Presbyterian:—I haven't written to the PRESBYTERIAN this year so I will write now. I had a nice Christmas. My brother Ernest came home from Davidson and spent Christmas with us and of course we had a nice time. He has gone back to school now and will not be back before June. I am going to school now and will be going till April I guess. I have not been but two days this week, the snow stopped us. The young ladies and gentlemen have been riding around in their sleighs. Hoping the paper a happy New Year.

Your friend,
CORNIE WILKINSON.
Ridgeville, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I am a very small girl about thirteen years old. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. My teacher is so good and kind It makes me love to go. Miss Lillie Cole is my teacher. We had a nice Christmas tree and I got some nice presents. I have three brothers and one sister at home and two sister married, and one brother and one sister dead. My mama and papa and myself and one of my sisters and two of my brothers are members of the Presbyterian church. Mr. Coppedge is our pastor and we all love him dearly. If there is anything that I enjoy it is to get a new paper and read the Children's Column. I have one pet cat. As this is the second letter that I ever wrote. I will stop, but if I see this in print I will write again.

I am your little friend,
MARY SOLOMON.
Roberdel, N. C.

A little word in kindness spoken
A motion or a tear,
Hath often healed the heart that's broken,
And made a heart sincere."

Dear Presbyterian:—I thought I would write to you as I never have done so before. We take your good paper. I like to read the little letters very much. We write letters every other Friday. We had a nice time Christmas. We had holiday two weeks. The largest girls had an apron party and had the boys to hem them. I have three sisters and one brother. I room with Minnie Reynolds. She is my monitress. I like her right well. We have a new matron. Miss Watts has gone off for a visit. I have been here about four months. I like to stay here. My father has been dead about six months.

Your little friend,
SALLIE LINEBERGER.
Barium Springs, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor: I wish to write you a short letter to surprise my father. I am a little boy eight years old. I go to Sunday-school. My Uncle John Reid is Superintendent, we all love him very much. We only have preaching once a month, Rev. R. A. Miller is our pastor. Wishing you a happy New Year, I close.

SECULAR NEWS.

NORTH CAROLINA.

We are glad to see that the Robesonian is again among our exchanges.

Tobacco is being taken to Durham in large quantities. The prices are good.

Dr. Kilgo, president of Trinity College, Durham, has sent out requests for young trees to be planted in the college grounds. The trees will be planted out on Arbor Day.

The Association of the North Carolina Superintendents was to have met at Chapel Hill on the 25th and 26th for the discussion of questions relating to the advancement of our public schools. This association meets just prior to the inauguration of President Alderman.

The Southport Leader says over 1,200 feet of rails have been laid on the railway on Oak Island, to be used for conveying material for the construction of the gun emplacements at Fort Caswell. The remainder of the rails will soon be laid. An engine will be taken down next month to run on the railway. Nearly all the piling for the dock has been driven.

La grippe is prevailing in the Lincolnton section.

DOMESTIC.

A severe wind and snow storm has prevailed in South Dakota. The thermometer is 14 degrees below zero and all railroads are blocked. A fuel war is threatened.

A life-size portrait of John Hopkins, the founder of the celebrated hospital of Baltimore, will be placed in the entrance hall of that institution. The portrait shows Mr. Hopkins standing erect near a small table which is covered with businesslike paraphernalia. The rather heavy features are lighted by a quizzical smile and there is a keen look of interest in the narrow eyes. Many persons who knew Mr. Hopkins in life pronounce the portrait a remarkable likeness.

The Peoria Grape Sugar Company will at once proceed with the work of increasing the capacity of its plant from 15,000 to 25,000 bushels of corn per day. Glucose, commercial starch, grape sugar and kindred products will be manufactured. The increased capacity will necessitate the employment of an additional force of 300 men.

The opening of the great free circulating library of New Orleans was made an event of great importance and magnificence. Religious and civic leaders joined in tributes to the popular educational purposes contemplated; magnificent music divided honors with eloquence, and the affair made as memorable as the event which it marks.

FOREIGN.

The blizzard in Great Britain and Ireland caused sad havoc. A number of wrecks have been reported and much damage done on land. Traffic across the English channel was for a time suspended.

It is stated that 450,000 persons have died in Bombay on account of the bubonic plage.

Spain is submerged from the overflow of the Guadalquiver and Manzanares rivers Railway travel is entirely suspended and the port of Sarille closed on account of high water. The loss of property is enormous.

Severe shocks of earthquake have been experienced in the province of Delvino Epirus, Greece. A number of villages have been destroyed, and it is feared that many of the inhabitants of the province have been killed or injured.

The gunboat Machias has arrived at Bangkok under orders to protect American interests.

Senator Paul de Remusat died in Paris on the 22d inst. In 1857 M. Paul de Remusat became one of the editors of the Journal Des Debats, writing notably upon scientific subjects. He also contributed to other periodicals. After the revolution of September 4th, 1870, he accompanied M. Thiers in the latter's diplomatic mission to the principal courts of Europe, and he was elected to the national assembly in the following year. In 1876 he was elected vice-president of the Chamber of Deputies, and in 1890 he was elected a member of the Academy of Moral and Political Sciences,

Sir Isaac Pitman, so well known as the inventor of the Pitman system of shorthand died in London on the 22nd inst., aged eighty-three years. Besides printing his own instruction books for teaching phonetic shorthand, Mr. Pitman issued a little library of about eighty volumes, printed entirely in shorthand, and ranging from the Bible to "Rasselas." An international shorthand congress and jubilee of phonography was held in London in the autumn of 1887, and Mr. Pitman's family was presented with his bust, a replica of which was placed in the Royal literary and Scientific Institution at Bath. Mr. Pitman was knighted in '94.

SAY SOES.

Irresolution stutters with both tongue and feet.

Lemons afford relief to feverish thirst in sickness, for biliousness, low fevers, rheumatism, colds, coughs, liver complaint, etc.

Buckingham's Dye for the Whiskers is a popular preparation in one bottle, and colors evenly a brown or black. Any person can easily apply it at home.

Clothespins boiled a few minutes and quickly dried, once or twice a month, become more durable.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

Butter made in three minutes is what I did and I am going to make a fortune selling the Queen Butter Maker, that makes butter in three minutes, as everyone that I have shown it to wants one. All you have to do is to place the cream in the Machine, give a few turns of the crank, and the butter is made and gathered ready to be salted. I am perfectly delighted with my success and feel sure I am going to make $100 a month and not work hard either. I will devote my whole time to it as it is the easiest thing to sell I ever saw. I met Mr. Hines, of Columbus, who had made $75 the first week, which is only five a day. Anyone who has made butter will know how hard it is to churn and will be glad to have a churn that will relieve them of all this work. Anybody can get circular by writing the Queen Butter Maker Co., 48 East 3rd St., Cincinnati, who will give territory and sell machines to anybody who may ask. WILL C.

Cold meats may be hashed fine and mixed with potatoes, rice, or hominy and a sauce and made into croquettes.

THINGS USEFUL.

Honey for Erysipelas.—Shave the head and face if necessary, spread the honey thickly on cloth, cut holes for the eyes if the face is the part affected, and change the application every three or four hours.

Broiled Oysters.—Carefully remove all bits of shell from large oysters, lay them between the bars of a buttered oyster gridiron and then hold them over a hot fire until their edges begin to curl. Season. Serve at once on toast.

For good mincemeat take one quart of apples, one pint meat chopped fine, one pint of sugar, one-half pint of molasses, one pint of cider, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, two teaspoonfuls of allspice, one teaspoonful of cloves, two nutmegs, one cupful of raisins, one-half cupful of currants, little butter and salt, and citron if you like. Add water or juice the meat was boiled in, if not moist enough. Boil 15 or 20 minutes. Can while hot, and it will keep all winter.

Fig Whip.—Chop fine one-quarter of a pound of figs, add three or four tablespoonfuls of hot water and stir and cook them till a smooth paste is formed. Beat the whites of five eggs till foamy, add a saltspoonful of cream of tartar and beat till dry, then beat into them half a cup of powdered sugar and the fig paste. Pour the mixture into a buttered pudding dish, place the dish in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven about 25 minutes. Serve with boiled custard.

To play a part can be good or bad. It is wrong for wickedness to try to pass itself off for goodness, but it is not wrong for a sad heart to try to hide itself behind a smiling face. The disappointed man is not bound to fly storm signals. There is no law that requires pain to be advertised. When locomotives can burn their own smoke, traveling will be pleasanter. There is no danger to the community from people carrying concealed troubles. "A merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance." That is pleasant, but the credit comes in when a sad heart wears a glad countenance for the sake of a world that needs more sunshine. "But thou, when thou fastest, anoint thine head, and wash thy face; that thou appear not unto men to fast."—Sunday School Times.

REV. AND MRS. JOHN L. STUART.

One of the pioneer Presbyterian ministers to Kentucky was Rev. Robert Stuart, of Rockbridge county, Va. One of his sons was Rev. David Todd Stuart, who settled in Shelby county, Ky., where eleven children were born to him and his wife, and grew up to mature years. Their third son, John L., was born Dec. 8th, 1840. After graduation at Centre College, Ky., he taught school four years, until he felt called of God to preach the Gospel. While in the seminary at Princeton, N. J., the call came to him to engage in mission work in China, and in September, 1868, he, in company with Revs. Ben. Helm and M. H. Houston, sailed from New York city. They went by the Isthmus of Panama to San Francisco, and thence to Shanghai, where they were met by Rev. E. B. Inslee who conducted them to Hangchow.

After studying the language eight months, Messrs. Helm and Stuart, with the assistance of Mr. Inslee, opened a station at Guchow, one hundred and eight miles farther in the interior. Here Mr. Stuart remained alone for more than two years when this station was given up, and he opened a new station in the important city of Soochow, where he was soon joined by Rev. and Mrs. H. C. DuBose in 1872. In the spring of 1873, his health having failed, he returned to the United States. In October, 1874, having married Miss Mary Horton, he returned to China. As Mr. Houston and family were about to return to the United States on account of the failure of his health, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart settled in Hangchow, where they have continued to live. During these twenty-two years he has been engaged in the daily preaching of the gospel to the heathen; preaching to and having pastoral care of the Christians; training native helpers, and building up the native church.

In 1887, he paid another visit to the home land with his family, and returned to China the following year to engage in the same kind of work as in former years.

Under the combined efforts of the missionaries and native helpers, the church at Hangchow continued to grow at home, and also sent off helpers to other stations in our mission. In the summer of 1895, there were one hundred and twenty-five native members and three licentiates, and the question of having a native pastor was earnestly considered. Finally it was decided to call the Christians together to choose a pastor, and they elected Dzen Dah San. On Dec. 8th, Mr. Stuart, in company with other ministers, ordained him pastor over the native church in Hangchow.

Now there is a self-governing and self-sustaining church in full operation, with native pastor and ruling elders. This is the culmination of missionary effort in that particular point.

MRS. MARY HORTON STUART.

In 1837, soon after their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Gustavus Horton moved from Boston to Mobile, Ala., where they lived active, useful lives in the church and in the community, and brought up eleven children to walk in their ways. Their fourth child, named Mary Louisa, was born on Jan. 8th, 1842. Her education was pursued in the schools of her native city, and she graduated with the honors of her class, in the High School, in June, 1858. In the following October she entered upon her duties of assistant in the High School, and began a career of marked success as a teacher which continued for sixteen years. During this time, she was also an active worker in the Sunday-school and other Church work. In the year 1873, she felt a call to the foreign field, and offered herself as a missionary to the Committee of Foreign Missions. In May, 1874, she went to the meeting of the General Assembly at Columbus, Miss., to confer with the secretaries. There she first met Mr. Stuart to whom she was married on the 15th of the following October, and they soon departed for China, arriving in Shanghai on Dec. 25th, and in Hangchow on January 8th, 1875.

Here she began the study of the language, and in the course of four months, she felt able to undertake the oversight of a day school, with an educated Christian Chinese woman as a teacher. It was the first attempt ever made in that city of 800,000 people to open a Christian day school, and it proved the successful pioneer of many similar schools. From this time, her work lay chiefly in superintending day schools and in visiting in the homes of families connected with them, though much time was necessarily taken up with home duties incident to the care of her four little boys. The first visit to the home land was made in the year 1887. Returning to her field in the fall of 1888, she left two children in Mobile to be educated. On her arrival in China, she found that the care of the girls school had been assigned to her, in addition to her former work, and it was undertaken with the assistance of a young lady who accompanied her to the field.

After an absence of seven years she returned to the home land again. She is now visiting among the churches, hoping, after a period of rest and intercourse with her children to return again to her chosen field of labor.

We can never see this world in its true light unless we consider our life in it as a state of discipline, a condition through which we are passing to prepare us for another state beyond.—J. W. Alexander.

"GREATER WORKS."

John xiv. 12 is one of the many verses in the parting words of our Lord to His disciples which should be pondered long and earnestly. In the earlier verses of this chapter He speaks to their loneliness and assures them that His going away was to prepare a place for them and to come again that He might receive them to Himself. In verse twelfth He speaks of the purpose He had in leaving His disciples in the world—that, "He that believeth on Me, the works that I do shall hedo also, and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto the Father."

It is not said that the apostles as such or the early disciples in their day merely, should do these things. Words more comprehensive and far reaching are used, even these; "He that believeth on Me." They are similar to the words of the seventeenth chapter; "Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on Me through their words." By these words we understand a promise and an assnrance left to every believer in this world, and Christ is at the right hand of the Father, that every such believer should do the works that Christ did here in His humiliation—and even greater works. Christ lived, meek and lowly of heart, a life of purity, honesty, industry and beneficence. He wrought at His trade, He studied the Scriptures, He cared for His mother, He did what called forthHis Father's words; "In whom I am well pleased." After Him and by the Spirit, sent forth because He went to the Father, every believer is left in this world to represent Him and to do the works He did. In His public ministry Christ did many mighty works. So far as these were miraculous they can be duplicated in the accounts of the miraculous works of the early disciples in the planting and training of the Church. Christ said; "If I by the Spirit of God cast ont devils," thus attributing His triumph over evil spirits to the power of the Holy Spirit. He went to the Father to send forth the Holy Spirit that be lievers by the same Spirit might do the works Christ did.

The "greater works" are at least those wrought by the disciples in being so used by "the power of the Holy Ghost coming upon" them that multitudes were converted. Few more than the "five hundred brethren" were made disciples by Christ's personal ministry. But by the ministry of believers, not limited to apostles, within a few weeks more than five thonsand were converted and many priests were obedient to the faith.

This was because Christ ascended to His Father. We know what that meant. Christ came from the Father to offer Himself a sacrifice for sin to reconcile sinners unto God. When that work was done, He returned to the Father to present it. Because He humbled Himself God hath highly exalted Him and given Him a name above every name, and He is set down at the right hand of God. Coming into this world Christ took the nature and became the Head and Representative of His people and so He is their Head in Heaven and ever liveth to make intercession for them. The words "Because I go unto the Father," are also used by Christ as the condition of the sending forth of the Holy Ghost, not merely as the Spirit and as He wrought before the ascension of Christ, but as the Spirit of the glorified Christ to make effectual the benefits of Christ's atonement. He it is who would work in and through every believer the works that Christ did and greater works.

No minister would take the daring responsibility of claiming such possibilities for the believer. To say that any man may do the works that Christ did and greater works sounds like the claims of a fanatic. So, even the boldest have not claimed it, and the average Christian of to-day either reads these words without weighing them or does not accept and seek to appropriate them.

Can we suppose the faith of one-tenth of our modern church members accepts and claims the fulfilment of this declaration from the lips of Christ Himself? Why not? Instead of doing this the modern church and average Christian is turning to worldly methods and means to secure money for sacred service, is allowing the world to dictate Church policy, and the social pleasures and home attractions of the children of the Church; and in many quarters the servants of Christ, instead of relying on these words, are asking what is popnlar in the way of Church rituals and forms. If Christ should come to our modern Christian churches and home, how far would He find fulfilled John xiv: 12.?

LAST WEEK Rev. S. G. Walker reminded all Presbyterial treasnrers to send one-third of the December collection for Colored Evangelization to Mr. G. W. Watts, Durham, N. C. We now call attention to this matter, which is an order of Synod, because the Colored Academical and Industrial Institute is in the utmost needs of these funds.

WE NOTE THAT Hon. John Wanamaker, so well known in connection with Bethany Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, of which he is the founder and main support, as a thank-offering for his escape from the immense destruction of his property threatened in the conflagration of last week, has resolved to buy a plot of ground in southwestern Philadelphia and to erect thereon a Presbyterian house of worship. A capital way to give practical attestation to his gratitude.

OUR GOOD friends will persist in asking us to reduce the price of the paper. Our answer is, we would be only glad to do so if we could. But with an experience of our own extending over twenty years, and a most woful experience of other papers now gone to the shades on the low price principle, we cannot do it. The Alabama Presbyterian has followed the St. Louis Presbyterian, which had just dropped out from trying to furnish an article for less than the cost of production. No, good, kind friends we are doing all we can in that direction. We cannot reduce the standard price below $2, but any friend wishing to help us can avail himself, or herself, of the various premiums we offer and thus make really more for a little service than could be saved in price of the paper. Think of a magnificent copy of the Oxford—yes, the Oxford! Bible, for a mere song. Try it.

A BROTHER ASKS: "Is it not time some notice should be published about the 250th anniversary of the Westminster Standards to be observed in our Synod? If the Presbyteries are to observe it, committees of arrangements ought to be publishing programmes, &c."

We suppose the committees are arranging the programs, notifying speakers and doing whatever else may be necessary and that the programs will be published in due time.

WE WERE UNDER the impression that the United States authorities had reported adversely on the request of the Roman Catholics to erect a house of worship on the government grounds at West Point—in fact we feel quite sure we had seen it so stated. But the following clipping puts another phase on the matter:

Communications from church bodies in various parts of the country are being received by members of the House Committee on military affairs regarding the action of the Secretary of War in granting permission for the erection of a Catholic Cathedral building on the government grounds at West Point. The matter seemed to have brewed a commotion nearly equal to that which has waged over school appropriations, if the letters coming in are a sign. Several communication from bishops, ministers and organizations, as well as from laymen have been received.

Three other religious bodies have applied for information as to whether they will also be allowed to place church buildings on the West Point grounds. It is possible that the matter may be brought before Congress by a resolution of inquiry or some other method.

THE EXERCISES on the occasion of induction of President Alderman into the Presidency of the University of North Carolina were such as probably have never been surpassed. The address of Gov. Russell, himself an alumnus of the institution, was in every respect most appropriate and most excellent, and not less is to be said of the address of President Alderman. The latter really adds to the reputation of one who has fairly earned the reputation of one of the foremost educators and one of the ablest writers and speakers in the country.

We get from the News and Observer a part of the proceedings:

Gov. Russell in a few, but well chosen words, inducted the new president into office.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler made an eloquent speech of congratulation. It was beautiful for choice of words and rhetorical eloquence. He spoke without notes for twenty minutes—concisely, greatly, and as one of authority.

Speaking of the excellent address of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, Mr. Francis D. Winston, of Bertie county, said:

"Dr. Butler put as many ideas in one sentence as words can contain. He is the expert of education as a profession. He showed wonderful familiarity with North Carolina affairs. No better address has ever been delivered in the State. His announcement that North Carolina was the most American State of the union was greeted with applause.

Dr. Alderman's address came next on the programme and was a masterly speech.

The Glee Club then sang.

Col. Thomas S. Kenan, who presided, read a number of congratulatory letters and telegrams, among them letters from from ex-President Winston, Dr. J. B. Shearer, president of Davidson College, and Mr. William J. Bailey, editor of the Biblical Recorder. The faculty and students of the Greensboro Normal and Industrial school, where Dr. Alderman had been professor, telegraphed:

Greensboro, Jan. 27th.

Colonel Thomas S. Kenan:

All honor and long life to President Edwin A. Alderman, of the University of North Carolina.

STUDENTS AND TEACHERS.

Colonel Kenan then read the following telegram:

Baltimore, Md., Jan. 27th.

Dr. Edwin A. Alderman, Chapel Hill, N. C.:

Success to you as president of the greatest institution of learning in North Carolina. May the people never forget their constitutional obligations to support and sustain it and thus promote its prosperity through the ages.

D. G. WORTH.

Colonel Kenan stated that this telegram came from an alumnus who lies at Johns Hopkins hospital on his sick bed—from a son of the university who had been loyal in his love and liberal in his gifts.

For the N. C. Presbyterian.

TO ALL LADIES' SOCIETIES.

DEAR FRIENDS:—The department of work committed to the Executive Committee of Education for the Ministry is that of aiding young men in their preparation to preach the Gospel.

At the monthly meeting of the Committee, held yesterday, our Treasurer's statement showed that our receipts from the churches are nearly $1,000 less than they were at the same time last year.

While the Presbyteries have asked us to aid their candidates to the amount $15,332.50, we have been able to send them only $6,127.25.

We know the pressure for other causes is great, (and they are sacred), but surely the obligation of the Church to aid her candidates is no less sacred; and the wisdom of doing so must be apparent to all.

We appeal, therefore, to your Society to aid us in this emergency. Will yon not send us $5 or $10, or any amount that you my feel able to give?

If any Society or individual wishes to aid a special candidate, by paying the appropriation made by the Committee ($75), or any part of it, or making a special contribution in addition to what has been promised by the Committee, let the money be sent to our Treasurer, G. W. Macrae, 383 Front Street, Memphis, Tenn., and it will be paid to the one for whom it is intended.

A general, generous and prompt response to this appeal will greatly aid our young men, and will surely received the Divine approbation.

E. M. RICHARDSON,
Secretary.

Memphis, Tenn. Jan. 20th, 1897.

CHISELING FOR GOD.

A stonecutter was at work under his shed, chiseling on a block of stone, preparing it to be placed in the walls of some edifice. A friend stepping in, asked the question, "What is to be done with this stone?" "I have not seen the plan," was the stonecutter's reply; and on he went with his chiseling, content patiently and steadily to work day by day, getting it ready for its designed place—chiseling, chiseling, chiseling.

There are many patient and earnest workers who are chiseling for God—the faithful minister in his appointed sphere, the humble and devoted wife at home among her children, and a thousand other workers who steadily pursue their course, day after day, until life ends. They have "not seen the plan," and yet they toil in hope. They know that the great Architect knows exactly where to place each stone in the building, and they go on with their chiseling—it may be, beguiling the weary hours with a song. Think you the Master will not pay them their wages? He will.—Christian Alliance.

OUR PREMIUM BIBLE.

Measures 5x7 inches when Closed, and Contains 1,600 Pages of Reading Matter—Several hundred pages of Useful Information, besides the Scriptural Text.

At length we find ourselves with pride and pleasure, able to offer a Bible premium to workers for the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN. The size and quality of type of our Bible is represented by the cut here given:

The binding is flexible, the edges are gilt and the references within are full. The Bible contains besides 1050 pages of Scriptural text, the HELPS to Scriptnre reading and study including Subject Index, Concordance, a most serviceable General Topical Index, a large number of pages treating of the Titles, Authorship, Distinctive Characters, Contents, &c., of the varions books of the Bible, A Description of the Inhabitants, Physical Geography, Customs and Political Condition of the Holy Land at the beginning of the Christian era, the Botany of the Bible, Glossary of Antiquities, Customs, 12 maps, etc., being the Oxford Helps, acknowledged to be the very best, besides 124 full page illustrations of the Languages, Writing, &c., of the Old and New Testaments, of the bas reliefs and the like, discoveries in archæological researches, and now in the British museum—and very much else; making altogether the most desirable copy of the Scriptnres for Bible students that has come to our knowledge. The book contains over 1,600 pages.

The Bible is an offer in connection with the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN—the only medium thro which one can become well acquainted with what is going on in the Synod of North Carolina—on the folowing terms:

We will give this Bible as payment for help rendered to any old subscriber who will send us the name of a BONA FIDE new subscriber along with $2.25.

The new subscriber gets the paper very cheap—we offer it to any bona fide new subscriber for $1.50 for the first year—and the worker gets amply compensated in a magnificently cheap Bible for his or her good work.

A new subscriber to get the Bible can subscribe for himself at $1.50 and then send another new subscriber with $2.25.

The Premium offered is the Genuine Edition of the Oxford Teacher's Bible.

We trnst our friends will go to work promptly on this plan.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON CHURCH AND CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

To the Synod of North Carolina:

The Synod's Committee of Church and Christian Education beg leave to make the following report:

The past year has been marked with great prosperity and progress in all the departments of this work.

1. Davidson College has had the largest attendance in her history, and the work done has been eminently satisfactory. She was greatly bereaved in the death of her senior professor, Dr. W. J. Martin, so long a tower of strength to the College. The Alumni have undertaken to build a Science Hall as a memorial of his life and labors in the cause of Church Education. Three thousand dollars have been subscribed in part of the fifteen thousand needed.

2. Peace Institute also was never more flourishing, and the work she is doing for the Master is beyond price. It behooves the Synod to exhaust every means of establishing close and permanent relations with this school. The Presbyterians of the State could hardly do a better thing than to invest $50,000 in that institution. The Church must maintain a fair and honorable rivalry with the State.

3. Female education has been more emphasized during the past year than perhaps ever before. Three female colleges or seminaries have been founded and successfully started. The Presbytery of Fayetteville has founded one at Red Springs, having expended over $6,000 on the building. The Presbyteries of Concord and Mecklenburg have founded one in Charlotte, N. C., and have already expended $10,000 in part payment for the property, repairs, and furnishing. The Statesville Female College has also been purchased for the Presbyterian Church and over six thousand dollars expended in part payment for the property, repairs, and furnishing. It is the purpose of these three schools to furnish a thorough education on such terms that it may be in reach of all.

4. Much progress has been made likewise in preparatory schools, academies, parochial schools, mission schools, and private school enterprises, with promise of increasing usefulness from year to year. Synod's Committee will present a special report on Parochial Schools at this meeting.

5. It will be seen from the financial statement herewith submitted that a larger number of churches contributed to this cause than ever before. The aggregate, however, is not increased, owing, no doubt, to the large amounts contributed to the female schools named, and to local enterprises. Eighty-five churches have contributed $832.80. Of this amount $71.22 went directly to the Mebane High School from Orange Presbytery; $156 to the mountain schools in Concord Presbytery and $350 to Davidson College. This leaves $254 58, less $9.91 expenses, which has been disbursed by your committee as follows: To Red Springs Seminary, $43.76; to the Mountain Mission schools in Concord Presbytery $43; and to Davidson College $158.91. No mention is made of monies specially raised for local purposes.

6. Your agent and chairman sent the usual circular letter to the churches as authorized, and will do so again unless otherwise intructed.

Financial statement, November 1895, to November, 1896:

SPECIAL REPORT ON PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS.

An overture from Orange Presbytery to the last meeting of Synod, on the subject of Parochial Schools, was approved by Synod and the following answer was given:

"That the overture be granted, and the Synod's Committee of Church and Christian Education be appointed to perform the duties contemplated in the overture."

Your Committee would recommend the following action:

1. It is both proper and desirable for the Church to control and direct the primary and preparatory education of her children, male and female, as far as circumstances may permit.

2. To this end we recommend to the consideration of all churches, the establishing of parochial schools in every parish or congregation, which shall either be independent of or supplementary to public or private schools already in existence.

3. We recommend the Presbyteries to found and foster schools in all their mission fields, and we do especially recommend to our well established churches to use such schools in their local mission work, and also to assist the schools founded by Presbyteries in their mission fields through the collection for Church and Christian Education, and otherwise.

4. We propose to the churches the following constitution for Parochial Schools for uniform adoption:

1. The Presbyterian church of —— does undertake to establish a school, to be under Church control as a Christian school.

2. The sole government and administration of the school shall be vested in a board of trustees of three members appointed by the session, whose terms of office shall be one, two, and three years, respectively, and the session shall fill vacancies as they recur, electing for three-year terms. Two members shall constitute a quorum.

3. The school shall be limited in its scope and design to primary and preparatory education, male or female, or both.

4. The Bible shall be used as a text book throughout the school in such measure and proportion as the Board may determine, so as to make the school distinctively a Christian school; and the standards of the Church, also, as far as it may be found practicable.

5. The Board shall have power to raise and disburse monies and to hold property in trust in furtherance of this object if necessary.

6. The Board shall, at their discretion, found and develop the school as rapidly as the means in hand may justify without incurring debt.

7. The Board shall adopt their own by-laws subject to the limitations of this paper, which shall be of the nature of fundamental law to the Board in the execution of their trust.

8. In case it shall ever prove desirable to secure a charter of incorporation, the provisions of this paper shall be incorporated into the charter, or else adopted as a fixed part of the by-laws.

9. This paper, mutatis mutandis, is recommended to the Presbyteries for the founding of Presbyterial schools of any grade.

Agent and Chairman.

CONCERNING BOOKS.

One is sometimes asked by young people to recommend a course of reading. My advice would be that they should confine themselves to the supreme books in whatever literature, or better still to choose some great author, and make themselves thoroughly familiar with him. For, as all roads lead to Rome, so do they likewise lead away from it, and you will find that, in order to understand perfectly and weigh exactly any vital piece of literature, you will be gradually and pleasantly persuaded to excursions and explorations of which you little dreamed when you began, and you will find yourselves scholars before you are aware. For remember there is nothing less profitable than scholarship for the mere sake of scholarship, nor anything more wearisome in the attainment. But the moment you have a definite aim, attention is quickened, the mother of memory, and all that you acquire groups and arranges itself in an order that is lucid, because everywhere and always it is in intelligent relation to a central object of constant and growing interest. This method also forces upon us the necessity of thinking, which is, after all, the highest result of all education. For what we want is not learning, but knowledge; that is, the power to make learning answer its true end as a quickener of intelligence and a widener of our intellectual sympathies. I do not mean to say that every one is fitted by nature or inclination for a definite course of study, or indeed for serious study in any sense. I am quite willing that they should "browse in a library" as Dr. Johnson called it, to their heart's content. It is perhaps the only way in which time may be profitably wasted. But desultory reading will not make a "full man," as Bacon understood it, of one who has not Johnson's memory, his power of assimilation, and, above all, his comprehensive view of the relation of things. "Read not," says Lord Bacon, in his essay of studies, "to contradict and confute: nor to believe and take for granted; nor to find talk and discourse; but to weigh and consider. Some books are to be tasted, others to be swallowed, and some few to be chewed and digested; that is, some books are to be read only in parts; others to be read, but not curiously [carefully], and some few to be read wholly and with diligence and attention. Some books also may be read by deputy." This is weighty and well said, and I would call your attention especially to the wise words with which the passage closes. The best books are not always those which lend themselves to discussion and comment, but those (like Montaigne's essays) which discuss and comment ourselves.—James Russel Lowell, in Books and Libraries.

RICHES IN LIFE.

"For to me to live is Christ. This is the ideal of the Christian life exemplified in actual experience. It was a man with like passions with ourselves who made this declaration; a man whose human nature and infirmities were so fully under the power of that Divine love which transforms all of whom it takes possession, that he was no longer his old self at all, but a thoroughly new creature in Christ Jesus. This is the man who used to persecute Christians; who delighted in taking the severest measures with all who differed with him in opinion; full of vindictive pride and murderous intention; the man to whom Jesus once said, "Why persecutest thou Me?" Some great change must have been wrought in him to turn the old, selfish way of living into a life of absorbing and happy devotion to the Lord Jesus. Yes; one day, while bent upon his own self-will, he met the Lord. A light shone upon his path, a voice spoke from heaven. Self-surrender took the place of self-will, and from that moment of self-surrender a master hand controlled the grand possibilities of his being. He was converted and regenerated by the indwelling Holy Spirit. After that he made the knowledge of Jesus his chief interest. He counted everything secondary to that attainment, and how fully and blessedly he came to know Him! So well he knew Him that he was perfectly sure that all his affairs were safe in His keeping, so that he had a heart "at leisure from itself" to teach and comfort others. He had such a view of himself as the "chief of sinners" that this wonderful Saviour was very dear and precious to him. Knowing Him and rejoicing in Him, he had come to see that the sweetest joy in all the world was to make this Saviour known to others. These experiences have been repeated in many lives since St. Paul. They should be realized by every Christian, in the midst of common-place toil, in the most limited sphere, by the most ordinary person. "For to me to live is Christ" should be the joyful affirmation of every one of His followers.

"To live is Christ" means that we have His spirit and do His work as He would do it were He here; not in His measure, but in the same spirit. "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus," "who went about doing good." What would Jesus do were He living just where you live and in your circumstances? He would absolutely trust His Father; He would never doubt His love, His care, or the wisdom of His ways; He would help the poor, the sick, the sorrowful; He would comfort the troubled heart, no matter how greatly His own might be burdened; He would not do His own will, but the will of Him that sent Him.

How the joy of thus living grows with our years! "That mother just lives for her child," we say; that is, she cares for nothing that may happen to herself if only her child may be well provided for. That sort of living is her joy. Any love that carries us out of self is a joy; and far beyond all else is the love for Jesus which carries us out of self so that "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me:" and far beyond all other joy is that which comes from such loving and such living. These are riches which take not to themselves wings and fly away—Christian Advocate.

WHAT WILL GOD DO THIS YEAR?

What will God do this year? How will He come near to man? It may be, oh, that it might be! that He will break up this awful sluggishness of Christendom, this terrible torpidity of the Christian Church and give us a great true revival of religion. It may be that He will speak some great imperious command to the brutal and terrible spirit of war, and will open the gate upon a bright period of peace throughout the world. It may be that He will draw back the curtain and throw some of His light upon the question of how the poor and the rich may live together in more cordial brotherhood. It may be that He will lead up from the depths of their common faith a power of unity unto the sects of a divided Christendom. Perhaps He will smite this selfishness of fashionable life, and make it earnest. Perhaps by some terrible catastrophe He will teach the nation that corruption is ruin, and that nothing but integrity can make any nation strong. Perhaps this! perhaps that! We make our guesses, and no man can truly say. Only we know that with a world that needs so much, and with a God who knows its needs and who loves it and pities it so tenderly, there must be in the long year some approach of His life to its life, some coming of the Lord!—Phillips Brooks.

CHANGES OF ADDRESS.

Correspondents will please note the following changes of address:

Rev. W. T. Palmer, from Trenton, Tenn., to Dyersbury, Tenn.

Rev. W. O. Cochrane, from Maysville, Ky., to Bristol, Tenn.

Rev. G. L. Brown, from Keezletown, Va., to Penn Laid, Va. Field of labor remains unchanged.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Rev. H. M. Parker:—In another column find interesting article concerning this brother's labors in South Side church, Asheville, and Oak Forest.

New Hope:—The mother church of the county—while she herself is only about two years old is "lengthening her cords and strengthening her stakes" for other new work. The Y. P. S. of C. E. is doing good work. Communion of the Lord's Supper was observed on last Sabbath, 24th inst. Seven new members have recently been added to our number for which we give thanks to God.

Brunswick County Field:—Sweet Home church. On Sunday, Jan. 17th, the communion of the Lord's Supper was administered. This was the first communion observed by our little church, and it was a spiritual feast indeed. Our little band gathered around the Lord's Table in holy reverence, and I trust were drawn closer to the Saviour and to one another. Our Sunday school is making progress. We have our new organ now, for which we are very thankful, and all of our services will be much improved by our thus being enabled better to "sing praises unto our Lord."

The Shorter Catechism:—An interesting service was held in the Raleigh Presbyterian church on last Sunday. The pastor Rev. Eugene Daniel, D. D, and the superintendent of the school, during the morning session called to the platform quite a large number of young ladies, girls and boys, who had committed to memory, and had perfectly recited the Shorter Catechism, and presented to each one a very handsome diploma printed in two colors, on heavy bond paper. A similar diploma was presented to a number in the Infant class for reciting perfectly the Child's Catechism. A special effort is being made, during this "Catechism Anniversary Year," to encourage an interest in the subject. Other schools may be interested on this line.

Evangelism In Stokes County:—In the beginning of January Rev. R. W. George held a meeting at Mt. Olive Missionary Baptist Church a few miles south of the Sauratown range of mountains, in Stokes county. The meeting continued twelve days, Brother George doing all the preaching. There were thirty-four professions, twenty-nine giving their names to join the different churches. Among the converts was one man 64 years old, another 58. All were males but seven, some of them cases that no one expected to see converted. Most of the converts will join other churches there being no Presbyterian church near. Some of them may join our church at Danbury. Brother George gives the praise to God and takes courage. He will begin at Pilot Mountain on Sunday, 31st.

Evangelist Robt. V. Miller was with us in Danbury the first ten days of January. His clear preaching and his instructive Bible readings were much enjoyed and we hope that our community received a spiritual uplift. Our congregations were good, the last night the house being full to overflowing. There were only a few professions, but we trust impressions were made on others which may result in much spiritual good. We commend Bro. Miller as a faithful, earnest and scriptural evangelist.

Mt. Airy:—Rev. C. W. Robinson, of North Wilkesboro visited us the second Sunday in January, and preached morning and night; at the morning service three persons united with the church upon profession, and the communion was administered. It was a very delightful and sweet season to the members of the church, as it had been more than twelve months since we had commemorated our Saviour's dying love in our own church, and more than four months since we had had preaching. Bro. Robinson, by his earnest and forcible preaching, and charming manners, won the hearts of our people, and we would be delighted to have him come and see us again. On Monday night following Evangelist Robt. V. Miller, of Asheville preached, and protracted the services for two weeks. His first message caught the ear and impressed the hearts of the people, and the interest increased, and the feeling deepened with each succeeding service and the last was the best of all. His preaching was plain, pointed, earnest, Scriptural and therefore powerful. No statement was made that was not backed with a "Thus sayeth the Lord." His familiarity with the Scriptures strikes one with wonder and amazement. He is thoroughly orthodox so far as the writer is able to judge in doctrine and methods. The one prominent characteristic of his preaching, is his exceeding clearness of statement. The writer has been a follower of the Master for more than fifteen years, but has now a clearer conception of the whole scheme of salvation than ever before, and rejoices that he heard him. The Christians of all denominations co-operated and as a result the entire community has been very greatly benefitted. We pray that Bro. Miller's labors may be blessed elsewhere as they were here.

Hillsboro Church:—Quarterly communion was observed Jan. 17th, and one name was announced as having been added to the church roll on profession of faith—this makes eight additions during the quarter.

VIRGINIA.

Armstrong Memorial Church, Berkeley:—Rev. W. A. Slaymaker, pastor. Ten persons recently received.

FLORIDA.

High Springs:—Rev. D. W. Humphrey and Rev. H. H. Newman according to the direction of Suwanee Presbytery recently organized a church at this point with eighteen members. All the church buildings here were blown down by storm. The Plant System have moved the railroad shops to High Springs and life and enterprise have sprung up in the town.

TENNESSEE.

Bristol:—Rev. W. O. Cochrane, has entered upon his duties as pastor of the First church. Mr. Cochrane and family were most cordially received by the members of his congregation.

KENTUCKY.

Notes from Springdale:—Last February, cottage prayer-meetings were commenced, and have been held every week, Wednesday night, in different parts of the congregation. Only once has the pastor, Rev. E. H. Amis been absent, having been detained by indisposition; even when the mercury was about zero, he was at his appointment three miles distant. His earnest exposition of the Word has gained the attention of his hearers, and his great interet in the young people, won their love and respect. Faithful seed sowing is bringing forth fruit, which we trust will be a hundred fold to the glory of God. A Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor was organized some time ago, which is kept up with increasing interest. There are not many young people in the small Presbyterian church, but those from the Methodist and Lutheran churches have joined them at almost every meeting. The boys and young men conduct the meetings, and lead in prayer, while the older silent members look on, and listen with wonder, wishing that they too had been taught to take up the cross in their youth. The pastor and session attend the meetings, and all things are done decently and in order. The missionary topic for the 17th gave a very interesting meeting; eight accounts were read of revivals in domestic and foreign fields. Any church which does not avail itself of the wonderful means for development, and growth in grace, of its young members, gained in the Y. P. S. C. E., is losing the opportunity it affords for training them to be strong in the Lord and faithful laborers in the Master's vineyard.

PERSONALS.

Rev. Geo. G. Woodbridge has resigned the pastorate of the Second church of Houston, Texas.

Rev. Dr. Saunders, of Fredericksburg, Va., occupied the pulpit of the Independent church, Savannah on last Sabbath.

Rev. Arthur J. Smith, pastor of the First church, Savannah, is rapidly making friends among his congregation, especially the young men. Mr. Smith has a fine tenor voice and on last Sabbath afternoon consented to sing at the Y. M. C. A., where he delivered an address upon the Fifth Commandment.

Rev. James A. Wallace, of Highland Park, Tenn., has been called to the church at Braidentown, Fla.

Rev. S. M. Rankin, of Red Springs will begin a protracted meeting at Allandale on the first Sunday of February.

We are glad to hear that Rev. J. S. Black, of St. Pauls who has been sick, is much better.

Rev. D. N. McLauchlin, of Chester S. C., recently visited relatives at Aberdeen, this State.

Rev. H. B. Price is visiting his father at Clarksville, Tenn. He will be glad to visit our churches in the cause of missions.

Rev. Dr. Thornton Whaling, of Lexington, Va., is visiting his old home at Clarksville, Tenn.

Rev. J. H. Bryson, D. D., of Huntsville, Ala., is ill at the home of his sister, Mrs A. Cowan, in Shelbyville, Tenn.

Rev. W. A. Wynne, of Bramwell, W. Va., has been called to Thomasville, Ga., upon the illness of his wife.

The condition of Rev. Kenneth McDonald, who is sick in this city, is improved but he is still confined to the bed.

The venerable Rev. J. N. McCain, of Normana, Texas is seriously ill with la gripe.

Rev. G. E. Chandler, of West Point, Miss., expects to assist Rev. Dr. S. C. Caldwell in a meeting at an early day.

ITEMS FROM "INANDA" ASHEVILLE PRESBYTERY.

Some three years since the Rev. H. M. Parker was placed by Mecklenburg Presbytery in charge of South Side church, Asheville, and Oak Forest church, six miles southeast of Asheville as stated supply.

Mrs. Mitchell, a daughter of the late Rev. Dr. Lindley, of Salisbury, and so long a missionary to the Zula Land, East Africa, and also so well known to Presbyterians in this State, wishing to take her daughters to Europe for educational purposes, gave Mr. Parker a home on her beautiful farm in the village of Inanda five miles from the city and two from Oak Forest church and also pays a portion of his salary so as to have his services a part of the time for missionary work in that vicinity.

Mr. Parker has had this work deeply bearing on his heart ever since he has been there. He immediately started a Sabbath-school, conducted under charge of his wife and others, which has grown into a successful school and furnished most of those recently gathered into the church. Meeting under great disadvantages on account of having no permanent and suitable place of meeting, his great object has been to secure some place for permanent occupation, not only for Sabbath, but daily parochial school, and for such purposes as holding service on Sabbath when convenient and weekly prayer-meeting. This, with much earnest prayers and work, has been accomplished. He has secured an acre of ground deeded to Asheville Presbytery for school purposes. Upon this has been erected and finished a very handsome wooden structure, well built and plastered, capable of seating about one hundred persons. Here was at once established a day school in charge of a Presbyterian lady and it is in active operation. During all this time Mr. Parker has been earnestly engaged in his ministerial duties in this locality, and upon the finishing of the house, services were held in it on the 6th, communion services, and 20th of December ult. The session and many of the congregation of Oak Forest church attended the services. As an adjunct to this church, the session received into the church on profession of faith twelve members.

God in His mercy has done much through His servant at this point. Prior to his coming to Inanda to live, there was not a sign of Presbyterianism in that locality, although so close to Oak Forest, except two families, who for years have worshipped at that church. With Mr. Parker's devoted, laborious work as a missionary and the securing a house and lot for Sabbath and day school, and for worship, an entering wedge has been put in, which, if properly worked, must bear great fruit. May our Heavenly Father give us the necessary faith to procure that great resulting blessing! This case is a strong testimonial to the parochial system, along with Godly and earnest work. It will prevail and Presbyterianism will prevail where it is properly carried out. To God be all the glory.

NOTES FROM GREENSBORO.

Yesterday morning after Dr. J. Henry Smith had begun to read the morning Scripture, before it was noticed he seemed quite short of breath. Dr. Egbert Smith was at his Lexington appointment. After reading, he said in substance, that he had been preaching fifty years, thirty-eight of it with this congregation, and never before did he feel he had to apologize to his people. He found that it was unwise for him to attempt a sermon, but was anxious to see the congregation together, especially as the collection, the second extra one in succession, was to pay our own home missionaries in Orange Presbytery money now due them. His recent illness was much from the same cause.

We are having a fearful winter up here now. Snow, ice, sleet, rain, and very cold.

DAY OF PRAYER FOR COLLEGES.

The day of prayer for schools and colleges proved to be a very interesting and profitable one at Princeton Seminary. The program of exercises for the day was as follows:

9:30. Different groups of colleges were formed and at this meeting the representations from each college reported what seemed to be the specific need of his college and then prayer was offered for these special needs. Thus we had a definite object for which to pray. The reports from our Southern colleges were very interesting and the meeting of the Southern men very profitable. It may be interesting to state that the following were represented at our meeting: Johns Hopkins University (2), Centre College, Ky., (2), Washington and Lee, Erskine, S. C., Presbyterian College of S. C., Randolph and Macon, University of Alabama, and Davidson College, one representative each.

At 11 a. m., the student body met in the Oratory to hear statistical reports from all the colleges represented in the seminary. This was one of the most interesting meetings of the day. Reports were received from fifty colleges. Statistics were given showing the number of students, number of professing Christians, number of candidates for the ministry, number of missionary volunteers, and the kinds of Christian work in each college. Out of the fifty colleges represented Erskine (A. R. P. College at Due West, S. C.) had one of the best reports. The report gave 100 students, 95 professing Christians, 22 candidates for the ministry and five mission Sabbath-schools conducted. This was one of the best reports given and special mention was made of Erskine. We were sorry not to have a report from Davidson College.

One interesting fact noticed from the statistics is that the number of professing Christians and the number of candidates for the ministry is much larger, proportionately in the smaller colleges than in the larger colleges and universities.

At 4 p. m., a prayer-meeting was held in the Oratory led by Mr. Robert R. Galley, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., of the University. This was a very devotional meeting and very much enjoyed by all present. Mr. Galley is a very earnest speaker and is much interested in his work with the young men of the ministry.

At 7.45 Dr. Hodge spoke to the students on the need of a deeper spiritual life in our seminaries. His address was earnest and deeply impressed all who heard him.

The day was one of blessings and will long be remembered in Princeton Seminary. May much good result.

For the N. C. Presbyterian.

LETTER FROM MILTON.

To the Editor of the N. C. Presbyterian:

DEAR BROTHER:—For the information of my many friends in Wilmington and Fayetteville Presbyteries I thought I would write this, though under not very favorable circumstances. We arrived safely in Milton on the 8th inst., though finding a temperature a number of degrees colder than we were accustomed to in our late home. This was not noticed because of the warmth and cordiality of our reception. We found our larder supplied with all the good things needful, also a bountiful supply of fuel. I preached about as usual to a large, intelligent and appreciative audience; but on Monday, from undue exposure in visiting a sick parishioner living on what in my late home would have been called a mountain, I caught a severe cold, or the grip caught me, so that night I was in a very bad way.

Dr. Dodson, the able and experienced physician residing here, was called and began promptly his struggle with the troublesome and dangerous malady. But realizing his inability on account of such a press of professional work all around, to give to me the minute and constant care necessary, I summoned my son to assist in the case and under their constant and faithful care the more dangerous symptoms have been arrested and my condition is steadily improving. Though by no means an agreeable entrance into my labors here, the constant, tender and thoughtful attention of the kind people here has made me feel that if I must be sick it is well for it to be among these people who seem never to be able to do enough for us. Though undergoing great physical suffering I have enjoyed God's presence abundantly and have been able at all times to say, "Thy will be done." I believe that God will raise me up to do higher and better work than I have ever yet done and that this present discipline is being made a means for the fitting me for a higher and more faithful service for my Lord and Master.

Fraternally yours,

JOSEPH EVANS.

Milton, N. C., Jan. 25th, 1897.

Dictated.

In continuation of somewhat I had written to you nearly a week ago (for the information of my friends), I write this to say that by God's goodness I am slowly, but steadily improving. But it is probable that it will be three or four weeks before I can enter fully on the work here lying open before me. But it is God's work and He can best arrange the way for its being done. Nor is this time, trying in many respects, lost. No, by the co-operation of God's Spirit with God's good Providence I trust I am learning valuable lessons, which God grant I may learn effectually and never forget. Wishing God's blessing to all.

Fraternally,

JOSEPH EVANS.

We clip the following about the organ of the Second Presbyterian church, Charlotte, from the Observer of that city:

This church will have the largest organ of any church save one south of Baltimore.

The church has for years been greatly handicapped in its musical service by the miserable old organ which has been in use there. It was purchased when the old church was first built, about twenty years ago, and has since been in constant use. It has been a great eyesore to the several pastors and people as well, but until this year the way was not clear to the purchase of such an instrument as would be in keeping with the size and elegance of the new edifice.

A committee on organ was appointed and began to act at once. Six or seven factories, representing the best makes in the country, sent their men here to set forth the advantages of their instruments.

After due deliberation and consideration the committee awarded the contract to Geo. Jardine & Co., of New York.

The instrument will be a magnificent affair, filling the space behind the pulpit almost entirely. It will have three manuals, fifty one stops and 2,040 pipes, and will be supplied with pneumatic action. The work of building the organ will be begun at once, but as it will require four months it will not be heard until May.

YOUR FRIEND, THE PROOF READER.

I suppose that I may as well confess in the very beginning that I am one of the long-suffering class to which the caption of this plea of the proof reader plainly points; hence my overpowering interest in everything pertaining to proof sheets, proof readers, "copy," "copy-holders," "galleys" and all the rest. Many a time have I wrestled with manuscript the writers of which made all words beginning with th, consist of those two letters and a wriggling dash.

I often wonder if any of the readers of the large papers that are sent out, both weekly and daily, have the slightest conception of the amount of labor in even that one department of the preparation of the sheet. I trow not;—with perhaps the exception of those who themselves write, and have the pleasure (?) of being amateur proof readers on their own work. Not once nor twice, but hundreds of times, have we received most urgent letters from our contributors, "Do not change one word," or "Send me a proof, that I may correct it and so be sure it is right." (All this heavily underlined and emphasized.) So we send him his proof. In due course of time it returns. Then I have my short hour of triumph, and am in part repaid for the many abuses the gentleman in question has probably showered upon my unknown and not always patient head. For there are almost always misspelled words, a lack or a preponderance of capitals, and a very meagre punctuation; in short, were it allowed to go into type as it is returned to us, the worthy gentleman would indignantly declare "That proof reader has been meddling again!" It is well he has.* Generally the only "meddling" done is to correct the misspelled words in the original manuscript!

We proof readers are so accustomed to blame, and so little accustomed to praise, that we do not always recognize the latter when it is offered to us. A laughable incident illustrative of this, occurred recently to one of my fellow workers. An article signed with the initials 'A. B. C." had been proof read in the office, and returned to the writer for any desired changes. It came back to the editor with the single comment, "Capital A. B. C." The editor handed it to the proof reader without a word. He glanced at it, and then broke out indignantly, "The A. B. C. is in capital letters already!" The writer had simply omitted the necessary comma after what was meant to be a word of praise.

Your friend, the proof reader, labors under manifold difficulties, of which the reading and judging public has but the faintest conception, but there is one sin which is often laid at his door of which he is not the least guilty. I refer to the hacking of articles, or the changing of words or sentences, or even ideas. That is a thing that the boldest proof reader dare not do Upon the head of the editor, or of his assistant, let your wrath descend,† oh, ye writers, when ye find your articles so abused.

"The proof reader is born, not made" is one of the truest of true and trite sayings. That is just the reason there is so much poor proof reading, there are not enough proof readers born every year. Instead there are too many men and women, who must be proof readers or starve. The above truism fell from the lips of Horace Greeley. Through the kindness of "Mark Twain," and a considerabie amount of legendary hearsay, I, as a proof reader, give thanks, morniug and evening, that Horace Greeley is no more.

There were, I believe, very few people, even those born so as to arrive at proof reading maturity when he began to write, who could decipher his scrawls.

Those who read merely for the sense of what they are reading, who have never tried reading for the sense and also keeping on the alert for any great or small mistake—noticing every punctuation mark, or the lack of it, every letter of every word, or the lack of it, every clause in every sentence, or the lack of it, the exact meaning, or the lack of it, do not, cannot, understand the immense mental effort required of a proof reader.

I should have liked to use the editorial "we" all through this, having been under the shadow of the editorial chair for so many years, (more shadow than sunshine to us, by the way), but as this must needs come under my editor's eye, I hope), I dared not.

I hope that the next time you are tempted to sneer at or upbraid the proof reader, some words of this feeble plea in his behalf will come before your mind's eye and cause you to refrain and to judge him more leniently, for the sake of the many worries from which he has saved you, all unknown to yourself, and for the sake of

One of Them in the Christian Observer.

*Our proof reader had to correct the punctuation, and otherwise "dress up" this correspondents article before publication. It is strange how obvious some little error appears, when printed from the type.

†Be it understood that the duty of an editor is simply to see that the language and the intent of the writer is always reproduced on the printed page to the best of his judgment.—[Eds.]

DEAL JUSTLY, MOTHERS.

"O dear, I don't know why I did that," said a mother, as her little one toddled off from her side in a burst of sobs.

The mother had come home very tired from a day's shopping and the little one had run out in the hall to meet her and grabbing the bundles from her hands had begun to try to untie them. The mother pushed the child away, with no gentle hand, and in a cross tone of voice said, "Get out of my way this minute, you naughty girl." Not long before the little one had been very ill, so ill that the doctors had given up all hope. Then it was that the mother prayed fervently to God to spare her child and promised on her knees to be a tender, patient, faithful mother, if it were given back to her, and now how soon she had forgotten, and in momentary vexation the same impatient cross words would come again, and the little one's sensitive honor had been made unjustly to suffer. The devoted, loving child, had run with a glad look on her wee face to meet mamma, who had been gone all day, so glad to see her, but for want of thought, and following a childish impulse, had reached forth the little hands to take the bundles and find out what was in them. All this came to the mother's mind as she heard the sobs of the little child, who had run back to the room and buried her face in the pillow of her little bed. And then came that work of undoing the wrong, which all mothers know about, but the cruel injustice toward the child would still burden the conscience of the mother long after.

We are often unjust to our children, because of our own moods and troubles. Things we pass over sometimes as of no moment, in hours when we feel "out of sorts" we make a great matter of, and hurt our children's sensitive natures when reproof is entirely uncalled for. Children are fretted at and found fault with, oftentimes, because we are in an irritable mood, or things do not go our way, notwithstanding that they are perfectly innocent of having helped to create those unpleasant conditions.

Justice in the treatment of children is something that should be conscientiously practiced. The child may have been full of the wish to help mamma in her work, and yet may have made some unfortunate break, or spot, in her efforts. But the motive was right, she meant to do something out of the kindness of her heart. But some mothers would have lost sight of the motive entirely, and scolded the child for the unfortunate results, instead of showing appreciation of the thoughtfulness of the child, and pointing out the difficulties in the way of doing work the little hands were not yet quite able to do. Let us deal justly with our dear children in our homes, and remember that we can make more impression on them by patiently and kindly showing them their faults than by nagging or scolding them.—Southern Churchman.

GOOD COMPANIONSHIP.

High and strong character is fostered by companionship with its kind. No one so much as the active business man needs the daily contact with whole and meditative minds quite apart from business life. He would gain by it better judgment for ordinary transactions, as well as greater serenity in the midst of the bustle and drive of the market. Such companionship is always available. A Kempis, Bunyan, Flavel and a score of men like them, may wait at his library table every morning and evening, ready to converse with him. They are as different from the men he meets during the day as the closet and cloister differ from the Stock Exchange. They would prove an alternative to his mind and a purifier of his heart. They would give him perspective, making his successes elate him less and his disappointments less depressing, but giving to all his possessions a truer value, and to many of them a higher value, than he has set on them heretofore. Only these men of high and holy thought do not show their real selves to those who ask only a single sentence from their lips. They become companions to those who dwell at leisure on their words. —The Congregationalist.

The apples that are now being gathered for the winter must be "hand-picked" if they would keep. In like manner must souls be gathered for Christ; each one sought out, prayed for and labored with face to face. That church will have the best harvest this year which has the most Christians in it who love to do personal work for Jesus Christ.—Dr. T. L. Cuyler.

WOULD YOU LIVE LIFE OVER AGAIN?

When a company of old men get together—"wise old heads," they sometimes assume to be, as if a man was sure to be wise because he was old—they are apt to exchange their experiences of life, in which they now see where they have made mistakes, and made them a hundred times over. Almost every man that has been in the business world, has had his chances to make a fortune. If he could only have that opportunity now he would make no mistakes; he would snatch the prize, and the rest of life would roll on smoothly and in a full, overflowing stream. How many hundred times have I heard this foolish talk—so often indeed that when I hear a man rattling away in this style, I think it is a sure sign that he is getting into his dotage, and that the sooner he bows himself off the stage the sooner will his friends be relieved from hearing his endless whinings and complaints.

Of course, if a man could begin life with all the wisdom that he has at forty or fifty, he would avoid many mistakes into which he has fallen. But that wisdom comes only by experience, and he has got to live half his life—or at least a good part of it—before he knows how to live in the best way, to secure the best result. So that, thinking it all over, I do not mourn inconsolably that I have made so many mistakes, but am grateful to the Power that has watched over me that I have made so few. How many dangers I escaped! If I were to go back and begin my life again, I might not do so well. So that, on the whole, I had rather accept the life that is nearly finished, than try the experiment over again. Though I have passed the line of three-score and ten, I would not be a day younger, but devoutly thank God for a life that has been thus prolonged, and for the goodness that has followed me all my days!—H. M. F., in Evangelist.

CATECHISM.

Question 27. Wherein did Christ's humiliation consist?

Answer. Christ's humiliation consisted in His being born, and that in a low condition, made under the law, undergoing the miseries of this life, the wrath of God, and the cursed death of the cross; in being buried and continuing under the power of death for a time.

Time. A. D., 30.

Place. Jerusalem.

INTRODUCTORY.

Our last lesson showed the danger to the Church from within This lesson shows a second and more violent attack from without. The opposition gathered force, becoming aroused by the blessings the Gospel was giving the people and the success it was having. There was the new sense of reverence and opposition to evil, shown in the case of Ananias and Sapphira, added to the marvelous cures of diseases and changes of character and life. There were manifestations of marvelous courage, earnestness, self-sacrifice, beneficence and joy in contrast with the lives of the rulers and the pople. All this provoked opposition.

Then came the spirit of jealousy. The sect of the Sadducess was specially affected. The success of the Gospel was drawing away their followers and lessening the homage paid to them. Leadership was rapidly passing over to the Apostles. Then, the doctrines taught were opposed to their teaching. The resurrection of Christ refuted their favorite doctrine. Still further, the teaching of the Apostles was a condemnation of their past and present conduct. The fact that Jesus was the Messiah condemned them of treason against their nation and denial of their national faith in crucifying Him. So, they must either accept the claims of Jesus as Messiah or they must stop the progress of the Gospel. They chose to try the latter.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 17. The high priest, Annas, rose up not from his seat, though that may be implied, but from the inactivity of indifference or idleness. He was aroused to the situation of the growing power of the Apostles. All they that were with Him, not merely in His presence, but of His party, of the Sadducees. The sect is from a word from which we get our word heresy and means a religious party separated from others by its opinions. Indignation means jealousy as this was an outbreak of party feeling.

Vs. 18. Laid their hands on, arrested the Apostles, it is not certain which, the common prison, R. V., "the public ward," or guard house, probably a room connected with the temple.

Vs. 19. But, a small significant word, the thrusting in of the hand of God to thwart all their plans. The (R. V., an) angel, one of the ministering spirits of Heb. 1. 14. The word occurs twenty times in this book and six distinct works wrought by angels are given. Opened the prison doors, silently and with that unseen power and ministry which we too often depreciate or ignore. The guards had not thought of this in their over confidence of the strength of brick and mortar, doors and bars.

Vs. 20. Go....speak. Do not conceal escape, and do not fear human power. See how divine power is about you. Words of this life, R. V., prints life with a capital L, as for the Gospel meaning Christ who is the Life.

Vs. 21. Early in the morning. About day break. The temple was open for worshippers. The council, the Sanhedrim and all the Senate, That is, the whole Sanhedrim were present, including all the elders who were members of it."—Schaff.

Vs. 22. The officers, some of the temple guard.

Vs. 23. The keepers standing, with care and caution, so that they could see no way for the prisoners to escape.

Vs. 24. They doubted, were very much perplexed, seeing no way to stop the work of these strangely mighty men.

Vs. 25. Standing in the temple, in one part among the worshippers while the Sanhedrim met in another part.

Vs. 26. They feared the people Mark the contrast, the Apostles fearing God and naught else, and the rulers without the fear of God afraid of the people.

Vs. 27. The council of the greater and less Sanhedrim met together in so important a matter.

Vs. 28. Straitly, strictly. Ye have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine, was a weighty testimony to the success of their preaching. This man's blood, the guilt of the crucifixion of Christ It was this, if proven, which stirred them.

Vs. 29. Then Peter, the spokesman, the appointed leader, and the quickest to frame the words for the thought of all. And the Apostles, standing by him to encourage him, to support his claims and to pray with and for him. The principle preached should be ours.

Vs. 30. The God of our Father, was a home thrust and a claim to teach the religion of the Old Testament. Raise up, to be Redeemer and Saviour God raised Him from the dead, where they had put Him.

Vs. 31. Him hath God exalted, by His ascension and sitting at the right hand of God, to be a Prince over all Head to the Church, and a Saviour from sin in its root, its power, its pollution and its penalty, To give repentance, as the work of the Spirit sent forth to apply His work, and forgiveness of sins, on the ground of His intercession.

Vs. 32. We are His witnesses. We did not originate this; we only testify of it. So is the Holy Ghost. By Pentecostal power according to promise, by all His mighty works done on the ground of the finished work of Christ and His intercession in Heaven.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

1. Let not the servants of Christ fear the face of man. He has legions of angels to minister and infinite power with exhaustless resources. Men set to oppose and guard prisons cannot see how God works.

2. When God delivers, let us not make much of the matter as it concerns us, but fearlessly testify of the grace of God to point others to Christ.

3. The Holy Spirit is given to those who obey God in the testimony and service of Jesus as Lord, vs. 32.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Feb. 14th, 1897.

BY REV. B. E. WALLACE.

Subject:

What our denomination is doing. Zech. 4: 1-14.

Text for the week:

Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit saith the Lord of hosts." Zech. 4: 6.

Monday, Work together. I Cor. 3: 1-9
Tuesday, Invite others. Num. 10:29-36.
Wednesday, A zealous church. Ex. 35: 21-29.
Thursday, Evil in the church. Jer. 5: 20-31.
Friday, Christ's beloved Church. Eph 5: 22-33.
Saturday, The Invisible Church. Heb. 12: 18-29.
Sunday, The Topic. Zech. 4: 1-14.

Suggestions for Leaders:

1. Be a Christian first. Then bring in your denomination.

2. Have different ones appointed beforehand to show what your denomination is doing.

a. Foreign Missions.

b. Home Missions.

c. Education for the ministry, and the various other lines of work.

3. Have some one (your pastor if convenient) to give a brief sketch of the rise and founders of your denomination:

a. Where did the Presbyterian Church start—who were the first to shape her doctrines, &c.?

b. If Methodist—Tell how this Church started and who were here first champions—and so on with other denominations.

Notes:

This is a very necessary and important topic. But let us not put our denomination above our Christianity. In some the partisan runs so high that there is constant and hurtful war among among the different churches. This works injury to the cause of Christ. Let each denomination cherish and revere its own intrinsic excellencies, and history of noble accomplishment, but at the same time have always in view God's glory in the salvation of sinful men. The struggle between the two lions is too constant and fierce for Christians to war among themselves.

The Lion of the Tribe of Judah is in the field and the appeal, "To Arms" is made to every Christian of every name and tongue—that the ensign of His cross may be planted in every human heart. The Roaring Lion is walking up and down through the earth devouring the souls of men. Listen at his roar as is voiced by the terrible "Demon of Drink." Hear his roar in the "Sunday newspaper," Sunday train, and Sabbath desecration of every kind. Oh fellow-Christian, brethren in Christ, let us sound the note of peace and present one solid phalanx to stay the tramp of sin.

OPEN DOOR NOTES.

The Ladies' Home Mission Society, Statesville, N. C., was organized in October, 1892. Rev. R. P. Pell, at that time Synodical evangelist in Mitchell, Watauga and Yancey counties, had, by his indomitable energy, perseverance and consecration to the Master's service, succeeded in establishing certain schools in connection with his churches in Mitchell and Watauga.

Learning through him that these counties presented a promising field for the permanent establishment of Presbyterianism, and recognizing the fact that these schools would prove important factors in the progress of the work, fifteen ladies of the Statesville church were organized into a Home Mission Society. The object of this society has been, and still is, primarily, to foster these schools, yet it holds itself in cheerful readiness to promote in every legitimate way the growth of Presbyterianism in this mountain region Its contributions are placed at the disposal of the Presbyterial Home Missions Committee of which Rev. C. A. Munroe is the efficient chairman.

The society now numbers twenty five members and continues with unabated interest a work that should appeal to every Presbyterian in the State, more especially to those within the bounds of Concord Presbytery.

WHAT RELATION SHOULD THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORER SUSTAIN TO FOREIGN MISSIONS.

In considering this great question, there are first two other questions to be asked and answered. The first is, What is Christian Endeavor? the second is, what is Foreign Missions? If we transpose the name, Christian Endeavor, we find we have, endeavoring to be Christ-like. We all know something of that noble life, how He spent the few years that were given Him, while He was here among men. That He never refused to give the aid that would relieve suffering even though, it was to strangers. One of His most powerful sermons was preached to a strange woman and in a strange land. His eyes and ears were ever open to opportunities for doing good; so it behooves us, in honor to our name to study closely His life so that we may honor Him by our imitation. What is Foreign Missions? It is carrying out the last and greatest command of our risen Lord: "Go preach the Gospel to every creature;" it is giving to our brothers who speak in a different tongue from ours the bread of life, for with God there are no foreign lands nor different speech. His great all-seeing eye is above all and his great deep love and outstretched arms are round about all the world.

The Christian Endeavor Society should be the mainspring, the life, the sinew and backbone of mission work. No church having a C. E. Society under its care should fall short of her duty in this line. How can she, with such a motto as ours, "The world for Christ." There were missionaries and missionary societies before there were Christian Endeavor societies, but were there any missionaries before there were any Christian Endeavorers? I think not. Surely Paul was one of the grandest of Christian Endeavorers and he is accounted by many the greatest of missionaries. The purpose of the Endeavor movement is to raise the standard of practical devotion and consecrated religious enthusiasm of young people. How has this mission succeeded? At the convention held last July in Boston, General Secretary Baer has this item in his report.

"The largest amount reported to me by any Board, is from the Presbyterian Mission Board. The treasurer of that board states that during the last year $33,160.53 have been received, and that in the last five years, the total is $106,704.77. When you take into consideration that that represents but one board in one denomination, and that the Presbyterian Home Mission Board received $21, 330 90 last year, we can praise God for the missionary uprising among the young. But we can do better. We ought, we will."

It is true that as an organization we employ no missionaries, for it is one of our cardinal principles that all of our work shall be done through the regular denominational boards. In a letter of Miss Julia Hatch who is now laboring for the Master in Laos, which we received a short time ago, she tells us of a meeting which was held in that land during Presbytery, last December. She says: "Mr. Dodd told us of the Missionary Extension course with which he had been connected. Referring to what he had said in regard to Christian Endeavor work for Foreign Missions some one called for all who were supported by Christian Endeavor money to stand. In response nine stood, five wholly supported by Christian Endeavor funds." Mr. Clark, the father of Christian Endeavor, says that the great impetus that has been given to mission work in the Northern Church, is due to Christian Endeavor. Now, Endeavorers, all this is surely encouraging but there is much, O so much more to be done. When we are really alive to the full meaning of our pledge and have succeeded in making a full surrender of ourselves unto the Lord and can say from the heart: "Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength" then will the piteous cries which come from the laborers in foreign lands be a thing of the past. Read the urgent, and we might say, heartrending appeals from poor sin cursed Africa. What has been the burden of Dr. and Mrs. Snyder's letters for more than a year? We well know them as they appear from time to time in our Church papers and magazines. God has promised that if we will go in, we shall possess the land; Christ has commanded us to go, and still we move so slowly; why O why is it so? I think that we can find the answer in our Master's own words, "If you love me, keep my commandments." The question for each one of us to-day is, are we keeping His great command, Go?

"I will strive to do whatever He would like to have me do. Endeavorers do we think He would have us to close our ears and eyes to the great need of mission work? and to the cry that is continually coming to us from across the waters for more workers and more prayers. If this single clause of our pledge was made the prayer of each heart, each morning of our lives, then would our Lord's treasury be full to overflowing and the cry would go up from these young men and women, "Here am I, send me." We then would see in this fair land of ours a sight that would call forth shouts of joy from the angels which are around that throne to which we send our petitions. Then would that petition which is two thousand years old, "Thy kingdom come" be answered. We, as Endeavorers, should pray for missions as no other people can or do, for did He not spend much time in prayer, and are we not imitating Him? Before He performed any great work He went to His Father and talked to Him about it. It is useless to say that we do not know how to pray. Prayer is the simplest and most natural act in religion, it needs nothing but heart and will. The weakest infant cries when it is hungry, the poorest beggar can hold out his hand not waiting to find fine words to ask for the alms that he stands in need of, so the most ignorant can find something to say to his Father if he only feels his needs. Every Christian Endeavor Society should be a reservoir of missionary light and influence, each individual member of this vast army should be a missionary. The success of mission work and mission giving rests not upon officers and leaders nor upon the society, itself, but upon each individual member. God does not call all to be teachers or preachers to this most noble of all work, but He does command and He does require that each one of His redeemed children shall use to His honor and glory the pound which has been entrusted to them. Let us know that we, each one of us, has his or her own work to do in this warfare.

DIED.

McQUEEN. In the death of Mrs. Sarah A. McQueen at Lumberton, Jan. 27th, a link binding the history of her home with the earlier and latter part of the century is broken. Had she lived till the 13th of February she would have rounded out her full four-score and yet, to those who but casually met her, there was but little evidence that she had reached that point in life when strength becomes "labor and sorrow," for to all, she was ever cheerful and glad to enliven the moments with her vivid recollection of the time long past. Her interest in passing scenes did not abate till her fatal illness and, even in these two weeks of pain, her mind took in all that interested those so dear to her and a marked characteristic of her whole life was seen in her purpose to banish from the mind all sadness, even though she anticipated the end. For many years she had been an earnest Christian and devoted to the Presbyterian church, of which she was a member. The present pastor of the church delights to put on record her cheerful sacrifices for his comfort and pleasure. Few days ever passed without some evidence of her thoughtfulness and even in her last hours she expressed a desire that those near her should remember him. Outside the home, she was much beloved for her gentle kindnesses, for, within her power, her hand was open to the cry of the needy, and many will miss her ready aid and sympathy. But her most beautiful life was seen within the family circle, for there it was all devotion, so that to be in her presence was a constant cheer and inspiration.

Thus, in turning the pages of her life, we note every where self-forgetfulness and labors of love that never wearied, with each made bright by the light of Him, whose she was and whom she served.

The sympathies of a community go out to the children and their families so sorely bereaved, and they pray that comfort will come in the assurance of never ending union with Him who is the Resurrection and the Life.

PASTOR.

Quackery is always discovering remedies which will act upon the germs of disease directly and kill them. But no discovery has ever yet been approved by doctors which will cure consumption that way. Germs can only be killed by making the body strong enough to overcome them, and the early use of such a remedy as Scott's Emulsion is one of the helps. In the daily warfare man keeps up, he wins best, who is provided with the needed strength, such as Scott's Emulsion supplies.

THE REFINER.

'Tis sweet to know that he who tries
The silver takes his seat
Besides the fire that purifies,
Lest too intense a heat—
Raised to consume the base alloy—
The precious metals, too, destroy.

'Tis sweet to think how well he knows
The silver's power to bear
The ordeal through which it goes,
And that with skill and care,
He'll take it from the fire when fit,
With his own hand to polish it.

'Tis blessed, too, to know that he
The work he has begun
Will not forsake till he can see
The work itself well done;
An image by its brightness shown,
The perfect likeness of his own!

But oh, how much of earthly mold—
Dark relics of the mine,
Lost from the ore—must he behold!
How long must he refine,
Ere in the silver he can trace
The first faint semblance of his face.

Thou Great Refiner, sit thou by.
Thy purpose to fulfil;
Moved by thy hand, beneath thine eye
And melted at thy will,
Oh, may thy work forever shine,
Reflecting beauty pure as thine.

THIS IS HOW THEY RISE

A young woman recently found employment in a queensware store She immediately began a course of study, in her leisure moments, upon glassware and china. Then she read some recent works upon the appointments of the table, and in a short time, by applying herself to her business, became the most valuable employe in a large store.

In a military establishment the young woman who found time for reading a book or two on colors and their harmonious combination, found her own taste greatly improved and her ability to please patrons much greater. She was soon a favorite with the employers and customers.

The young woman who, to earn an honorable living, went into a lady's kitchen, and, instead of gossiping every evening, found time to read a few good books and household papers, was soon too valuable a housekeeper to be kept in a subordinate position in the kitchen. She knew how a table should look for a formal dinner; she knew what dishes were in season; she knew how to serve a meal in its proper courses; and more than that, she knew something about the food value of different dishes.

Of course, this sounds like an old fashioned Sunday school book, but the fact remains that there is always "room at the top," and that no unusual amount of intelligence is needed to reach the top. A fair average of good sense and a proper amount of application will accomplish everything.—Womankind.

WOMEN IN JOURNALISM.

Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, in an address recently delivered before the students of Smith College on "Women in Journalism" said that the qualities that make a good housekeeper are of the greatest importance in newspaper work. She said: "The newspaper woman must be systematic, though she cannot be the slave of system. She must grasp details, make quick decisions and learn how to say no with every possible inflection. She must be quiet-mannered and self-controlled, not losing her temper when things go wrong. Considerate of others, she will receive consideration from her associates and will exact no deference which she is not willing to give. She will put heart and conscience in her work, and be thorough, leaving no loose end. She will welcome criticism, but hold to her own judgment if this be needful." Mrs. Sangster does not think that women in journalism will ever supersede men in any perceptible degree. Women have published as well as edited newspapers and periodicals, but in such exceptional and rarely recurring instances as to rather point to the assertion that women cannot compete with men in this particular than to serve as a precedent—Picayune.

"'TIS LOVE THAT MAKES THE WORLD GO ROUND."

Some people think money is a greater power than love. Oh! What a mistake! See how the great money kings are controlled by the little boy Cupid! See how the great soldiers and men of power are twisted around his little fingers!

A woman's most precious possession is the capacity for awakening pure and noble love More potent than wit or intellect is the womanly capacity for happy wifehood and motherhood.

A woman who is weak or diseased in the special organism of her sex is deprived of the power and prestige which naturally belong to her. Such troubles are not a necessity. Perfect health and strength of the feminine organism is insured by proper care and the aids afforded by enlightened medical science. Dr Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures all weaknesses and diseases of woman's special organism.

For nearly 30 years Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y. No other physician has had a more extensive practice or greater success in the treatment of women's diseases. No other such perfect and scientific remedy for these ailments has ever been devised. It has restored health, strength and womanly power to tens of thousands of women.

Women who would understand their own powers and possibilities should read Doctor Pierce's thousand-page illustrated book, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." It is the most interesting and enlightening book of the kind ever published. A paper-bound copy will be sent absolutely free to any one sending 21 one-cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y. This cold little month with its twenty-eight days
Is the season of snow with its fast-fleeting sleighs,
When icicles hang from each corner and nook,
And skaters are skimming on river and brook,
When the sparrows come in from the snow covered lane
And chirrup for crumbs by the bright window-pane,
And dear little Cupid stops on his way
With missives of love on St. Valentine's Day.

THE GRANGERS—A HAPPY FAMILY.

BY RACHAEL RICHARDSON.

CHAPTER 2.

Why Jerry Lost The Prize.

"I do think that Jerry Granger was the most mischievous boy that I ever knew," said Aunt Susie, when they had gathered round her for another tale.

"He began when he was such a little fellow, and his mother found it so hard to control his love for playing practical jokes. She said that while it was often harmless, it was nearly always a very selfish pleasure, for very few people liked to be teased, or to become the victims of a boy's practical joke.

When only three years old, he discoverd a pan of bread that had been set to rise and covered it with several shovelfuls of ashes. When his mother called him and questioned why he had done it he replied:

"Me was jus' doin' it for fun. Me wanted to see vat goin' to happen. Dat's all."

And his mother said quietly:

"Well, Jerry, you have spoiled our supper for fun, now mother must spoil your fun. I will get you a biscuit and a cup of water for your supper and then you must go to bed and stay until morning."

Jerry shed a few tears, but had too much sense to justify himself. And he never put ashes in the bread pan any more.

But I want to tell you how he lost the prize. Of course it was harder for him to get a prize for good behavior than for any of the others, just because teasing and mischief counted with mama. But he was an ambitious boy, and because this was a hard prize to get, Jerry wanted to win it. May be it would have been well for him to have had a better motive.

"I mean to get the prize next month, mama, you see if I don't"—he said one Friday night.

"I hope that you will my dear. Mother would be very proud for you to receive. You know the prize is nothing in itself. It is only valuable because it shows that you can do well, and that papa and mama are pleased."

"It is not that I pay my children for doing right, but that I want to encourage them, and to show them how pleasant the consequences of obedience and right-doing are."

Jerry went to bed that night making many resolutions.

"I won't pull Rosebud's curls.

"I won't call Mar a baby because he cries so easily.

"I won't hide Rob's pencil, or rubber, or book strap.

"I won't even pull Kitty Cat's tail to hear her hollee!"

"I won't"—but before he had finished that sentence he was far away in the Land of "Wynkin and Blykin and Nod!"

The next day he was so quiet and so good that Rob said:

"Jerry must be sick!"

"Oh no, said Lucy, don't you know he is trying for the prize!"

At breakfast, Lucy and Ethel had eaten without missing either their biscuits or handkerchiefs, something very extraordinary when you remember that Jerry was sitting between them.

All day Jerry wore a thick red string tied around his finger and a little piece of white paper pinned on the lappel of his coat.

"What's that string for Jerry?" asked Ethel laughing.

"And what have you got that paper pinned on your coat for?"

"Oh, just to remind me of something," he replied mysteriously.

Saturday night the Grangers call Sunday-school night, because every body gathers around the table with papa and mama, and studies the lesson for next day, and it is generally the pleasantest evening of the week.

Papa is the leader, but every one takes turns to be teacher. And the teacher feels very proud when some one is sent to the foot of the class—for you see they have "head and foot" in that Sunday-school class!

Jerry was so quiet that his silence was almost oppressive. No body had to say: "Oh, Jerry!" and the little bell did not ring once.

After prayers when all the children were gone, Mr. Granger said:

"My dear, what has come over Jerry? He is so quiet. Is he quite well?"

Mrs. Granger laughed:

"Why certainly, didn't you see what a supper he ate? You forget that he is trying hard for the prize this month!"

"Oh, oh, well, I must remember that."

Sunday was always an interesting day at Sunny Side, and Jerry passed this particular Sunday without a tinkle of the bell at home, or a nod from mama at church.

But I never could have done it, thought Jerry, if it had'nt been for the red string around my finger!"

Sometimes in the effort to keep from teasing some one, his face would get very red, and it was hard to keep from laughing at him, but one of the household rules at Sunny Side was:

"No laughing at people's efforts to do right!" and so Jerry went to bed Sunday night, with a great feeling of satisfaction, in his heart.

The next Sunday was a beautiful fall day. The sun shone brightly. The skies were as blue, and the birds sang as sweetly as if it was spring time, and of course the children were all happy, and their spirits high.

Unfortunately for Jerry, one of his school mates who was a very solemn looking fellow, sat just in front of him in church.

This boy had very red hair, and just before service began, Jerry, recalling a joke that he had heard a few days before, put out his hands to the boy's head, as if to the fire, and then rubbed them together.

All of the other children remembered the joke, and saw what he meant, and this was too much for their gravity, and for that of some large girls sitting just behind him, and Mrs. Granger, who had her head turned away, was startled by hearing a very decided though suppressed titter from the whole family!

When she glanced down from the pew, anxiously, Jerry's face was very red, and he was trying to look very innocent and grave.

"What is the matter," said Mrs. Granger in a loud whisper.

Nobody dared to speak for fear of laughing aloud.

"Tell Jerry to come next to me."

By this time Jerry was feeling very badly. The red sting and the white paper and all of his good resolutions together had not saved him. And yet afterwards when he was talking to his mother and confessing how sorry he was to have been irreverent in church he said:

"But mama, I did'nt do it just to be irreverent. I did'nt stop to think, it just seemed as if I must, for Alf is such an old solemn, prig!"

Mrs. Granger tried to make it plain to him, that a thing may be very innocent in itself, and yet become wrong, by reason of circumstances.

"Oh mama, will I lose the chance of getting the prize this month," he asked, in a troubled tone.

"I wish you would think of the sin of irreverence, and of God's displeasure rather than of the prize. I hope that I will never have to feel as mortified again, at the behavior of one of my children. But remember, me dear, as to the prize: It is not given for perfect conduct—that is an impossible thing, but it is given for sincere, honest, faithful effort to obey even in little things."

So Jerry was encouraged to begin again on Monday.

But my! he couldn't throw water on Bob while he was bathing, he "could'nt do anything!"—as he expressed it.

"Oh! oh! and there are two more Sundays too." Jerry felt very much aggrieved.

"Sometimes there are five Sundays," said Lucy. There were five that month that I got the prize."

"Oh yes, but you are a girl, and an awfully quiet one at that."

Jerry did not say this scornfully. He really meant it as a compliment, and the Granger boys were trained to think that their sisters were almost as lovely as mama, and they really believed that girls were naturally better than boys.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Presbyterian: This is my first letter to you. My grandma takes the PRESBYTERIAN and I enjoy it very much. Our pastor is Rev. M. S. Severence. My Sunday-school teacher is Miss Hattie Harwood. I united with the First church of Bennington last fall. My grand uncle Charles H. Robinson was a member of this church. Some time I will tell you about a nice old gentleman that spends his summers here.

Your friend,
ALICE SEARS.

Dear Editor: It has been a long time since I wrote a letter for your [illegible] I had a nice time Christmas. [illegible] many presents, a story bo[illegible] and several pretty toys. Our uncle from Wadesboro came to see us, we had lots of fun plaing our games with him, we love him so much. We had a sociable at our church for the little children. I go to Sunday-school, Miss Mamie Adams is my teacher, I love her, she is so good and kind to us. I must close

Your little friend,
JOSEPH R. POSTON.

Statesville. N. C.

Dear Presbyterian: You were so kind as to publish my other letters I will write again and try to do better this time. I am glad to get your good paper every week and always read the children's page first. We had two weeks holiday, this term commencing first Monday in this month. My teacher gave me a nice present for not missing the "roll-call" last term. I hope to get another present my birthday, February 10th. I will close by asking a question.

Your little friend,
MYRTLE WILKINSON.

Ridgeville, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor: I have been thinking of writing to your paper a good while. We have a little society here under the superintendance of Miss Lucy Boney called "The Pansy" for the orphans at Barium Springs which contributes to that cause about $5 yearly. The ladies of this church also clothe one of the little orphans, Brownie Lineberger. I think it would be real nice for her to come down to see us next summer and spend some time with us. I am always glad when the PRESBYTERIAN comes. I enjoy reading the letters from the little folks so much, especially those of the Barium Springs children. Wishing your paper much success in the future I remain

Very truly yours,
MAGGIE E. ROBINSON.

SECULAR NEWS.

NORTH CAROLINA.

The Stimson Lumber Company of New Berne was destroyed by fire on Friday last. Loss $50,000.

The suspected case of smallpox at Greensboro has been examined by Dr. Ramsay Nevitt, of Washington, D. C., a smallpox specialist, who states that it is a peculiar case of chicken-pox.

Hydrophobia is playing havoc among the hogs in some sections of Richmond county.

DOMESTIC.

Mr. Tom Hoshi, the Japanese minister at Washington, is visiting the Southern cotton ports and studying the cotton industry.

The freeze at Americus, Ga., killed the vegetables and it is feared that the oat crop has been destroyed.

The freeze in Florida has not materially injured the orange crop on account of the short duration.

Charleston is to follow the example of New Orleans and establish a school for training negro men and women as nurses.

Secretary of the navy Herbert will visit Charleston during the maneuvers of Admiral Bunce's squadron of evolution. Secretary Herbert is a native of South Carolina.

The storm last week in New York city was the heaviest for five years, ten inches of snow falling in thirteen hours. Three thousand men were engaged with three thousand five hundred carts by eleven o'clock in the morning and the superintendent of the streets stated that employment could be given to five thousand men if the carts could be secured. The cost of cleaning the last snow was $40,000, but as in this storm there were no great drifts to contend with it is thought the expense would be less.

The school board of Caroline county, Md., furnishes all grades of the public schools with free books. The increase in attendance has been large, especially among the negroes.

The Norfolk and New Brunswick hoisery works of New Brunswick, N. J., have resumed operation, giving employment to six hundred persons.

Last week one hundred tons of Buckingham Virginia slate were shipped to Liverpool, Eng., from Richmond. This slate compares favorably with the best Welsh slate and commands better prices in England than the slate from other sections, it being free from lime and having unfading color.

FOREIGN.

A second exhibition of motors and machine tools will be held in Munich, June 11th to Oct. 10th, 1898, to which the manufacturers of all countries are invited. The first exposition was held ten years ago.

The American colonists who took up their residence at Topolobampo, Mexico, several years ago are in a destitute condition. They are 600 miles from a railway. The attention of minister Ransom will be called to their condition.

Election of Officers.

The annual meeting of the Mechanics' and Investors' Union was held in the office of the company on yesterday.

The annual reports of the officers were made, showing a very satisfactory and prosperous condition, having loans in force to the amount of $16,550. The following officers were elected for the year: Jno. C. Drewry, president; J. S. Wynne, vice president; B. S. Jerman, treasurer; George Allen, seretary; J. N. Holding, attorney. Other directors, W. S. Primrose, C. G. Latta and Wm. Woolcott.

This is probably one of the most conservative and best managed companies of the kind to be found in the State. They loan chiefly to build dwellings, on eight years' time.—News and Observer (Raleigh.)

Bremo Bluff, Va., June 18, 1896.

Messrs. J. B. Watkins & Bro.:

Dear Sirs:—Complying with your request, I cheerfully enclose you the address of some of my friends who might patronize you. I have taken pleasure in advancing your business because your trees are larger and cheaper than those sold by agents. Sometimes their prices more than double yours, and trees much smaller. Wishing you an extensive patronage and scores of new orders,

Very respectfully,
MRS. JULIA A. WOOD KAUFFMAN.

THE QUAKER CRIMPED CRUST BREAD.

A novelty in bread baking.
Can't burn, must cook evenly.
Every flavor and savor of the bread held.
Not a breath of goodness gets away.
An even, uniform loaf.
Moist inside em stays fresh a long time.
Crisp of crust and delicate of texture.
Crimped edges insuring even, perfect slices.
You'll say its the perfection of bread.

SAY SOES.

Photographers take the world just as it comes.

Nearly all women have good hair, though many are gray, and few are bald. Hall's Hair Renewer restores the natural color, and thickens the growth of the hair.

When the hands are dirty with household work they may be thoroughly cleansed by using a mixture of salt and vaseline, which must be well rubbed in and then washed off with ordinary soap.

In choosing our work we must not forget how easy it is to imagine that we are called to do that which we want to do.

THINGS USEFUL.

A sharp pain in the lungs or side can be driven away by applying vaseline and mustard in the proportion of two parts vaseline and one part mustard. Rub it together and spread on a piece of linen as you would an ordinary mustard paste. This is also excellent for a severe pain in the back of the neck, and has been used with good reaults for breaking up the grip.

Jellied Apples.—Put over the fire in a saucepan a generous pint of water, two cups of sugar and the juice of a lemon. Peel, quarter and core tart apples enough to make two quarts, and when the syrup has been boiling ten minutes, put in the prepared apples and cook slowly until they are tender, putting in as many apples at one time as may be cooked without crowding. Take them out with a wire spoon and spread on a dish. Meanwhile, have soaking half a package of gelatine in one cup of cold water, and when the fruit is cooked remove the saucepan from the fire and add the soaked gelatine to the syrup and stir until it is dissolved. Stand the saucepan in a basin containing ice-water and stir until it is cold. Put the cooked apples into a mold and turned the thickened syrup over them, and set in a cold place to harden. Serve with sugar and whipped cream.

CHANGED.

From the outskirts of the town,
Where of old the mile-stone stood,
Now a stranger, looking down
I behold the shadowy crown
Of the dark and haunted wood.

Is it changed, or am I changed?
Ah! the oaks are fresh and green,
But the friends with whom I ranged
Through their thickets are estranged
By the years that intervene.

Bright as ever flows the sea,
Bright as ever shines the sun,
But alas! they seem to me
Not the sun that used to be,
Nor the tides that used to run,
—Longfellow.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.

There is something in religious living of the nature of an investment. That investment is made on faith in the ultimate fulfillment of divine purposes and promises. The servant is asked to give of his time and his thought and his affection and his interest and his reputation, as well as money, to the furtherance of religion, and he does this with the assurance that the gift will be followed by appropriate and sufficient returns. To the believer it is given to know that his labor is not in vain in the Lord. Service as well as soul committed to Christ's keeping will be kept against loss. Even when the service required is not promising to human eyes, obedient faith takes up the words of one of the first disciples and says, "Nevertheless, at thy command we will." Peter was not afraid of failure when he reached out his hand to help a confirmed paralytic to his feet, because it was in the name of Jesus that the word was spoken and the help extended. An enlargement of faith means an enlargement of service.—Central Baptist.

REV. SAMUEL OSCAR HALL.

We have the pleasure of presenting to our readers the portrait and the following brief sketch of this esteemed brother, which will be received with great pleasure by a large circle of friends, both in this Synod and elsewhere.

The Rev. S. O. Hall, is a native of the State of Alabama. At the old homestead, in the fertile county of Talladega, he was born, on Nov. 6th, 1856. His heritage was that one of the greatest of God's blessings, a pious ancestry, and a good name. Of Scotch descent, there are not wanting in him the sterling characteristics of that blood. His father, Samuel Hall, was a substantial and prosperous cotton planter. His mother, Elizabeth L. Hughes, was the excellent woman that would be expected to give such noble sons as she did to the service of the Church and of the State.

Mr. Hall grew up under the spiritually and physically healthful influences of his home and farm life, and well prepared, went forth from home to enter on college life. Having attended Howard College, Alabama, for three years, in 1881, he graduated from that institution with distinction and honors, receiving the orator's medal. Feeling called of God to the gospel ministry, amid some discouragements, but with a faith and courage that surmounted all difficulties, Mr. Hall began at once the work of preparation for his high calling, and entered Union Seminary, Virginia, at the opening of the session in 1881. There, as a student, he enjoyed the fullest confidence and highest esteem of the faculty and of his fellow students. All during his three terms at the seminary, he went every Sabbath to a point several miles in the country to engage in Sunday-school and mission work. He is still affectionately remembered by his scholars and the people to whom he thus ministered. His last seminary vacation, that of 1883, was spent in ministering to several churches of Montgomery Presbytery in Giles county, Virginia. Standing among the first in his large class, he graduated from the seminary in May, 1884 The same week he was licensed by Montgomery Presbytery at Covington, Va. Having already received calls from the Pearisburg and Walker's Creek and Hoge's Chapel churches, the churches in Giles county, which he had served so acceptably during vacation, he accepted the calls and was ordained and installed at Pearisburg and Walker's Creek in November, 1884. Here in his first pastorate, the young minister "showed himself a workman that needed not to be ashamed;" he was beloved by his people and his labors were blessed of God. After more than two years of happy and successful service in this field he received urgent calls from Madison, Wentworth and Leaksville churches of Orange Presbytery, in Rockingham county, N. C. He accepted the calls and entered his work there in January, 1887, and was soon after installed as pastor of those churches. Here, constantly growing ability in and usefulness, Mr. Hall labored faithfully and with much encouragement for nearly seven years. The deepest attachement existed between the people of this charge and their almost idolized pastor. In their just estimate of him it would be hard to say too much in his praise; and still they love and can never forget their former pastor. With mutual regrets these happy bonds were severed by Mr. Hall's removal to Greensboro, N. C. He accepted a call to the Westminster church in that city, began his work there October 1st, 1893, and was installed pastor the following month. Now in the fourth year of his pastorate there, his devoted people with one consent bear testimony to the fidelity and wisdom and grace with which he has discharged his duties.

Mr. Hall was happily united in marriage, September 10th, 1895, to Miss Elizabeth Steele Houston, the fourth daughter of the Rev. Rutherford R. Houston. In this lady of rare graces of person, gifts of mind and beauties of character, he finds a true help-meet.

Blessed with a fine physique and conscientiously observant of the laws of health, Mr. Hall is robust and capable of much labor and endurance, and "in hoc sano corpore" is the "sana mens." He has a strong, clear, well-trained intellect. Calm and gentle in his demeanor, cool and of great self-control, he is a peacemaker. Truly modest and humble, meek and patient, self-retiring and with a delicate sense of propriety, he is yet firm, bold and commanding. With a composure and cheerfulness born of faith, there is linked the simplicity and geniality of a big heart aglow with Christian love.

Mr. Hall is a wise and good pastor. He is an excellent sermonizer and a good preacher. His discourses are strikingly simple, lucid and logical in their arrangement. He writes his sermons in full, but delivers them without the use of any notes. With a rich, strong, sympathetic voice, and an open, earnest delivery, Mr. Hall is an impressive and effective speaker. With exalted views of the ministerial calling, deep convictions of the truth, and of unswerving loyalty to Christ and the Church, he proclaims "the whole counsel of God" with unflinching fidelity. Mr. Hall has marked evangelistic gifts as is evidenced by the success attending his efforts in protracted services. He is recognized by his brethren as a faithful and valued Presbyter.

He has a gifted younger brother in the ministry, the Rev. Wm. A. Hall, pastor of Rocky Mount church, Virginia, whom he was instrumental in leading into the ministry.

Said a preacher as he passed out of the pulpit: "I have told these people how to be saved, and if they don't choose to take my advice they needn't. I am done. I've cleared my skirts." Alas, that so much of our Christian work should aim no higher than that! If Peter had only designed to clear his skirts he would have told the lame man at the gate to rise and walk, and then passed on. It was because he aimed higher that he reached down and took the man by the hand. It is not preaching, but personal contact that testifies to our love of souls.—Bible Reader.

"THAT WILL I DO."

Taking again and pressing the claims of the truth of our editorial on "Greater Things" we feel the force of the question. How can this be possible? We confess a failure in the past to l[illegible]im to the blessing herein offered, because we have asked this question and have allowed human reason to offset these claims with the difficulty of seeing how it is possible for any one to do the works Christ did and greater works. This was in part because of failure to study the words and to admit their full and necessary meaning. It was also because of failure to find out what was the purpose of Christ in going to the Father and the promise He made to send forth the Holy Spirit. This has been dishonor to the power and ministry of the Spirit, as it now appears, and awakens the inquiry whether all the coldness and worldliness and secularism of Christians and the Church is not due to neglect of the promise of Christ to be fulfilled by the Holy Ghost.

Still another reason why the Church may fail to enter into the fulness of this Word of Jesus appears in the connection with the following words: "And whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in My name, I will do." It is not the believer of himself, or even helped by Christ who is to do these works, but Christ says: "I will do, whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in My name." The condition is the faith of the believer. The worker is Christ. We do not stop now to ask how Christ works, living in the believer as His Life, and as the believer abides in Him. For the present Jesus says, "I will do."

The means on the part of the believer is prayer: "Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in My name." Jesus is not stating that as an independent promise out of which fanaticism may take an unwarranted plea or excuse, but in close connection with the foregoing promise. These, all believers, are left in the world to do the works. They cannot of themselves; Jesus says He will do the works in answer to prayer. Lest any reader have not the paper with a foregoing editorial on "Greater Work" at hand the reference is to John xiv. 12, 13. The point pressed is the power of prayer, as the means appointed of Jesus by which His disciples in His absence could do the works He did and greater works. If this call forth criticism or controversy, the answer here is, read again and study long on bended knees this wonderful word. There is the "and" at the beginning of verse 13, binding these verses inseparably.

In the beginning of His ministry, in the Sermon on the Mount Jesus taught the disciples as beginners, as children to pray to God as "Our Father," to have a humble, childlike, teachable spirit. His teachings on prayer then had reference to the needs, experiences and growth taught, to pray. A year la[illegible] in answer to a request, "Lord teach us to pray," Jesus added the truth, and it marks advance, that the believer must provide for others, like the friend at midnight, and for what he did not have to give he might and should go to the Friend who had, and could and would give all he needed not for self, but for a needy friend. Here at the end the office of prayer is shown to be the taking hold upon God in the name of Christ, for the power to do the works of Christ.

It is therefore added: "that the Father may may be glorified in the Son." Christ came not to do His own will but the will of Him that sent Him. All He did here on earth He did that the Father might be glorified in Him. The works the believer can do, the works Christ did and greater works, to be done in answer to prayer, must be such as glorify God in Christ. This only makes the teaching of Christ about prayer more wonderful. It only makes our prayers seem more empty and unavailing. They are so selfish and narrow in their scope, so feeble and faltering in their faith. In this sense of laying hold of the Almighty God in Christ to work in and by the means of prayer all that Christ has here promised, have we even prayed at all? Is it not time to review our lives along this line?

Christ everywhere teaches that prayer is to be answered. Too many do not expect answers to their prayers. It may be that some only expect a reflex benefit or blessing of of prayer. The Bible does not make prominent that good of prayer. It is good in that direction. But the Bible, especially in the teachings of Christ, makes prayer a means of taking hold upon what God has to give and to do by the Holy Spirit in the name of Jesus Christ. Christ teaches that those who pray should expect their prayers to be answered.

THE RELIGIOUS OUTLOOK.

The initial number has reached us. At first sight we confess to some feeling of disappointment in that the News Department is not what we looked for, but second thought showed the unreasonableness of expecting perfection here in initial number. It will surely improve. The editorial notes are very good. And the views of Dr. McPheeters, one of the editors on the tendency not only to ritualism, but more and more to ritualism, plesse us exceedingly. The contributions are delightful reading. The articles short and the style crisp and bright—there is not a heavy line that we have seen. What could be more satisfactory than the terse and telling article of Dr. Samuel M. Smith on "The Brier in the Bonnie Bush"—it is so characteristic of the author. The pruning is done so deftly and the "Brier" is exposed so plainly. But the other articles are well up in merit. Dr. Reed, our "Clark" is on a subject that cannot be treated otherwise than seriously—but he is, as always, original and strong, and Dr. Dabney's reminiscences of his "Student Life at Union Seminary"—charming with the promise of "the rest hereafter" to allay the disappointment at its brevity. But space is up. Other article from Dr. Girardeau, Dr. Laws and others we cannot even mention here. The list of contributors is exceedingly large and embraces the brightest, strongest minds in the Church. We wish it abundant success. Bryan Publishing Company, Columbia, S. On Thursday of last week, 4th inst., at his home in Lumberton, N. C., died William Wallace McDiarmid, editor of the Robesonian of that town—in the 51st year of his life. The news threw a pall of gloom over every one to whom Mr. McDiarmid was personally known, for such was his frankness of manner with sincerity of heart and kindliness of disposition that he drew to him from every hand those who were favored with his acquaintance. But it was not the open-hearted geniality of manner and of disposition that is our departed friend's best claim to honorable remembrance. He was a power, through the influence of the paper which he had through twenty-five years of variable fortune brought to success, and that power was exerted for the good of his community and of the State. He was honest and firm in his convictions and unswerving in pursuance of what he considered the right, yet he was singularly free in his official duties from all malice and uncharitableness.

He never sought prominence, though his brethren of the press made him president of their association, and for years he was called to serve his county as its treasurer. He was a deacon in the Presbyterian church, and here as elswhere, he performed his duties faithfully, not as the servant of man, but as the servant of the great Head of the Church.

In his family relations he was tender and loving, and here the loss, it well may be, will tell deepest and longest, but upon his county to whose welfare he specially devoted his labors, his State and his church, falls a blow from which it must take years to recover.

Mr. D.L. Moody celebrated his sixtieth birthday on the 5th inst. Some of his friends have collected $30,000 which will be used to erect a chapel for the use of the Mount Hermon school near Northfield. The plan for this gift originated with Rev. F. B. Meyer, who has been instrumental in raising the funds. The spot chosen for the chapel is a beautiful knoll overlooking the Connecticut river and valley. There are about three hundred and fifty boys at Mt. Hermon from all parts of the country. The school is non-sectarian.

A note from Rev. L. H. Baldwin who has been in the Retreat for the sick in Richmond for the past three months, states that he hopes he is improving. He also desires the brethren of dear old Mecklenburg Presbytery to know that his heart goes out to them in fraternal greetings. He asks that the prayers of the brethren may be offered for a restoration of health, and ability to take up the work again.

Our deepest sympathy goes out to our young friends, Rev. and Mrs. L. W. Curtis, in the death of their child, Amanda Alice, which occurred at Lakawn, Siam, on November 25th last. For only the short period of two months and eleven days did the little life gladden the home, but its mission was not to bear the burdens of earth—God has taken it to shine among His own. May the God of all comfort grant the parents strenthening grace in their bereavement.

NOTES FROM HAMPDEN-SIDNEY.

The preaching service in the seminary chapel on last Sunday evening was conducted by the Rev. A. S. Rachal, of the class of '95. Mr. Rachal has resigned his charge in Lynchburg and is here resting up for a short period before undertaking other work.

Rev. M. G. Woodworth, a member of last year's class, is with us again for a few weeks. He is attending Dr. Strickler's classes and is thus reviewing the subject of theology.

By the way, Dr. Strickler's plain, practical, popular way of teaching the great doctrines of theology has revived a marked interest in that study. He possesses the happy faculty of being able to clothe the very greatest truth in the very simplest language imaginable, and thus conducts the student back to the origin of these great truths without compelling him to follow through a labyrinth of metaphysical arguments. The subjects presented in the text-book are interspersed with popular lectures occasionally, showing the bearing of the subjects on practical duties in Christian living.

We regret very much that Mr. J. M. Forbis, a member of the Senior Class, has been compelled to discontinue his studies on account of his eyes. After treatment under Dr. Wakefield in Charlotte, N. C., he will probably take charge of three churches in Southern Florida.

Drs. Moore and English are, at present writing, in Richmond on business connected with the new seminary buildings in progress of erection there. Dr. English will go on to Norfolk and will occupy the pulpit of the First Presbyterian church on Sunday.

Among the visiting young ladies at the Sigma Chi fraternity banquet last week, which, by the way, is said to have been a very sumptuous affair—were Miss Dunnington of Farmville, and Miss Etta Watkins of the same place, the latter of whom was the guest of Miss Emma Venable for several days.

THE FINAL FRUITAGE.

Many earnest Christian workers for God get discouraged too soon. Because the fruits of their labors do not appear as speedily as they expect they sigh over the situation and set themselves down as failures, when, as a matter of fact, their labors are far from being in vain. The editor of the Christian Observer says: "Only recently we knew of a minister who, nearly twenty years ago, on a brief summer vacation in a secluded locality, preached two or three times and went away without knowledge that he had accomplished anything. But six months later one young man from that vicinity professed faith in Christ; twelve years later another man attributed his conversion to one of those sermons: and eighteen years after the visit a widow told him that her husband's piety dated from one of his efforts during that vacation." Surely, in the light of such relations, that minister's labors during that brief time were far from being in vain. That was a well-spent and very successful vacation. The final fruitage was glorious. I say "final," and yet those three conversions may not have been the whole of the blessed fruits. Possibly others will yet appear. Certainly, no earnest preacher of a pure Gospel has any real right to despair because he does not see any immediate fruits of his work. Our present duty is to do well our work, leaving results with God.

A TRIP TO CHANGCHOW*.

A few days ago Mr. Woodbridge wrote, asking me to come over to Changchow and see two Chinese gentlemen, our friends. We were able to get off last night, leaving by house-boat after supper.

We took Ah Meh along to cook for us and mind the baby. The next morning found us at Changchow and we passed in through the East Gate while we were eating breakfast. Mr. Woodbridge was looking for us and we went into his house and spent the day. E. enjoyed the change greatly and William was as g[illegible] as could be. Mr. Woodbridge went over to see our mandarin friends and were received as brothers. They had expected me the night before and asked Mr. Woodbridge to bring me over to supper at their house. They sent me a bed over to Mr. W.'s thinking that he was not prepared for me. That was just like friends at home wasn't it? I found that the sick one was just getting started into consumption. Poor fellow, he looked so downhearted when we told him that his disease was a very serious one. Nothing has helped me to a true view of the Chinese as that trip the other day. I saw the higher class in their real home life without any of the veneer of "party" manners. I liked them very much. Just think! I was received as an intimate friend into the finest house in one of the finest cities in this province. Their intercourse with foreigners has been only of the best kind, principally with Mr. Woodbridge, who is eminently suited to that kind of work. I met a young fellow who will soon receive a high appointment in the government. Mr. Woodbridge's house, rented and paid for by the young men, is a part of a very large and very fine ancestral temple built by the family of Li Hung Chang. Changchow is their ancestral home. I took a picture of William in one of the gardens of this fine temple. We left the city about five o'clock in the evening and reached home before daylight the next morning. We had a nice boat. E. said she travelled with more comfort and pleasure than on any trip since she has been in China. We travelled thirty miles by night, spent a day and returned by night; in all sixty miles—in a nice boat with three rooms, all for the small sum of $1.80 (in gold). That is one cent per mile for three grown persons, including the sleeping accommodations, without any dust or cinders or smoke.

I have been treating a most difficult case in the country for about a week and the young woman has improved very much, and stands a fair chance of recovering now. Her family are delighted and the father says he intends having a tablet inscribed and presented to me. I met her husband on the road to-day and he was smiling in the broadest way at me. I tapped the young woman last night, taking off about a gallon and a half of water. They bought her coffin and made preparations for her funeral. I told them that her chances for life were about one in a hundred. I do earnestly hope that she will recover. These medical cases have given us splendid opportunities for preaching. Mrs. Sykes told me to-day that the women in that house listened to the Gospel to-day better than any at any time since she has been here. The old woman who came and had a tumor removed from her foot has gone home and the fame of the operation has gone out in all the parts round about here. She went away with a better knoweldge of the Gospel and with apparently a better disposition toward it than almost any person that Mr. McGinnis has preached to. (Those are his statements.) Yesterday a man came and begged me to remove a tumor of the eye which is as large as my fist. He is such an ugly sight that he says nobody will employ him. I agreed to try my skill on him, and he will return in a few days. It is strange to hear the ideas that these people have of us. They think that I am a fairy, (an immortal,) that I can do anything that I choose. If I tell them that a certain disease is incurable they do not believe it, but will ask Mrs. Sykes or Mr. McGinnis to use their influence with me to get me to cure them. They think that I can cure any disease if I only wish to. If I say the disease is incurable it only means that I do not desire to cure it. This would tend to puff a fellow up if only he could get rid of the thought that he is treading on a mine all the time. I am a good spirit so long as I cure their troubles, but if some of my patients die under very obscure circumstances, I might have a whole raft of people about my ears holding me, a devil, to account for some person's death.

It is a glorious work and the Lord will take care of His own.

PRESBYTERIANISM IN PENSACOLA, FLORIDA.

I had not so much as dreamed of being located in this city, whilst in Louisville, Ky., I received a letter from my old friend, Rev. W. T. Matthews, who was just retiring from this field, inviting me in the name of the session to come and spend a month with the church. I did so and at the expiration of this period was given the usual summer vacation, and during my absence was elected pastor, and on the 9th of December last was duly installed by the Presbytery of Florida. On my my arrival here, June the 10th, and during the month following, as I surveyed the field carefully, I was favorably impressed with the prospects of usefulness. No sinecure, to be sure with thirty or forty barrooms to contend with and all the vice and crime so prevalent in our seaports where all nations are represented and the restraints of home and religion are thrown aside. Here I found a large comfortable manse located on one of the most popular streets and within a few blocks of the church. The church also is centrally located, practically new and built after modern plans of architectnre and cost about $14,000. No debt rests upon the church building and the debt on the manse the past year was reduced by $1,161, leaving a balance of only $1,000. I also found some very active workers among the officers of the church. Elder C. V. Thompson was superintendent of the Sabbath-school and president of the Christian Endeavor Society. Elder Dr. H. C. Cushman was secretary and chaplain of the Sailors Bethel, holding more than one hundred services a year, which were attended by more than two thousand sailors. He has this year added to his charge the prisoners of the county jail. Deacon Wm. Fisher, one of our most prominent lawyers and most successful business men of the city was the self-constituted pastor and teacher of the inmates of the county poor house, located a few miles from the city. Not a Sabbath came, when at home, that he did not visit this unfortunate class of people and minister to their wants both temporal and spiritual. Deacon J. W. Gerelds has now assumed this charge, leaving Wm. Fisher, Esq., to give his Sabbath evenings to the establishment of a colored Sabbath-school to be organized under the care of our session. Rev. O. B. Wilson, of Tuscaloosa, Ala., the Assembly's evangelist for the colored people, has recently paid us a visit in the interest of the colored work and I take this occasion to commend him most heartily to all my brethren who are thinking of undertaking work among the colored people. He is patient and persistent and enthusiastic and withal very judicious and tactful. The result of his visit here is the purpose of our people to organize a Sabbath-school immediately and six or eight of our most godly men and women have volunteered to teach in this school. Two of these teachers are members of our city bar.

The report of our church for the year, 1896, is not all that we could desire, but affords ground for encouragement. There were fifteen additions to the church; five on examination and ten on certificate. The amount received for all purposes was $3,828.

We are now making preparations for the coming of Evangelist Pearson who will begin a union meeting here on February 7th and remain with us for three Sabbaths. The services will be held in a hall which will seat a thousand or twelve hundred persons. We are holding services this week in the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian churches, conducted by the pastors of these churches. Mr. and Mrs. Pearson will arrive on Friday, February 5th, and Mr. Pearson will hold his first service in Armory hall on the following Sabbath night. These pastors greatly feel the need of united and hearty effort at this time. We have two immense Catholic churches and only one Methodist, one Baptist, and one Presbyterian church. Very few young men attend any of these Protestant churches and a great number of adults of both sexes who belong to our congregation have so far failed to confess Christ before men. I hope to have "good tidings of great joy" for the Presbyterians at the close of our union meeting.

WM. E. MCILWAIN.

To the Members of Mecklenburg Presbytery:

DEAR BRETHREN:—In obedience to your order of fall meeting of Presbytery, I closed the work of Bethany Presbyterian church and the daily school in connection with church work; so now I am altogether out of work. I have written to several friends asking for work in their Presbyteries. I have written Dr. A. L. Phillips, of Alabama and Rev. J. H. Summerell, of South Carolina; if neither of these gentleman can find work for me, my only chance is to accept work in my sister Church, the Northern Presbyterian, and in order to do that I must be connected with one of their Presbyteries, now then I cannot do that before spring; brethren how shall I live until then? I must pay six dollars rent per month whether I eat or no? Please help us a little until we can find work brethren. Asheville Presbytery has given me the church lot for the debt my little church owed me, I thank the brethren for it. I have preached every Sunday in this month twice a day for my brethren here, but I got no pay for it. I hope the way will open up soon for work. I went at the first of this month over to Rutherfordton my old home thinking I might find school work there, it is true I found a school, but the people are farmers in the neighborhood of the school and did not want it taught before summer. I shall thank any of the brethren to inform me of a school in his field that I can get at once. I shall thank the ladies and gentlemen for any aid you may give me until I can get regular work. Yours in the Gospel.

J. S. MORROW.

Asheville, N. C., Jan. 25th, 1897.

Mecklenburg Presbytery appointed a committee to prepare a program for celebrating the 250th anniversary of the Westminster Assembly at the next spring meeting. The program is as follows:

The time, April the 12th, 2.30 p. m., and Rev. Roger Martin to preside.

(1.) The Necessity for the Westminster Assembly and Its Composition, by Rev. A. A. Little.

(2.) The System of Doctrine Formulated, by Rev. J. M. Grier.

(3.) The Relation and Effects of this System as to Civilization, by Rev. J. W. Stagg.

(4.) The Prospects of this System, by Rev. J. R. Howerton, D. D.

(5.) Opportunity given each member of the Presbytery to make a short talk.

R. A. MILLER,
R. P. SMITH,
For Committee.

P. S.—The Gastonia church will offer to give the members of the Presbytery a social entertainment at night as a finale of the occasion.

MR. EDITOR:—In my remarks to the Synods last fall I called attention to a series of four short tracts, by Rev. A. M. Frazer, bearing upon the subject of One's Life Work, the title is: "What is to be Your Life Work? Why not the Ministry?" I think pastors and others would do well to supply themselves with these tracts, as they are admirably adapted to the purpose for which they were written. They may be had of our Committee of Publication, and I trust will be ordered in large quantities. Multitudes of our young men need more instruction on the great question of their life work. I would also again call attention to the fact that for the last two years, there has been a falling off in the number of candidates for the ministry. In 1894, we had 445. In 1896, 402. If this falling off should continue three or four years longer it would be calamitous to our church work. It has been suggested that this falling off is the result of greater care on the part of Presbyteries receiving candidates. It is to be hoped that this is true, but it does not alter the fact that we need many more ministers. And this ought to lead all our pastors and churches to most earnest prayer to Him who can supply us, not only with a sufficient number, but with the right kind of men.

More thought, more study and especially more prayer is needful on this all important subject.

E. M. RICHARDSON,
Secretary.

DO NOT MEDDLE WITH GOD'S PLANS.

Many men wreck their lives by determinedly carrying out their plans without reference to the plans of God. In an army every part, every brigade and regiment, must wait the commander's orders. If any battalion move independently, though ever so heroically, it not only confuses the whole plan of battle, but brings disaster to itself in the end. So each individual must always wait for God's commands to move. Keep your eyes on the pillar of cloud and fire that leads. Rest when the pillar rests, move when it moves. Never lag behind, but be sure you never run ahead. You can make the clock strike before the hour by putting your hand to it, but it will strike wrong. You can hurry the enfolding of God's providence, but you will only mar the divine plan unless you wait for him.

You can tear the rosebud open before the time it would naturally open, but you destroy the beauty of the rose. So we spoil many a gift or blessing which God is preparing for us by our own eager haste. He would weave all our lives into patterns of loveliness. He has a perfect plan for each. It is only when we refuse to work according to His plan that we mar the web. Stop meddling with the threads of your life as they come from the Lord's hands; every time you interfere you make a flaw. Keep your hands off, and let God weave as he pleases.—Associated Reformed Presbyterian.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Queen Victoria's book will be published in America by The Century Co. There will be 100 copies on Japanese paper at $50 and 600 on fine paper at $15. Both editions are strictly limited and no more will be printed.

"The Circle of the White Rose" was the beautiful name Ian Maclaren gave the reading circle of one hundred young women at Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., and with it he gave the explanation of the name he selected for his famous book. "The white rose was the symbol of the Jacobites. It was the lines from their song, 'There grows a bonnie brier bush in our kail yard, and white are the blossoms out in our kail yard,' that suggested the title to me. In Scotland the kail yard of any peasant can grow the white brier rose."

The oldest known comedy, "Ralph Roister Doister," was written by Nicholas Udall, a school master of considerable learning probably about the middle of the eleventh century.

John Sartain, well known as the first great American engraver, and, moreover, as a man of letters, the half-owner and managing editor, in the forties, of Sartain's Magazine, the friend of all the great literary men of his time, still lives quietly in Philadalphia. Mr. Sartain was a firm friend of Poe. In his wild moods, frequently, it was Mr. Sartain only who could control the outburst. Mr. Sartain used to buy Poe's hasty lines and thus furnish the poet with a dinner—sometimes sadly needed. It was in this way that he bought The Bells. One day Poe, very ragged, rushed into the office of the magazine, with a bit of verse that he wished to sell. Out of compassion for his apparent [illegible]ring, the editor bought the poem [illegible]ter the writer had rushed out, he read it, without much admiration; and filed it away. Presently Poe, very wroth, asked why the poem had not been published. Being informed, he wrote a second, more elaborate version, and when that too had been refused he wrote a third. This was the form in which the poem at last appeared.—Boston Commonwealth.

BOOK REVIEWS.

Inebriety. Its Source, Prevention and Cure. This gilt-top-cloth hand book of 109 pages, by Charles Fallen Palmer is published by Revell Co., N Y. Price 50cts. It is scientific, medical, high-sounding enough for a select audience of specialists. It is well written and Utopian and impracticable. It makes one ask at the end: Well, after all this, so ideally impossible, what common-sense remedy treatment can somebody offer for the cure of drunkenness? It fails utterly of its purpose by leaving out of account the grace of God.

CHANGES OF ADDRESS.

Correspondents will please note th following changes of address:

Rev. M. W. Dogett, D.D., from Pulaski, Va., to Fincastle, Va.

Rev. G. P. Watson, from Anderson, S. C., to Summerville, S. C.

Rev. R. W. Hines, from Hobgood, N. C., to Rolling Fork, Miss.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Dunn:—On the first Sabbath in this month Dunn Presbyterian church ordained and installed Mr. W. Doug Smith a ruling elder. Mr. Smith has been a member of Bluff church from boyhood until very recently when he joined with the church at Dunn. For more than twenty years he has been a deacon in the Bluff church and no man in the Presbytery has had better training than he, for the office of a Presbyterian elder. The church at Dunn feels much strengthened in the presence and council of this able and respected man and officer.

VIRGINIA.

Lexington:—Messrs. W. C. Stuart and W. P. Irwin and Prof. W. S. Currell have been elected elders in the church here.

Covington:—At last communion eight persons united with the church, two by letter and six upon profession. The pastor, Rev. C. Stokes, was assisted by Rev. Dr. Quarles, of Lexington.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Newberry:—Rev. J. L. Williamson was installed pastor on the 24th ult. At the morning service Rev. Dr. Jas. Woodrow presided and propounded the constitutional questions. At the evening service Rev. R. P. Pell delivered the charges to pastor and people.

FLORIDA.

Presbyterianism in Pensacola:—An unusually interesting article on this subject will be found on our fourth page.

ALABAMA.

Decatur:—The work under the pastoral care of Rev. W. Stephens Tucker is progressing very favorably. A mission has been begun within a mile from the town and steps are being taken to enlarge the church building. Mr. Tucker began his labors here in October.

LOUISIANA.

New Iberia:—We are now at home in our new chapel. It is a brick building, 24x36 feet, with slate roof, and is very comfortable. Congregations are increased in numbers. Three new members were added by profession last Sabbath. This makes twelve in all since last May.—Southwestern Presbyterian.

MARYLAND.

Franklin Street Church, Baltimore:—The congregation of this church have engaged the services of Rev. A. F. Carr, who has faithfully served them for the past nine months, as assistant pastor to Dr. Murkland. Dr. Murkland will return to his labors in about six weeks, and though greatly improved will be unable to fulfill without aid the onerous duties of this pastorate. Dr. Murkland preached to a large congregation on last Sabbath.

KENTUCKY.

Portland Ave., Church, Louisville:—Rev. J.H. Hopper recently assisted the pastor, Rev. David M. Sweets in a series of services which resulted in fifty-nine persons uniting with the church. The church members have been strengthened and the whole community benefitted.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Montgomery:—Rev. C. G. Brown, pastor. Fourteen members were recently received, making ninety upon profession during the month of January. Most of these were the result of the services conducted by Rev. C. M. Howard.

Carlisle:—Rev. H. M. Scudder recently completed his twenty-sixth year as pastor of this church. Eight persons were recently received upon profession of faith. The pastor was assisted by Rev. I. S. McElroy.

GENERAL.

Information was received on Feb. 5th, at the office of the Philadelphia Missionary Council of the death of Rev. P. Cameron Scott, of Brooklyn, N. Y., fodnder and director of the African Inland Mission at Nzawi, British East Africa, on December 4th last. He was twenty-nine years old. Mr. Scott left Philadelphia city in June, 1895, with a party of eight and in less than a year had established four mission stations.

PERSONALS.

We regret to see it stated that Rev. H. D. Lequeux of Greensboro has been sick and unable to fill his appointments.

Rev. F. E. Maddox has resigned the pastorate of the Second church, Birmingham, Ala., in order to accept a call to Greenwood, Miss.

Rev. J. T. Bruce, pastor of the church at Eufala, Ala., was drowned at West Point, Ga., on Jan. 24th.

Rev, D. W. Snyder will be in Georgia during the month of February. His mail, however, should be sent care of Foreign Mission Committee, Nashville, Tenn.

Dr. E. O. Guerrant will spend the remaining winter months at Umatilla, Fla.

Rev. Wm. Black was to have assisted Rev. Mr. Coppedge at Rockingham in a series of services during this week. We hope to have full particulars next week.

A correspondent from Alexandria, Va., writes the Central Presbyterian: The Second church was highly favored on Sunday, January 24th, in having the pulpit occupied by Rev. Joseph R. Wilson, D. D., the universally beloved and honored stated clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, who preached, in his usual genial and scholarly style, sermons which were greatly enjoyed by all who were privileged to hear him. It is truly refreshing in these degenerate days to sit under the preaching of one of the "liners," who holds so tenaciously to "the faith once delivered to the saints" and hesitates not "to declare the whole counsel of God."

Rev. W. G. F. Wallace, of Florida, is visiting Lexington, Va., for his health.

Rev, L. H. Paul, of Mossy Creek, Va. is spending a month in Texas. The pulpit will be filled by Rev. Carr Moore and other ministers.

REPORT OF LAUREL HILL CHURCH.

Below we give a copy of the pastor's report of the Presbyterian church at Laurel Hill. The year's record is certainly encouraging to the members of this grand old church and Rev. A. N. Ferguson, who has been its pastor for more than twenty-five years, should certainly feel encouraged with the fruits of his labors. The warm place he occupies in the hearts of his people gives to him an influence over his congregation, which few pastors enjoy.

The annual report made by the pastor of Laurel Hill church on last Sabbath, for the year ending 1896, was quite encouraging in a financial point of view.

The aggregate amount contributed by the church for various objects of church work and Christian benevolence, was nearly $1,250. In this amount is included $333 paid on pastor's salary. The above amount is the largest contributed by the church in any one year during the past twenty-five years, although the membership has been materially diminished in the last few years by dismissals to new organizations and removal by death.

Present resident membership, 139; additions during year, 7; removal by death, 7.—Laurinburg Exchange.

DAVIDSON NOTES.

Commencement Marshals Elected—Death of a Former Professor—The Lake Wiley Dam Broken Again.

The Literary Societies elected the Commencement Marshals last week. The following are to wear the regalias:

Chief: P. F. Henderson, Aiken, S. C.; Assistants: Eu. Society, T. S. Plunkett, Augusta, Ga.; W. L. Dick, Charleston, S. C.; R. B. Baxter, Sparta, Ga.: C. W. Hewitt, Darlington, S. C. Phi. Society: S. A. Robinson, Gastonia, N. C.; C. M. Brown, Washington, N. C.; L. C. Griffin, Mint Hill, N. C.; R. S. Abernethy, Lincolnton, N. C.

On Saturday, Jan. 30th, the ice on Lake Wiley was four inches thick, and in response to a petition the faculty omitted the regular recitations, and the whole college adjourned to the Lake. A glassy floor of twelve or thirteen acres furnished ample opportunity for skating, "shinny," tobogganing and every other sport dear to an "ice crank."

The memory of the day's enjoyment has been rendered even more vivid by the recent accident to the dam. The rain storm of last Friday night overflowed the college rain gauge, tore up the roads in every direction and swept away twenty feet of the Lake Wiley dam. The lake was stocked with choice fish and hundreds were caught by hand the next day in shallow pools left by the retreating waters.

A telegram was received this morning announcing the death of Prof. W. S. Graves, who resigned the Chair of Latin here four years ago, and has since been practicing law in Bedford City, Va. Prof. Graves was an elder in our church and one of the most honored, useful and public spirited citizens of the town. No particulars of his death, which occurred at his home in Bedford City, have been received.

On Jan. 30th and 31st, Dr. Smith delivered three addresses in the interest of the college in Maxton, N. C., and its vicinity. To-night the Junior King's Daughters give an entertainment in the church parlors. It is entitled "North Carolina," and consists of music, recitations, &c., arranged by their indefatigable President, Miss Julia Holt.

Since the death of Mrs. J. P. Irwin, of Charlotte, Mr. Irwin and his daughter, Miss Anna, have come to Davidson to live. They will make their home at the manse with our pastor and his wife, who was Miss Isabel Irwin. L.

MISSION SCHOOLS OF CONCORD PRESBYTERY.

A few years ago Concord Presbytery undertook the establishing and support of schools within her mission fields. Rev. R. P. Pell was then the evangelist of the Presbytery, and succeeded in establishing a school at Spruce Pine, in Mitchell county, as also at other points. The support of the evangelist was, and is, provided for by the Synodical and Presbyterial committees; but no regular and permanent support was, or is, provided for the school work. It is the purpose of this article to make a suggestion to the churches and ladies' societies of the Presbytery, whereby it is hoped a permanent and certain support can be secured for this feature of our mission work. In the olden days the church and the academy were planted side by side, and the intelligent Christians who were the results of this arrangement proved the wisdom of the plan. Something of this sort is now being attempted in this mission field. Testimony is not wanting to show what immense value and help these faithful ladies, who have taught these schools, have been to the evangelist. It ought not to be necessary to argue the importance of these schools to all permanent and successful mission work. Hence the question of support is the only one which seems to need to be discussed. Take, as an example, the school at Spruce Pine. Here a successful school has been taught six months in the year for the past three or four years, at an annual cost of about $300. How has this money been raised? By personal efforts of the evangelist, and special appeals from the Home Mission Committee. In other words, the support has been of an uncertain and spasmodic character. Sometimes it has been necessary to take the evangelist from his work, and send him among the churches, or send out a member of the committee on a special tour of appeal, in order to secure funds to pay the faithful teachers after their work was done. Now it is the opinion of the writer that all the Church's work should be run on business principles, or failure will be the result. How can we secure a certain and regular revenue for the support of this school work? The writer has answered this question so far as his own church in concerned by saying to the ladies' societies, "Will you promise me a certain sum (naming the amount) for the support of our mission schools?" and the amounts have been pledged. Now this is the suggestion made to all our pastors; get your Ladies' Society to promise some definite amount; any amount from $10 to $100 or more, if you choose; and report to the Home Mission Committee. If you have no society then call your officers together and get a similar promise from them. Send in your names and amounts that the Committee may be able to place this school work on a firm and safe basis.

J. ALSTON RAMSAY,
Secretary Home Mission Committee.

MINUTES OF SYNOD.

As the question has been asked, "Why have not the minutes of Synod appeared?" it may be satisfactory to give the answer in a note through the "N. C. PRESBYTERIAN." The delay has been occasioned mainly by three causes: First. The unusual size of the minutes this year, as they will contain the elders and deacons of all the churches; thus adding forty or fifty pages to the usual size of the book. Second: Delay in receiving the rolls from some of the stated clerks of Presbyteries: and even at this time there is one Presbytery not yet reported. Third: Sickness among the force in the printing office. A note from the printer to-day states that he will have them ready for distribution soon, if not delayed by the roll of elders and deacons which has not yet come to hand.

THE BEST NEWS.

MY FRIEND:—Have you ever thought what is the best news you could possibly hear from any quarter?

Suppose you should hear that one of your ancestors had left a great estate, and that the will had been so drawn that finally a very large inheritance had legally become yours.

No doubt you would very greatly rejoice. And you would quickly take all the necessary steps even at great expense of money and time and trouble to make it secure.

But I have far better news for you than this. It is of a far richer and more lasting inheritance. And it is yours. you will have it, not by the will of some unknown ancestors now dead, but by the express offer of a living and loving Father, who waits to welcome you home to himself! Will you take the same pains, and use the same promptness and the same diligence to make sure of this inheritance that you would to secure an earthly estate?

Perhaps you answer, "I do not know this to be true."

Will you listen while I tell you how YOU MAY CERTAINLY KNOW?

Consider first how you would act if the first news of the earthly estate came to you as a mere report, or a mere floating newspaper paragraph, you would at once begin a very diligent enquiry. You would try to trace the report to its origin, and, as far as necessary you would gather all the evidence you could from every quarter to ascertain the facts of the case, and to prove your claim to the inheritance.

Why should you do less than this in a matter so very, very far most important?

Consider secondly upon what sort of knowledge you are now building your present hope, and your present life. Is it really any more certain than that which God offers you concerning the Heavenly inheritance?

Of course the present moment. while the brief moment lasts, seems very real and very certain. But how dreamlike it will seem a few years hence, growing more and more dim and shadowy as the years fly by. It is very certain that it must very soon be gone forever. And what real certainty have you for the immediate future? You may claim strong probabilities. But the children of God claim absolute certainties. Nothing can be more certain than the testimonies and the promises of the living God who "cannot lie."

Why cannot you trust His Word (that shows its holiness and truth to your very conscience) as much, at least, as you can trust to your own hopes of a brief future without any guarantee from God?

Consider, thirdly, the sure test which the Lord Jesus Christ has himself given whereby a man may certainly know the truth. See John vii: 17, "If any man do his will, he shall know of the doctrine." As certainly as Christ spoke the truth, a man may certainly know the truth of His doctrine by this sure and simple test Nor need you fear that you will be guilty of the least wrong or of the least folly in beginning to do this. You have no need to fear that you will be mistaken or deceived in doing the will of God as revealed in His Word. Myriads of the best and wisest of men have proved the truth of His Word by their own happy experience. And so may you. S. G. L.

FOREIGN MISSION RECEIPTS FOR JANUARY.

The receipts of the Foreign Mission Treasury for January were $9,140.42, being a decrease as compared with last January of $1,728.68. A like decrease for February and March will, we fear, bring us to the close of the fiscal year in debt. It will certainly mean the stopping of all further reinforcement of the Missions, and the beginning of a disastrous course of curtailment in our work.

If this should meet the eyes of any of our members who have given nothing to the cause during the year, we beg all such to considor whether they can afford to have no part or lot in such a work.

S H. CHESTER,
Secretary.

NOTICE.

The requirements of the Book of Order having been complied with, I hereby call a meeting of Orange Presbytery in the First church, Greensboro, February 17th, at two o'clock p. m., to transact the following business, viz:

1. To change the place of the regular spring meeting of Presbytery.

2. To receive and act upon the resignation of Rev. M. McG. Shields, and dismiss him to the Presbytery of Mecklenburg if the way be clear, and to elect a chairman of Home Missions Committee if necessary.

R. E. CALDWELL,
Moderator.

At the last meeting of the company that recently sold the St. Louis Presbyterian to a Louisville, Ky., firm the board of directors adopted the following resolution in regard to the conduct of its affairs by manager Walter Williams, of Columbia:

Resolved, That the Board of the Presbyterian Publishing Co., of Columbia, Mo., hereby expresses its thanks to Walter Williams, manager of the company, for his able management and his untiring and self-sacrificing labors, recognizing these as his tribute, not to the company, but to the cause of Presbyterianism in the West The board commends Mr. Williams for his courteous and honorable conduct of difficult and delicate transactions committed to his charge, and feels indebted to him for the continuance of his unselfish work in closing the affairs of the corporation.

By order of the board

J. [illegible], President.

Mr. Williams is [illegible] present editor of The Columbia Missouri Herald.

The Presbyterian church of Durham has issued a tastely gotten up memorial of the twenty-fifth anniversary of that church which was celebrated on Dec. 27th last. The work is comprehensive giving as it does the historical sketch and plans for work in each of its several missions and will be found exceedingly interesting to all and invaluable to the members of the church.

Rev. W. W. Moore has consented to deliver the address at the closing of Red Springs Seminary in June This scores another success for this rapidly growing Institution and shows that the sympathy of very many are with her in the effort she is making for the good of the girls of the Old North State.

The agent of Foreign Missions of the Presbytery of Wilmington wishes to urge all churches or individuals who have money on hand or wish to give to Foreign Missions to send the same at once to the Treasurer, Mr. Erskine Reed, P. O. Drawer 457, Nashville, Tenn., through the Treasurer of Presbytery if possible. There is great reason to give to this cause and to send what we have given now.

Jules Verne is one of the most laborious of authors, and a popular one, too. But, considering the fashion in which his books have gone around the reading world, he has had but a small return. He has never made more than $4,000 a year in his life.

THE BEST INVESTMENT.

It was stated in the secular papers last week that one of the twenty institutions, among which the sum of $3,000,000 of the Fayerweather estate was to be equally divided, was Union Theological Seminary. This is not our beloved institution in Virginia, we are sorry to say, to which this large sum of $150,000 is bequeathed, but the seminary of the same name in New York city.

Our Union Seminary ought to have just such a sum, in addition to her present resources, in order to the proper prosecution of her great work. Ours is the oldest and largest seminary in our Church, and has a larger endowment than any of our other theological schools, and yet it never has been large enough to enable the institution to do its work to the best advantage. It has only been by the most skillful and economical management that the present income has been made to meet expenses. There will be some reduction in these expenses under the new plan contemplated for the conduct of the institution when removed to Richmond, as it will be in the not distant future, but as it is expected that the number of students in attendance will then increase, it is no less necessary than it has been heretofore that the benevolent should remember it in their donations and bequests. The catalogue states that the legal title of the corporation is, "The trustees of Union Theological Seminary in Virginia."

There are many things which the directors and professors have long wished to do in the way of enlarging the facilities and increasing the efficiency of the seminary, but which they have been unable to do for lack of funds. And now, when former students of our seminary are writing back from the best institutions at the North, and in Scotland, where they have gone to get certain post-graduate courses not offered anywhere in the South, that the regular course at Union is more perfectly organized and more thoroughly taught than in any seminary at the North or abroad, and that all she lacks in this way is the addition of the advantages referred to, the time is opportune for people of means, who recognize the vital importance at the present time of a thoroughly equipped ministry, to meet this need. The large gifts recently made to the seminary by several liberal gentlemen, who knew the worth of the institution and its importance to the work of Christ, were made for the specific purpose of providing suitable buildings for it in its new location, and it must now look to other friends for the means to provide for the increased number of students which may be expected within two or three years. The seminary makes no charge for tuition, room rent, or furniture. We are informed that $50 will furnish a room completely and keep its furnishings in repair for some time. Our people may occasionally forget that even in theological seminaries furniture and bedding wear out in the course of years, and bowls and pitchers get broken.

A donation of $1,000 establishes a scholarship in the seminary, the interest on which will help to support some needy and worthy young man in his preparation for the ministry, and will keep on doing it every year throughout all the future. There are various needs of our seminary which we are sure any of the professors would take pleasure in stating to inquirers more fully than can be done here. May God put it into the hearts of many of our Christian people not only to give to its work in their life-time, but, when considering what portion of their estates they wish to leave to the cause of Christ, to remember this old, tried, and fruitful training school of ministers which has been so much to our Church in the past, and which is to be so much to it in the future. "There is no investment like living voices for Christ."—Central Presbyterian.

BUDDING AND GRAFTING.

BY OBADIAH OLDSCHOOL.

Of the millions of trees in the orchards of California, not one in a thousand is a seedling. When the nursery man or orchardist wants to propagate a choice variety of fruit he does not plant its pits or seed, but those of some hardy variaty to make what he calls a stock. Then, when the scions are a year old or less he buds them. Let me explain. We are preparing to plant, next year, from ten to twenty acres in a new variety of petite prunes. We have one or two trees of this variety that we bought several years ago, and that are now old enough to bear, so that we have tested its value. Now what do we do? We go to our almond orchard and gather a bushel or two of hard shell and bitter almonds—almonds that have almost no market value. We plant them in nursery rows. They send up vigorous shoots Then we take long branches, covered with leaf buds, from our new prune trees; we cut out one of these buds, taking a little splinter of the bark and wood with it; we make a perpendicular slit in the bark of the scion an inch or two above the ground, and a cross slit in the middle of the perpendicular one; we fold back the bark of the scion, insert the bud, press the bark open, bind it in place with thread both above and below the bud, which of course is left uncovered. This is a somewhat delicate process, requiring both care and skill. But it can be performed very rapidly. One man can bud hundreds of scions in a day.

When the sap of the scion enters this bud, mistaking it for one of its own, and it begins to grow, we cut off the scion above and close to the bud. The result is that all the growth thenceforth goes through that one bud until it becomes a tree. It will not be an almond tree, however, but a prune tree. The insertion of the new bud, and cutting off all the original buds of the scion, gives us a new tree, and one that is sure to be like that from which the bud was taken.

But grafting is a very different process. A friend of mine has an orchard of 4,000 trees ten years old. They are large and healthy, but the fruit they bear is not satisfactory. He does not want to dig them up, and wait five or six years for a new crop. So he hires a gang of grafters. They charge him 25 cents a tree, which makes a round $1,000 for changing his orchard from almonds to prunes. They cut off the limbs three or four feet from the ground, split the ends, insert in each of the clefts two wedge shaped cuttings from a prune tree, adjust the graft so that its bark shall be closely united with the bark of the almond tree, cover the cleft and the end of the cloven branch with grafting wax, and the work is done. But to do this on half a dozen limbs of each tree requires a great deal of time, as well as care and skill, so that grafting is from fifty to a hundred times as expensive as budding. It would have been a great deal cheaper and better for my friend to have budded those trees when they were a year old than to graft them when they are ten years old. And yet grafting is better than digging them up and starting again.

Now the Bible again and again speaks of the Christian as a tree of righteousness, planted in the house of the Lord, a tree bearing fruit, etc. The church therefore may be regarded as an orchard; and the question is, How can we get the best trees in in this best of orchards? We can not depend upon seedlings. The child of pious parents is not born pious. All the native stock of the race is like that of our hard and bitter almonds. This active stock must be changed by what we call regeneration. The roots of character remain. Conversion does not destroy our constitutional traits; it does not make the dullard a genius, or the sluggard energetic. The Holy Spirit takes men as they are, and makes as good Christians out of them as he can. But when shall he take them, cut back the native growth, and start the buds of a new character and life? Shall he do it when they are scions or when they are full grown trees? The Spirit is wise, wiser than our wisest nursery men, and, of course, he seeks first, as the most hopeful subjects of regenerating grace, the little children, such as Jesus took in his arms while on the earth.

When a tree is grafted we have not only the roots of the old stock under ground but a part of the trunk above ground. In this trunk there are dormant buds. The sap reaches them first, and they develop into what we call "suckers." These suckers the orchardist has to watch for and cut off. And such suckers are ever springing up in the hearts of those who are converted in the maturity of manhood or womanhood.

Fifty Years Ago.

No theory of germs to chill
Affection's budding blisses;
When ardent lovers took their fill,
No microbes on their kisses.
How happy they were not to know
The germ-fad—go years ago.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the standard family remedy of the world for colds, coughs and lung diseases. It is not a palliative, and is not therefore put up in small cheap bottles. It is put up in large bottles for the household. They cost more but cure more.

Fads come and go but no theory or fad can overthrow the fact, that the greatest cure for all colds, coughs and throat and lung diseases, is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

50 Years of Cures.

The devil finds a dormant bud of carnality, and he stimulates it until the tempted believer cries, with the great apostle, "O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from this body of death?"—this trunk of the old nature full of unholy habits and imaginations!

As a rule the budded tree is free from suckers, and so the Christian who becomes such in childhood escapes many temptations, and grows up a more symmetrical tree of righteousness. It is also far easier and cheaper to bud than to graft. Hence if our ministers, who are the nurserymen and the orchardists in the garden of the Lord, want to do the most and best work for the Master and for the world, they should labor especially for the young. But, alas! how many of them seem almost to "despise these little ones." They want to work at the old trees because even their mutilated trunks are more conspicuous than the scions in the nursery. But as the budded scion may live and bear much fruit for years after the grafted tree has perished, so the child-convert may be an eminent and useful Christian long after the man-convert has been released from his life-long struggle with the sproutings of the carnal nature. Let us save the children and we will save the world.—Interior.

BELIEVING AND TRUSTING.

Faith accepts as true everything which God has said. Trust puts all to practical and personal use. The need of trusting is so great that the Bible is full of exhortations concerning it: "Trust in the Lord and do good;" "Trust ye in the Lord forever;" "O, Lord of hosts, blessed is the man that trusteth in thee;" "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee, because he trusteth in thee. The comfort of every promise is ours if we trust. We may believe it all—what rational person would doubt what God has said?—but the blessedness of the promises is ours only when we trust God to carry them out in our life and being. When shall we trust? When we are conscious of sin let us trust the finished work of Christ for us. When tempted, trust Him who is able to keep us from falling. When perplexed, trust Him who has promised to lead the blind by a way they know not. When tired, trust Him who says, "I will rest you." When full of pain, so that even prayer is difficult, trust Him who says, "Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask Him." When you are weak and unable to meet the duty or the pain of life, trust Him who says, "My grace is sufficient for thee. When resources fail, trust Him who says, "God shall supply all your need." "Trust in Him at all times; ye people, pour out your heart before him; God is a refuge for us.—Exchange.

I CURE FITS

When I say I cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. CATECHISM.

Question 28. Wherein consisteth Christ's exaltation?

Answer. Christ's exaltation consisteth in His rising again from the dead on the third day, in ascending up into heaven, in sitting at the right hand of God the Father, and in coming to judge the world at the last day.

INTRODUCTORY.

We have seen how the early Church had all things common and many having property converted it into money for the need of others. Now there were two classes of the disciples. The native Jews spoke Aramaic and used the Hebrew Scriptures. Many Jews foreign born spoke Greek and used the Scriptures in their Greek translation. Of both classes there were poor and needy ones. The complaint was made that the widows of the Greek Jewish Christians were neglected in the daily distribution. This might have occurred without blame to any one. Or the complaint might have been, without intention, unjust. It, thereupon, became necessary for some special provision to be made for attending to the temporal affairs of the early Church without taxing further the ministers of the Word. Some men of honest reputation, full of the Holy Ghost, capable of attending to this were chosen. In the planting of the Church the office of elder was simply carried from the synagogue into the church and linked in the well ordered providence. Of the first deacons one was of eminent spirituality and strength in the service and became as seen in this lesson: "The First Christian Martyr."

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 8. And Stephen. One of the most active of the seven deacons, probably a Grecian Jew, as the wisdom and charity of the disciples appears in choosing almost all from theGrecians whose widows were neglected. He was full of faith as a man of eminent piety, trusting in God, being a Christian by faith in Christ, and power, of the Holy Spirit. The R. V. has "grace" instead of "faith," because the thought was not so much of his being a saved man and of his faith in God, as of his character and standing. He was also chosen like the other deacons for his practical discretion and ability to manage the money matters of the Church. He was a man of spiritual deeds, did great wonders by the power of God, and miracles as signs of the approval of God on his ministry, and as the ministry of Christ by the Spirit in the loving, saving spirit of the Gospel.

Vs. 9. Then. R. V., "but" as a new difficulty the synagogue of the Libertines, composed of foreign Jews, who were Libertines or freed men who had been Roman captives. Cyrenians, citizens of Cyrene in North Africa. Alexandrians. From Alexandria in Egypt. Africa. The province of Asia Minor of which Tarsus was the capital. Asia. Not the great division but Asia Minor. Disputing with Stephen, probably in the synagogue.

Vs. 10. Were not able. In truth and spirit to resist, to answer or withstand

Vs. 11. Suborned. Provided secretly and influenced to tell the falsehood that he had spoken blasphemy in contempt against Moses and the institutions God gave by him. This was a capital offense. Deut. xiii: 6, 10.

Vs. 12. Stirred up the people. The first notice of opposition from the people. The elders and scribes would thus be supported in attacking Stephen. Caught him, meaning in the Greek with great violence. Council, the Sanhedrim.

Vs. 13. False Witnesses, by perverting and distorting his words. Against this holy place. The temple, the same charge brought against Christ.

Vs. 14. Change the customs. This was said, but not as if destroying or making void those customs, but transforming them in the Gospel.

Vs. 15. His face... as the face of an angel. Like to that of Moses and by the indwelling of the Holy Ghost.

vii. Vs. 54. They were cut to the heart by the wonderful addresss of Stephen as recorded in this chapter. They gnashed. With impotent rage in a demoniac feeling.

Vs. 55 Full of the Holy Ghost. Not a sudden inspiration but a permanent state. Looked up steadfastly into heaven, seeing no longer the council, but some manifestation of the glory of God. And Jesus standing. Not sitting as in Matt. xxvi: 64, but having risen to protect His servant and welcome him to Heaven.

Vs. 56. The heavens opened and the Son of man appeared to this dear servant and first martyr.

Vs. 57. Ran upon him. R. V., "rushed." This was not a judicial punishment.

Vs. 58. And stoned him. As the Jewish mode of capital punishment. And the witnesses, according to the law of Moses were to cast the first stone. A young man's feet whose name was Saul, the later great apostle Paul, probably thirty-four years of age then.

Vs. 59. They stoned. Went on stoning Stephen, even while he prayed.

Vs 60. With a loud voice. So that his persecutors could hear him, and his prayer was the same as Christ prayed for His enemies. He fell asleep in Jesus as every Christian does to awake in body at the resurrection, the Spirit being with Jesus, meanwhile.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

1. There should be order in the hands of pious officers full of the Holy Ghost and of suitable capacity in the Church.

2. The testimony of Jesus may cost us dear.

3. It will be reward to have the concern and care of Christ and His welcome to Himself. That is heaven.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Feb. 21st, 1897.

BY REV. B. E. WALLACE.

OUR LITTLE WORRIES, AND HOW TO GET RID OF THEM. Psa. 121: 1-8; Jno. 14: 1.

Text for the week:

"Casting all your care upon Him, for He careth for you" 1 Peter. 5: 7.

Daily Readings:

Monday, Christ Saves From Them, 1 Peter 1: 3-9.

Tuesday, Moses' Worry, Exodus 4: 10-17.

Wednesday, Elijah's Worry, 1 Kings 19: 1-18.

Thursday, The Widow's Worry, 1 Kings 17: 8-16.

Friday, Trouble Without Worry, 2 Cor. 4: 8-18.

Saturday, A Cure For Worry, 1 Sam. 30: 1-6.

Sunday, Topic—WORRIES, Psa. 121; Jno. 14: 1.

Suggestions for Leaders:

1. Do not worry because you are leader—ask the Holy Spirit to fill your heart and open your mouth.

2. Give out before hand references proving the sufficiency of God's grace.

3 Explain why Jesus never worried over anything.

Notes;

Complaints and worries as a genera rule make up our daily lives. This fact shows a lack of faith. Jesus says, "Let not your heart be troubled," for everything works for good to those that love the Lord. We cannot wait for the issue. An emergency arises, we want to grapple it and hasten the solution. And in doing this we get into greater depths, open wider breaches and pile up more abundant worries.

A good light right here and one that is hard for us to see is, WAIT ON THE LORD. It takes great faith to be still and see the hand of the Lord. When worries come let us:

1. Carry them to Jesus, He is the burdenbearer.

2. Not fret about them. Think of God's care for the lilies, the sparrows.

3. Not drown them in drink or wordly pleasure. We reap what we sow.

4. Not complain, but rather drown them in Christian activity. Forgetting, says Paul, "I press toward the mark."

"But my God shall supply all your need according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus." Phil, 4: 19.

OPEN DOOR NOTES.

In an infant class of our acquaintance the children are asked to bring upon the Sunday following their birthdays the number of pennies that they are years old. With pride the little ones bring the amount and a nice little sum is collected. The whole is contributed to the cause of missions on Children's Day.

A Westminster League has been organized at Lawrenceburg, Ky., with twenty members. The number will be largely increased in a short time.

A friend at school in Massachusetts writes of the Christian work existing among the pupils: "If I were in college now I might write something that would be of interest, of the religious life there but you know we are a small school and there is little to be said We have a society somewhat after the plan of the Christian Endeavor, and we have a little prayer-meeting every Thursday night. One of the teachers or girls selected by the prayer meeting committee leads the meeting, and we have sentence-prayers songs and remarks, both from the leader and others who have anything to say. We distributed little packages of envelopes among all, and each promised a small weekly offering for missions. On Sunday morning the envelopes are dropped in a little receiver in the hall and the treasurer keeps a record of each person's contributions. My room mate is the treasurer, we have a secretary and I am president. I am glad we have our weekly meetings. They are very pleasant and I think a help to all, coming as they do in the midst of our work."

PUZZLE DEPARTMENT.

ANSWERS FOR JAN. 28TH.

Joshua set up twelve stones in the middle of the river Jordan to mark the spot where the priests which bare the ark of the covenant stood—Maggie Hall, Rosa Hall Witherspoon, Mary Oates Caldwell.

FUNDS FOR THE BIBLE CAUSE.

Comparatively few of the churches in the Synod of North Carolina have as yet sent in to me their contributions to the Bible Cause this year. I therefore fear that they may be lying in the hands of the Treasurers. As our fiscal year closes with March, I respectively urge that in such cases the funds be promptly remitted to me. The American Bible Society is in pressing need of them and they ought to go forward at once.

McDUFFIE.—At the home of her mother, near Coffer, N. C., on February 1st, 1897, Miss Sarah McDuffie, in her 45th year. She was a consistent member of White Hill church.

McDONALD.—At her home near Marks Creek church, Mary, the wife of John Allen McDonald. A devoted husband and children mourn her loss. She was a faithful member of the church of which her sorrowing husband has long been a ruling elder. She gently and calmly went to sleep.

Beyond life's narrow sea
Where every sigh is hushed to rest,
There let our treasures be.

PASTOR

McDIARMID.—In the death of Mr. W. W. McDiarmid, editor of "The Robesonian," at Lumberton, Feb. 4th, the Presbyterian church is again called upon to mourn the loss of a valued member, for his life, for many years, had been so intimately joined to it that its struggles and triumphs were his. With power he bent his broad shoulders to all burdens, and as an office bearer—deacon—he cheerfully answered all calls.

A man among men, most genial; an editor, judicious and clean; and with an open life, revealing devotion to the en nobling, opposition to all defamation steadfastness to principle and staunch adherence to the Christian faith.

"The elements" were
"So mixed in him, that nature might stand up
And say to all the world, this was a man!"

He had just begun to rally from the staggering blow of the fire that left, as the only visible result of a life's work, a crumbling heap of brick. But that blow prepared the way for the final stroke. With less than a week's illness, he passed into that eternal life toward which his eyes had long been turned.

This whole community, bending low, extends the hand of sympathy to the widow and son so heavily afflicted.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3rd, 1897.

Although the arbitration treaty has been favorably reported, with amendments, to the Senate by the Committee on Foreign Relations, there is little probability, according to those who ought to know, of its being ratified at the present session of Congress. While no Senator has specifically said as much, it is easily inferred from public remarks made by several of them that some of the opposition to immediate action on the treaty arises from an idea that promptness in ratifying the treaty would cause the Senate to lose prestige in English eyes. There is very little doubt that some of the Senators who as yet have only stated their desire to have the treaty fully considered and discussed before being disposed of, are at heart opposed to the treaty either amended or unamended, but hesitate to make an open fight upon it because of the strong public opinion which favors it, and which is hourly making itself felt, if not heeded, by Senators.

The Christian Endeavorers of New Jersey have submitted a petition, through Senator Sewall, asking that the bill which has been passed by the House, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquor in the Capitol building, be passed by the Senate, and a letter has been received by the Senate Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, from Miss Frances E. Willard, President of the National W. C. T. U., in advocacy of the passage of the same bill. Miss Willard says in her letter: "The sentiment against the sale of intoxicants at our Capitol buildings, and especially at the National Capitol, is strong. It is not a question of legalizing the traffic in general, but simply whether it is right to have temptations placed continually before the law makers of this great self-governing nation." The bill amending the liquor license laws of the District of Columbia has been favorably reported to the Senate; also the bill prohibiting the sale of intoxicants in the Capitol. The last bill might have been passed this week had not Senator Hill objected when Senator Morrill asked for unanimous consent to take it up and pass it.

Scenes at the great Christian Endeavor Convention of '96, were recalled by the enthusiam at a meeting held this week at the First Congregational church, as a testimonial to the members of the committee which made the arrangements for the Convention, from the District of Columbia Union. The following was unanimously and enthusiastically adopted and an engraved copy presented to each member of the committe. "The hosts of Christian Endeavorers of the District of Columbia greet you and thank you for your magnificent service in arranging for and entertaining one of the greatest religious conventions held since the morning stars sang together in the dawn of creation. We esteem you as a brother. We honor you for your fidelity to duty. We congratulate you on your brilliant success. May brightest sunshine fill your life; may happy memories, like summer breezes, chant their sweet songs in your heart! May the beautiful convention pictures of 1896, ever hang on the walls of your memory, bringing back these happy days with their kindly words and loving faces! May our Father bless you richly, and give many years of helpful service for Christ and the Church, ere the angels shall welcome you to a home in heaven."

Temperance people are pleased at the action of the Inaugural Executive Committee, prohibiting the sale of wine at the Inaugural Ball. It is understood that this will be the first time an Inaugural Ball has been held without the sale of wine. The committee is said to have been actuated by a desire to compliment Mrs. McKinley's temperance views. What caused the committee to take this action isn't half so important as the action itself, which cannot be too highly commended.

At the last mass meeting under the auspices of the Anti-Saloon League, the principal speaker was Representative Calderhead, of Kansas, who gave a sketch of the rise and growth of prohibition in his State and the good it has done. He told how the prohibition amendment was proposed as a joke by the enemies of prohibition and was adopted by a large majority of the voters. Although he admitted that the law was openly violated in some of the larger cities of the State, he stoutly contended that taking the State as a whole prohibition did prohibit, and as a consequence that there were thousands of boys in Kansas who had never seen a saloon and who would grow up honest citizens over whom the liquor evil would gain no power. He closed his remarks by expressing the positive conviction that Divine influence was guiding the anti-saloon movement.

Mrs. Waterbury, of Boston, Secretary of the Woman's Baptist Foreign Missionary Society of the East, who is in Washington arranging for the annual meeting of that society in this city in April, spoke twice at Calvary Baptist church on Sunday, first to a union meeting of woman's missionary societies, in the afternoon, on "Woman's Influence," and again in the evening to a young people's meeting on "Mission Work in India."

Dr. Herbert L. Willett, of the Chicago University, will on the 12th inst., begin a series of six lectures on the Bible, under the auspices of the Society of Religious Education. T.

FOR THE FAMILY.

THE OLD LECTURE ROOM.

The following touching lines were written by Mr. W. S. Primrose recently on the occasion of the last service in the Session House, in Raleigh, N. C.:

Sweet mem'ries of an hallow'd past
Come to our willing hearts unasked.

A halo gathers o'er this place
As each dear form and each dear face
Of those we loved, who worshipped here,
In all the past, to us appear.
Here sweet-toned voices oft did blend,
Even as now, our songs ascend;
So their's in prayer and sweetest praise
Were heard as oft in by-gone days.

This dear old place will soon be gone,
And though another may adorn
These premises with ampler space,
With costlier work and added grace,
Yet still at parting we'll combine
To leave one tribute at its shrine.
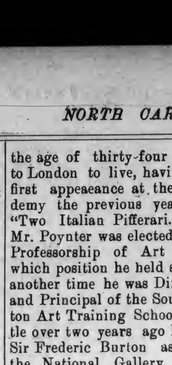
No more we'll meet at call of bell
In this loved place—and now farewell,
Dear Lecture-room, again farewell.



The most gigantic harp ever constructed, so far as the record goes, was that made by Veritan, the provost of Burkli, near Basel, Switzerland, in 1787, says the St. Louis Republic. That was a long while ago, but the fame of Mons. Veritan's gigantic harp was such that it is still occasionally mentioned by writers on the rare and wonderful, just as the sea serpent, bloody rain, live mastodons, etc., are. Mons. Veritan's colossal musical instrument was 320 feet in length, and, on that account, was constructed in an open lot, instead of a harp factory. It was most simple in construction, consisting of fifteen wires strung tightly between two poles. The wires were of different sizes, the largest being one-sixth of an inch in diameter and the smallest one-twelfth of an inch. They were stretched north and south, and inclined in such a manner as to form an angle of from 20 to 30 degrees with the horizon. This queer instrument was not intended as an exaggerated toy, but was constructed for the express purpose of foretelling changes in the weather, which were calculated by Prof. Veritan according to the different tones the instrument made when the wind was blowing through it.—Ex.

Edward John Poynter, who has just been elected President of the English Royal Academy, to succeed the late Sir John Everett Millais, comes of a family of artistic distinction, being the son of an architect and the grandson of a sculptor. He was born in Paris sixty years ago, but received his earlier education in England, returning to France, however, afterward to take up art. There he became a pupil in L' Ecole des Beaux Arts and of Charles Gleyre, and the sketch of him in "Trilby," as a student in Paris, has brought his personality very near to the public. At the age of thirty-four he returned to London to live, having made his first appearance at the Royal Academy the previous year 1859, with "Two Italian Pifferari." In 1871, Mr. Poynter was elected to the Slade Professorship of Art at Oxford, which position he held six years. At another time he was Director of Art and Principal of the South Kensington Art Training Schools, and a little over two years ago he succeeded Sir Frederic Burton as Director of the National Gallery. There has been some opposition to Mr. Poynter's election among friends of other prominent candidates, and it is said the influence of the queen was the power that really secured it. But nevertheless the new President is an artist of high ideals and wide reputation, and one who will both socially and artistically worthily fill the place of his illustrious predecessors, Sir Francis Grant, Lord Leighton, and Sir John Everett Millais. Perhaps Mr. Poynter's best known composition is the famous "Atalanta's Race," which has been popularized, like much of his work, by engraving.—Ex.

A mixture of olive oil, three parts; ammonia, one part, is an excellent remedy for chilblains. Before retiring wash feet with warm water and castile soap, gently dry them, apply mixture and draw on socks that the feet may be kept warm.

Eternal Vigilance.

"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty." It is the price of everything worth having.

It is the price of life itself. A man needn't be always looking for danger, afraid that something will happen to him; but a wise man will form a habit of care about the important things of life.

It isn't half so much trouble to take care of yourself as it is not to. A man who follows regular, healthy habits, feels good all the time. Life is worth living to him. But a man who "don't want to bother" with taking care of himself has more pain and misery crowded into one day than a good healthy, hearty man who lives right would ever know of in a whole year.

When a man's stomach is out of order, and his digestion don't work; when his liver gets to be sluggish and won't clear the bile out of his blood, it is time for him to look out for himself. He gets no nourishment out of his food. His blood gets thicker and thicker with impurities. His nerves get irritated. He loses energy and fighting force.

He may say, "I can stand it, I will feel better to-morrow;" but the chances are he will feel worse to-morrow and worse still next day. He ought to put himself right at once. He needs Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is made for just this condition. It rouses up the digestive and nutritive organs, and gives them power to extract from the food all the nutritious elements and transform them into rich, nourishing blood. It enables the liver to cleanse out all bilious impurities and pour into the circulation an abundance of highly vitalized blood, full of the life-giving red corpuscles which build up healthy flesh, muscular strength, and nerve-energy. It does not make flabby flesh. It is the only suitable tonic and strength-builder for corpulent people.

SELECT CATALOGUE OF CHOICE BOOKS SABBATH - SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS

ATTENTION.

We wish to place in every Sabbath-School in our Church a copy o above catalogue.

No book has been placed upon this list that has not been carefully read by some thoroughly competent person: most of them by Rev. W. A. Campbell, D. D

None have been placed upon the list that failed to meet these requirements, viz:

The Best Moral and Spiritual Teaching
Sound Scriptural Theology.
A High Literary Merit.
Freedom from Political or Sectional Allusions.

Any selection may be made from this list with confidence that nothing will be found to which anyone can object.

A brief description is given of most of the books as an aid in making selections.

On all orders for libraries, whether selected from this catalogue, or from the lists of any publishers of Sabbath-School literature, we will give 30 per cent. discount.

If desired, we will ourselves make, careful selection, or will send to any order one-fourth more books than may be needed for a library, with the privilege of returning any that are not wanted.

We ask that every pastor will send the name of the Superintendent of the Sabbath-School that we may supply him with the above catalogue.

Also Sabbath School Supplies, Class books, Records, &c., on the best terms.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

KING FROST HAS COME.

The Winter winds shut down the lid,
And Jack Frost turns the key,
And Summer's treasures safe are hid
From storms that are to be;
A treasure chest
Is old earth's breast.
Safe locked for you and me.

Then swift the wind's wild shuttles fly
To spin the blankers rare,
All soft, and warm, and many ply,
Of snowflakes in the air.
All fleecy light,
And downy white,
She wraps them round with care.

And so we spare a little while,
Our treasures from our sight;
The verdure which makes Summer's smile—
The flowers, the earth's delight—
And turn to see
What joys there be
Around the hearthstone bright.

But just a scrap of Summer's wealth,
A bit of Summer bloom,
We'll win to brighten heart and health,
And cheer our Winter room.
So, Heaven, which takes
Our dearest, makes
Its own cheer 'mid earth's gloom.

ONLY A PIN.

"Only two or three days ago an overseer in an English mill found a pin which cost the company nearly a hundred pounds."

"Was it stolen?" asked Susie. "I suppose it must have been very handsome. Was it a diamond pin?"

"O, no, my dear! not by any means. It was just such a pin as people buy every day and use without stint. Here is one upon my dress."

"Such a pin as that cost nearly a hundred pounds!" exclaimed John. "I don't believe it."

"But mamma says it is a true story," interposed Susie.

"Yes, I know it to be true. And this is the way the pin happened to cost so much. You know that calicos, after they are printed and washed and dried, are smoothed by being passed over heated rollers. Well, by some mischance, a pin dropped so as to lay upon the principal roller and indeed became wedged into it, the head standing out a little from the surface.

"Over and over went the roller, and round and round went the cloth, until the piece was measured off. Then another piece began to be dried and wound, and so on until a hundred pieces had been counted off. These were not examined immediately, but removed from the machinery and laid aside. When at length they came to be inspected it was found that there were holes in every piece throughout the web, and only three-quarters of a yard apart. Now, in every piece there were from thirty-five to forty-five yards, and at nine pence a yard that would count up to about £180.

"Of course the goods could not be classed as perfect goods, so they were sold as remnants, at about half the price they would have brought had it not been for the hidden pin.

"Now, it seems to me that when a boy takes for his companion a profane swearer, a Sabbath breaker or a lad who is untruthful, and a little girl has for her playmate one who is unkind and disobedient, or in any way a wicked child, they are like the roller which took to its bosom the pin. Without their being able to help it, often the evil influence clings to them, and leaves its mark upon everybody with whom they come in contact.

"That pin damaged irreparably four thousand yards of new print, but bad company has ruined thousand of souls for whom Christ has died. Remember, 'one sinner destroyeth much good;' therefore, avoid evil companions."—Exchange.

GOD'S TELEPHONE.

Little Marcie is a happy girl. She has a nice home, kind parents, and a dear little brother for a playmate.

Three years ago God took Marcie's Grandma, whom she dearly loved, to heaven. Though but a wee tot when Grandma left them, Marcie has not forgotten her.

Marcie's mamma is a very busy woman, but she takes time to tell her little girl many stories about heaven—dear Grandma's home.

One day mamma was called to the telephone. Marcie was very quiet and thoughtful. Mamma asked what she was thinking about.

"O mamma!" said Marcie, "wouldn't it be nice if there was a telephone to heaven, so that we could talk to Grandma?"

Mamma drew Marcie to her, and said:

"There is a telephone to heaven, dear, and our prayers are little messages going straight up to our kind heavenly Father."

"Well, mamma," said Marcie, "I am going to send a message to heaven every day, and I think God will tell Grandma, don't you?—Almeda in the Sunbeam.

LITTLE-GIRL GRADMA'S DEER.

When grandmother was a little girl she had a pet deer. Her father had caught it in the woods one day, back of the house, and brought it home to her. It soon grew very tame and would often follow little grandma into the house, and go from room to room, and could even go upstairs.

One day, just the very day before Thanksgiving Day, the big brick oven had been heated, and little girl grandmother's mother had baked a great many very nice Thanksgiving pies. She had spread them out in an unused room upstairs right over the kitchen, on the shelves of a big closet.

There were many mince and apple pies with crisp, flakey crusts, and there were delicate custard and golden squash and spicy pumpkin pies, all side by side, in tempting array.

Some time that afternoon, little-girl grand-mother heard a noise overhead—a little tap, tap, tap, as if some one were walkin, about in the empty room over the kitchen. Upstairs little girl grandmother went. And what do you think she saw?

She saw the closet door wide open, and she saw the empty crusts of her mother's nice Thanksgiving pies and the naughty, guilty, little deer who had licked out all their sweet delicious contents! And what did she do then? She took him by his pretty ear, and led him down the stairs, and he went as peaceably as though he had done nothing wrong.—Babyland.

LIFE'S LITTLE DAYS.

One secret of a sweet and happy Christian life is learning to live by the day. It is the long stretches that tire us. We cannot carry the load until we are threescore and ten. We cannot fight this battle continually for half a century. But really there are no long stretches. Life does not come to us all at one time; it comes only a day at a time. Even to-morrow is never ours till it becomes to-day, and we have nothing whatever to do with it but to pass down to it a fair and good inheritance in to-day's work well done and to-day's life well lived. British Weekly.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Mr. McLaurin:—As I have not written to you I will write. I enjoy reading the letters. My sister loves to read the letters too and is going to write soon to your good paper. Papa has been taking the PRESBYTERIAN ever since I can remember. I will close.

Your unknown friend,
LUOLA BELLE KELLY.

Carthage, N. C.

Dear Editor:—As my brother is writing to you I will write too. I like to read the letters from the little folks in your paper. I am going to school. I am in the second grade. Miss McCall is my teacher. I was eight years old this month. I am going to take music lessons soon. I hope you will publish this letter as I want my uncle at Wadesboro to see it.

Your little friend,
SADIE M. POSTON.

Statesville, N. C.

Dear Presbyterian:—I enjoy reading the children's letters every week. I am twelve years old. Our pastor, Rev. J. A. Ramsay, preaches for us once a month. We like him so much that we wish he could preach for us every Sunday. Our manse was burned down last winter. Our Sunday-school gave a birthday party Christmas and we had a nice time. My Sunday-school teacher, Miss Lizzie Campbell, has a class of seven girls who all love her so much. My oldest sister teaches music at Red Springs Seminary, and we miss her so much. I will ask a question in the Puzzle Department.

Your little friend,
ROSA HALL WITHERSPOON.

Newton, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I will write my third little letter to your readers. We had a nice Christmas. I went to a Christmas tree, and I enjoyed it very much. I got a present off of it. There were about ninety children at it. I have been going to school, but is over now. I have five brothers and two sisters. I will tell you their names. My oldest brother is named John William. Lizzie is my oldest sister. Albert is my next brother. Rena is my youngest sister. James Franklin is my third oldest brother Cecil Nox is next and Robert Spellman is my youngest brother. So I must close, in fear of the waste basket.

I hope to see my letter in the Letter Box.

Your friend,
ANNIE B. COUNCIL.

Council Station, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I have seen so many little letters in the PRESBYTERIAN paper that I thought I would write one too. I am a little girl eleven years old. I have five brothers and two sisters. My grandpa has been taking the PRESBYTERIAN going on twenty-years. As this is my first letter I will close. I hope to see my letter in the Letter Box.

From yours truly.
LIZZIE COUNCIL.

Council Station, N. C.

Dear Presbyterian: I will write to tell of my great aunts' deaths. There may be some one who reads the PRESBYTERIAN and knows them and would like to hear from them. They lived near Cedar Grove by themselves, just two old ladies. It was Aunt Jennie and Aunt Pollie Wilkinson. Aunt Jennie died the 21st and Aunt Pollie died the 24th of January, 1897. Their mother and father were buried in the same grave. She died the 30th of January and he died the 31st of January, 1842. He was complaining some when she died. They always said that they wanted to die at the same time, and they got their wish. There were eleven children and only one living and that is papa's father. Mama had an uncle to die in a pulpit. It was Rev. A. G. Hughes. He died in Cross Road's pulpit where Rev. R. W. Culbertson preaches. Probably some of your readers knew Uncle Anderson. I don't remember him. He has been dead a long time. We will have preaching at Grier's church the first Sunday in February, Rev. Joseph Evans is our pastor,

Your friend,
CORNIE WILKINSON.

SECULAR NEWS.

NORTH CAROLINA.

The exposition which is being managed by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. Charlotte, is pushing on with every prospect of success worthy of that progressive town. Relics are asked for and especially articles of use during the Confederacy. Many works of art will be exhibited and an effort will be made to secure Mr. Wanamaker's celebrated painting of Christ before Pilate, by Munkascy.

The through train known as the Florida Special, heretofore running solid from Washington, D. C., to Florence, S. C., will stop on each way at Fayetteville. We hope this will prove advantageous to our sister city as before the building of the "Short cut" many Northern passengers would visit Wilmington.

The North Carolina Rolling Exposition will be the inscription upon a car especially made by the largest car works in our country at Wilmington, Del., for the transportation and disply of the products of our State. The car will be under the management of Messrs. Ramseur and Moore who have given great thought and labor to this enterprise. In no better way could our State be advertised throughout the north and west.

The Athletic Association of the Presbyterian High School was re organized Feb. 5th, with twenty-seven members. The following officers were elected for the coming season: President, M. C. Tuck; Vice-President, R. H. Bellamy; Secretary and Treasurer, C. E. McMillan; Manager Base Ball Team, Prof. J. E. Mills. The prospects of a base ball team are very good We have some good material, which, under good training, will turn out a first-class team. We intend going in training very soon.

DOMESTIC.

Hon. W. L. Wilson, Postmaster General in Mr. Cleveland's cabinet, has been informally tendered the presidency of Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va.

The oat crop of Houston, Ga., was seriously injured by the cold.

Mrs. Leland Stanford has decided to close up the estate of her late husband and after paying $1,000,000 over to the legatees under the will, the balance will go to the Stanford University at Palo Alto.

Mrs. Marilla M. Ricker, a well-known lawyer of Washington and Dover, N. H., is an applicant for the office of United States Minister to Colombia.

The United States warships, New York, Maine, Columbia, Amphitrite and Marblehead arrived off Charleston bar on the 8th inst., after a terrible experience off Cape Hatteras. The steamers were forty miles out and well below the Cape, the wind blowing from the southeast. Four lives were lost, eight men seriously injured and many minor injuries. The vessels showed the effects of the storm but the maneuvers will not be interfered with.

A mail carrier from Keysville to Abilene, Charlotte county, Va., froze to death during the severe cold last week.

FOREIGN.

The artist Munkascy who has been suffering with spinal paralysis has become insane and been placed in an asylum in Buda-Pesth.

Dr. Nansen, the Arctic Explorer, is in London where he was received with many honors.

The effects of the famine are spreading in India. In the Deccan district even farmers are applying to the government for aid and people of the lower caste are feeding upon the carcasses of cattle which have died by the wayside.

The illness of King Humbert of Italy is regarded as serious. His sickness was a stroke of paralysis.

SAY SOES.

Seven miles an hour is the camel,s limit, nor can it maintain this rate over two hours. Its usual speed is five miles an hour. When a camel, is pressed beyond this speed, and is spent, it kneels down and not all the wolves in Asia will make it budge again. The camel remains where it kneels, and where it kneels it dies. A fire under its nose is useless.

The production of amber in Germany last year was about 440 tons, or nearly 50 tons more than in the previous year. By far the larger portion is produced by the the two mines of Palmnicken and Kraxtepellan, while the remainder is obtained by dredging and searching along the shores of the Baltic.

THINGS USEFUL.

To remove a grease spot from woollen or silk thoroughly saturate the place with turpentine, and place a soft blotting paper beneath and another on top of the spot, and press very hard. The fat is dissolved, then absorbed by the paper and entirely removed from the cloth.

Plain Steamed Pudding.—Mix well together one cupful of molasses, one cupful warm water, one cupful chopped raisins, two and one-half cups of flour, one egg, and one teaspoonful of soda. Steam two hours. Sauce.—Ten tablespoonfuls of water, six of sugar, four of butter, one of currant jelly. Stir, and cook well. Serve with pudding hot.

Various sweet sandwiches can be made by cutting sponge cake into thin slices and placing one of the following mixtures between: Chocolate sandwich: Take two ounces of butter and two ounces of grated chocolate, mix thoroughly; spread on the cake, cover with another slice, and cut in three-corned shapes. Cocoanut sandwich: Mix half a teaspoonful of desiccated cocoanut with one ounce of castor sugar and the beaten white of an egg; use as before. Both these sandwiches may be iced, the former with chocolate icing and the latter with lemon icing.

AN UNSPOKEN QUESTION.

Would you love or hate me, if you knew all—
You that to-day I am calling friend?
In vain to your heart my heart may call—
Yea, though I speak, will you comprehend?

If the saddest failure, the strife before,
Alike were shown, would you praise, or blame?
If you knew—that I am both less and more
Than the thing you see—would you rest the same?

If the deeps of passion, the heights of prayer,
Lay bare, could you measure the low, the high,
By the strange temptation you could not share,
And the great revealing that passed you by?

Ah, you are dear, but I dare not call!
Too dread are the deeps, and the heights above.
Is friendship false, then? But One knows all;
Does he love or hate me? He says, "I love."

Carl Spencer, in Sunday School Times.

Politeness costs little, but it pays well. Courtesy in the home is like morning sunshine pouring in at every window. An employer can well afford to be polite to an employee, for it makes the workingman do better work and binds together the two classes in a beautiful fellowship. In the effort to settle the differences between capital and labor, if we could bring into the controversy more courtesy and less bitterness of speech it would help amazingly in solving the question. —Selected.

If your life is dark, then walk by faith; and God is pledged to keep you as safe as if you could understand everything.

HELP THESE INDIANS.

The picture shows one of the brightest and most promising among our Alabama Indians in Polk county, Texas—Joseph Sylistine. There are two brothers—Joseph and Davis Sylistine—in the Alabama Indian church. They both read, write and speak English very well. They will pray in public, and speak a word of exhortation in the prayer-meetings and Sabbath-school. They have families and have worked industriously for their support, but the drought last summer cut short very much their crops. Before returning to their farm work, they are pursuing their studies in Mrs. Currie's mission school. Their teacher kindly charges them nothing for her instruction, but their family expenses must be met. So we are paying them ten dollars per month while they attend school. With their earnest desire to gain knowledge, we hope in this way they will be much improved, and fitted for usefulness in imparting much Christian instruction to their tribe, and thus develop into intelligent ruling elders, and be valuable helpers to their pastor. The fund from which we have helped them is now about exhausted. Will not many readers of this paper kindly send contributions of large or small amounts to aid in carrying on this good work? "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever." Our readers have in a former communication been told of the wonders of God's grace in reforming so many of this tribe, their church now having about one hundred members. The Rev. L. W. Currie, formerly of North Carolina, began this mission when this tribe was in the darkness of heathenism. Mr. Currie's widow keeps up a mission school for them, and Rev. W. A. Jones preaches monthly to a full congregation of these Indians. Contributions may be sent to the undersigned for this mission, in large or small amounts.

S. F. TENNEY,
Pastor of the Presbyterian Church.
Crockett, Texas.

[Readers of the PRESBYTERIAN, who can go back some ten years or so, will remember Rev. L. W. Currie and the very self-sacrificing work that he did among these Indians and others. Ed. N. C. P.]

This is always true—that the people who do not make worldly good their first object are the people who can be most safely trusted with it, and who get most enjoyment out of it. Whether in the precise form of the gift to Solomon or not, outward good does attend a life which postpones a pleasure to duty, and desires most to be able to do it. All earthly good is exalted by being put second, and degraded as well as corrupted by being put first. The water lapped up in the palm, as the soldier marches, is sweeter than the abundant draughts swilled down by self-indulgence. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God * * * * and all these things shall be added unto you."—Alexander McLaren, D. D.

Cross-bearing calls for strenuous effort. And by cross-bearing we do not mean chastisement. Cross-bearing is doing for others. The cross is the pre-eminent symbol of altruism. The cross of Jesus represents a voluntary work which He took up in behalf of suffering men. The cross of the Christian is participation with Christ in the great propaganda, in His effort to build up the kingdom of truth and righteousness on earth and so to deliver the race from sin. It was with this intent that our Lord said, "If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow Me." The work of the universal church is cross-bearing. To do good at the sacrifice of personal preference and convenience. To do good as fishers of men. Oh! the blessedness of this service—to grow weary in toil beside the Son of God!—David J. Burrell, D.D., in "The Spirit of the Age."

HUMILITY.

Pride, the loss of humility, is the root of every sin.

Humility is the displacement of self and the enthronement of God.

Humility is the beauty of holiness.

Humility should be the chief mark of those who profess holiness.

Humility is the ladder to honor in God's kingdom. Lu. 14:7-11.

Humility is the essential element of discipleship. Jno. 13: 14.

Humility toward men is the only proof of humility before God.

Take no place before God or man but that of a servant. Mat. 23: 11; Lu. 22: 26.

There is nothing so God-like as being the servant of all. Ph. 2:7, 8.

The disappearance of self is a sure mark of the presence of God. Isa. 66:2.

When God is all, self is nothing. Col. 3:8-11.

In our treatment of each other the heart of humility is seen. Ro. 12:10, 16; Eph. 5:2, 21, 23; Col. 3:12, 13, R. V.; 1 Co 13.4.

All lack of love, all indifference to others, all sharp, hasty judgments, all temper, touchiness and irritation, all bitterness and estrangement, have their root in pride.

There is no pride so dangerous, because so subtle, as the pride of holiness.

We have pride from Satan, we must have humility from Christ. Mat. 11:29.

Humility was the first grace in the life of Jesus, 2 Co. 8:9; the health of our spiritual life will depend upon our putting this grace first. Ro. 16:24.

Humility will not come of itself, it must be the object of special desire, prayer, faith and practice.

Pray to be humbled with Christ and like Christ.

Use every opportunity of humbling yourself before your fellow men as a help to abiding humble before God.

Look upon every one who tries you as God's means of grace for the exercise of humility.

Humble yourself unto the death. Ro. 6:11. In death to self, humility is perfected.

Claim in faith the death and life of Jesus as thine. Ro. 6:3-9.

Sink every morning in deep nothingness into the grave of Jesus; every day the life of Jesus will be manifest in thee.—Gems from Andrew Murray.

"IN MY NAME."

In the verses we have had under consideration for two preceding editorials the expression "In His Name" is used as the condition of prevailing prayer. This expression is used six times in the fourteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth chapters of John. This is the first time it is used as a condition of prayer. It occurs in several places in the later books. Until that time of His parting words with His disciples our Lord had never used the expression with this meaning. He had as we find in Matthew xviii. used the similar expression, "Met together in My name." That had reference to a counsel or court of the Church to consider a question of trespass between brethren and the similar meeting of worshippers. A very common mistake is made in prayer, using the words "Where two or three are met together in My name, there am I in the midst" and adding "to own and bless" as if these words were Scriptural. They are not. The reference is not to Christ in the midst "to own and bless" the worshippers, but to preside in the council or to have headship and authority and to direct in the worship.

Until the time of this parting address the disciples had not asked anything in the name of Christ. But now Christ repeats unceasingly this expression in connection with the promises of unlimited meaning, "whatsoever," "anything," "what ye will" to teach that His name is the only and the all-sufficient plea in prayer. The power of prayer and answers to prayer depend on the right use of these words, "In His name."

The name of any person calls up and represents that person. It calls up the nature, character and reputation with whatever of historic importance or practical workings of the person are known. It calls up also the opinion of the person and the impression he has made. Thus the name of a king calls up his reign and stands for his honor, his power and his kingdom. The name of a commander includes his courage or his cowardice, his defeats or his victories, his tenderness or his tyranny. Each title of God found in Scripture, embodies and represents some part of the glory of the unseen One. No one title can be called His name. His name includes them all. So the name of Christ is an expression for Christ Himself. His name as a condition of prayer is the expression of all He is, has done, and lives to do, as our Mediator, Intercessor and Lord. Where He gives the use of His name it means that He puts Himself on the side of His disciple and pledges Himself in His name.

To pray in the name of Jesus is to come with His authority. It is far more than the phrase "for Jesus' sake." It means more than many mean in closing the words of a prayer, by merely repeating carelessly "for thy dear name's sake" or similar words. Jesus has all authority. From that He commands and teaches to pray. To give of this authority to another implies a community of interest. It means that He can entrust His interests and His honor and His service in the hands of the disciple to whom He gives the authority to use His name. A merchant needing to leave his business for a time gives his name to his chief clerk to make orders, pay bills and conduct the business. What a shame! nay it could not be just, that the clerk would use the name of the proprietor to further his own private and personal plans. So Jesus gives authority to pray in His name only to those whom He can trust to use that name for His glory, or, as He says, "that the Father may be glorified in the Son." Jesus gives His name to His disciples to draw all needed supplies to conduct His business. They have the authority to draw upon the spiritual power at the presentation of the name of Jesus, just to the extent to which they yield themselves to live only for His interests and His work.

"In the name" of Jesus in prayer must further mean according to His appointment. The disciple must wait and look to Jesus for that as to place, time and object. He has linked, private prayer with a subsequent, social supplication and public worship. In that order they have a logical sequence.

This further means, and must mean, with His approval, not merely as to the thing sought or the plan proposed, but as to the spirit of the worshipper. Children of God may ask for what they need for themselves or others, but not to be used against the will or to the dishonor of the Father. They ask in Christ's name when according to His nature of love which seeketh not her own, but the will of God for the good of all. "In His name" is according to His desire for us, according to the Father's will, according to the Spirit's teaching. It can only be in its fulness, in the of the Holy Ghost, in union with Christ in the will of the Father.

WE HAVE seldom, in the same length of time, enjoyed greater pleasure than in reading "America Revisited," by Samuel Smith, Member of Parliament, published by a London firm. To whom we are directly indebted for this pleasure we do not know, but our acknowledgements are hereby gratefully tendered. Mr. Smith presumably is a gentleman of very considerable wealth; this pamphlet is of itself clearest evidence that he is on governmental topics a gentleman of amplest information and of soundest judgment, and that in a peculiar degree he has the ability to impart to others clear and correct ideas on matters of general interest. He visited this country after an absence from it of thirty years, during which time it is fair to suppose he felt a lively interest in its governmental policy and practice. During the last presidential campaign our author occupied the vantage ground of entire disinterestedness, and brought to bear upon the questions so exhaustively discussed, and upon the underlying causes which induced the discussions, rare powers of observation and rarest intellectual acumen. It is refreshing to follow him as without a tinge of partizan feeling or a single discourteous expression he traverses the position of both political parties, and states his conclusions, so clearly and so justly, as must commend them to every fair mind. His views of the unreasoning prejudice which exists in America among the less informed and the less wisely thoughtful of the people against Great Britain, are measurably just, and his idea of the cause of it is in the main correct. We are free to say tho that Mr. Smith is probably mistaken as to the extent of this feeling of prejudice. There are very many Americans, we believe the great bulk of those in the solid middle class of society, who regard Great Britain and her government and her history with nothing less than admiration, and who entertain nothing but the kindliest feelings toward her. And this is truly strange in the face of the undeniable fact, as alleged by our author, that the history books and the secular papers largely, perpetuate prejudice—and very many children get no correcting education otherwise.

The closing chapter on the United States, we find perhaps the most interesting: The prodigious, untiring persevering energy of this country and the amazing brain power exerted in the accumulation of its vast wealth; its freedom from snobbishness in recognition of actual worth, albeit financial success is in general estimation the grand standard of worth; and the strange conglomeration of uncongenial and even opposing forces in the political sphere, on the religious plane and on social lines. The wise and just conclusion that no power, save the religion of Jesus Christ, can generate such a strong moral force as can hold together in peaceable union "this huge agglomeration of mingled peoples," leads to this expression of hope for the future of our country:

"My predominant feeling is one of hopefulness for the Great Republic. It has overcome great perils in the past, and I trust and believe it will surmount the dangers of the future."

DEATHS OF MINISTERS.

For some time REV. ANDREW McMILLAN has been in very poor health, not having been able to leave his room since December. For the last week or so he has been very low indeed and his death was not unexpected. The end came, peacefully and quietly, last Monday, [8th inst.] about 12 o'clock. While Mr. McMillan has suffered for a long time from a complication of diseases, his death was, no doubt, largely due to old age, for he was in his eighty-ninth year. He was buried at the McNeill grave-yard, Rev. A. McFerguson conducting the funeral ceremonies. Long and useful indeed has been his life, spent in the service of his Master and for the uplifting of mankind.

Greatly beloved has he been as pastor, teacher and friend and many indeed are they who now mourn the loss of one they loved so well. His death comes upon the community as a public bereavement and well indeed may the end of such a life be mourned. The light of a gracious influence has gone out; a life of goodly example and faithful precept is no more. His life's work has been great and good and, though all of its achievements may never be known, rich indeed will the harvest in that home, to which his soul has been wafted.

We clip the above from the Laurinburg Exchange. The writer's recollection of the deceased brother dates from early boyhood when Mr. McMillan preached occasionally in the First Presbyterian church, Wilmington. His ministerial labors were confined chiefly to the Synod of North Carolina and the Presbytery of Fayetteville.

An appropriate memorial tribute will appear next week.

REV. DR JOHN H. BRYSON, died at Shelbyville, Tenn., on February 1st, inst. He had not been in good health for sometime. He was born in Fayetteville, Tenn., April 3d, 1831. His education was received at Erskine College, Due West, S. C., and at Newbury, N. Y., under the auspices of the Associate Reformed church. Since 1881 Dr. Bryson has served the church in Huntsville as pastor. Previous to that he had been pastor of the church at Shelbyville, Tenn., and of the First church at Columbia, S. C. Dr. Bryson was moderator of the General Assembly at Augusta in 1886. He traveled extensively abroad and had visited Palestine. He never married.

WE HAVE RECEIVED the initial number of the Synodical Evangelist. It is as one would expect of anything under the control of Rev. A. J. McKelway—bright and sprightly. As the name indicates, this little paper will be devoted to the interest of Home Missions in our Synod. There are fifteen evangelists in the field, with Rev. Wm. Black as general evangelist and Rev. A. J. McKelway superintendent. The standard is—a church in every county in North Carolina before this century ends. May we all lend our aid, if only the widow's mite, to bring about this result.

A GOODLY number of new subscribers are coming in and we thank our friends heartily for their interest. We are striving to make the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN worthy of patronage and appreciate the many letters of commendation received. One party writes that he is more than delighted with our gold watch given for seventeen new subscribers; our sets of spoons have given universal satisfaction; our commission of 25cts for each subscriber has started several to work raising money for their bands, and last, but in no ways least, our beautiful premium Bible is creating interest.

Some have sent subscribers without any remuneration for which we thank them. We are glad to have our friends work in this way or upon any of the propositions we offer. We want the paper to go into a thousand families where it is not taken now, and we offer rare inducements to those who are willing to work to that end.

DAVIDSON NOTES.

Dr. Shearer's father, who has been in failing health for some years, died at his home in Spout Spring, Va., on Feb. 10th. The Dr. and Mrs. Shearer will return from Virginia to-day. All sympathize with them in their affliction.

Dr. E. Q Houston, of the Medical College, is slated for the position of director of the Charlotte Mint, under the new regime. So at least common rumor says. He has just sold his drugstore to two of our younger citizens, Dr. W. H. Wooten and Mr. Joe White.

Dr. Smith during the past week has lectured in behalf of the college at Fort Mill and Rock Hill, S. C. On Monday next he delivers a lecture on the Xrays in Durham on the same subject. Next Sabbath he will devote to the churches at Burlington and Graham.

The annual banquet of the Sophomore Class takes place next Friday evening. Covers will be laid for fifty participants.

Dr. and Mrs. Harding entertained a number of students and their friends last Monday evening.

The cultivation of oratory is the engrossing pursuit of the Junior Class at present. The annual "Junior Speaking" takes place Feb. 22rd and 23rd, at which time the representatives of the societies are chosen for the ensuing commencement. L.

We really think our

is a most desirable article to have in any household where the PRESBYTERIAN is taken. It holds the successive issues together in most convenient form, costs no labor and requires no special pains in its adjustment. What a fine Synodical Album a year's gathering would thus constitute!

Sent to any address for forty cents.

OUR PREMIUM BIBLE.

Measures 5x7 inches when Closed, and Contains 1,600 Pages of Reading Matter—Several hundred pages of Useful Information, besides the Scriptural Text.

At length we find ourselves with pride and pleasure, able to offer a Bible premium to workers for the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN. The size and quality of type of our Bible is represented by the cut here given:

The binding is flexible, the edges are gilt and the references within are full. The Bible contains besides 1050 pages of Scriptural text, the HELPS to Scripture reading and study including Subject Index, Concordance, a most serviceable General Topical Index, a large number of pages treating of the Titles, Authorship, Distinctive Characters, Contents, &c., of the various books of the Bible, A Description of the Inhabitants, Physical, Geography, Customs and Political Condition of the Holy Land at the beginning of the Christian era, the Botany of the Bible, Glossary of Antiquities, Customs, 12 maps, etc., being the Oxford Helps, acknowledged to be the very best, besides 124 full page illustrations of the Languages, Writing, &c., of the Old and New Testaments, of the bas reliefs and the like, discoveries in archæological researches, and now in the British museum—and very much else; making altogether the most desirable copy of the Scriptures for Bible students that has come to our knowledge. The book contains over 1,600 pages.

The Bible is an offer in connection with the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN—the only medium thro which one can become well acquainted with what is going on in the Synod of North Carolina—on the following terms:

We will give this Bible as payment for help rendered to any old subscriber who will send us the name of a BONA FIDE new subscriber along with $2.25.

The new subscriber gets the paper very cheap—we offer it to any bona fide new subscriber for $1.50 for the first year—and the worker gets amply compensated in a magnificently cheap Bible for his or her good work.

A new subscriber to get the Bible can subscribe for himself at $1.50 and then send another new subscriber with $2.25.

The Premium offered is the Genuine Edition of the Oxford Teacher's Bible.

We trust our friends will go to work promptly on this plan.

LETTERS TO A BEREAVED FRIEND. I.

MY DEAR FRIEND:—I cannot tell you how my heart bleeds for you in your terrible grief. Day by day I try to bear you up in the arms of my faith, and I trust that God in great mercy will speedily lift upon you the light of his countenance and give you peace. You mourn for your dead, but you do not impeach the wisdom or goodness of your Heavenly Father, or charge Him with cruelty in taking from you your precious daughter. And yet you tell me that you do not intend ever again to enter the room in which she died, or visit her grave, or even to attend again the services held in the old church, whence your sweet child was borne to her last resting place. Now, will you let me talk with you about these resolutions of yours? Rest assured I would not thus trespass upon your time and patience, were I not fully persuaded that this a matter vital to your usefulness and your well-being as a child of God.

And first, let me urge upon you this thought: that whatever comfort and strength are possible to you, must come to you through the channels of your own faith, resignation and resolve. Through your faith, because if you do not cling to your faith in the God of all consolation, and trust the word which assures us that he "doth not afflict willingly nor grieve the children of men, "you have already surrendered the fortress of your soul's strength to the great adversary, and you cannot recover your peace of mind until you drive him from his vantage ground. Through your resignation, because if you do not submit your will to His will in this, and indeed in all the affairs of life, you are at war with Him; and there cannot be in the very nature of the case, any peace in all the universe for a soul at war with God. But also through your own resolve, because even in your affliction it is God who "worketh in you, both to will and do of his good pleasure." God's precious purpose, in all afflictions He sends upon any of His children is, that He may renew our wills in the creation of righteous character and conduct. Christian graces are not wrought in us as it were irresistibly; but as one has said, "free grace leads free will in the accomplishment of God's sovereign purpose."

"Now no chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness in them that are exercised thereby." Let me press upon you this question: Is your affliction bringing forth in you the peaceable fruit of righteousness? Is it leading you to strive more earnestly than ever before to do your whole duty as wife, mother, neighbor, friend? Are you striving now to do more good in the future than you have ever done in the past? You do right to cherish the memory of your dead: is that memory an inspiration to all holy endeavor?

Is there not much of selfishness in your sorrow? Do you not realize that you are taking more thought about your loss than is becoming in a child of God? If you sorrowed as do those who have no hope, none could complain. If despair were lawful, reason might justify complete surrender to such grief as yours. But you believe in immortality and heaven, and in a Christ who is "mighty to save." Already, when you stop your mourning to listen, you can hear the voices of these sweet angels of hope, who ever and anon sing to the sorrowful soul, bidding it look away from the trials of earth to the re-unions of a blessed immortality. And if you are willing to heed the whispers of hope, should you not also listen to the voice of duty?

In your present seclusion, and in your refusal to participate in the work and worship of the Church, I feel sure you are making a terrible mistake, which cannot fail to hinder your peace, if it does not work the ruin of your soul.

You are violating a plain command. "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhort one another and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." You remember, too that the Sabbath was not designed to be merely a day of rest and of pious meditation, but a day for the public worship of God. It was a day of "holy convocation." "On the seventh day ye shall have an holy convocation," was the distinct command of the old law; and the New Testament Church, in giving up the observance of the Jewish Sabbath, made the first day of the week their day of rest and worship, and called it the "Lord's day." From the earliest ages, Christians have been wont to assemble on the Lord's day to engage in social worship and to hear the Word of God read and expounded. An Apostle has warned us of the danger of lightly regarding the privileges of the sanctuary: "Despise not prophesying," he writes to the Thessalonian Church. The necessity for public worship and for the public exposition of the Word, is grounded in the very nature of the soul, as well as in the highest consideration for the good of society. Your habitual absence from the Sabbath services cannot fail to work injury to your own soul and to other souls as well.

I know you have an excuse, and perhaps for every absence a special excuse; but any excuse that would justify you in ignoring the public worship of God and the public proclamations of the Gospel of His grace, would justify any other soul that has suffered bereavement. None of us should venture to consider ourselves privileged characters in God's world. We are all of us made of the same clay that others are made of; are heirs of the same fallen, sinful nature; are involved in the same fearful condemnation; need the same helps in our spiritual life; are dependent upon the same sovereign grace for pardon and renewal of soul; and must all render account of ourselves at the last day to the same righteous, omnipotent Judge.

You are not only violating a plain command, but you are ignoring the example and the testimony of the noblest of God's saints in all ages. Hear David: "How amiable are thy tabernacles, oh Lord of Hosts! My soul longeth yea even fainteth for the courts of the Lord." And this, too: "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord." And in these testimonies David utters the longing of the purest and best of God's people everywhere and through all time. If you do not enter into their experience, and cherish the same love for God's house and its solemn assemblies, it can be only because the great enemy of God and man is already blinding your eyes and seeking to lead you captive at his will. Dear sister, may a gracious God help you to realize your danger. Remember the Master's word: "He that keepeth My commandments, he it is that loveth Me." If you fancy that your bereavement excuses you from ordinary Christian duty, you are committing a grave error.

Besides, you are forfeiting unspeakable precious privileges. The house of God is the place in which He delights to make Himself known; the place of which He has said, "Mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually." There your Saviour will manifest His presence and grace to you in the breaking of the bread of life. There He remembers His people while they remember Him in that memorial feast which He has ordained. Comfort abounding, instruction suited to all your spiritual perplexities, and strength to bear all your burdens, would come to you if you would only wait before the Lord in the service of praise and prayer, and "receive with meekness the engrafted word which is able to save your soul." The very building which now seems to you so gloomy and forbidding, because it sheltered for such a brief space the remains of your daughter, will become radiant with the light of heaven, and prove to you a Bethel, where you will gain new views of God, and experience angelic ministries, and realize the nearness of the unseen world. And if you cannot find comfort in God's house neither can you find comfort in God' Word. There can be no real and abiding comfort to those who "refuse Him that speaketh." Ignoring the official audiences of the ambassadors of heaven, and despising the ordinances of the sanctuary, how can you expect the angels to visit you in your sorrow?

But other duties demand my attention just now, and I must reserve other considerations for a future letter. Meanwhile, I beg you to think of what I have said, to test it all by the Word of God, and pray Him to rouse you from the lethargy of soul into which your grief has brought you, and enable you to address yourself once more to the duties that lie before you. With warmest love, and earnest prayers that the God of all consolation may speedily bless and comfort you, I remain, as always,

Your devoted friend,

MARTHA.

A CARD.

To Pastors, Church Officers and Christian People:

It was confidently hoped that the late January contribution to Assembly's Home Missionary work, would exceed, by some thousands of dollars, the contribution of January, 1896. To this date, since Jan. 1st, the receipts at the office in Atlanta are about $1,600 less than during the same weeks in 1896.

Brethren this is alarming! The January contribution must furnish the bulk of the money needed to carry the work up to Sept. 1st, until which time there can be no other regular collection for this cause.

In a few weeks the work for the next year which begins April 1st, must be mapped out: it must be mapped out on the basis of the funds in hand March 31st. We cannot go in debt. Shall the Presbyteries be told to drop a number of their missionaries when the number needs to be largely increased? Shall our Church go very much backward in its work for our Lord and our country?

By order of our Executive Committee these facts are laid before the churches which have not as yet sent in a contribution since Jan. 1st, and before the individual Christians who can sincerely say, "I love Thy king-Lord," in the hope that they will rescue the work from what threatens now to be an inevitable and very hurtful curtailment.

WINCHESTER PRESBYTERY.

The Winchester Presbytery held an adjourned meeting in the Presbyterian church, of this place, Tuesday evening, February 2d. Rev. S. M. Engle, of Oakland, the last moderator present, presided.

The special business before the Presbytery was to hear from the Piedmont church as to the dissolusion of the pastoral relation between Rev. J. W Lafferty and itself. The church, after expressing its high regard for Mr. Lafferty as an earnest and faithful pastor, reluctanly acquiesced in his request for dissolution of said relation, whereupon Presbytery announced that the relation is dissolved, and granted Mr. Lafferty permission to labor without the bounds of this Presbytery, if the way be clear, until the stated spring meeting.

The following communication was presented, read to Presbytery, and ordered to be forwarded, for publication, to The Central Presbyterian:

To the Members of the Winchester Presbytery:

DEAR BRETHEN:—Having learned that your body has been called together in special session to consider the contemplated discontinuance of the pastoral relation of Bro. J. W. Lafferty to the Presbyterian church of Piedmont, W. Va., we, the undersigned ministers of the Gospel, desire hereby to give expression to our personal esteem for Bro. Lafferty, as well as to our regret concerning his departure.

During the entire term of Brother Lafferty's ministry among us his life has been so upright and consistently pure as to win for him the confidence and respect of all good people, without regard to church affiliation, while to us, who, as fellow laborers for Christ, have been more intimately associated with him, he has peculiarly endeared himself.

Brother Lafferty is a man of deep piety and high ideals of Christian life, he has strong convictions, and the courage to stand by them, and while humble in spirit, could not be induced to depart from what he conceives to be his duty, for any consideration of personal gain. The possible loss of popular favor or personal friendship does not for a moment deter him from duty. He makes no compromises involving his conscience.

We have always found Brother Lafferty ready to aid us in any good work, or to stand with us in any conflict with evil.

In his departure from our midst we feel that the Church of Christ, in all its denominations, in Piedmont and Westernport, sustains a loss, and that we personally are deprived of the intimate association of a true and Godly man.

Very respectfully,

C. F. MOORE,
Pastor M. E., ch., South.

LEWIS BEEMAN BROWNE,
Pastor M. E. church.
Westernport, Md.

HARRY BOGGS,
Pastor M. E. church,
Piedmont.

J. W. BUTLER,
Pastor Mt. Calvary Evan. Lutheran ch., Westernport.

After reading and approving the minutes, the Presbytery was led in prayer by Rev. J. W. Lafferty, and adjourned.

A. C. HOPKINS,
Clerk.

THE PEACE OF JESUS.

Some people are apt to belittle the peace of Jesus because they have peace of life. They have had no bitter disappointments, no cruel wrestles, no crushing afflictions, no fiery temptations. The world has dealt kindly by them and they have fitted into their environments. Moments there are when the sailors of the deep envy those that sail in the smooth sheltered waters because they have not been driven to and fro on stormy seas and been in danger of the turgid swells. Other moments the sons of tribulation pity those unfortunates who have never seen the great billows lie down as a dog chidden by his master and God turn the storm into a calm. One half of the Bible is a closed book to them that sit at ease because only a pierced hand can open the pages. The promises are for them whose hearts are sore; the invitations are to them who hunger. Jesus' peace was the best of all gifts to that handful of broken men in the Upper Room, whose first step would be in the darkness, but it may not seem any great thing to the favorites of this world. Yet it is not wise for any one to make too much of an outward peace, dependent on health of body, and the goods that are kept in barns, and the suffrages of the multitude, which to day cries "Hosanna," and to-morrow "Crucify," and on the whims of fickle, selfish people. Let a man be as far-seeing, accommodating, politic, unscrupulous as may be, he cannot hope always to escape disaster, for this peace is as uncertain as the lovely Mediterranean. One day you look out through the motionless foliage on a still expanse of blue, and the next morning the orange blossom is strewn upon the ground and the spray is dashing on your garden wall. "As the world giveth."—Rev. John Watson, D. D., in "The Upper Room."

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

The S. S. McClure Company have issued advance copies of their life portraits of Benjamin Franklin. They are fifteen in number and will appear in McClure's Magazine and will add greatly to this very popular periodial.

It is said that Whittier is the only American poet whose verse has ever been translated into Latin by an English scholar. When, in the autumn of last year, the late Dean Vaughan, of Cambridge University, sickened unto his death his solace in many hours of bodily weariness and pain was our poet, and one poem especially was read and reread with loving tenderness, as if it were the very voice of the soul's adequate expression. This was the poem entitled "At Last," which was the nobly soothing and deeply spiritualized poem which Dean Vaughan in his last days converted into Latin verse. Just before his death he had 1400 copies struck off and distributed among the theological students as tokens of his esteem.

Those who have traveled recently along the eastern shore of the Hudson have noticed that extensive changes are being made at Sunnyside, Washington Irving's home in Tarrytown, and considerable feeling has arisen in regard to possible desecration of this literary landmark. There is no ground, however, for any alarm. A grandnephew of Irving has bought the house from the poet's two nieces (now quite old ladies), and is attempting to restore the building in accordance with its original style of architecture. All the wings, porches, etc., that were added since Irving's day have been removed, and now the house stands as he rebuilt and remodeled it. Tho' it is to be increased in size, no one can perceive the change, as the additions are in the rear. The vines and ivy taken by the poet from Walter Scott's home in Abbotsford still run riot over the walls and almost entirely cover the house, and the noble trees and beautiful lawns running down to the quiet river (alas! now the railroad tracks), are well kept and uninjured. The old furniture has been temporarily removed for safety's sake; but when the new occupants move in next spring, everything will be arranged as it was before, the rooms having previously been photographed for the purpose. There is no more beautiful spot to visit on a warm summer's day than Sunnyside; and if perchance you meet the old gardener who used to work for Irving long ago, if you peer in at the study through the little windowpanes and see the author's library filled with books of travel, history and romance, if you watch the sails on the river move slowly along, and hear the orioles and thrushes sing in the tall trees and bushes, you will not wonder why the critics have never tired of writing about Sunnyside or praising its beauties.—Independent.

MAGAZINES.

To those wishing to pass a most delightful hour amid oriental scenes we heartily recommend the Threepence Monthly Travel, Dr. Henry T. Lunn is editor and Horace Marshall & Son, 125 Fleet Street, E. C. London, Publishers.

The February number of St. Nicholas holds its own and appears filled with good stories. One specially we note is the article on Lincoln's Birthplace which is fine and instructive. Price $3.00 a year, The Century Co., Union Square, New York.

American Homes for January is devoted to Colonial Architecture and contains a paper on the Architecture of Old Egypt. To those interested in building or design, this magazine will be most enjoyable. Published at Knoxville, Tenn. $1.00 a year.

Popular Science Monthly is easily reaching the front by its excellent articles and illustrations upon scientific subjects. It is sold at 15 cents for single copy and published by the Popular Science Co., New York.

The Century Magazine for February is ably illustrated and very full of good matter. The frontispiece is Lincoln as a Lawyer and Grant as Major General. Campaigning with Grant, by Horace Porter still continues. Also Autobiography of Hugh Wynne, by Dr. Weir Mitchell. This copy as usual is made up of thoughts of the best known authors. We will mention some few found therein. Places in New York; Body to the Soul; Monotypes; Battle of Copenhagen; The Surprised Avowal; An Inland Venice; Death Dream Armenia; A Man and Some Others; Billy and Hans, etc.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Pee Dee Group:—Fayetteville Presbytery, there are five churches in this group, viz: Wadeville, Sharon, Pee Dee, Ellerbe Springs and Mt. Carmel. Since November last we have had communion services in each church except one.

At Wadeville one member was received on examination on the third Sunday in January. We have a Sunday-school and a Missionary Society in each church except one and we hope to have one there soon. The young pastor has been encouraged in many ways by these good people. During the fall he lost a fine horse, but through the kindness of the ladies in the different congregations, the greater part of this loss was assumed by others and in some places, irrespective of denominational lines. For this tangible evidence of appreciation, I heartily thank each one exercised therein, and pray that they may realize that "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Mecklenburg Presbytery:—Met in Charlotte, Feb. 11th, in pro re nata session with seven ministers and one ruling elder present. Rev. J. R. Howerton, D. D., was received from Norfolk Presbytery, and the following order taken for his installation as pastor of the First church, Charlotte; time, Feb. 28th, 1897, at 7.30 p. m. Rev. J. W. Stagg to preside and charge the people; Rev. Dr. J. B. Shearer, (of Concord Presbytery) to preach the sermon, and Rev. A. A. Little to charge the pastor. The matter of adjusting our financial relations with Asheville Presbytery was docketed until spring meeting, and Asheville Presbytery was invited to send an official representative to be present at that meeting. Adjourned to meet at Gastonia, April 9th 1897, at 7.30 p. m.

Raleigh:—The contract has been given and all papers signed for the new church. The old Sunday-school room, erected about 1830, has been removed and work will begin on the church building, March 1st.

Greensboro, Westminster Church:—On last Sunday, Feb. 14th, interesting services were observed. The occasion was the ordination and installation of Messrs. T. G. McLean and M. G. Newell, ruling elders-elect; and Messrs. A. L. Rankin and M F. Kersey, deacons-elect. Within the last two weeks five persons have been received into this church.

VIRGINIA.

Bradford:—Rev. L. W. Irwin was recently installed pastor of Radford and Radford Central churches. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Hooper, of Christiansburg, Rev. J. M. Holladay, of Blacksburg and Mr. Wm. Inglis, of Radford.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Synodical Evangelization:—The Synod of South Carolina at its last meeting, for the first time in its history entered formally upon the work of Synodical Evangelization and appointed an Executive Committee to inaugurate the work. The committee has put the Rev. N. J. Holmes into the field to visit the churches, present the cause and raise in advance the funds necessary to sustain the work. The plan being to raise $12,000 if possible. Mr. Holmes has been very successful so far. In the first month and a half he has secured contributions to the amount of about $1,500. He presented the cause last Sabbath to the church at Spartanburg and raised a collection of nearly $350, promptly subscribed in the church, without personal solicitation.

ALABAMA.

Second Church, Montgomery:—Rev. Neal L. Anderson, prstor. The manual for '97 shows steady growth in this young church. It was organized on July 30th, 1891, with thirty two members, three ruling elders and five deacons; there are now one hundred and eighty-four members, four elders and six deacons. The four societies and Sabbath-school are all doing earnest work for the cause of the Church and Home and Foreign Missions. Mr. Anderson has cause to take courage and press on.

MISSOURI.

Fulton:—For some months past, the young people of the Fulton church, headed by an able and energetic committee, have been raising money for a pipe organ. The church is now ornamented with a beautiful instrument as the fruit of their labors. It was built by W. W. Kimball and Company of Chicago. It has seventeen full stops, tubular pneumatic action and water-motor for pumping. The action is entirely noiseless. The motor and bellows are underneath the choir-stand. The pipes are above, resting on a platform, which is supported on two elegant Corinthian pillars of solid oak The choir-stand and other wood work are finished in quarter-sawed oak, and the whole is a most beautiful piece of work, harmonizing well with the other furnishings of the church. The entire cost will be $2,250. On Thursday, Feb. 4th, an audience of between 600 and 700 gathered to hear the first performance, a recital by Harrion Wild, of Chicago. The selections were admirably chosen, played in a masterly manner, and tested the instrument thoroughly. Its tones are remarkably clear, sweet, flexible and powerful. Its use for the first time in worship on last Sunday demonstrated its entire fitness for its purpose. The whole enterprise, in its management so far, the success which has crowned its labors, and the beautiful instrument purchased, reflects great credit on the young people and those who have headed their efforts, and is an evidence of the vigor and life of the Church under its present pastor, the Rev. A. A. McGeachy.

GENERAL.

Rev. S. C Luckett has been elected Synodical Missionary of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church in Texas.

PERSONALS.

Rev. Dr. J. S. Watkins, of Spartanburg, S. C., has delivered a series of sermons upon the Ten Commandments which are noted for their scholarship. The congregation intend to publish them at an early date.

Rev. R. W. Hines, of Hobgood has accepted a call to the pastoral charge of a group of churches in Central Mississippi Presbytery. His address is Rolling Fork, Miss. Our best wishes attend Mr. Hines in his new field of labor.

The party consisting of Rev. L. B. Turnbull, D D., and Mr. G.W. Watts and family sailed from New York on Saturday last. They will visit as before stated, Europe and the Orient. Dr. Turnbull's pulpit will be filled during his absence by leading ministers of North Carolina and Virginia. Among them being Rev. Dr. Jos. R. Wilson.

Dr. W. W. Moore and wife have been called to Salem, N. C., on account of the illness of Mrs. Moore's mother.

Prof. W. S. Currell, Ph. D. has kindly consented to deliver the annual address before the Society of Mission Inquiry of Hampden Sidney, next May.

Rev. W. W. Bruce has resigned the pastorate of Hanging Fork church, Hustonville, Ky.

Rev. R. E. Sherrill, of Haskell, Texas, is recovering from a severe attack of la grippe.

Our sympathy is extended Rev. Dr. Shearer of Davidson upon the death of his aged father.

Rev. Kenneth McDonald has returned to his labors. We trust that both he and Mrs. McDonald who were quite sick here have fully recovered their strength.

On the second inst., the Presbytery of Wilmington in session at Immanuel church, received Rev. R. V. Lancaster from the Presbytery of Concord. We welcome Mr. Lancaster within our bounds.

Rev H. T. Graham has arrived in Fayetteville and begun his labors as co-pastor of the church there. Mr. Graham is a brother of Rev. A. T. Graham, of Davidson and Rev. Jas. Graham now in China. Mr. Graham is heartily welcome to our Synod.

COLUMBIA SEMINARY NOTES.

During the present year the faculty have secured several prominent men to deliver lectures before the students and faculty.

This week we have enjoyed two delightful ones from Rev. Dr. Barnett of Atlanta. The seminary chapel is too small for the audiences that attend these lectures, so that the first one was given in the lecture room of the First church. Dr. Barnett's subject was, "His Travels in Palestine." Most of the lecture was concerning Bethlehem and Jerusalem. The lecture was highly entertaining and instructive, containing as it did much that is not obtainable from books, and made bright by many amusing incidents connected with the speaker's travels.

The second lecture was Thursday night in the chapel of the Presbyterian College for Women. Although it was a disagreeable, rainy night, there was a large audience. Dr. Barnett took for his subject "Egypt." Glancing hastily at the country as to its geographical and geological formations, he hastened to his main theme, which was to show by the description of the more recent investigations, that the Egyptians were not a rude barbarous race, but refined and civilized. Their engineering in many respects is far superior to ours, who think that if the United States were blotted out, wisdom would die with us. The two lectures were very much enjoyed and appreciated by all who heard them

The friends of the seminary are now hard at work raising money to build a new dining hall. It is to be a large two story building, containing matron's quarters, rooms for one married student, and bath rooms. The ladies have organized themselves for systematic work. Mrs. Furgerson is president. Mrs. Laws is vice-president, and Mrs. Brimm secretary of building committee. They are in earnest and expect to have the building ready for use by next session.

Dr. Tadlock has had a slight attack of the grip, but it has only kept him in for a week. We are glad to say he is as well as ever again.

The first number of the "Religious Outlook" came out last month. It is published by Profs. McPheeters and Brimm. They will have contributed articles from many of the first scholars of this country. It is to be hoped that this new monthly will meet with marked success. There is a place for such a sheet, and we feel confident that the "Religious Outlook," with its able staff, will fill the place successfully.

MEETING OF ALAMANCE ASSOCIATION.

It was decided some weeks ago by the Association of Presbyterian ministers of Alamance county to hold a Field Day in the interest of Presbyterianism on the fifth Sabbath in January. In accordance with a prearranged program, the Association met with the Mebane church Saturday, Jan. 30th. Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather, a good crowd was present, and the exercises were opened with a strong, able, and practical sermon on the Responsibilities of Elders and Deacons by Rev. W. P. McCorkle. It would be well if all these officers in the State could have heard this sermon.

In the afternoon we had a clear and able delineation of Presbyterian Polity by Rev. R. W. Culbertson. This is a subject about which much ignorance prevails even where least expected. Those present doubtless went away with clearer conceptions of our Church's polity than they had before.

This was followed by a resume of the History of Presbyterianism by Rev. M. McG. Shields. The principle of this form of Church government was traced from the old Jewish Church, through the Apostolic and post Apostolic ages, down through the "Dark Ages," apart from the Romish Church to the Reformation, and thence to the present day. Presbyterians have reason to be proud of their history.

On Sunday, the first hour was given to Sabbath-schools, their Relation to the Life of the Church, and How to Increase their Efficiency.

At eleven o'clock a popular meeting in the interest of Home Missions with special reference to the needs of Alamance county was conducted by Rev. M. McG. Shields. At the close a collection, one of the largest ever taken in the church, was made for the Home Mission cause.

After recess, Rev. R. W. Culbertson, in a strong, logical, and Scriptural paper, presented the "True Law of Christianity." This was followed by timely and wise suegestions as to the proper and successful conduct of missionary societies, by Rev. W. P. McCorkle.

At night a popular meeting in the interest of Foreign Missions was held. Different phases of this cause and work were presented by Revs. M. McG. Shields and W. P. McCorkle.

The meeting was presided over by Rev. H. C. Kegley, pastor of the Mebane church, and the exercises were interpersed with musicial selections delightfully rendered by the choir and congregation.

This, the first effort of this kind by the Association, was voted a complete success. The next meeting will be held in Graham, May 29th, and 30th, 1897.

HAMPDEN SIDNEY NOTES.

At the regular monthly meeting in behalf of Foreign Missions last Sunday night the subject was Africa. Mr. E. E. Gillespie spoke on the needs of the "Twilight Continent" as a whole and how those needs were being met. He was followed by Mr. R. W. Jopling, whose theme was the Life and Work of Moffat. Mr. R. L. Wharton closed the discussion with a short account of the work that is being done in the Congo Free State. The dawn is indeed breaking in that benighted land, but there is still much to be done by those to whom God has entrusted the bearing of the light to the millions of Africa who are still sitting in the region and shadow of death.

The Homiletic Society, organized by some members of the middle class, discussed at its last meeting the question as to whether church fairs are justifiable. The question, on the merits of the debate, was decided negatively. And when we come to think of it, isn't it really amazing how church fairs, suppers, bazaars and the like have been allowed to become so prevalent in the church? From a business stand-point, what business organization would ever think of resorting to such clap-trap devices to raise capital to carry on its business? Imagine Paul suggesting to the Corinthian Church that they get up a big supper in order to raise some money for the poor saints at Jerusalem! The true view of giving to the service of God is being entirely perverted by the unscriptural methods now so much resorted to, and it is time that the Church were realizing this. J. Hudson Taylor, the great missionary, spoke a great truth when he said "God's work, done in God's way, will never lack God's supplies."

VIRGINIA STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

This Convention met in Lynchburg, Va., Feb. 3rd-5th. It was composed of representatives of all the principal denominations of the State. The interest shown in the addresses and discussions and the benefit received from them by the Sunday-school workers who were present was very great.

There were several features that especially characterized the Convention. Among them was the perfect harmony that prevailed. Another was the evident intention of all those who attended to get all the help possible to fit them for their work at home. Then there was an immense amount of practical common sense shown in the addresses made and plans suggested. Those who belonged to the weak country schools found that just as many suggestions were made for them as for the strong city schools.

Prof. H. M. Hamill, Field Worker of the International Sunday-school Union, was present and added very greatly to the success of the Convention. Any Sunday school Association that is looking forward to holding a convention would do well to secure his aid. His wide experience and great practical common sense make his suggestions to workers of very great value.

All of those who attended went away feeling that it was good for them to have been there, and regretting that all the Sunday-school superintendents and teachers of the State could not have shared with them the rich feast of good things which they had enjoyed.

The next Convention will be held in Staunton, Va., the time to be fixed by the Executive Committee.

THE TWENTY-FIRST ANNUAL STATE CONVENTION.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION OF NORTH CAROLINA—WINSTON-SALEM, FEB. 19TH-22ND.

The Twenty-first Annual State Convention promises to be a very fine meeting. The attendance will be large and the program interesting. Among those who are to make addresses are Dr. A. C. Barron, pastor First Baptist church of Charlotte; Rev. Wm. Black, the well known evangelist; Prof. P. P. Claxton of Greensboro, and J. A. Bivens, of Charlotte. The International Committee will be represented by Messrs. H. P. Anderson and H. W. Georgi. Topics will be discussed covering the whole range of Association subjects. Especial attention will be given to the Educational work, to Bible Study and to the Religious work of our Young Men's Christian Associations.

A conference of the College Associations Presidents will be held by Mr. Georgi on Feb. 18th and 19th, and it is hoped each College Association will send its new president in order that he may be instructed in his important work.

All Christian workers, and especially Christian men in towns where there are no Associations are cordially invited to attend; and every pastor will be welcomed.

Reduced rates on all the railroads.

Those desiring to attend should write to F. P. Turner, State Secretary, Charlotte, N. C.

THE WOMEN'S EXPOSITION OF THE CAROLINAS.

Many of the readers of the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN will remember the Woman's Edition of the Charlotte Observer, issued under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Young Men's Christian Association. The success of the undertaking has so stimulated the women of Charlotte that they have undertaken the Women's Exposition of the Carolinas with several motives in view; first, to advance the interests of art, science and history in the Carolinas, and second, by the industrial exhibits which will be made by merchants and manufacturers at home and abroad, to add to the Purpose Fund which the ladies are accumulating and which will ultimately be spent upon some permanent feature of the association's work for young men.

The undertaking is a large one. The Executive Committee, composed of women of reputation of the city and county will be aided by an advisory board of Charlotte's ablest business men and it is their intention to make the affair a credit both to the city and the State. It is their intention to bring together the finest art collection ever exhibited in the State. Some valuable collections have already been secured and their agent will leave for the North during the present month to arrange for exhibits from artists and collectors.

One of the most arduous undertakings is the exhibits of colonial and war relics. These are to be received not only from collections already existing, but an effort is being made to gather together the great wealth of valuable relics, rich in history which are hidden away in the homes of our people.

In this work the ladies ask the aid of every man, woman and child in the two States. Any information regarding loans will be gladly received by the management, and persons having relics which are worthy of exhibit are earnestly requested to at once address the manager of the Museum, care Woman's Exposition, Charlotte, N. C All exhibits will be returned at the close in as good order as when received.

While the active work of the Exposition has just begun, the plans have been formulating for more than a year. The ladies have secured to assist them in the detail management, Mrs. Minnie Hebb Kellogg, who has had extensive experience in work of this character.

Reduced rates will of course be granted on the railroads of the States and excursions will be run during the Exposition.

GREATNESS SHOWN THROUGH LOVE.

Law is great, but personality is greater. The latter implies love, help, grace. If a father stood to his boys for no more than the enactment and enforcement of law, how meager would his fatherhood be! The true father is indeed their lawgiver, but he is also their helper to live the law freely and gladly. He is not simply the one who establishes the standard, but the one who makes it possible to live up to that standard. So of the heavenly Father in his relation to his children. Some seem to know him only as the law-maker, and they see Him only through the atmosphere of conscience and its demands. They agree that he is to set up the standard by which they are to live, but that he leaves it to them to achieve such a life. Their souls are burdened by the very loftiness of their vision of the divine purity and justice, and the demands of these upon them. But they come not into the joy of finding these divine attributes to be forms of the divine activity by which men are renewed into the divine image, and that the loftiness of God in perfectness is his lowliness in help. God's very greatness brings him near to us in his love for men.—Sunday School Times.

DISRAELI AND HIS WIFE.

Mr. Brett explains the secret of Beaconsfield's conquest of the Queen's good will by saying: "In trifles Disraeli never forgot the sex of the sovereign. In great affairs he never appeared to remember it." A similar explanation was given in a story which went the rounds some fifteen years ago to the effect that some one had inquired of the Queen the secret of her preference for Beaconsfield over Gladstone, and that she had replied: "Mr. Gladstone always tells me what he thinks; Lord Beaconsfield always asks me what I think." Those who have studied Benjamin Disraeli's character, as shown by his writings and by all that is known of his private life, will not doubt that his courtly deference to the Queen was the sincere homage of a great man to a good woman. All through his life he showed himself possessed of a singularly strong and almost superstitious belief in the power and influence of superior women. He implicitly believed that his wife had done more toward the making of his great career possible than he himself. It was in 1839 that Benjamin Disraeli led the widow of his friend, Mr. Wyndham Lewis, to the altar. At the previous election he and Mr. Lewis had run together for the borough of Maidstone and both were elected. Parliament opened but Mr. Lewis never spoke, and died within a few months of his election. Two years later Mrs. Lewis, who was the daughter of Capt. Viney Evans, R. N., became Mrs. Disraeli and brought to the future premier not only a considerable fortune, but perfect companionship. She was ten years his senior, and if a passage in "Endymion" is to be trusted as autobiographical, she relieved him of fully half the embarrassment of popping the question. To her influence he on many occasions ascribed the success of his after life. "Women will do much for you," says Myra to Endymion Ferrars, (Disraeli's mask,) and certain it is that Benjamin Disraeli believed that they had done more for him than all the other instrumentalities combined. Truth is stranger than fiction, and it is the simple truth that Mrs. Brydges Wyllyams, of Torquay, Devonshire, out of her woman's admiration for his genius, made him the heir to her estate, some $150,000. She only exacted from him in return his friendship while she lived and a promise that she should rest after death among the Disraelis at Hughenden.

The Queen's favorite prime minister was all chivalrous deference to women in general and all devotion to one woman in particular. Addressing the farmers in Buckinghamshire at a harvest festival, he called his spouse "the best wife in England." He dedicated "Sybil" "to the most severe of critics, but a perfect wife." At every turn in the road along which we trace his path to fame, we see standing beside him this enchanting figure of a faithful wife, nerving his ambition, soothing his defeats and entering with zest into his ultimately startling triumphs. An anecdote that well illustrates the fine sympathies that existed between them relates how she rode with him down to the House of Commons, giving no sign of the acute pain resulting from her thumb having been severely crushed by the carriage door, lest her distress might unnerve him for the great speech which he was shortly to deliver. The vicinage of their home at Hughenden was, while they lived, full of touching stories of their home felicity. Disraeli purchased Hughenden Manor from the Norris family, and Mrs. Disraeli did with it, as long as she lived, what she pleased. The handsome mansion was more than half hidden by beeches and elms, and the gardens and conservatories were exceedingly beautiful. In a little basket carriage, behind a shaggy black pony, called "Jack," Mrs. Disraeli was accustomed to ride around among her husband's neighbors and tenantry, with smiles for her social equals and an open hand for those of poorer station. At her instance Mr. Disraeli built a convenient and well-appointed schoolhouse, in connection with St. Michael's Church, where they were to be seen kneeling together every Sunday when Parliament was not in session. They both took a deep interest in the laborers' families on their estate, and each cottage was a little model of convenience and comfort. It is not surprising that this fond couple should have been regarded as something more than common clay by the simple country folk thereabouts.

After they had passed through nearly thirty years of life together—years in which his political career had been an almost unbroken succession of defeats—there came a day, in 1868, when the Queen offered him a peerage. He declined it, but asked her Majesty to bestow the honor upon his wife. He had won a coronet—always one of his pet ambitions—and laid it at her feet. Mrs. Disraeli accordingly became Viscountess Beaconsfield. A little over four years later, in December, 1872, she died. On foot, with uncovered head and alone, he followed her remains to the crypt of the little church of St. Michael's, which he soon after restored and beautified in her gracious memory. Later on he became the Earl of Beaconsfield. Those who enjoyed his intimacy have testified to the crushing effect of her death upon him. Yet his was the poetic, the hopeful, the unquenchable spirit, and he lived on and worked with something of the same fine fire. And yet not quite! He amazed the world with his "spirited foreign policy" and entertained it with his "Endymion," but there was something lacking in it all. There is no reason to believe that Mary Anne Disraeli was the intellectual equal of her husband. But it was evident that minus her association, he was not his old self.—Baltimore Sun.

God is with us by His gracious Fatherly presence and not merely as He is everywhere, by His essential presence. We are His family attending on Him; as His children we are ever with him.—Baxter.

Those who are growing old should strive to live in the present rather than in the past. It is the common infirmity of old age to dwell on the scenes and events and companionships of earlier years. They who can overcome this tendency and keep up an interest in passing events, and maintain a vital sympathy with those who are near to them, are in a fair way to retain the freshness of youth on through the years. Such persons do not grow old.—Herald and Presbyter.

CATECHISM.

Question 29. How are we made partakers of the redemption purchased by Christ?

Answer. We are made partakers of this redemption purchased by Christ by the effectual application of it to us by his Holy Spirit.

Time. A. D., 37.

Place. Jerusalem and Samaria.

INTRODUCTORY.

The church is seven years old at the time the events of this lesson took place. There has been a phenomenal ingathering at the beginning and a steady growth since. The power and influence grew as the numbers increased. Its relation to the Scriptures of the Old Testament and the Jewish dispensation was being better understood. Victories over opposition from without and hypocrisy within had been secured. Then came that death of the first martyr recorded in our last lesson. In all this the Church was centered in Jerusalem. There was no plan to carry it to the regions beyond. It is the universal religion with a mission to make the Church world-wide. A new epoch of extension to other parts of Palestine and onward to the ends of the earth and of broadening the views of the disciples as to the nature and work of the Gospel opens in the present lesson. This was the first step to carry the message of salvation to all nations. It was taken as a result of persecution which scattered the Christians of Jerusalem to preach the Gospel to the surrounding peoples. This led, as we shall see, to the reception of the Samaritans into the Church with the approval of the apostles and under the endorsement of the Holy Spirit.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 1. And Saul, who had witnessed the stoning of Stephen and was to become the great apostle, was consenting unto his death. The word means hearty approval as he probably spoke and voted against him in the Sanhedrim. At that time, R. V. "On that very day," immediately after the stoning. There was a great persecution against the Church, of such severity and variety of suffering as shown in Jas. ii. 6 and 2 Cor. xi. 23–25. Were all scattered abroad to escape the persecution and by this hardship to take the good news to others, first throughout the region of Judea whose capital was Jerusalem, and then to Samaria, the district of the despised. Except the apostles, who had learned to bear any suffering for Jesus' sake and who would need to hold together until the foundations of the early Church were laid.

Vs. 2. Devout men, such as were mentioned on the Day of Pentecost as pious Israelites whether now Christians or not. They would be opposed to mob violence, and by burying Stephen showed their opposition to persecution.

Vs. 3. Made havoc of the Church. As appears from chapter xxvi. 10. Saul with the sanction of the Sanhedrim, ravaged and devastated the Church as a wild beast would tear in pieces its prey or a freebooter's army the peaceful country invaded. This shows that Saul was mightily aroused, as a terrible battle was going on within and the Holy Spirit was pressing the weight of Stephen's martyrdom and the claims of Christ within him. Entering every house that none might escape, and haling men and women, dragging them forth, hauling them out, committed them to prison, awaiting trial.

Vs. 4. Went every where preaching the Gospel, as explaining why they had left Jerusalem and were wanderers. They left all possessions but did not lose their faith.

Vs. 5. Philip, not the apostle, of that name, but one of the seven deacons chosen to aid the apostles and elders. He testified of Christ and did the work of an evangelist in the conversion and baptism of the Ennuch. The city of Samaria, the capitol of the district of Samaria. Preached Christ, proclaimed the Christ.

Vs. 6. The people....gave heed, as probably a part result of Christ's words, John iv. They heard the words of Philip and saw the miracles which he did.

Vs. 7. Unclean spirit, demons that defiled the body and degraded the life. These and the other miracles were of the most difficult kind.

Vs. 8. Great joy R. V. "much joy," strong, deep and universal, the fruit of the Spirit.

Vs. 9. Called Simon. Little is known of him. He is the one through whom the Gospel is first brought into collision with the "wicked spirits." Used sorcery, in some measure like the ancient magicians and modern juggler, or fortune teller, all of whom the Bible condemns in witchcraft and sorcery. Such like do wonderful things and people are amazed and led away under the delusions of Satan.

Vs. 10. The people were so far deceived as to call his tricks and wonders an evidence of God's power in him.

Vs. 11. To him they had regard, R. V. "gave heed," hoping he was the deliverer, they looked and longed for. Bewitched them R. V. "amazed them."

Vs. 12. They believed Philip, were persuaded that the Gospel was true as preached by him. They were baptized as believers, making the administration of this sacrament the open confession of Christ as their Saviour.

Vs. 13. Then, following the popular tide, only taking a new turn of his hypocrisy. Simon ...believed the facts, but not by accepting Christ as Saviour and Lord. It was only an intellectual belief and not the faith of the heart, giving the life. He wondered beholding the miracles and signs, showing his idea that this was only superior skill in such things.

Vs. 14. Samaria had received the Word of God and thus the bridge from Jew to Gentile was built.

Vs. 15. Receive the Holy Ghost, not in his ordinary work, but "the promise of the Father."

Vs. 16. He was fallen upon none of them, as at Pentecost and later.

Vs. 17. They received the Holy Ghost as special after conversion and baptism.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

Our God turns every tide of persecution against His people into a wave of blessing to His Church. The movements of Providence are wide and far-reaching.

2. The Church should welcome all who receive the Gospel even though despised as Samaritans or barbarian as other nations.

3. The Church should not be content with the ordinary operations of the Holy Spirit.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, Feb. 28th, 1897.

BY REV. B. E. WALLACE.

From what does Christ save man? Titus 3:1–7.

Text for the week:

"Thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins." Matt. 1:21.

Daily Readings:

Monday, From Want, Jno. 6:32–40.
Tuesday, From Death, Jno. 3:9–17.
Wednesday, From Fear, Psa. 91:1-8.
Thursday, From Danger. Psa. 91:9-16.
Friday, From Sorrow, Luke 4:16-22.
Saturday, From Selfishness, Luke 10:25-37.
Sunday, Topic, Titus 3:1-7.

Suggestions for Leaders:

1. Have the Daily Readings read emphasizing special point in each.

2. Show significance of names, Jesus, Christ, Messiah, and give other names by which he was called.

3. Have special prayer for the unsaved of your congregation.

Notes;

SALVATION! Is there a sweeter word to a sinner's ear? "What is it to be saved? Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard. It is a rescue, and from such a shipwreck! It is a rest, and in such an unimaginable home! It is to lie down forever in the bosom of God in an endless rapture of ineffable contentment." What would our religion be without a Christ? Take every CHRISTIAN out the world's composition to day and see the terrible ruin and desolation. No light, no virtue, no truth, no honesty, no purity Yea thrice happy is that religion whose Saviour is THE CHRIST.

Christ saves us:

From,	To,
Captivity,	Freedom,
Weakness,	Light.
Misery,	Joy,
War,	Peace,
Death,	Life,
Hell,	Heaven.

Tell to sinners far and wide, JESUS SAVES!!

OPEN DOOR NOTES.

The Westminster League of Clarksville, Tenn, has done good work in looking after the poor of the city.

A Cottage Prayer-meeting Committee has been added to the Westminster League of Winston. This League is doing excellent work.

The annual convention of the East Carolina Christian Endeavorers will convene at Faison on March 26th. An interesting program has been prepared.

Some of our societies are working upon our offer of 25 cents for each new subscriber to the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN, the money to be devoted to church work. We would gladly add others to the list.

The Greensboro Presbyterian states that the Lexington Christian Endeavor is in a flourishing condition. Will not Dr. Smith or some of the members give us some fuller account of their work?

The invitations to the Poverty Party given by the Home Mission Society of Statesville were printed on brown paper and the refreshments served were in keeping with the design of the evening —buttermilk, coffee and beaten biscuit with candy and apples for the children. This band works for the mission schools in Mitchell and Watauga counties.

The public does not generally know that the name of that widespread organization, the Society of Christian Endeavor, originated with Dr. Edward Eggleston, who called the church in Brooklyn of which he was pastor "The Church of the Christian Endeavor." Later this title was adopted by the young society organized by Mr. Clark —Independent

President Francis E. Clark has secured for use as a gavel at the next general Christian Endeavor Convention, to be held at San Francisco, the shoemaker's hammer used by William Carey before he went as a missionary to India. This is the contribution of a prominent English Endeavorer Another convention gavel is being made by a Hindu society in India and will be brought home by Dr. Clark.

The Men's Union of the Second Presbyterian church, Knoxville, Tenn., is a unique organization for the purpose of bringing "the men into closer fellowship with each other, to interest them in the highest welfare of this city and of the strangers who may come into the community, and to induce them to cooperate in civic, moral and spiritual work." The work is carried on by the several committees and the Union is a great aid to the pastor in his labors.

The monthly meeting of the Westminster League of the First church, Wilmington, was held on Thursday night of last week. A most interesting letter was read from Dr. Geo. C. Worth, who stated that his medical work in Wusih was very encouraging. Dr. Worth is very desirous now that some young lady would devote her life as trained nurse in this field. Reports were read from the different committees; the Fragment Circle contributed $5 to the medical fund and the Sunshine Band $10 for the same cause. Dr. E. A. Alderman was chosen as the speaker for the annual meeting of the League to be held next month.

NEW HOPE CHURCH:—Endeavor day was observed Sunday, the 14th. The program as prepared by the United Society was carried out, and every one entered into the celebration with the true spirit of endeavorers. Special mention should be made of the Junior Society in rendering their part of the program. These were considered by many to be the best part of the exercise. We had a good congregation and all were pleased with the services.

On Friday night, the 12th inst., we had our regular missionary meeting. In these meetings we take a country and study it in all its prominent features, that bear on missions. Parts are assigned to different members as follows:

1. Sketch of country (on blackboard) and General History.
2. Habits and Customs of the People.
3. Religion of the Country.
4. Christian Missions.
5. Short biography of some of the most prominent missionaries.

These papers are all short and to the point so as not to prolong the meeting to an undue length. Our people are much interested in these meetings, and we trust they will be the means of increasing missionary zeal among us.

HUNTER. Mrs. Martha M. Hunter, widow of Henry Hunter, of Mecklenburg county, N. C. Born June, 1812. Died Feb. 4th, 1897. Member of Mallard Creek church. Full of cheer and sympathy for others. She died greatly beloved after an illness of only twenty hours. The Lord spared her the suffering and us the pain of seeing her suffer.

CLINE. Mrs. Clarissa White Cline, at her home near Rocky River church, February 3d, 1897, aged 78 years. Her husband died twelve years ago, but four of her children survive her. She was a devoted member of the Presbyterian church. First, of the First church, Concord, second, of Zion church, and lastly, of Rocky River. A life of constant faith was hers.

SMITH. At his home in Poplar Tent congregation, February 4th, 1897, Robert Houston Smith, aged 46 years. He first joined Rocky River church in early life. Seventeen years ago he was transferred to Poplar Tent, where he was deacon for the last eight years of his life. He was a modest man of quiet disposition. Loyal and public-spirited, both in Church and State. A good neighbor, a kind husband, an affectionate father has gone to his reward He leaves a wife and six children who will miss him sorely, the eldest child being sixteen, the youngest one year old. May the God of all grace be their comfort.

TATE. Mr. Armstrong Tate died at his home in Burlington, N. C., Friday, Jan. 22d, 1897. He was the youngest son of John and Henrietta Armstrong Tate, and was born near Hawfields July 1st, 1840. He was educated at Dr. Alexander Wilson's school, and was preparing himself for the study of medicine, when at his country's call, he joined Company F. sixth N. C. Regiment and entered the civil war.

After the long marches of the war were over, Sept. 14th, 1865, he was married to Miss Amelia White. Seven children were born to them, two of whom Mrs. McBryde Holt, and Mrs. Henry Jerome Stockard, are still living. After twenty-eight years of loving companionship, the wife of his youth "fell on sleep" Nov. 6th, 1893.

He was appointed clerk of the Superior Court of Alamance county in 1877, and was elected to this office for three successive terms, thus ably serving his county in this capacity for thirteen years.

In 1891 he moved to Burlington, where he engaged in banking and insurance businesss. In June, 1895, he was married to Miss Bertha Morrison. To this marriage there were born two children, one of whom a bright little girl is yet living to bring consolation into the saddened life of her lonely mother.

Mr. Tate was prominent not only in business and political affairs, but in his church as well. Before he was twenty five years of age he was ordained a ruling elder in Hawfields church. Afterwards on removing his membership to Graham he was called to the same office in that congregation. And at the time of his death he was a faithful and valued elder in the Burlington church.

The above sketch indicates no ordinary man. Truly "he was diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." Though called upon to discharge public duties, he was in no sense a policy man He abhorred the word. He was a man of strong personality and decided convictions, with the courage of maintaining them. A man of unbending integrity and uncompromising hostility to what he conceived to be wrong, but with a tender sympathy for an erring brother, ready to "restore such an one in the spirit of meekness." Throughout his whole life he gave evidence of those sterling qualities of Christian manhood that mark one of nature's noblemen. Should a description of his life be written in one sentence, it should be: "Uprightness of life, and fidelity to duty." Our county has lost one of its best citizens, the church a valued and able counsellor, his pastor a tower of strength, and his family their stay and comfort. Surely "there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel." PASTOR.

Tribute of Respect.

WHEREAS, God in His allwise providence and unerring judgment, has claimed for His own, by calling her to Himself, on January 20th, 1897, our beloved sister, MAGGIE MCKEITHAN, the highly esteemed and faithful president of the Ladies' Missionary Society of Cameron Presbyterian church; and

WHEREAS, There has never lived in Cameron a lady more universally loved, and who had a more purifying and uplifting influence upon society generally therefore

Resolved, That we sustain a great and irreparable loss, not only in our society and in our church, but the entire town and community enter no less keenly into the sentiment,

"To know her was to love her
To name her was to praise."

Resolved, That we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who ordered it so, and look to Him for comfort and grace in this hour of bereavement. That by her noble example of Christian devotion and untiring energy in the Master's work; we be stimulated to worthy emulation of her consecrated zeal and integrity in work for Him whom she delighted to honor.

Resolved, That we extend our warmest sympathy and condolence to the bereaved family who in survival mourn their loss.

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be placed on society records, sent to family of deceased and published in NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN.

MRS. N. A. MCFADYEN,
MRS. LULA PERRY,
MISS MAMIE ARNOLD,
Committee.

Memorial of Mrs. Stevens

From the Ladies' Aid Society and Home and Foreign Missionary Societies.

Again we are called upon to record the death of one of our members. Mrs. Helen M. Stevens was called from earth to Heaven on the morning of December 4th, after an illness of six weeks.

She had been connected with the benevolent work of our church, as represented in the Ladies' Aid and Home and Foreign Missionary Societies ever since their organization, and though for many years providentially prevented from taking an active part in the work, manifested her sincere interest in every way possible. Her life was one of much sorrow and many trials, which she accepted as the will of her Father, and went on her way with sweet endurance and patient resignation.

While we shall miss her presence in our meetings and pray for grace to imitate her example of faith and fortitude, we look behind the grave with thankfulness for the hope given us that for her the light of eternal day has forever banished the clouds of earth, and that she is rejoicing in the presence of her Redeemer with the loved ones gone before. MRS. M. P. BAUMANN.

In Memoriam.

HOLT. At Chase City, Va., January 6th, 1897, Thomas M. Holt, Jr., younger son of the late Hon. Thomas M. and Mrs. Louisa Moore Holt, passed away after a brief illness, in the 25th year of his age.

Amiable, gentle, generous: prepossessing in appearance and of winning address; always courteous in bearing, charitable in judgment, and kind in speech; Mr. Holt was greatly beloved by a large circle of kindred and friends. A child of the covenant, dedicated to God in his infancy and trained up in the Christian faith, he was led in early life to recognize his personal religious obligations, and was admitted to the communion on profession of his faith in Christ by the session of Waynesboro' church, Va., while a student of Fishburne Military School.

Gifted with unusual talents, he seemed eminently fitted for a career of high usefulness and distinction; and, encouraged by the promise of his youth, his family and friends anticipated for him a future of rare success and honor. But scarcely had he crossed the threshold of manhood when the hand of an insidious and fatal disease was laid upon him. Thenceforth his life became, more and more as the days wore on, a weary, painful, dark and desperate struggle for health and life.

Only He who is "touched with the feeling of our infirmities" could enter into the trials of that bright young spirit. Unable to do any work that required exertion or necessitated confinement; borne down oftentimes by the terrible depression which is inseparable from the malady that was carrying him to the grave, and suffering constantly from various disorders engendered by it; haunted by the anticipation of sudden death, and knowing that in any event his days were few; restless always and often wretched; right manfully did he bear the burden of his infirmities, and struggle to retain his hold on life. He was to the very last noted for his cheerfulness, rarely referring to his sickness, and often concealing his sufferings, in order that he might not hinder the happiness of others.

Recently he had derived great benefit from the mineral waters at Chase City, Va., and thither he had gone to spend a few days when his last illness came upon him. But he had declared his fearlessness of the last enemy, and in his last hours he was comforted by the faith of his childhood. He welcomed the affectionate ministrations of Rev. Dr. Drew, pastor of our church at Chase City, and expressed his humble reliance upon the mercy of God through our Lord Jesus Christ.

His mortal remains were brought back to the home of his boyhood, and laid with the ashes of his kindred in the cemetery at Graham. A large concourse of mourning friends and relatives attended the funeral services, and rarely has it been the writer's lot to participate in a service so touching. The casket was borne to the grave by the hands of six noble young men, all of them near kinsmen of the departed one. As the sweet words of the burial service were pronounced all hearts responded to the message of Gospel comfort embalmed in the words "in hope of the resurrection of the dead and the life of the world to come." And then, when the new made mound of earth was being covered with sweet flowers and evergreens, brought and laid there by the gentle, loving hands of fair cousins, all eyes were dimmed with tears—tears of sympathy for the bereaved circle, and of grief that a young life had been so sadly cut short and that a heart so noble had ceased to beat on earth. LOVE'S JOURNEY.

Love one day upon a mission
Started forth with eager speed;
All his thought was bent on bearing
Healing balms to those in need.

He had heard with heart o'erflowing
Of the griefs that all men bore,
So he knocked at palace gateway
And at every humble door;

But he found no word of welcome
Answering to his generous call,
Tho' his wondrous balms of healing
Were so freely offered all.

Bolts and bars were drawn the firmer,
And the porters bade him go;
Then he turned him homeward, weeping
That his gifts were slighted so.

Speedily he sought his Master,
Whose quick eye the story read;
"Royal messengers should always Royally be clad," he said.

'Love has kingly gifts of blessing
To the suffering world to bear;
Didst thou dress thee for thy journey
In such robes as Love should wear?'

"Only he who wears the garment
Of unfailing courtesy
Finds an entrance to the suffering
That most need his ministry."

Then Love wrapped that robe around him,
Started with his gifts once more;
Lo, as he appeared, each porter
Gladly opened wide his door!

THE CONGRESS OF MOTHERS.

On the 17th of February a convention is to meet in Washington city that is absolutely unprecedented in history. It is a great convention to consider the duties and responsibilities of mothers. Its purposes are in no way political. Its object it to influence parents in the training of their little ones and to impress the responsibility of the fireside that is so sadly overlooked in this rushing age.

The aim of the congress is to try to reach not only the hard working mother, who has little time to give to the training of her children, but the fashionable mother, who willingingly delegates the care of her little ones to servants. Efforts will be made to establish clubs throughout the country among women of leisure and means, who will purchase books and study subjects bearing on the object of the club, the importance of home influence and the responsibilities of motherhood. The idea of this congress originated with Mrs. Theodore Birney, who presented it to several State Chautauquas, where it was received with much enthusiasm Among the most ardent supporters of the plan are Mrs. Adlai Stevenson, Mrs. Hearst, whose philanthropy equals her wealth; Miss Morton, the sister of the secretary of agriculture, and for many years teacher of languages in Detroit, and many other prominent women throughout the country, The congress will open at the Arlington Hotel, and immediately afterward Mrs. Cleveland will receive the ladies at the White House.

During the three days' session papers will be read on the following subjects: "Day Nurseries and Mothers of Submerged Classes," by Mrs. Lucy S. Bainbridge, head of the woman's deparement of city missions of New York; "Mother and Child in Primitive Life," by Prof. Frank Hamilton Cushing; "Needs for a National Training School for Mothers," by Mrs. Robert Cotton, of Falkland, N. C., and it is hoped that such a school may be an outcome of this congress; "Mothers and Schools" by Mrs. W. F. Crafts; "Nature Studies in the Home," by Miss Anna C. Schreyver, of Michigan State Normal School. Dr. E. Stanley Hall, of Clark University, Worcester, Mass., will make an address upon "Some Practical Results of the New Study of Childhood." Hamilton Mabie, of the Outlook, will talk upon "The Importance of Bringing the Youth in Touch with Great Literature;" Dr. John H. Vincent, chancellor of Chautauqua, will speak on "The Ideal Home;" Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, editor of Harpers' Bazar, will suggest "Leading Courses for Mothers;" Miss Frances Newton, superintendent of the Chautauqua kindergarten work, will talk about "Punishments." Miss Amalia Hofer, editor of the Kindergarten Magazine, of Chicago, will speak on "What the Kindergarten Does for Mothers," and "Reproduction of Natural Laws," will be the subject of Mrs. Alice Lee Moque.—Pica yune.

Love in the Scale.

"How much does the baby weigh" is only another way of asking, "Is he healthy and strong?" When a baby is welcomed into the world with loving care and forethought, his chances of health and strength are increased a hundred-fold.

A prospective mother cannot begin too early to look after her own health and physical condition. This is sure to be reflected in the baby. Any weakness or nervous depression, or lack of vigor on the mother's part should be overcome early during the expectant time by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which promotes the perfect health and strength of the organism specially concerned in motherhood.

It makes the coming of baby absolutely safe and comparatively free from pain; renders the mother strong and cheerful, and transmits healthy constitutional vigor to the child.

No other medicine in the world has been such an unqualified blessing to mothers and their children. It is the one positive specific for all weak and diseased conditions of the feminine organism. It is the only medicine of its kind devised for this one purpose by a trained and educated specialist in this particular field.

Mrs. F. B. Cannings, of No. 4320 Humphrey St., St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I am now a happy mother of a fine, healthy baby girl. Feel that your 'Favorite Prescription' and little 'Pellets' have done me more good than anything I have ever taken. Three months previous to my confinement I began using your medicine. I took three bottles of the 'Prescription.' Consequences were I was only in labor forty-five minutes. With my first baby I suffered 18 hours, then had to lose him. He was very delicate and only lived 12 hours. For two years I suffered untold agony, and had two miscarriages. The 'Favorite Prescription' saved both my child and myself. My baby is not yet three weeks old and I do not think I ever felt better in my life."

New subscribers means not change of address to some one else—that would be fraud—but bona fide new subscribers.

For $1.75 we will send the paper for the first year to a new subscriber and a copy of Palestine Photographed. This album contains 64 actual photographic reproductions of picturesque and historical places in the Holy Land on enameled pages, and is a thing of beauty. The descriptive foot notes are good and enhance the interest.

We regard this as a specially desirable premium.

To any one paying up or renewing their subscription and sending $2.25 we will send this album as apremium.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

BECAUSE HE DIDN'T THINK.

Once a little turkey, fond of her own way,
Wouldn't ask the older ones where to go or stay;
She said: "I'm not a baby—here I am half-grown;
Surely, I am big enough to run around alone!"
Off she went; but somebody, hiding, saw her pass.
Soon like snow her feathers covered all the grass.
So she made a supper for a sly young mink,
'Cause she was so headstrong that she would n't think.

Once there was a robin lived outside the door,
Who wanted to go inside and hop upon the floor.
"No, no," said the mother; "you must stay with me!
Little birds are safest sitting in a tree!"
"I don't care," said robin, and gave his tail a fling;
"I don't think the old folks know quite everything."
Down he flew, and kitty had him 'fore he'd time to wink—
"Oh!" he cried, "I'm sorry; but I didn't think."

Now, my little children, you who read this song,
Don't you see what trouble comes from thinking wrong?
Can't you take warning from their dreadful fate,
Who began their thinking when it was too late?
Don't think there's always safety, don't suppose that you know more
Than anybody knows who has gone before.
But, when you're warned of ruin, pause upon the brink,
And don't go under headlong, 'cause you didn't think.

—Phoebe Cary.

THE SPREADING OF FAITH'S "NAUGHTY."

ANNIE HAMILTON DONNELL.

Faith was in her little white night-gown, going to bed. When mamma came back with the drink of water, she met her at the door.

"I'm sorry mamma," she said softly.

"I'm sorry too," said mamma.

She set the glass on the bureau and held out both arms to Faith.

"How many sorry folks do you suppose there are to night, dear, just because my little Faith-girl was naughty? Let's count them. Hold up your fingers."

"There's me, mamma," she said, wiggling her thumb.

"An' you, mamma," checking off the forefinger, next door.

"I 'spect that's all, and that's two sorry people—that's all.

But mamma touched Faith's little thimble finger gently.

"This one stands for Maggie. Maggie is sorry."

"Maggie, mamma? What for? She didn't do anything."

"Wait. Faith disobeyed and took mamma's beautiful vase down, and then she broke it. But that wasn't half as bad as hiding the pieces and running away. O Faith!"

Faith's face burrowed into mamma's neck, and the tell-tale fingers trembled with remorse.

"Then," mamma went on, "I found the pieces and thought poor Maggie hid them, and she felt so bad about it that she cried herself into one of her dreadful headaches."

"Yes'm," Faith murmured, an' it made her sick—that's three sorry fingers, mamma."

At the finger with the new gold ring on it mamma said: "This one is Maggie's mother. She is very lame, and lies in bed always. Maggie couldn't run over and read to her as usual Wednesdays, and it must have been a great disappointment, I think. Poor old woman! She counts the days till Maggie can come."

The face in mamma's neck felt damp and warm. Mamma rocked back and forth two or three times, steadily. She held her own hand over the thumb and three fingers, and only the little last little finger stood up, wavering, ready to be checked off, too.

Faith sat up and looked at it through her wet eyes.

"I know who that is. It's papa. He was dreffle sorry 'cause you had to get supper for Maggie an' couldn't go to meet him an' look at the pictures at Gill's."

The little finger went down with the rest into mamma's warm clasp and then Faith slowly, very slowly, raised the other hand. But mamma shook her head,

"Five sorry folks—that' enough. Five sorry's to one little girl's naughty!"

They were both still a long time, and mamma wondered if Faith had gone to sleep, but, by and by, she felt a little moist face up against hers, and heard Faith saying sorrowfully: "Good night, mamma. The next time I'm beginning a naughty I'll count my fingers quick an' 'mind myself. I wouldn't have b'lieved it could spread so."—Zion's Herald.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Presbyterian: As I have read so many letters in your paper, I thought I would write one. I am eleven years old. I go to school every day to Miss Minnie Shaw, and I go to Sunday-school at St. Pauls. My teacher is Mrs. L. Shaw. I have two pets. A dog and a cat. My papa takes the PRESBYTERIAN and I like to read the letters very much.

Your truly,
A. STEWART MCGOOGAN.

St. Pauls, N C.

Dear Presbyterian: I am the smallest boy in the Orphans' Home. I ring the Mary Augusta bell. I have recited the motto texts for 1896. I came to the Home from Greensboro. A young lady in Fayetteville supports me. But who she is I must not tell you. I like to write to her. I have recited the Child's Catechism. Mr. Watts sent us a big box with sixty-eight books in it. I am eight years old. Mr. Boyd is trying to get me sent off to have my foot straightened.

THADDEUS HENDRIX CROCKER.

Barium Springs, N. C.

[We are glad to hear from the boys as well as our girl friends.]

Presbyterian—Dear Sir: I thank you very much for the money you allowed me. I put it in my Indian money box. Since I wrote to you before I have gotten two little twin girls to work for Christian Indians, six years old. They sent me their photos—nice looking. I have read five Indian books. In my other letter, I asked your little readers if they could tell me another book about the Indians, besides, "How Achonhoah Found The Light," but I've gotten three since then. They are just splendid. "Red Cloud," is about the Sioux—"Matonchon," the Comanches and Apaches, in Indian Territory. Then another book, "Our Life Among the Iroquois." You asked me to tell you about my Indian books so, I thought I'd do it. The weather has been so dark and gloomy our "Little Willing Workers" thought it night, and went to roost; we haven't met in a long time. I have eight rabbit hollows setting. I caught twelve or thirteen. I sent some to a sick old man. I like to read the little letters in the Letter-Box.

RUFUS J. REID.

Mt. Mourne, N C.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I will write you a few lines to let the little folks know what I am doing. I am going to the High School and I have one of the nicest teachers I ever went to school to. I just love her. Well I go to Sunday-school too, to the Presbyterian church in the evening. I do love to go as my teachers are all so kind to me. My teacher's name is Miss Sue Maxwell. We have preaching in the morning and in the evening we have Sunday-school and at night we have preaching in the church too. Mr. Graham is our preacher. I do like him. On Wednesday night we have prayer-meeting. Well I must close for fear of the waste basket.

Your unknown friend,
CHARLES B. FLOWE.

Davidson, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I will write you a letter for my first time. We take the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN of which we are all very fond. I never did read your paper very much until the last few months. I have become very fond of it, and I am always glad for the day to come when I can get the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN out of the postoffice so I can read about the ministers and all about the work of our Presbyterian churches. My father and mother are both living. I have three brothers and three sisters and they are all living. One of my brothers is in Washington, and two are in Alabama. One of my sisters is married and she has two little children, one is named Nellie Lee and the other is named Florence Marian, and they are just as sweet as children get to be. All of us are members of the Presbyterian church. My father is the superintendent of the Sunday-school. Our Presbyterian Sabbath-school has sixty five members of which there are six teachers. My teacher's name is Mrs. Witmer, and she is certainly a good teacher. We had a Christmas tree at the church for the Sunday-school Christmas, and we just had a jolly time, every one received presents. I acted as Santa. I had on a Santa Claus face. While all the small children were reciting their Christmas speeches. I was hid behind the tree and when they got through I came from behind the tree, said a long speech, and when I was through with that I sang a Santa Claus song, it certainly made the children's eyes dance. We are having a lot of snow this winter, and we have had some real cold weather too. The thermometer went as low as eleven degrees below zero, now don't you know, that was cold! Mr. Editor I hope that you and I will get acquainted with one another some day if we cannot see one another. May be I can write you another letter, so you can read my letters and I will read your papers and that will do as well. Ever remember

Your true friend,
ALBERT ORR.

THINGS USEFUL.

It is said that if each of the large peppers is rolled in paper and put in a dark, cold place it will keep green and may be used for a vegetable until mid-winter.

Oysters a la Creme.—One quart of oysters to one pint of cream. Wash the oysters and put them in a double boiler until they curl. Pour them out and put the cream in the boiler. Take three tablespoonfuls of corn starch; wet with cold milk until smooth. When cream commences to boil, stir in the corn starch. Add two spoons of butter, salt enough to season. Put in the oysters and let them boil. Have ready a platter of golden brown toast, well buttered. Pour the oysters over the toast and serve.

Ham Croquettes.—Any pieces of cold ham, whether boiled or fried, may be made into delicious croquettes. Chop the ham very fine and to each cupful of the chopped ham add two cups of bread crumbs, two eggs, pepper, a little chopped parsley and unless the ham is very salty, a little extra salt may be needed. Then add milk until the bread crumbs and the entire mixture is quite moist. Drop by tablespoonfuls into a hot frying pan with a little butter or drippings. When browned on one side turn; do not cook them long, to make them dry, as they should be quite moist when done.

A SUNNY LIFE.
BY REV. W. E. BOIES.

As boon from heaven is a sunny life,
Whose days are never dreary,
Though the flesh be worn and weary
From the world's hard toil and strife.

Its light fed from a source divine,
Serenely ever shining,
Lends even a golden lining
To clouds when storm and stress combine.

Unknowing what the freighted year
May bring or ruthless sever,
Its cheery trust fails never
Growing more dear as heaven draws near.

It would not lift the veil that hides
The coming joy or sorrow,
Though near as is the morrow
But patiently its set time bides.

Unselfish must be such a life,
Blest in blessing another
Be he stranger or a brother,
In a world with ills and tears so rife.

Contagious, too, it is always;
Even croakers cease their cawing,
And cynics are seen thawing
Under those genial sunny rays.

The sunny pilgrim journeys on
With a firm step ne'er receding,
And a brave heart ever heeding
The pledge of a yet brighter dawn.

When those great lenses which give modern telescopes such wondrous power are nearly completed all polishing tools are laid aside, and they are brought to their delicate perfection by touches of the thumb dipped in the finest of rouge. The lines of flinty glass are changed by so light a thing as the finger-tip. Character is perfected by little touches. And it is a beautiful thought that the Infinite Being who made the worlds and holds them in His mighty hand superintends with wondrous patience and surpassing gentleness every process in shaping and perfecting the character.—Independent.

REV. KENNETH McDONALD.

Rev. Kenneth McDonald was born May 24th, 1840, in Cumberland county, about ten miles southeast of Fayetteville, N. C. His parents were John and Janet McDonald. His father and maternal grandfather Neill McNeill came from Scotland and both were ruling elders in Big Rockfish church which Kenneth joined when about sixteen years old under the ministry of the late Rev. Neill McDonald. His early religious training at home was supplemented in an Evergreen Sabbath-school of which his father was superintendent and A. B. McFadyen assistant. With him, in that Sabbath school were three boys who to-day are preaching the Gospel and many others who are now earnest workers in the Master's vineyard. The war coming on, he enlisted in the company of which Rev. Jas. H. McNeill, deceased, was captain and no more faithful soldier followed the fortunes of Gen. J. E. B. Stuart than private Kenneth McDonald. In the fall of 1866, along with his cousin A. McFadyen and brother Angus at Sardis church, he was taken under the care of Fayetteville Presbytery as a candidate for the ministry. In his twenty-eighth year he entered the Bingham School and then Davidson College and from there he went to Union Theological Seminary, Virginia, where he graduated and was licensed to preach at Ashepole church in the spring of 1874. Coming to Wilmington Presbytery he was ordained to the full work of the ministry at Mt. Horeb church in the fall of 1876. As an evangelist he spent six months in Fayetteville Presbytery and two years in Wilmington Presbytery. Harmony church was organized as the result of his labors Once he was sent to the General Assembly and several times he has moderated his own Presbytery. For years he has served the churches of Black River and Caswell as pastor and for a while South River as stated supply. Bro. McDonald's preaching is plain and practical and at times his message is delivered with great earnestness and feeling. Those who know him best appreciate his preaching most, believing that a man of God is speaking to them. Genial and pleasant, he is much beloved by his brethren in the ministry. Knowing that "it is not good for man to be alone" he added to his happiness by marrying on Nov. 8th, 1876, Miss Laura E. McDuffie, of Sampson county.

REV. KENNETH MCDONALD,
Moderator of Wilmington Presbytery.

AN AID TO DIVINE WORSHIP.

On takiog one's seat in a place of worship, it is of importance to remember that the great object of coming together is, or ought to be, the honor of God. It is to praise Him for His goodness, to thank Him for His blessings, and to pray for His continued grace. To listen to sermons is, or ought to be, a very subordinate part of worship, if indeed, it is not to be distinguished from worship altogether. For when a sermon is being listened to the worship is, necessarily, more or less suspended, although we may be thus incited to subsequent devotion. The sermon is for our benefit. The worship is for God's honor. These must carefully be distinguished. Hence, in assembling for worship, it is well at once to endeavor to realize the presence of God; and, inasmuch as He is approached chiefly through the Lord Jesus, it is needful to try to realize the presence of Christ by setting before the mind the image of His Person, or at least by remembering that He is a living divine being, actually existent, although now out of our bodily sight.

Turning in faith to Him as the risen Jesus, He will give us joyous hopes of everlasting glory with Him and with those we love, redeemed by Him in heaven. He will sing, "Fear not even death; for I am He that liveth and was dead. And behold, I am alive for evermore, and have the keys of hell and of death."

And by His Spirit He can shine into each heart, for it was through the eternal Spirit that Christ offered Himself up. The Holy Spirit was without measure in Him, even the same Spirit that is in His humble children. Thus keeping the mind prayerfully fixed on Christ, worship will be more blessed to the worshipper, more glorifying to the Great Creator, and an humbly joyous preparation for the glorious devotions of eternity.—Southern Churchman.

PERSONS AND PAPERS.

If I ever feel like envying any one it is not the world-famous author, but some serene, devout soul who has made the life of Christ his own and whose will is the divine will.—J. G. Whittier.

* * *

Duties never conflict. God has but one duty at a time for any child of His to perform, If we are doing the one duty God has for us to do at the present moment, we are doing just right. If we are not doing that one duty we are at fault, no matter how good or how important the work we are doing.—Sunday School Times.

* * *

A man may know that he is without God if he is without prayer Prayer is the simple expression of the desire for God. It is by prayer we invite God to come in to occupy His throne, and when He is in, prayer is inevitable.—James Stalker, D. D.

* * *

The example of Christ is not simply in the fact of His holiness, but in the fact that He was holy under temptation. He was within the approach of the great enemy who lost no opportunity to assail Him, and yet He did no sin.—United Presbyterian.

* * *

As the seed cannot disclose what is in it unless it fall into appropriate soil, and be stimulated to growth by suitable conditions, so the word of God cannot disclose all that it contains, unless it grow in an understanding mind and in a loving heart; unless, by meditation and prayer, it can expand from the seed form to the blade and the ear and the full corn in the ear."—Dr. Macmillan.

THE FRIEND AT MIDNIGHT.

There appears to be three stages in the teaching of our Lord Jesus Christ on the subject of prayer. In the beginning of His ministry, in the Sermon on the Mount, beginning to teach and train the disciples to be His apostles, He gives them the simplest view of the relation to God as "Our Father which art in Heaven." He pointed out the consequent necessity to come to God as children to a father able and willing to bless, ready to answer prayer. The things asked for in that earlier teaching were the simplest and only suggested or implied the possibilities of prevailing prayer.

The third and last stage of His instruction appears in the verses we have been considering in the past three weeks. The disciples were henceforth as apostles to go forth as founders of the early Church and with others to carry forward the redemptive work of Christ in its purpose to save sinners, to accomplish the complete sanctification of the saved and to use all such, while growing in grace, for the service of the Lord. Hence His assurance that they should do the works that He did and greater works was to be realized in their answers to prayer in His name.

Between these two, about one year after the Sermon on the Mount, seeing Christ pray, (amazing spectacle!) the disciples said to Him: "Lord teach us to pray." His response was first to say in substance, what He said earlier about prayer as children. Then He gave them the parable of "The Friend at Midnight." This is a link between the earlier and later teaching, a stepping-stone from the first to the third stage. Through all runs the thread of which we seem to think least and trust the feeblest. It is this that all true prayer should expect to be answered. Prayer is not given merely for its reflex benefit to one who prays. It is given as our access to God and "Every one that asketh receiveth."

This parable of Luke, xi: 5–8, is one of the simplest and yet profoundest of all parables. It is a simple eastern possibility that a belated traveler should come to his friend at midnight weary and hungry, and that friend, having nothing of food to give, should go to his friend and seek and get, only for his importunity, what his friend needed. But the spiritual meaning is well on toward that final teaching about "greater works." Our Lord applies its meaning, which He had used at the first, only taking this advance. Instead of saying "give good things," He says, "give the Holy Spirit"—which is the special subject matter of His parting words and the source of power in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The thought is not merely of importunity, nor of that chiefly, but rather of the boldness of God's friends, to seek not for self, but for others what self has not and cannot get except from God. As we look into the depths of this clear mirror lakelet, we see the love which seeks to give help, the need of helplessness to look to one who can help, and the confidence that a friend, who has, will give to the one who has not, that which may be given to his needy friend. All that calls for careful consideration and much meditation. The added features of the unexpected refusal and the success of perseverance are of vast importance. But we must not let the human element out of which the parable arises mislead us to think that God seems to refuse to give us what we ask for a needy one, for reasons such as selfishess or unwillingness to put ourselves to any discomfort suggest. God does often delay to answer true prayer, and seems sometimes to refuse to give what is asked. But not for human reasons, He has the good of the one who prays, and the best time to bestow the blessing on the needy, clearly before Him. He delays, but He never refuses to give what is asked at the right time and for the very best in His wisdom and love.

The one thought now is of prayer as an appeal to the friendship of God.

The Baltimore Sun says: A copy of an interesting tablet connecting the early history of Christianity with the ancient empire of China has been received by the Woman's College, Baltimore, and placed in its rapidly growing oriental collection.

It is a "rub" made upon rice paper, seven feet and a half long by three feet wide, thus reproducing in exactness the tablet recently found near Se-San-Foo, which was, fifteen hundred years ago, the capital of the Chinese empire. In the year 633 of the Christian era a priest of the Nestorian faith, an early sect of Christianity widely popular in the East, arrived in China from Rome. This priest, whose name was Olopeen or Olopun, won the favor of the reigning emperor, Tai-Tsing, and the latter encouraged the spread of Christianity in his empire, built churches and had Chinese believers ordained as Christian priests. The tablet records this early attempt to Christianize China, part of it being in Chinese characters and part in Nestorian characters. There is given an abstract of Christian doctrine, an account of the coming of Olopeen, bringing sacred books and images, and the history of the church down to the year 780. There is also a recapitulation of these facts in eight-syllabled verse written in 781.

We invite special attention to Dr. Hazen's circular anent the Publication and Colportage Work and its needs at this time. The reminder that "the Sabbath-school missionary work has been almost entirely neglected" is worthy of serious consideration and the cause assigned points out the means to be employed to correct this wrong doing. The Church, as Dr. Hazen says, is deeply interested in the matter of progression on this line, but financial means are absolutely necessary to that end.

The great need is that the churches shall give due thought to this matter and that each church shall do something towards helping on this work. Dr. Hazen is modest in his appeals. He does not call often, and when he does the call ought to be heeded.

The Congress of Mothers which assembled last week in Washington City was a unique affair. It was composed of women of high estate, notably, but it numbered also among its members women noted for their philanthropy, and not a few women of very superior attainments and of marked ability. There was glitter and show enough to be sure, and fashion could not be ignored, but apart from all this there was real, hearty good feeling, and good sound, practical sense. They came from all over the land to discuss a subject—the proper training and rearing of children, in the broadest sense—which only mothers could properly discuss. What would a congress of men do with such a subject as that? We trust good will come of it.

The ladies did not forget to call on Mrs. Cleveland, the First Lady of the Land, and the eagerness to see her and to shake her hand led to a crushing scene.

The war in Crete seems now to be absorbing the interest which has been given Armenian matters and even Cuban affairs, so much nearer home. The Powers as usual disagree what action to take. Great Britain, France and Italy approve the action of Greece in working for annexation of Crete to that country. Germany is so averse to this as to desire the entire evacuation of the island by the Grecian troops. Russia is sphynxlike in her attitude and Austria's position is not clear.

Our thanks are due to Rev. Wm. C. Buchanan of Nagoya for a copy of the Nineteenth Report of the Council of Missions, co-operating with the Church of Christ in Japan. The Missions represented are the Reformed Church of America, United Presbyterian Church of Scotland, Presbyterian Church, North and South, Reformed Church in the United States, and Woman's Union Missionary Society. There are one hundred and fifty missionaries in all, twenty-six of whom are from our Southern Church, and Miss Isabella Leete, of Tokyo, is from our own State though working in connection with the Northern Assembly.

We note with pleasure the translation of religious works and the Child's Catechism into Japanese, the educational facilities for young men and women, the kindergarten, and the forward movement in evangelization. Although discouragements are given, and some are very real, yet the work is going bravely on and to quote Rev. M. Pieters' reply to the statement that dynamite was needed to move the people, "the work now being accomplished is like tunneling the rock and storing the dynamite within it. When the Master sees that the preparatory work has been sufficiently done, we may look for that electric current of Divine power that will rend to pieces the infidelity and heathenism of this land."

We have been requested to publish from one of our contemporaries, an article which will explain some miapprehensions of fact regarding the "Union Seminary Buildings." The article will appear as soon as practicable.

THE WALDENSES AND FEBRUARY SEVENTEENTH.

The 17th of February is a memorable day in the history of the Vaudois. It is called by them Emancipation-Day. It is the birth-day of liberty; the day of their emancipation from a thraldom which had lasted for centuries. On Feb. 17th, 1848, Charles Albert of Savoy, the grandfather of the present King of Italy, issued "letters patent" granting to the Vaudois" an equality of civil rights with his other subjects and free toleration in matters of religious difference." Thus ended the persecutions of centuries, and the day of emancipation, so ardently desired, so long retarded, dawned at last. This day is to the Waldenses what the 4th of July is to Americans, and in the Valleys of the Piedmont is celebrated very much after the same manner, by bonfires and illuminations, processions and speech-making. Exercises appropriate to the day are held in their schools, and the story of the struggles of their fathers in behalf of religious freedom is recounted, and the children are assiduously taught to revere their memories and emulate their virtues. After these exercises the children form in procession and march through the streets of their villages, bearing the banner of the Church. (This is a square flag, imprinted with the motto, "Lux lucet in tenebris," underneath seven stars, the picture of an open Bible with a lighted candle resting upon it, and below the words "Eglise Evangelique Vaudois.") Each child is usually presented with a small pamphlet, specially prepared every year, containing the story, briefly told, of the persecutions endured for centuries and of their final emancipation by Charles Albert.

It was a happy inspiration, it seems to the writer, which led the Rev. Barth. Soulier, the pastor of the Waldensian Colony at Valdese, N. C., to choose this day, Feb. 17th, as the time for the laying of the corner-stone of the commodious new church to be erected at Valdese, and hereafter to be known, for reasons which will appear, as the "Bethany Waldensian Church." It is significant of a purpose, doubtless, to make this sacred building the place for the inculcation of that pure religious faith and the maintenance of those principles, for which their fathers contended for centuries, and for which they suffered often cruel martyrdom-principles taught their ancestors in the Valleys of the Piedmont by Apostles themselves. It was a great day at Valdese. The colonists were out in large numbers, men, women and children in holiday attire. I doubt if a single Waldensian was absent. A goodly number of the neighbors from the region round about was present. A dozen or more friends of the colony from Morganton were there to express their interest and sympathy. Bethany church, Philadelphia (popularly known as Mr. Wanamaker's church) was represented by two of its members. They came to bring greetings from the church they represented, to assure the colonists of Mr. Wanamaker's continued interest in their welfare, and as the bearers of two checks, $100 each, one from Mr. Wanamaker personally and the other from his church. The colonists expressed their appreciation of the liberal gift by adding the name "Bethany" to that by which they have been hitherto known. The religious exercises in connection with the laying of the corner stone were peculiarly interesting. The music (and the music was quite a feature in the exercises) was peculiarly sweet, conducted by a choir of some thirty or forty voices. The songs the Waldensians sing are usually strange to us, but occasionally one hears a familiar air. Their voices are very plaintive and sweet. All sing and seem to find great pleasure in this part of the service.

Brief and appropriate addresses were made by the Waldensian pastor, by the gentlemen from Philadelphia, and by the Pastor.

The day was everything one could wish, bright and pleasant and spring-like. And a happy day it was to the Waldensians!

David's thirst for God. PSALMS. He praiseth God for his grace.

10 Trust not in oppression, and become not vain in robbery: if riches increase, set not your heart upon them.
11 God hath spoken [b] once; twice have I heard this; that [c] power belongeth unto God.
12 Also unto thee, O Lord, belongeth mercy: for [d] thou renderest to every man according to his work.

PSALM 63.

1 David's thirst for God. 4 His manner of blessing God.
A Psalm of David, [a] when he was in the wilderness of Judah.

O GOD, thou art my God; early will I seek thee: [e] my soul thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and [f] thirsty land, [g] where no water is;
2 To see [h] thy power and thy glory, so as I have seen thee in the sanctuary.
3 Because thy lovingkindness is better than life, my lips shall praise thee.
4 Thus will I bless thee while I live: I will lift up my hands in thy name.
5 My soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness; and my mouth praiseth thee with joyful lips:
6 When I remember thee upon my bed, and meditate on thee in the [i] watches.
7 Because thou hast been my help, therefore in the shadow of thy wings will I rejoice.
8 My soul followeth hard after thee: thy right hand upholdeth me.
9 But those that seek my soul, to destroy it, shall go into the lower parts of the earth.
10 They shall fall by the power of the sword: they shall be a portion for foxes.
11 But the king shall rejoice in God; every one that sweareth by him shall glory: but the mouth of them that speak lies shall be stopped.

PSALM 65.

1 David praiseth God for his grace. 4 The blessedness of God's chosen by reason of benefits.
To the chief Musician, A Psalm and Song of David.

6 They search out iniquities; [j] they accomplish [k] a diligent search: both the inward thought of every one of them, and the heart, is deep.
7 But God shall shoot at them with an arrow; suddenly [l] shall they be wounded.
8 So they shall make their own tongue to fall upon themselves: [m] all that see them shall flee away.
9 And all men shall fear, and shall [n] declare the work of God; for they shall wisely consider of his doing.
10 The righteous shall be glad in the LORD, and shall trust in him; and all the upright in heart shall glory.

REV. ANDREW MC MILLAN.

Rev. Andrew McMillan departed this life at his residence in Richmond county on the 8th inst., in the 83d year of his age. For several months previous to his death he had been suffering more or less from spinal disease. But recognizing his afflictions as being ordered by the hand of the great loving Father, and as being sent by Him in faithfulness, he bore his affliction with much cheerfulness and submission of spirit. Even while the failing body was groaning under the burden of disease, he was frequently singing and praising God, and making melody in his heart unto the Lord.

On the day of his death he seemed perfectly conscious that the time of his departure was at hand; only a few minutes before the dissolution came his daughter read to him one of his favorite Psalms, the 103d—he then with utmost calmness and composure, made some comments on the Scripture read, and giving his parting blessing, presently remarked, "My time is up," and closing his eyes, he quietly fell asleep in Jesus.

"Asleep in Jesus! blessed sleep!
From which none ever wakes to weep!
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the last of foes!"

This brother died in the same vicinity in which he was born and reared, so his mortal remains were laid in the same cemetery where sleeps the dust of his parents, brothers and sisters of a large family of children, but one now survive, an aged sister ver[illegible] on her fourscore years, and l[illegible]g forward with pleasant anticipations to the time when she shall in the home above join the loved ones who have gone before.

The subject of this notice was born in Richmond county, N. C., June 1st, 1814. He in early youth connected himself with Laurel Hill Presbyterian church. When seventeen years of age, and during an attack of typhoid fever he felt that he was called of God to preach the Gospel. According to his own testimony this call came to him in a night vision, and next morning his fever was abated, and he continued to improve rapidly until fully restored. He prepared for college and entered Chapel Hill whence he graduated in 1840, and afterward went to Union Seminary, Va., where he completed his theological course, and was licensed to preach by Fayetteville Presbytery, April 13th, 1844. For sometime he served some churches in the eastern part of the Presbytery (now included in Wilmington Presbytery.)

In 1846 he served Laurel Hill as stated supply and for a number of years, as teacher, he kept up a prosperous school in the bounds of the congregation. Several of the members of this church now in declining years were his pupils, and some of them not only recollect how thorough he was in his teaching, but also very distinctly recollect his energy, and thoroughness in the use of the rod, when he thought its application was needed.

In 1856 he removed to Alabama where he spent five years in teaching and preaching; there he found her who was to be his help-meet for the remainder of life, who like himself was a thorough and successful teacher. She still survives him, but in much feebleness of body because of disease, and much distress of mind because of the sore bereavement that has befallen her.

After leaving Alabama he returned to the place of his nativity, and for a time was engaged in teaching at Laurel Hill, and also preaching as he had opportunity. From thence he removed to Rockingham (the county seat of his native county) there he and his wife opened a school which they carried on with a good degree of success for several years. On leaving Rockingham he removed to Marlboro county, S. C., where he taught for one year. From there he and his family returned to the old home, where the remainder of his long life has been spent, and during which time he was engaged in the work of the Master in the way of preaching to vacant churches within his reach or in doing other religious work that opened up before him.

For a length of time he served as stated supply the churches of Marks Creek, Elerbe Springs and Mount Carmel. His service to these churches was mainly a labor of love, as he received for service, rendered often through much self-denial, comparatively little compensation of a pecuniary character.

In his closing years he did a good work in preaching to the colored people in his neighborhood, and evidence of their respect for him, and of their appreciation, was manifest on the day of his burial, in that an unusually large number of them attended the funeral services. Much might be written in commendation of the character and work of this "good and faithful servant of God, but we must forbear. In his death the last of "the old land marks" of Fa[illegible]etteville Presbytery has been removed. May the Lord call forth other laborers into His vineyard to take the places of those who are being called to their reward.

LETTER FROM NEW YORK.

DEAR PRESBYTERIAN:—The series of meetings in Carnegie Hall, just closed have had a very happy significance. They have clearly shown that the love of God's Word and true spirituality of mind and heart, have by no means died out in New York city.

The single fact that such immense audiences should be assembled to hear such a man as Rev. F. B. Meyer, and that they should so gather day after day, morning and afternoon, for nearly a whole week, shows a very wholesome relish for spiritual things.

The building will hold, I believe, about three thousand people, perhaps more, and with the exception of the fourth gallery, it was filled at every meeting, and this gallery also was filled on several occasions.

The singing was well conducted by Mr. J. H. Burke. Occasionally he would request the great choir to sing the hymn, and the rest of the congregation to join in the chorus. Sometimes those on the floor would sing and those in the galleries respond with the chorus, or vice versa. And then the whole great congregration would join in the final chorus. Probably the antiphonal singing of the ancient Hebrews, in the temple service, was of a similar character. It was certainly very delightful, inspiring and impressive.

At times there was a very solemn stillness throughout the great hall, so that one "might hear a pin drop," and occasionally though very rarely so, there was quite a ripple of innocent and holy mirth. But oh how different from that "laughter of fools," which is "like the crackling of thorns under a pot."

Every one seemed to feel that God was with us, and unfolding to us "great things out of his law," yea even "the deep things of God." And we all felt that we were "sitting together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." Christ was continually held up and exalted, the power of His cross was shown, and our absolute dependence upon His Holy Spirit.

On Thursday, immediately after the afternoon service, another meeting was held for ministers alone, in the Central Presbyterian church. (Dr. Merle Smith's) near by, and the body of the church was filled with about three or four hundred. Mr. Meyer spoke very pleasantly and even affectionately, earnestly thanking the brethren for their kind and loving reception of him, and then with great wisdom and promptness, answering the various questions proposed on various points of doctrine.

I shall not attempt any resume of his teachings which are so widely known, but will remark that his ten lectures are to be published in full in the New York Witness and Sabbath Readings, and afterwards in book form, half of the profits going to Mr. Moody's work at Northfield and half to Mr. Meyer's institutional work among the poor of London.

ONE OF HIS BRETHREN.

For some years it has been the custom of the Earnest Workers' Society at Charlottesville, Va., to send a box to some Home Missionary every year, while all the money they make is by the constitution of their society, pledged to Foreign Missions.

Two years ago they sent their box to a minister in one of our frontier States, who was struggling to support six people on $300 a year. The letters from his wife at that time gave such a vivid picture of that home of self-denial for Christ's sake, of their dire need (this in answer only to definite questions), of their cheerful uncomplaining faith, and the overflowing thankfulness for the help sent, that the ladies of the society felt personally drawn to these dear people, and with Dr. Craig's approval sent the box this past December to them again. In response to their request for definite information, they learned these facts.

A family of six, with a salary now reduced to $8, eight dollars a month. The father, an educated man, an ordained minister: the mother a refined intelligent woman, as her letters show: both delicate, of consumptive families: the children frail, one lately threatened with pneumonia. The mother does all her household work. Last summer the minister taught the public school six miles away, and made $35 a month. He could have had the same school now in its winter session, but with "his bad cough" he cannot ride back and forth in bad weather: to live near the school, he would have to give up the little flock that look to him as shepherd, so he stands to his post heroically.

If something is not done, they will starve: they can hardly keep up their table, though they live hard. No wonder health fails when proper food is wanting. Nor is this the worst. With a sensitive, honest man's horror of debt, he has gotten behind with his store account $40, and this $40, with his inability to pay, might as well be $400.

They are full of gratitude to their people who "do the very best they can." Teachers give tuition and music lessons; at Christmas, a merchant gave them $12 on their store account, "and he could not afford it." The loss in their income must be because the Home Mission treasury has failed, and that because "God's people forget."

Let us try to do better. And to begin will you not give something to remove this burden of debt from this patient uncomplaining servant of our Master? Send a dollar or more or a dime. Miss Eva Harris, 412 West Main St., Charlottesville, Va., will gladly receive and forward.

"Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ."

EXTRACTS FROM MISS CLAUDE GRIER'S LETTERS.

Kobe, Japan, Jan. 4th, 1897.

I had thought that the steamer sailing on the 7th would carry home a letter from "Tokushima," but here I am with the McAlpines who gave me such a warm welcome on the 31st of December. I am detained here by the absence of Miss Patton from Tokushima—she being here attending examinations on the language. Missionaries are required to stand examinations at the end of first and second years. So you see there is work ahead of me.

I sent letters from Yohohama telling of our delightful day's rest there. The others of the party were so charmed with Japan I think they would all be glad to be in my place, and all said our first day here was a good omen for me; an earnest of the sweetness and brightness I am to find in my life here. I found six letters awaiting me at Yohohama and the missionaries extended to me a most cordial welcome. * * * I find my outfit entirely suitable. Kobe is no colder than Charlotte. Foreigners burn coal, but their grates are too small. Tokushima is eight hours by boat from here and we go there on Saturday. * * * I find but little that is strange to me. I must have a vivid imagination, for the street scenes are perfectfully natural to me. When I saw the jinricksha men, darting about with their two wheeled vehicles, the women with their queer wooden shoes, shiny black eyes and hair, with their babies tied on their backs I said, "Well, this is just what I expected." Indeed, nothing could be better represented in pictures than Japanese scenes are.

Tokushima, Japan, Jan. 16th, '97.

I found on my arrival at my new home here, letters from you all, and several NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIANS and Charlotte Observers. You can imagine how eagerly I devoured all, when you hear that I have heard nothing from home since Nov. 26th, at Tacoma.

Well, I really do live in a Japanese house. We reached here Saturday a. m., stopped in the entry to take off our shoes before entering our own house, leaving the shoes in a drawer by the street door. We pushed back the sliding paper door and entered the tiny front hall. Then the sweet young Bible woman Maria San stood all smiles to welcome us, and while we got into our cloth slippers (had mine made at Kobe of wool cloth with leather soles,) I had time to observe the decorations in our house. Over the door the words "welcome" in large letters, and bushes of ferns and holly on every side. On the walls of the dining-room, which is only the other end of the hall, hung a large card-board with the words, "How shall they preach except they be sent? and it is written how beautiful are the feet of those that preach the Gospel of peace and bring tidings of good things." The English was poor and must have cost the dear girl much labor. Was it not a sweet welcome for me.

"I CANNOT BEAR IT."

She had borne up under the "waves and billows" of sorrow, to the surprise of all who heard not, as she heard, "It is I, be not afraid." But one day she seemed alone in her grief. The voice of the Comforter had such a far-off sound, that her heart did not respond as was its wont, "Even so, Father," but instead, thinking of herself alone, she cried in bitterness of soul.

"I cannot bear it! I cannot!"

And burying her face in her hands, she sobbed aloud. But presently she felt an arm about her neck, and heard in loving tone: "I'm sorry for you, auntie.

The unexpected words of sympathy increased the sobs, for a time, and then half ashamed that the child, above all others, should have seen her so overcome, she tried to smile, through her tears, saying:

"I am weak to-day, darling, but it seems to me as if I cannot bear my grief any longer."

The child, evidently at a loss for words, lovingly patted the tear-stained face, a moment, and then she picked up a tiny, rubber band, through which she put her little hands, and childlike, stretched it back and forth, until a happy thought seemed to strike her, and sweetly:

"See, auntie, how I do with the rubber. I stretch it until I see it won't bear any more, without breaking, and then I let up on it. Say, don't you think, auntie, God does—does that way with, with folks?

The homely illustration was surely heaven sent, for to the grief-stricken one it sent home the half-forgotten words, "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it." And drinking in the sweet comfort of it, she said, with glad tears in her eyes:

"There is a 'let up,' to my grief now, dear, too, for through you the Comforter has reminded me of a way of escape."—Helena H. Thomas, in New York Observer.

If frankness, loyalty and honor ought to reign anywhere, it is in the hearts of the children of the Gospel that they should find their refuge and their seat of empire. — Le Courtier.

MAGAZINES.

The current number of The Eclectic Magazine of Foreign Literature contains eighteen excellent papers on science, arts, history, politics, and various topics of the day, with several interesting bits of fiction. The leading article bears the suggestive title "The Progress of Mankind," and is a sort of historical and sociological review, which is of timely interest thus early in the year. Chief among political papers is Mr. Sidney Low's discussion of "The Olney Doctrine and America's New Foreign Policy," reprinted from the Nineteenth Century. "Journalism as a Profession," and "The Selling of Books" are two incisive articles of similar nature, and to those readers who enjoy half historical, half reflective, but bright essays, there is pleasure in store with four numbers: "The Memories of St. James Square." "Tyburn Tree," "Sir Philip Sidney and His Friend Languet," and "Llanthony Abbey and Two of its Priors." Sketches of foreign customs include "A Shinto Funeral" and "Secret Societies in China." After the four very good short stories and an amusing essayette "Concerning Tea," a mention of Karl Blind's weighty article "On Turkey" may seem out of place, but is important. The number, with its varied selections from the best foreign periodicals, illustrates the claim of the magazine to be a small library in itself.

Albert Barbieux, who died the other day in Paris, was one of the companions of Victor Hugo, when he was exiled from France in 1851, but, unlike Hugo, he took advantage of the amnesty that was granted after the war with Italy, and returned to France. In 1870, during the siege of Paris, he was commandant of a battalion of the national guard of the fifth arondissement. Arrested in 1871, after the commune, he was brought before a court martial and condemned to pay a fine of 1,000 francs.

Robert Louis Stevenson told a Washington writer that his story of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" had for its foundation an incident related to him by a London doctor who made diseases of the brain a specialty. None of his work was absolute fiction, and most of it had a basis in actual experience. "I do not believe," he said, "that any man ever evolved a really good story from his inner consciousness unaided by some personal experience or incident of life." —New York World.

As Irving was the first American author whose writings won favor outside of his native land, so another New Yorker, James Fenimore Cooper, was the first American author whose works gained a wide circulation outside of his native tongue. While the "Sketch Book" was as popular in Great Britain as in the United States, the "Spy" and the "Pilot" and the "Last of the Mohicans" were as popular on the continent of Europe as they were in America, North and South. To the French and the Germans, to the Italians and the Spaniards, James Fenimore Cooper is as well known as Walter Scott. Irving was the first American writer of short stories, but Cooper was the first American novelist; and, to the present day, he is the one American novelist whose fame is solidly established among foreigners. Brander Matthews in An Introduction to American Literature.

Queen Elizabeth of Roumania, "Carmen Sylva," is said to be the only living author who has written verse in four languages—Rumanian, German, Swedish and English. Her latest work is a libretto in French on a Turkish plot for an opera by Massenet.

CHANGES OF ADDRESS.

Correspondents will please note the following changes of address:

Rev. J. G. Anderson, from Millersburg, Ky., to No. 312 Sixth Ave., Tampa, Fla.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Bethany Waldensian Church:—an interesting article entitled "The Waldenses and February 17th" appears on third page.

Immanuel Church, Wilmington:—At the Sunday service two young boys decided for Christ. Our members are getting down to good work. Sunday-school is increasing. Eleven committees are at work in the Christian Endeavor Society. Six new members to join next Wednesday night. Rev. B. E. Wallace, pastor.

McAden League:—The monthly meeting of the League was held in the First Presbyterian church on Thursday evening last. Mr. Henry Farrior, of Kenansville, was present and gave a most encouraging report of the work being done by Rev. R. V. Lancaster in the Duplin field. Mr. Lancaster in addition to his regular services, preaches once each month at the County Home and has made arrangements for weekly services to be held at that place.

Rockingham:—Rev. Wm. Black, Synodical evangelist, closed a series of meetings lasting ten days at Rockingham, Feb. 16th. All the denominations co-operated and seemed to have received great benefit. The good effects of Bro. Black's plain, earnest, and forcible preaching were seen the following Sabbath in the increased attendance at church and Sunday-school. The universal sentiment is that it is the most genuine awakening the community has had for years. Fifteen have been received into the Presbyterian church. The Methodists have received five and the Baptists one. Other accessions are expected at Rockingham, while some will join the churches in the suburban factory village, where we also have an organization.

Elkin:—We see by the News Observer that Messrs. J. H. Ball and H. F. Boney were installed elders, and Messrs. T. L. Green and Joseph Chatham, deacons, on Sunday, the 14th inst. This church is in charge of Evangelist C W. Robinson.

Fayetteville Presbytery:—Met in called session on the 9th and granted permission to Rev. C. H. Dobbs, Jr., and Rev. H. T. Graham to labor in its bounds until the spring meeting. Mr. Graham is to work in the bounds of Fayetteville and Sherwood churches and Mr. Dobbs is to supply Carthage church Rev. A. J. McKelway tendered his resignation as chairman of the evangelistic committee and it was not accepted. D.

Orange Presbytery:—At a called meeting of Orange Presbytery, held in the First church, Greensboro, N. C., Feb. 17th, inst., the place for the regular spring meeting of Presbytery was changed from Durham to High Point. Presbytery will convene in High Point, April 27th, 1897, instead of Durham. The pastoral relation existing between Rev. M. McG. Shields and the Burlington church was dissolved, and Mr. Shields was granted a certificate to unite with the Presbytery of Mecklenburg.

Mr. Shield's resignation of the chairmanship of the committee of Home Missions was accepted to take effect the 1st of April, in order that Bro Shields may complete and formulate the report on Home Missions for the year ending April 1st, 1897.

The Presbytery parts with Bro. Shields with great reluctance, and with a deep sense of his valuable service, as a member of the Presbytery, and success as a pastor. CLERK.

VIRGINIA.

Fredericksburg:—Rev. B. W. Webane writes: We have had a fine meeting in our church. Rev. F.P. Ramsay assisted the pastor and preached with great power. There were seven accessions to the church last Sabbath, and others will follow.

Smithville:—The churches of Rev. W. McC. Miller in Charlotte county have been in a revived state since the hearty observance of "the week of prayer." This is one more testimony to the efficacy of true united prayer, where this mark of the Apostolic Church soon after the ascension is present, the other marks of that great revival in the church will not long be wanting.

FLORIDA.

Tampa:—The Rev. J. G. Anderson lately of Millersburg, Ky., has just taken charge of the First Presbyterian church at this place. The people of his charge have given him a hearty welcome, and he begins his labors under circumstances that augur well for the future of the church here.

ALABAMA.

Death of Rev. W. A. Milner:—Rev. W.A. Milner died in Summerville, Ala., on Friday, 12th inst. For some weeks previous to his death, he had been suffering from nervous prostration from overwork. For a quarter century he had been the beloved pastor of the Presbyterian church at Summerville. He was fifty-one years of age. He leaves a wife and two children.

TEXAS.

Dallas:—Thirty-one persons were recently received into the First church.

Anna:—Rev. C. L. Ewing, evangelist, recently organized a church here with fourteen members. Messrs. T.W. Greer and J. M. Robinson were elected elders and Mr. J. F. Greer, deacon.

LOUISIANA.

Chinese Mission, New Orleans:—The Southwestern Presbyterian states that the new year celebration was very pleasant and successful. The Sabbath evening service was conducted by Rev. Dr. Nall, assisted by Dr. Palmer. The program on Monday evening consisted of Scripture reading by the scholars, an address and prayer after which a bountiful supper was served. The evening closed with fireworks. Four scholars of this mission recently united with the Canal Street church.

GENERAL.

The one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Mary Lyon, on February 28th, 1797, will be taken advantage of by the Alumnæ Association of Mt. Holyoke College to interest the friends of that college by securing subscriptions, and by church collections to raise a fund to make good to some extent the loss by fire which destroyed their main building. The new building is to bear the name of Mary Lyon; and the institution, which deserves all the help it can receive, now claims for itself the name of "the "Mother of Colleges."—Independent.

Mrs Ballington Booth co-commander of the American volunteers spoke in Baltimore on the 17th inst., at Brown Memorial Presbyterian church and the Mt. Vernon Methodist church. Mrs. Booth stated that though the volunteers were not yet a year old they had four hundred commissioned commanders and a staff of from fifty to sixty active workers with local posts in two hundred cities in the United States.

The Pearson's fund for the endowmen of Colorado College amounts to $200,000 Dr. Pearsons recently gave $50,000 as the pledge for that sum, should the friends of the college raise $150,000. The growth of the college in the past three years has been remarkable, and the educational interests of Colorado greatly enhanced.

Dr. T. H. Law recently visited Durham, N. C., in the interest of the American Bible Society. The meeting which was held in the Presbyterian church was composed of the different denominations of the city. Mr. Jas. H. Southgate, president of the Durham County Bible Society, presiding. The sum of $80.05 was contributed to this cause.

Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D., of Brooklyn, N. Y., has accepted an invitation to preach the baccalaureate sermon at Roanoke College, Va., on Sunday, June 13th.

PERSONALS.

Rev. G. H. Cornelson, of Malvern, Ark., writes: We are looking forward and praying for our meeting in March. The pastor of the First church, Little Rock, will be with us.

The announcement that Dr. E. A. Alderman, of Chapel Hill, would deliver the annual address of the Westminster League of the First church, Wilmington, was received with much pleasure. The services will be held some Sunday evening during March, not yet decided upon.

Rev. Robt. H. Taylor, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, Baltimore, was married on the 17th inst., to Miss Annie Lee Moore, of Fayetteville, N C.

On the same date Rev Byron C. Clark, formerly of Clarkton, N. C., now of Mt. Washington, Maryland, was married to Miss Maria Edith Oldham, of Accomac Court House, Va. Our best wishes are extended.

Rev. S. H. Spencer and family formerly of Brazil, Tenn., are spending sometime at Morven, N. C. On account of ill health Mr. Spencer's physician has advised rest. May he be speedily restored that he may be about the Master's business.

We exceedingly regret to hear of the ill health of Rev. J. W. Johnston, of Aberdeen. May the remedies used prove effectual under the blessing of God for his complete restoration to health.

Rev. Chas. C. Weaver, of Ripley, Tenn., is serving the church at Cameron Texas.

Rev. J. B. Gordon has been called to Beulah church, near Louisville, Ky., for half his time.

Rev. J. W. Heagan is serving the Sweet Home church, Ark. This church is a mission of the First church, Little Rock.

Rev. L. M. Fleming, of the Louisville Seminary has been asked to serve the Lubbock St. church, Houston, Texas, where he labored last summer.

Rev. F. P. Ramsay, of Kentucky, but lately supplying the Independent church of Savannah, is at present with the Prytania St., church, New Orleans.

The Southwestern Presbyterian gives a full account of the work of Rev. Dr. W. D. Morton for the month of December under the heading Evangelistic Work in Red River Presbytery. This section has suffered seriously by the drought, but the Spirit of Christ was manifest and many were brought into the Church of God.

Rev. John L. Allison, of Portsmouth, Va., has accepted the call to Westminster church, Baltimore. Mr. Allison is a Virginian by birth and a graduate of Clarksville Seminary.

Rev. T. Freeman Dixon, of Towson, Baltimore county, Md., has been called to the pastorate of the church at Frederick, Md.

ERRATA.

We are requested by the author of the article "Cases without Process" (Rev. E. Daniel), in the Union Seminary Magazine for January-February, to insert the following corrections:

THE ASSEMBLY'S PROGRAMME.

The last General Assembly appointed an ad interim Committee to prepare a programme of commemorative exercises, and to select speakers for the celebration, during the next Assembly in Charlotte, N. C., of the 250th anniversary of the formulation of the Westminster symbols of doctrine. This committee consisted of Rev. J. Henry Smith, D. D., chairman; F R Beatie, D D., W M McPheeters, D D., T C Johnston, D D., W A Alexander, D D, and John A. Preston, D D.

Dr. Preston died a few weeks after the appointment, the other members of the committee performed the duty assigned them, and we have the pleasure now of giving the programme to our readers:

FOREIGN MISSIONS IN FAYETTEVILLE PRESBYTERY.

Last year all of our seventy seven churches reported a collection for Foreign Missions except two. This result easily made Fayetteville the banner Presbytery in the Synod, if not in the General Assembly, as to the number and proportion of churches contributing to this cause. We are proud of this result, but we are not satisfied with it. We hope to report to the spring meeting of Presbytery that all our seventy-eight churches without any exception have contributed to Foreign Missions this year. And this will we do if every minister, every church session, and every Missionary Society in the Presbytery will see to it that a collection is taken and forwarded in time to reach our Treasurer, Mr. J. A. McAlister, Lumberton, N. C., before the first of April Then you will have a share in this glorious work, the Savior's benediction will rest upon you, and we will greatly rejoice.

SOMETHING MUST BE DONE!

DEAR FRIENDS:—In order to remove a debt overhanging the Academical and Industrial Institute, the Synod of North Carolina at its late meeting in Newbern recommended that one third of December collection for Colored Evangelization in the Synod be retained and sent to Mr. G. W. Watts, of Durham, N. C. its treasurer. Now after a lapse of nearly two months it appears that only about $70 has reached the treasurer,

The collection has been taken and the money, doubtless, lies idly in the several treasuries, while the Institute creditors have grown impatient waiting for their money. The Committee at Birmingham has declined to aid us, possibly because of the Synod's action. It further appears that our Northern friends will not do much for us at this season because of debt in their work and the innumerable host of idle men, women and children to be fed daily while the mills and factories stand with closed doors.

Brethren something must be done and that early or the Institute property comprising fifteen acres of land with school and other buildings, whose value approximated $2,000, will pass into the sheriff's hands. Just think of it with more than forty young men and women all of whom are promising and doing well, cheerful and ambitious, eagerly desiring to improve themselves for usefulness, being thus closed out. The building of the Institute has been done by the sacrifice and self-denial that its superintendent has undergone, envolving more than $100 out of his small salary, a stipend for his service as minister of the Gospel, together with his household furniture, &c. Shall we lose this property? Mr. J. M. Rogers, of Winston, N. C., will receive and receipt for all monies while Mr. Watts is abroad. Prayers and help are earnestly begged.

DR. CAMPBELL'S LABORS FOR PEACE.

The Rev. William A. Campbell, D. D., before his removal to Richmond, in 1887, and while he was a resident in Fredericksburg, Va., began to agitate the question of the churches of the world uniting in a petition to the Powers in the interest of arbitration. He conferred with Hon. J. L. Marye, in Fredericksburg, and with prominent men elsewhere, as he had opportunity, all agreeing that it would be a good thing, with but few encouraging him to look for any practical result of such a movement. It was believed that the nations were too jealous of each other, and many of them too eager for conquest, to agree to that which would put them under obligation to seek only for the ends of justice in international affairs.

Dr. Campbell, however, was not discouraged, and after his removal to Richmond, in 1887, he continued to agitate the question of arbitration.

It was during a serious illness in the spring of 1890 that he wrote an address to be sent to all ecclesiastical bodies throughout the world, begging them to appoint committees to unite in a movement, the object of which was to present through influential persons in each country, a formal petition for the abolishment of war and the settlement of all disputes by arbitration. Just at this time, Mr. J. B. Wood, an officer of the Christian Arbitration and Peace Society, located in Philadelphia, made him a visit and encouraged him to go forward in his wise scheme. Dr. Campbell read his paper to a few intimate friends in Richmond, and at a meeting of the Presbyterian Ministers' Association it was first made public. This was in April of 1890.

In May of the same year Dr. Campbell presented his scheme in the form of an overture to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, South, at Asheville, N. C., and that body unanimously adopted his address to the churches of Christendom. After a premable referring to the evils of war, the paper reads: "We, therefore, ask you to join us in petitioning all the governments of Christian countries to take measures to banish warfare as the means of settling the strifes that arise between nations, and to substitute a more rational and Christian tribunal." All Christian churches were invited to appoint delegates to meet at a time and place to be determined afterwards, to carry out the purposes of the movement, Dr. Campbell and Rev. Moses D. Hoge, D. D., were appointed delegates to the meeting to be held, and a committee, consisting of Dr. Campbell (as chairman) and Drs. Hoge and Kerr, and Mr. M. M. Gilliam was authorized to secure the holding of the conference at such time and place as might be decided upon. Shortly after this a public meeting was held in Richmond in the Second Presbyterian church, by which meeting Dr. Campbell was appointed to attend a general peace congress in London the same year. This he did, and presented there the ecclesiastical branch of the movement, upon which he had been so long engaged.

In New York in 1891 a meeting of delegates from ecclesiastical bodies was held, having been worked up most laboriously by Dr. Campbell. At this meeting he made an earnest address. Speeches were also made by Rev. M. D. Hoge, D. D., Rev. John Hall, D. D., and others.

In August, 1893, by Dr. Campbell's efforts, a similar meeting was secured in Chicago. In 1895, by invitation, he delivered an address before the convention of the Christian Arbitration and Peace Society at Ocean Grove, N. J., on the ecclesiastical branch of the work.

During all these years, since the movement was undertaken, Dr. Campbell labored with incessant zeal, and without any salary, but at considerable expense of money and a great deal time, to carry his project to a successful issue. Rev. Dr. Paul Menzel, of this city, rendered valuable assistance in making translations of the address to the churches into several of the languages of Europe, and others gave what aid they could, but the burden of the work rested upon Dr. Campbell, and the correspondence with representative men throughout the world would have been sufficient to employ the whole time of a less systematic and energetic man. The address and petition were translated into the languages of thirty-two different countries, and were brought before the representatives of all of the great churches of Christendom. Catholics and members of the Greek Church as well as Protestant bodies everywhere, were induced to join in the undertaking, and signed the petition. Cardinal Gibbons signed for the Catholic Church of America.

This original and novel idea of a petition to the Powers from all churches owed its origin to Dr. Campbell, and it is believed has been productive of great results, doing more, perhaps, than any other agency to create a public sentiment in favor of arbitration, and to cause the preparation of the treaty between Great Britain and the United States, which is now the subject of so much rejoicing and hope among the people of the world, and which promises to lead to similar treaties between other nations looking to the prevention of war.

Dr. Campbell did not live to see his labors crowned with the honor of this present splendid achievement, but the great work he inaugurated and established goes on, and Richmond is glad to have been the city in which the plan was first made public, and from which it was promulgated throughout Christendom.

COLLECTION FOR PUBLICATION AND COLPORTAGE.

Office of the Executive Committee of Publication,

Richmond, Va., Feb. 1st, 1897.

To the Pastors, Sessions and Members of the Presbyterian Church in the United States:

DEAR BRETHREN:—This letter, designed to remind you of the March collection for the cause of Publication and Colportage, is sent by us with the conviction that this cause demands at this time at your hands a more careful attention and consideration and a more generous support than it has had in the past.

Unless we have mistaken the indications, there is a growing desire in our church that more efficient measures should be devised and prosecuted for the wider distribution of our literature, and for the enlargement of our Sabbath-school work.

For years past, under the orders of the General Assembly, an attempt has been made to carry on the work of colportage, and in view of our limited means much has been accomplished; but one feature of that work as originally designed, viz, the Sabbath-school missionary work, has been almost entirely neglected, for the simple reason that the Church has failed to contribute adequate means to enable us to do it.

In the last Assembly this subject received much attention, and measures were taken to put this part of the work on a better footing; and while the way has not seemed clear to carry these measures into effect, the fact remains that a large portion of our Church is deeply interested in the matter, and earnestly desires to see this work prosecuted in some way; but whatever plan may be devised for the accomplishment of the purpose, nothing efficient can be done unless the means are provided with which to do it. It is useless to make new plans, to provide new agencies, or to give instruction to the agencies already provided, unless there is a marked increase in the contributions to this cause. When the funds necessary are provided we can prosecute the work, either by measures that have already been devised or by such others as may seem expedient.

The last General Assembly directed that an earnest effort be made the present year to raise the sum of $20,000 for this cause, and an apportionment of this amount be made among the Presbyteries. This apportionment was made and placed before the Presbyteries at their fall sessions. The ability of the Presbyteries to meet these apportionments will depend on the response of the churches. If more than one-half of the churches decline to give anything, as has been the case in the past, the amount will not be realized; but if the matter be presented and the opportunity of contributing be given in every church, there is no reason to doubt that the necessary amount will be raised.

Brethren, the whole matter is in your hands. If you devise liberal things for this cause, a great work can be done for the Master, for His church, and for the souls of men. The work is waiting. God in His providence has placed the Executive Committee in a position to do it effectively if the necessary funds are provided, but it cannot furnish them. Shall the opportunity be lost?

An adequate supply of this circular for distribution and envelopes for collection will be supplied to any church on application.

In behalf of the Executive Committee.

JAS. K. HAZEN, Secretary.

THE BEST CURE FOR WEARINESS.

There is nothing which will give a chance for rest to the overtired nerves so surely as a simple religious faith in the overruling, wise and tender Providence which has us in its keeping. It is in chafing against the conditions of our lives that we tire ourselves immeasurably. It is in being anxious about things which we cannot help that we often do the most of our spending. A simple faith in God, which practically and every moment, and not only theoretically and on Sundays, rests on the knowledge that he cares for us at least as much as we care for those who are the dearest to us, will do much to give the tired nerves the feeling of the bird in its nest. Do not spend what strength you have, like the clematis, in climbing on yourself, but lay hold on things which are eternal, and the peace of them will pass into your soul like a healing balm. Put yourself in the great, everlasting currents, and then you can rest on your oars, and let those currents bear you on their strength. — Anna C. Bracket, in Harper's Magazine.

Have you a second hand Presbyterian hymn books? Rev. C. M. Tidball one of our missionaries preaches in a union church building at Charleston, Ark. Hymn books are much needed and if any of our churches can gather up some copies of our Church or of any good Presbyterian second-hand hymn books and send him from a dozen to forty copies they will do a good deed. Probably you can form no idea as to how much good you can thus accomplish. If a number of individuals will send one or two copies each the want may be met. Not over four pounds in one package can go by mail, postage one cent for each two ounces or fractional part thereof prepaid of course. A few copies with the tunes are much desired. At once please, if at all.

First Quarter—Lesson X.

Mar. 7, 1897.—Acts viii. 26-40.

Commit to memory verses 29-31.

Subject.—The Ethiopian Convert.

Golden Text. "Then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same Scripture, and preached unto him Jesus." Acts viii: 35.

CATECHISM.

Question 29. How doth the Spirit apply to us the redemption purchased by Christ?

Answer. The Spirit applieth to us the redemption purchased by Christ by working faith in us, and thereby uniting us to Christ in our effectual calling.

Time. A. D., 37.

Place. Desert, southwest of Palestine.

INTRODUCTORY.

"Professor Stifler has pointed out that the first five chapters of Acts are almost exclusively concerning the church in Jerusalem. From the twelfth chapter onward the history is chiefly concerning the Gentile Church. The intervening chapters relate the story of the transition." Peloubet's notes. In our last lesson we studied the account of the mission of Philip, one of the seven who were elected and ordained the first deacons in the Church. He was one of "the disciples dispersed" who went everywhere preaching the Gospel. By this the martyrdom of Stephen gave proof of that later saying: "The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church."

Thus God made the wrath of man to praise Him. The first converts were in Samaria as the stepping-stone from Jew to Gentile. The present lesson gives another step in advance toward the Gentiles. The incident is a specimen only of many in the dispersion of the Christians.

Between these lessons is the case of Sin on Magus, who had practiced the arts of sorcery and had gained great influence among the people. He professed faith in Christ, but as the sequel showed not honestly; seeking the works of the Holy Ghost by the disciples he hoped to get the power so far beyond his artifice. He even supposed that it could be purchased with money and offered to buy it. This was set right and Philip proceeded to further work.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 26. The (rather an) angel of the Lord. We are told how he communicated with Philip, that one of "the ministering spirits," a real messenger bringing a real message from God, Spake to Philip; not the apostle, but the deacon "full of faith and of the Holy Ghost," as evangelist, whom we saw in our last lesson in Samaria. Toward the south. Across all the roads from Jerusalem to Gaza. Down from Jerusalem As Jerusalem was on high ground and roads would descend to the coast, and because it was customary to speak of going up to Jerusalem as the capital and vice versa. Unto Gaza. A city of the Philistines. The southern route through Hebron is as there were other roads and the one described was the way . . . . . which is desert.

Vs. 27. And he arose and went. As obeying the command, though not seeming to know why. He came into the road from Jerusalem to Gaza. A man of Ethiopia. A general term for lands south of Egypt, but now known as the kingdom of Meroe by the name of the queen Candace. A Eunuch. A chamberlain chosen as suited to watch the women's apartments in a great house. Under Candace. Not the name of an individual, but a dynasty as Pharaoh or Cæsar. Queen of Ethiopians. As in the time of Augustus and much later the kingdom of Meroe was governed by queens. Charge of her treasure, like our secretary of the treasury. Had come to Jerusalem. Using what light he had, to worship, seeking at great expense, more light. He had shown a sincere soul in accepting the truth he had and seeking more.

Vs. 28. Was returning. From Jerusalem where he must have heard of Jesus and probably did not get help to Him from the Jewish teachers whom he might have consulted. As the questions about Messiah were up he was reading the prophecy about Him in Isaiah, as he was sitting in his chariot. Esaias. The Greek form of Isaiah, as he was reading a manuscript translation into Greek, made in Alexandria and well known in Egypt.

Vs. 29. The Spirit said unto Philip. As having charge in the name of Jesus and teaching and guiding His servants, the Spirit now made known the object of sending him. As this Eunuch probably had a retinue a single traveler might join the company for safety, but the Spirit was to use him for a higher safety, even the soul's salvation of the Eunuch. And Philip. Walking or running by the side of the chariot. Heard him read. As the eastern custom is, aloud. Understandest thou? Intimating his readiness to explain.

Vs. 31. How can I do? The passage, Isa. liii: 7, 8. was a difficult one for a Jew to understand. It seemed to state impossible contradictions. Only the facts which Philip knew could solve the problem. And he desired (besought) more than merely asked.

Vs. 32. The place of the Scriptures. In the Greek version describing the suffering Messiah, seeming to contradict other descriptions as King, Counsellor, Deliverer.

Vs. 33. In his humiliation. Poverty, obscurity and sacrificial death. His judgment. The justice due him His generation. Begotten of God yet "as a root out of a dry ground" to His generation.

Vs. 34. Of whom speaketh the prophet this? Probably the point was discussed.

Vs. 35. And preached unto him Jesus. Literally "announced to him the glad tidings of Jesus."

Vs. 36. Came unto a certain water. An indefinite expression "suggesting naturally the idea of a small degree or quantity." Joseph A. Alexander. What doth hinder me to be baptized? The Eunuch asked this because in the passage he was reading was the words, 'So shall he sprinkle many nations," suggesting the ordinance, and the mode by sprinkling.

Vs. 37. If thou believest. As baptism is to be applied to believers and their children on the faith of believing parents.

Vs. 38. He baptized him. This was distinct from "going down," and "coming up," before and after baptism by sprinkling.

Vs. 39. The Eunuch went on his way rejoicing in Jesus, by the Spirit who caught Philip and took him elsewhere.

Vs. 40. But Philip was found. Came to consciousness and was recognized.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

Philip probably made the region to which the Spirit carried him, for many years the centre of His witnessing for Christ.

1. The Eunuch would also carry the news home and tell it.

2. The testimony of both was the same Jesus of Nazareth the fulfillment of the Old Testament and the consistency of Messianic prophecy.

3. The Holy Spirit makes the testimony convincing and reveals Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, March 7th, 1897.

BY REV. B. E WALLACE.

Subject:

Opportunities To Do Good:

Seeing Them Using Them Jno. 4: 5-15; 1 Cor. 9: 19-22.

Text for the week:

"Whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord and not unto men." Col. 3: 23.

Daily Readings:

Monday, Rebekah's Opportunity Gen. 24: 15-28.

Tuesday, Rahab's Opportunity, Josh. 2: 1-22.

Wednesday, David's Opportunity, 2 Samuel 9: 1-13

Thursday, David's Friends 2 Samuel 17-22-29.

Friday, Boaz and Ruth, Ruth 2: 1-17.

Saturday, The Barbarians, Acts 28 1-10.

Sunday, Topic, Jno 4: 5-15; 1 Cor, 9: 19.

Suggestions for Leaders:

1. Leader, this is YOUR OPPORTUNITY.

2. Explain the meaning of the opportunity.

3. Give every member an opportunity to speak a word for Christ in this meeting.

Notes:

This subject is opportune. Our prayer should be not for more opportunities, but that God would open our eyes to see those we have. There is no question about the first part of the Topic, "Opportunities to do good," they lie around us on every hand, but the difficulty is in seeing them and using them How can we see them?

1. Ask for heavenly light.

2. Look beyond self.

3. Study the life and work of Christ.

4 To see great opportunities begin by looking for small ones

How can we use them?

1. The occasion will usually suggest the way.

2. Lay hold upon them in the strength of the Master.

3 We must employ much tact, much prayer, much humility.

The Master, worn and weary sits down by Jacob's well, waiting for the return of his disciples who had gone to buy some meat, nourishment for the physical man. Will there be an opportunity at this time to do good? Yes, the open eye of incarnate love always sees them. The Samaritan woman comes to get water to slake her thirsting body and the Master pours into her soul the "living water."

Lessons Drawn;

1. Past opportunities can never be recalled.

2. A little word spoken or a little deed done in the name of Christ is always rewarded.

3. When the Spirit moves you to speak, or pray, or go, or stay, do not drown His voice.

As long as the devil can have the first chance at our children, he will not care how high we build our church steeples. Ram's Horn.

OPEN DOOR NOTES.

The Young Men's Christian Association of the Presbyterian High School held its annual election of officers, Sunday, Feb. 14th. The following are the officers for 1897-'98: President, A. B. Croom, Jr., Burgaw, N. C.; Vice-President, J. H. Allison, Caldwell Institute; Recording Secretary, J. A. Ratliffe, Elon College; Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer, W T. Johnson, Concord, N.C.

The Marion church of which Rev W. H. White is pastor, has in active operation a Young People's Society of about fifteen members, which meets monthly and has raised during the past year $15 or more for the Orphans' Home, and Home and Foreign Missions. Also a Ladies' Missionary Society which has twelve members and raised $60 for Home and Foreign Missions and church improvement. We are glad to hear of this excellent work among our friends in that section

The formation of a society of Christian Endeavor in Bourgas, Bulgaria, has just been reported to us by Rev. James F. Clark, a missionary of the American Board. The society was formed December 10th, 1896, under circumstances of unusual interest. It was organized by a Quaker lady who is in Bulgaria ministering to the Armenian refuges. The members of the society at the time the report was sent to us were three young men and three young women, all of whom had fled to Bulgaria to escape the sword of the Turk. The new society has started out vigorously and nobly. May these pledged Endeavorers become the nucleus of a wide-spread movement "for Christ and the Church" among these who have suffered so much for the name of the Redeemer.—Golden Rule.

The program of the Convention of East Carolina Christian Endeavorers which will meet in Faison on March 26th has been issued. Among the interesting features are papers upon Pastors' Relation to Young's Work, Rev. R. V. Lancaster, The Christian Endeavor Society in Country Churches, Foster Pridgen. The Endeavorer for Temperance, R. W. Miles, Good Citizenship, W. L. Latta, The Social Committee in Country Churches, Miss Margaret Cromatie. Our Unions, State and National, Mrs. Jackson Johnson, The Information Committee, Need and Work, J. E Smith. The Lookout Committee, Miss Bennie Williams. Good Literature in Christian Endeavor Work, Mrs. P. McIntyre. The Endeavorer as a Visitor, Miss Estelle White. Junior Work, Mrs. I. F. Hill. The Endeavorer in Missions, Mrs. B. E. Wallace. How the Endeavor Society helps the Pastor in Spiritual Work, Rev. John Wakefield. How to Conduct a Live Prayer Meeting, W. H. Sprunt. The Work of the Sunday School Committee, Miss Ida Thomson. Music will be interspersed among the exercises and special song service will be led by Rev. B. E. Wallace and Rev. A. D. McClure.

Abingdon Presbytery is adjourned to meet in Green Spring church, Washington county, Virginia, on Tuesday, before the first Sabbath in May (April 27th) at 7.30p. m.

Who disputed about the body of Moses?—Maggie Hall.

A BIBLICAL ARITHMETIC PROBLEM.

To the age of Noah when he died add the age of Isaac when he died. Divide by the number of tribes of Israel, after the division, add the number of books in the New Testament that James wrote. Divide by the number of books Paul wrote. Multiply by the year in which Jesus was baptized. Multiply by the chapter of Luke which contains the healing of the Centurion's servant. Subtract the year in which John the Baptist's coming was prophesied by Malachi. Subtract the number of apostles Paul saw. Add the chapter of Matthew which contains an account of Jesus' temptation. Add the longest psalm.

The result will be a very important year (B. C.) in the history of the children of Israel.

What was the year and what caused it to be such an important event? Also an important modern event.

CARTER.—At her home in Madison, N. C., on Feb. 17th, 1897, Mrs. Cora I Carter. She had long been a consistent member of the Presbyterian church Devotedly pious, this eminent saint entered upon the rest which remaineth to the people of God.

PHIFER.—At the home of her brother, B. F. Phifer, near Elmwood, N. C., on Jan., 18th, 1897, Miss Ziba Phifer, in the 69th year of her age. She was a consistent member of Third Creek church. One who knew her well said that it would be hard to speak in too high praise of her consistent Chritian character.

Resolutions adopted by the King's Daughters' Circle of Lumberton, in memory of Mrs. S. A. McQUEEN:

WHEREAS, Our loving Father hath of His own purpose and for His own glory taken from our Circle our sister, Mrs. S. A. McQueen to "His ain royal palace" there to dwell with Him in peace and joy, therefore be it,

Resolved 1st, That we humbly thank Him that He graciously permitted her to tarry with us so long, showing forth in her daily life what a true daughter of the King should be.

2nd, That we, remembering her faithful example, strive constantly to be active in the service of our King, ready as was she, at all times to do His will.

3rd, That we extend our sympathy to those so deeply afflicted, assuring them that they are not alone in their sorrow.

4th, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of Mrs. McQeen, that they be recorded in the minutes of our Circle, and also forwarded to the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN for publication.

GRAHAM.—Jas. C. Graham, was born Aug. 15th, 1862, and died at his home near Cleveland, N. C., Jan. 24th, 1897. In his death his aged mother lost the stay and comfort of her old age, his devoted wife and sisters lost a companion who was always loving and kind, his two little children were bereft of a father who would have guided their footsteps in the ways of truth and righteousness, and Third Creek church lost one of her most consistent members, and most zealous deacons.

He was universally esteemed. At the close of an earthly Sabbath he entered, we trust, into the Sabbath rest prepared for the people of God.

BEATTY.—On 17th inst., Mr. Hays White Beatty died at his home in Bladen county. He was born in Bladen county on May 4th, 1812, and on the paternal homestead he passed the greater part of his life. At one time he lived for some years in Wilmington, and at that time was a member of the First Presbyterian church of that city. His father Wm. H. Beatty was possessed of ample means and gave this son and his other children a good education and afforded them fine opportunities for general culture. Mr. Hays Beatty was for many years a ruling elder in Black River church, and was zealous and constant in performance of his religious duties He married twice—the first time a daughter of Dr. Benjamin Robinson, of Fayetteville and on Sept. 22d, 1853 Miss Catharine, daughter of the late Neill McLaurin, of Wilmington. He leaves besides his widow, four sons to mourn his departure. Two sons and a daughter had gone before to the heavenly inheritance.

One loaf of bread may be light, sweet and digestible. You may use the same materials for another and have it heavy, sour and soggy. The knack is in putting the ingredients together just right. A substitute for Scott's Emulsion may have the same ingredients and yet not be a perfect substitute, for no one knows how to put the parts together as we do. The secret of "how" is our business—twenty-five years of experience has taught us the best way.

HOW TO CHOOSE PAINT.

It is probable that people are cheated in the quality of paints they buy more often than in other things, because people in general know so little about them. It costs just as much time and labor to put on a paint that lasts six months, as it does one that will last five years, so every person should get the information that will enable them to choose a good quality made of pure white lead instead of a cheap adulteration in which barytes is the chief ingredient. There are about twenty-seven brands of honest white lead, and there are numberless cheats Every one who buys or uses paints can learn all about these, free of any cost whatever, if they will mention this paper and send their address on a postal-card to the National Lead Company, 1 Broadway, New York City, for a free book on the subject. They will receive some beautiful cards showing samples of colors, and pictures of twelve houses painted in different tints and combinations which will be very valuable in choosing colors to use on buildings, etc —Farm and Fireside.

FOR THE FAMILY.

AS YE WOULD.

If I could see
A brother languishing in sore distress,
And I should turn and leave him comfortless
When I might be
A messenger of hope and happiness—
How could I ask to have what I denied,
In my own hour of bitterness supplied?

If I might share
A brother's load along the dusty way,
And I should turn and walk alone that day,
How could I care—
When in the evening watch I kneel to pray—
To ask for help to bear my pain and loss,
If I had heeded not my brother's cross?

If I might sing
A little song to cheer a fainting heart—
And I should seal my lips and sit apart,
When I might bring
A bit of sunshine for life's ache and smart—
How could I hope to have my grief relieved,
If I kept silent when my brother grieved?

And so I know
That day is lost wherein I fail to lend
A helping hand to some wayfaring friend:
But if it show
A burden lightened by the cheer I send,
Then do I hold the golden hours well spent,
And lay me down to sleep in sweet content.

GREATEST VALLEY ON EARTH.

The greatest valley in the world, according to Dr. J. W. Gregory, an English explorer, is the Great Rift valley, which runs through eastern Africa 4,000 miles, "from the Lebanans almost to the cape." The Great Rift Valley" is the title of Dr. Gregory's book, which has just appeared in London, which is the newest, most comprehensive and important of the works that have appeared on this region.

One of the most fascinating portions of this record of travels is that relating to the Massai, the most ferocious of the African tribes. You can never be sure of your Massai even when you have spat upon him and he upon you. That is how they swear eternal friendship. Dr. Gregory says the harder one spits the more the other feels flattered. How it is done and what the Massai equivalent for handshaking is the traveler explains in this wise:

"The chief came up to me, and for the first time held out a 'knobkerry' cut from a rhinoceros horn, for me to shake. I of course, shook it, glad of this expression of friendliness, though quite aware that if it stopped at this it meant nothing. But as I walked down the slope from the camp after the men he came up again, and this time, not only held out his knobkerry, but as I shook one end he shook the other. After walking a few yards he repeated this more vigorously. Then at last he held out his hand; we shook hands at first coldly and then more cordially. Finally, after we had walked a couple of hundred yards, he repeated the process, and the chief spat upon me, a salutation which I returned with perhaps unnecessary vigor. I had been warned that whenever Masai retire from a conference without spitting the spit of peace, squalls may be expected. I was, therefore, much relieved when the friendly rite had been performed."

But this meant nothing, for that very night a band of Masai warriors, led by this same chief, came crawling snakily through the grass, bent upon massacring the camp. But the traveler was ready for them; and they crawled back, leaving several of their dead upon the field.

Dr. Gregory's botanical and zoological observations are full of interest. He seems to have solved one of the problems that have vexed African explorers for a long time—why there should be in some places vast heaps of bones of animals all mixed together. Some writers have attributed this to the action of a deluge, but Dr. Gregory says the bones are the remains of animals that, in season of drouth, have fought around the water holes for their last drop.—New York Journal.

The Strength of Nature.

According to the ancient mythology, when Hercules wrestled with Antæus, every time he was thrown stronger than power from earth. Hercules jumped up again ever, gaining fresh every contact with the les conquered him at last only by holding him in the air away from the source of his strength, until he grew weaker and weaker and finally became exhausted. Antæus is a perfect symbol of mankind. Nature is the real source of health and vigor. The closer we keep to Nature's laws the stronger and healthier we grow. When we get away from them we are sure to be overcome by weakness and disease. When sickness gets hold of a man the only remedy to really cure him must be natural remedy. It must work according to natural laws and bring him right in touch with Nature. Any unnatural stimulus or mere temporary "appetizer" does no permanent good to a person who is debilitated and "run-down."

In these conditions the most perfect, natural strength-builder is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It acts directly upon the natural nutritive processes, and creates solid, permanent strength and vital force in the same way that Nature creates them.

It capacitates the stomach and liver to vitalize the circulation and feed the nerve-centres with pure, healthy blood. This is exactly Nature's way of curing nervous exhaustion, debility, insomnia, and neuralgia.

During the past 30 years, Dr. Pierce's medicines have become recognized standard remedies throughout the world. His "Pleasant Pellets" are a perfect and permanent cure for constipation.

Sister Eliza L. de Falcon, of Corpus Christi, Nueces Co., Texas, writes: "This is to tell you that I have been ill for twenty-one years and was finally cured by your medicines 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Favorite Prescription.' I was completely cured after taking the medicine."

ON GUARD.

You have a little prisoner,
He's nimble, sharp and clever,
He's sure to get away from you,
Unless you warn him ever.

And when he once gets out he makes
More trouble in an hour
Than you can stop in many a day,
Working with all your power.

He sets your playmates by the ears,
He says what isn't so,
And uses many ugly words
Not good for you to know.

Quick, fasten tight the ivory gates,
And chain him while he's young!
For this same dangerous prisoner.
Is just your little tongue!

A LESSON IN PROVOKING.

"Please don't, Marion. Now, Marion Benson, you are just too mean, and I can't stand it another minute."

"Girls," called Mrs. Benson from her room, and the two little girls came in. They were twins, and looked so much alike that even their father had sometimes to look twice before he knew which was Margery and which was Marion.

"Mother, Marion, doesn't give me a minute's peace. I wanted to finish painting a picture to show father to-night and she keeps teasing me so, and shaking the table till I expect to spoil it every minute."

"It's too fine to stay indoors," broke in Marion. "I want her to come out to the orchard; it isn't healthy to sit in the house too much."

"But you shouldn't take that way of asking her," said mother gravely. "This teasing habit of yours is a very bad one, and makes a great deal of trouble."

The mischief died out of Marion's eye and she looked ashamed.

"But, Margery," mother went on, "nothing should make you speak to your sister as you did just now."

"She does provoke me so," murmured Margery.

Mrs. Benson was silent for a moment. These little quarrels between the sisters were becoming too frequent, and she had been wondering how she could put a stop to them.

"Then, Margery," she said at last, "why don't you try provoking her?"

"Why, Mother Benson, haven't you always taught us never to fight back, and always to 'do unto others,' and all that, ever since we were little children?"

Margery was astonished, and Marion interested.

"Bring me my Bible, dear," was the only reply.

"Oh, let me get mine, too, I always remember so much better when I read out of my own." And Margery went off to her room.

"Bring mine, too!" shouted Marion.

So they all three sat down, and mother helped the little girls to find the place, and then read:

"And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and to good works."

"I thought provoke meant to tease," said Marion after a pause.

"We always use it that way now, but it has another meaning," said Mrs. Benson.

So they went to father's big dictionary, and, finding the word, Margery read slow:

"'Provoke: to make angry, to offend.'" Then, a little farther down, "'To stir up, to induce.' It kind of means to persuade, doesn't it?" she asked.

"Yes," answered her mother.

And then they were all still a moment, till Margery said:

"We'd better learn that for next Sunday's verse."

The next night, as the girls were going to bed, their mother came in for her little bedtime talk. They chatted away about the happy day they had had, then said their prayer, and tumbled into bed.

"Mother," said Marion, and her mother stooped for a good night kiss, "Margery provoked me today."

"Did she?" said her mother, knowing that there was more to come.

"Yes, she provoked me to a good work," went on Marion. "She was reading, and I wanted her to go down to the big barn to see the new little calf, and she said she would if I'd dust our room. It was my day and I had forgotten it; so she helped me do it, and then went with me."

"And have you provoked Margery that way, little daughter?"

"No, not yet," said Marion, sleepily, "but I'm going to-morrow: I've got it all planned."—Sunday School Times.

"TOO MUCH WORK."

"I wish I had a kite like John Clark's," said Harry.

"Why don't you make one this afternoon?" suggested his sister Sue.

"Too much work; I can't afford to;" and he stretched himself upon the grass and fell asleep.

After tea they all gathered around the lamp. "Now for our arithmetic lesson," said Sue, as she brought out books and slates; "here is a long example in partial payments, Harry, for us to work out."

"I'm not going to do it," he answered; "it's too much work. I understand the principle, and if you get the correct answer I shall just copy your figures and carry them into the class."

"I don't think that will be right," said brave little Sue; "it seems like cheating."

"O pshaw: well cipher aloud, and I will stop you if I notice any mistakes;" and he leaned back lazily in his chair.

"Seven times eight are fifty-six, and three are fifty-nine," murmured Sue; "set down the nine and carry the five"—and just then some one knocked.

"I can't stop a minute," said Mr. Mayhew, the druggist, briskly; "I just stepped in to say that if Harry will take hold and study Latin this term next summer I will give him a place in my store."

"O how splendid!" cried Sue, after he had gone; "of course you'll do it, Harry."

"Not I" he replied; it's too much trouble to learn those declensions and conjugations; it makes me tired just to think of it;" and he leaned back still farther in his chair.

A CHAT WITH MR. CATER PILLAR.

BY ELIZABETH P. ALLAN.

I walked out under my June apple tree this morning, and found a queer little gray cone hanging to one of its twigs. A large, furry caterpillar was lying along the same twig, looking at it.

"What is this queer thing, Mr. Caterpillar?" I asked.

The Caterpillar sighed before he answered, "It is the grave of my dearest friend."

"O!" said I, "you mean it is a cocoon?"

"So you call it," he answered, and sighed again.

"You seem to feel very badly about it," I ventured to say.

"Of course I do," he said; "I am never to see him again, for one thing, and then I know it is only a question of weeks, before I, too, must wind myself up in this horrid shroud, and die."

"O, but you don't die," I cried, "you turn to a beautiful butterfly!"

"So they say," was the mournful reply, "but who knows whether or not it is true? Besides, I do not want to be a butterfly, I'd much rather be a caterpillar."

"Think of the beautiful wings you'll have," I suggested.

"What do I want with wings? I like to crawl. I like to keep close to the earth. It would make me dizzy to fly through the air."

"You will feed on the sweetest honey."

"But I do not like honey; "I like the young apple leaves, which I can then never eat any more. No you need not try to comfort me; you cannot help me, a caterpillar; I must submit to my hard fate." And the caterpillar turned and crawled away.

Do you know what the caterpillar's stupid answers reminded me of? I could not help thinking of some people I knew, who always turned away their heads when passing a burial place; who sighed when they spoke of the dead; who shuddered when they thought of dying themselves; who never seemed to enjoy for a moment the thought of having a glorious spiritual body, beautiful and perfect and fitted to high and holy service.

Not that the poor caterpillar is so much to blame as these people; he was made in a low form; his grovelling desires are satisfied by a caterpillar's life; he has served the purpose of creation faithfully.

But these others? God Himself has revealed to them that this suffering, sinning, sorrowing life is not worthy to be compared with the glory He has in reserve for them; and yet they sigh, and sulk, and shudder, and weep, because they must be angels in heaven some day.

Are they not more senseless than the caterpillars? You do not answer. Surely you cannot be one of them!—Exchange.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I am a little girl eight years old. I am going to school to Miss Caldwell. We all love her very much. She is so kind to us. I have three brothers. I must close.

Your little friend,
EDNA ROSS.

Providence, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I am a little girl six years old. I have one sister and two brothers living and one dead. I like to read the little letters in the PRESBYTERIAN. I study second reader, spelling, and writing. My papa is an engineer on the Southern railroad. Mr. Bradshaw is our pastor. We all like him very much. I will close. I hope I have not written too long a letter.

Your little friend,
ANNIE V. BLACKWOOD.

SECULAR NEWS.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Judge A. S. Seymour, of New Berne, died in New York on the 19th inst., of cancer of the stomach. Judge Seymour was born at Onandaga, New York, in 1830, and came to North Carolina just after the civil war. During the administration he was appointed Judge of the United States District Court for Eastern North Carolina, which position he held at the time of his death. Judge Seymour was a Republican in politics, but was generally regarded as exceedingly impartial in his administration of justice and universally esteemed as one of the ablest jurists on the United States bench.

The pier and railroad of the Carolina Beach Co., have been placed in thorough repair for the approaching season. The hotel will be under the management of R. A. Jenkins, of Wilmington, who gave such satisfaction last season, and the Wilmington will be in command of Capt. John Harper, so well known for his capability and courteous bearing.

Prof. Clinton W. Toms, principal of the Durham Graded Schools, has been elected professor of the chair of Pedagogy in the University.

Hon. O. P. Meares, of Wilmington, has resigned the judgeship, of the eastern criminal circuit. His successor has not been appointed. The administration of Judge Meares has given general satisfaction.

Maj. Graham Daves has had a gavel made from a piece of timber taken from the site of the old Fort Raleigh on Roanoke Island. The gavel will be mounted in silver and bear the inscription "Fort Raleigh Roanoke Island, the First English settlement--1585-1896.

Steps are being taken to erect handsome brick buildings on the site of the recent fire in Wilmington. The loss is estimated about $30,000.

The trustees of the State University have decided to admit women to the post graduate courses, but the motion to admit women to all the classes in the University was defeated.

DOMESTIC.

The Senate of Missouri has passed a bill appropriating $1,800 for the erection of a monument at the grave of Daniel Boone and his wife who are buried in Warren county, Missouri.

The late William Lampson, of Leroy, N. Y. has left in his will an estate valued at from $600,000 to $700,000 to Yale University.

Secretary of the Navy H. A. Herbert, and party were the recipients of many honors during their stay at Charleston. Mr. Herbert is a native of South Carolina.

A movement is on foot to establish a factory for making turpentine tools at Savannah, Ga.

Thousands upon thousands of peach trees have been planted in the DeLand section of Florida. Six four-year-old trees at DeLand last season paid the grower over $50 net and the fruit was sold for little upwards of $1 per bushel.

The Sixth annual exhibit of the National Carnation Society met in Cincinnati last week. There were 15,000 blooms, 150 visiting florists giving exhibitions. The decorating committee used 2,000 carnations and two miles of asparagus, fern and smilax.

The first Chinese pupil to enter the public schools of Baltimore was enrolled last week. Hom Let is a bright boy fifteen years of age, is anxious to learn and is a native of California.

FOREIGN.

The deaths by starvation in India are fearful. The villages under British protection are sending away hundreds of refugees. At Banda, the blackest spot of the Bundelkund province, out of a population of 700.000, 200,000 are receiving relief. The number is expected to reach $300,000. The deaths from the plague on record at Bombay alone are 6,853.

The English explorer, Poulett Weatherbey, who has just returned from Central Africa, reports that the village of Chilambo, where Dr. Livingstone's heart is buried, has been abandoned, and that the old Inpundu tree guarding the grave stands solitary, is fast decaying and is now a mere shell. He urges that a lasting memorial be erected before it is too late.

THINGS USEFUL.

To remove ink stains from mahogany, rosewood or black walnut furniture, put half a dozen drops of spirits of niter in a spoonful of water, and touch the stain with a feather wet with this. As soon as the ink disappears rub the place with a cloth wet with cold water.

Sausage Roll.—Make dough as for baking powder biscuit; roll and cut into pieces four inches wide and twice as long. Take fine sausage, put three or more pieces in the dough and roll up. Press the ends together and bake half an hour.

When clothing becomes wrinkled from packing or from any cause, the wrinkles may be removed by hanging the garments over night in a heated room. Spread the clothing over clothes-horses as smoothly as possible.

Lemon Butter.—One teacupful of white sugar; three eggs; butter the size of half an egg; beat well together; add juice and rind of one lemon; place in pan, set in kettle of hot water and stir until thick. Good to fill tarts.

$4 PER DAY SURE SALARY OR COMMISSION. DO you want honorable, steady employment the year round, at good wages, at your own home or to travel? If so, send 4c in stamps for our wholesale price-list and particulars. We furnish best of bank references. AMERICAN TEA CO., Detroit, Michigan.

BUILDING FOR ETERNITY.

["The stair that scaled by steps of God to Heaven's gate."—Milton.]

In visions of the night, I planned to build
A fane, with heaven-touching towers; to scale
The eternal walls whose gleaming leagues impale
God's Salem. But, with sudden fear I thrill'd,
As, from the gloom, a Shining Presence fill'd
My room and said, "O, seeker, lest thou fail
To reach celestial peace, dig in the vale
Of meekness deep; plant firm foundations; gild
Thy pinnacle with truth, forbearance, love,
To signal earth and heaven—perchance to guide
Thy brother with its light! Thence, as a dove,
Thy soul shall God-ward fly, with burnished wings
To find its ark with Christ, the crucified,
The Prince of Peace and Salem's King of Kings."

REV. S. P. VERNER.

The Rev. Samuel Phillips Verner is a native of South Carolina, He was born at "Connerose" in Oconee county, Nov. 14th, 1873. His ancestry unites some of the best blood of the two Carolinas; on his mother's side, Phillips and Battle of North Carolina, on his father's, Pettigrew and Verner of South Carolina.

His maternal grandfather was Dr. Charles Phillips. While few perhaps remember Dr. James Phillips, eminent in his day, many readers of the PRESBYTERIAN vividly recall his gifted son, his method of cleaving his way to a theme, the affluence of thought cast carelessly aside in his progress towards the central topic of the text, and the massiveness of the discourse developed.

His paternal grandfather was E. P. Verner, for many years a ruling elder of Retreat church, Oconee county, S. C. His father, the Hon. J. S. Verner, is a lawyer in public life, fluent and forceful as a speaker, formerly prominent in politics, having been a member of the State government immediately preceding the Tilman administration in South Carolina.

The youth receiving his name from the maternal side, seems also to have inherited predominatly the characteristics of that side; the same generous physique, the temperament, the individual force, the independence of thought, that have always marked the Phillips family.

His childhood was spent in the country, on a farm, among the hills that lie at the foot of the Blue Ridge mountains; in the bracing air of this free and open life were developed some of his most marked characteristics of mind and body, both alike sturdy. His first teacher was Miss Amanda Morgan of Walhalla, under whose excellent tuition he learned the art and the love of study; his academic training was received first from the Rev. Hugh Strong, of Walhalla, and afterwards from his uncle, W. H. Verner, of Tuscaloosa, Ala. When he was fourteen years of age his father's position in the State government required his presence in the capital, and so the family removed to Columbia, where they have since resided, and become members of the First Presbyterian church, "Phillips" along with his parents, having made a profession of faith about four years before.

At fifteen he entered the State University at Columbia, taking a full four years' classical course, graduating in 1892 in the first grade of his class, among those awarded a diploma "maxima cum laude."

After graduation he taught school at Boykins, Kershaw county, S. C. The close application of this life following hard upon the strain of four years at college proved bad for his health, and at the end of a year he gave up teaching for a time and entered the machine shops of the R. & D. R. R., in Columbia and spent a year in severe, but attractive work and study in mechanics; so interested was he in this work that he seemed strongly tempted at times to devote his life to the thorough and scientific study of machinery. While in the "Shops" he was active in religious work organizing and conducting a Sabbath school class among the workmen. It was during this period that he gave expression to a plan, that had been long, but gradually, growing from a desire to a purpose. For some years he had been cherishing a deep, almost romantic, interest in the great continent of Africa; he had been long collecting all information accessible as to its history, character, resources, &c. In many conversations with his pastor he manifested a marked enthusiasm for the country and finally announced his determination to cast in his lot with that country and do what he could to bring about the bright future possible for it. Under the combined persuasion of parents and pastor he was with some difficulty induced to hold this plan in suspense, awaiting the influence of maturer age and enlarged experience, and so he consented to postpone for several years his enterprise and spend the time, in the meanwhile, in further study and preparation.

At this juncture under the influence of his uncle, Dr. Phillips, of Tuscaloosa, he accepted a position in the Stillman Institute; the decisive element in this step being the fact that he considered the work directly in the line of his dominant desire. In this work he found great and growing satisfaction; in the midst of it, however, the failure of Dr. Snyder's health seemed the providential opening of a way long longed for and he eagerly embraced the opportunity to attain the wish of his heart. He applied, was accepted, appointed a missionary to Africa, was licensed and ordained by Tuscaloosa Presbytery under the provision for "extraordinary cases," and in October, 1895, set out on the long journey to the land of his dreams, his desires and his prayers, finding his field in Luebo, the mission established by the devoted Lapsley.

What his work shall be, only the future can tell; but those who know his enthusiastic and long sustained interest in that country, his opinion of its resources and his faith in its future, his thorough study of its character and its history, his devoted zeal and self-sacrificing consecration to its cause, cannot but esteem him peculiarly fitted for his work, and cannot but believe that God will in some pre-eminent way use him to fulfil His purposes of mercy towards this land of much promise and many prayers.

[We are indebted to The Missionary for the electro of Mr. Verner.]

GOD OUR FRIEND.

The Fatherhood of God in His relation to His children by faith in His Son Jesus Christ is full of preciousness and including the thought "as one whom his mother comforteth" should never be lost sight of by the Christian. This is distinctly restated by our Lord in giving the parable of "The friend at midnight," and is emphasized in the verses immediately following the parable. It may imply God's relation to His children as their Friend. But a friend is something other than a father. A father may be a friend, but a friend may not be a father.

Prayer appears in this distinction, in a twofold use. One use is to obtain blessing and strength for one's own life and growth. The other is higher. It is the true glory of prayer. It is that for which Christ takes His disciples into His fellowship. It is intercession. It is the privilege of a child of God to lay hold upon power in behalf of others and for the growth and glory of the kingdom of heaven. It is a high calling of those who give themselves and all they have to be a blessing to others. Such may draw near to God as the Friend of the poor and needy and may count on His friendly ministry. Whoever would pray thus must be a friend to the needy and be able to call God, Friend.

A father is more than a friend, and yet pleading the friendship of God opens up new wonders. The child has a natural right to ask from the father and we may almost count it the father's duty to give what is asked. But with a friend the privilege of asking and the obligation to give depends more on congeniality, sympathy and character. Besides this, the child is more subject to the higher wisdom and dependent upon the power of the father. Friends are more nearly on a level and equal. It is something other than our Heavenly Father, found when we can come to God as our Friend.

Then we must be living as God's friends. A child is still a child, though a wanderer and in conduct unworthy the relation; but the confidence and approach and requests of friendship depend on intimacy and conduct. Jesus said: "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." "Thou seest that faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect; and the Scripture was fulfilled which saith, "And Abraham believed God, and he was called the friend of God." God is a Friend not merely in the sense that He is a Father, and the friends of God must be such not merely as children of God. It is the privilege of a true friend of God to say: I have a Friend to whom I can go at midnight.

A condition is both implied and taught, that the friend has already showed the true spirit of friendliness in helping the needy one all he could, before going to God as the Friend to give what he had not. It must be that such an one is not asking for self, is not sparing self, but he has given self and all self has to help before asking for further help. It is further plain that self must not ask help for its own glory, to retire and say, see what I have done, but to say: see how my Friend has supplied your need. I did not have it, but had the privilege of asking it from my Great Friend. If any one asks for a friend what is already in hand and withheld for self, or in want of faith in God for self needs, or wants to withhold until rich and it is no sacrifice of self or act of faith to give, that is carnal and not spiritual, and is condemned by this parable. But if any one can claim to have already undertaken for the needy one, having in poverty and to impoverishment already begun the needy work of love, we know not how much the plea avails. "He will give him as much as he needeth."

But not always at once. The human friend would give to his friend "because of his importunity." God delays His answers, not for the human reason, but because intercession is a part of God's training-school of faith. The one thing by which the child of God can honor and enjoy God is faith. These delays are God's discipline of the friendship He works in His children. Then the friendship is tested and trained, the faith is shown and strengthened and stablished. Then is seen whether the friendship for the needy is real enough to take time and sacrifice and go even at midnight and not cease until the wants spiritual and temporal of the needy friend are supplied. There is seen and shown whether the friendship with God is so clear as to depend on Him and trust Him not to turn away, but wait His time and mercy to give for the needy friend all he needeth. It is a matter of such deep importance that God's friends should know and fully trust their rich Friend in Heaven, that He trains them in the school of delayed answers to prayers to find out how their perseverance prevails and what mighty power and plenteous mercy they can wield.

Are we friends of God? God waits to be our Friend.

WE GLADLY publish the article called forth by our editorials on "The Greater Works,"—on our fourth page. The article is sound, conservative and wholesome. It is a welcome evidence of revived interest in this most important subject. As we are all studying this we cannot yet expect to agree on minor statements, but hope we soon may come as the article suggests to see eye to eye as the truth is in Jesus. Upon one thing certainly all will agree with the writer of the article. That "what the Church needs is earnest, united, importunate prayer for the outpouring of the Holy Ghost upon us in a Pentecostal baptism, enduing us with power to witness for Christ."

NOW THAT THE discussion of the soundness, or the lack of it, in the works of "Ian McLaren" is being discussed, it behooves all to remember that no one questions the fact that Dr. Watson concedes that there is salvation through Christ, and that in some instances he even illustrates the power of the Christian life as founded on union with Christ. There is no contention here, but the harm of Dr. Watson's writings, apart from his very inadequate and fatally faulty creed is, that along with whole truths, and half truths more injurious than palpable error—as being less liable to detection—he teaches, by most seductive inference, as in the Bonnie Brier Bush, for example, that one may live a thoroughly unselfish life, and so far a life in accord with the teachings of Christ, and thus secure to himself the reward promised to a life of faith, and thus provide a way of salvation apart from Christ and independent of faith in Him.

The teaching of this other Gospel, which is not another, is exceedingly captivating to the natural heart and thus adds popularity to this gifted author's writings, but it is fearfully poisonous to the human soul.

THE UNION SEMINARY Magazine for January–February holds well up in reputation. The article on "Cases Without Process" we read with special pleasure. Dr. Daniel's style is direct and incisive and luminously clear, and no one reads after him without a feeling of knowing what was writttn and having been improved thereby. Other articles we have not read attentively, but the subjects and the authorship entitle them to consideration.

THE RELIGIOUS OUTLOOK has made its appearance again. The articles are all capital. Dr. Smith's criticism of Ian Maclaren's Theology is masterly; it ought to be read by every one who has read the works of the famous author, because they have read them, and of every one who has not read them that they may be warned against the error in them. Dr. Dabney continues his reminiscences of college life. Dr. Laws has an article on "The Deaconship," Dr. Cecil on "The Need of Scholarship in the Ministry"—then there are other excellent articles in the historical department. The editorial by Dr. McPheeters on "Some Notable Movements at Present Manifesting Themselves in the Religious Sphere," is specially timely—the tendency to humanitarianism in creed and ritualism in practice is surely and most effectively sapping, at the very foundation, the spirituality of our churches.

IN A HOME letter of Jan. 25th, Rev. C. R. Morton of the Southern Brazil Mission tells of an interesting trip he has recently taken: "I traveled one hundred and seventy-five miles visiting people who a year ago commenced to study the Bible and were in need of a minister to instruct them in its teachings. It was the first time a preacher was ever in their midst and they considered it a precious privilege. The whole time was spent in reading and studying the Bible and in learning and singing hymns. The Holy Spirit has begun a great work among these people, eight made a profession of their faith in Christ and others will follow.

"These people treated me as best they knew how, but their homes are very uncomfortable. The majority of the houses in the country are not as comfortable as our good barns at home. At night the mother or daughter of the family would bring me a basin of warm water to wash my feet, and while I bathed my feet I would talked to them of some point in the Bible.

"You must not be uneasy about me. Though I have to undergo many Lardships on these trips. Seeing lost souls coming into the light of God's love takes away pains of the body."

REV. DR. JAMES T. LEFTWITCH died at the home of his son, Mr. Thomas Leftwich in Atlanta, Ga., Thursday, Feb. 25th. Dr. Leftwich was a native of Virginia. He was born at Liberty, Bedford county, January 3d, 1835. He graduated from the College of New Jersey at Princeton, and from Union Seminary, New York. He was successively pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Alexandria, Va., the Central Presbyterian church of Atlanta, Ga., and the First Presbyterian church of Baltimore, of the Northern Assembly. He resigned the latter charge in 1893 on account of failing health. He was an able and faithful minister.

A LADY WRITER expressing her appreciation of the spoons received as premium for service, says: "They are very pretty and I feel that I am paid for my trouble. Hope that I can be of help to you again for I love the PRESBYTERIAN."

A lady says of the Oxford Bible which we offer: "I have been wanting for some time to express my renewed and increased gratitude for the splendid Teacher's Bible for which I am indebted to the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN. * * * My own Bible is so large as to be unwieldy for Sunday-school and I am thoroughly enjoying one—just the right size, and so full of "helps to the study."

DAVIDSON NOTES.

News was received last Thursday of the death in Atlanta of Rev. J. T. Leftwich, D. D., the father of Mrs. Harrison. Dr. Leftwich has been a sufferer for several years from progressive locomotor ataxia, and his death was not unexpected. Mrs. Leftwich will make her home at Dr. Harrison's on her return from Bedford City, Va., where Dr. Leftwich's body was carried for interment. Their many friends here deeply sympathize with the widow and daughter in their bereavement.

The Salisbury photographer, Richardson, will be on the hill for several days taking the various college groups for the '97 annual. Dr. Martin's new house is rapidly approaching completion, and the contract was awarded to-day for a new professor's house to be occupied by Dr. Smith. Work will begin immediately, and the house will probably be completed by commencement.

The Annual Junior Oratoricals were held on the evenings of Feb. 22d and 23d. The hall was beautifully decorated by the Sophomores in the colors of the Junior Class, and the town was full of visitors. The youthful orators acquitted themselves well, and every one voted the occasion second only to Commencement. Below I give a list of the speakers and their subjects:

THOSE GREATER WORKS.

BY REV. K. M. McINTYRE.

It is delightful to hope that we are to have a new departure in those greater works which Christ charged His disciples should characterize the Christian dispensation. Such are the signs of the times. Book after book issues from the press. Article after article appears in the religious periodicals on the office and work of the Holy Spirit in these greater works. No doubt the readers of the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN rejoice in the lead you have taken in this direction, in recent numbers of the paper. Some of us perhaps may dissent somewhat from some of your positions. But as the doctrine of the Holy Spirit, and of the greater works of the dispensation of the Spirit, is not yet fully developed and settled in the mind of the Church, it is to be expected that some of us may lose our way a little in the search for the truth. But if it is "in the driving mists of controversy that the truth emerges," should we not take courage and persevere until we shall see eye to eye, and work shoulder to shoulder, amidst the fulfilled promises of the Pentecostal blessings? Not, however, that the present writer proposes to enter the lists of controversy, but only to join in the note of encouragement to seek and find the truth, in the light and holy fire of which we shall show forth those greater works which are to conquer the world for Christ.

Doubtless the great need of the Church to day is that baptism of the Holy Ghost, which was granted to the hundred and twenty on the day of Pentecost, which baptism came on that day, and is ever after to come, in answer to the united prayers of the Church, and in response to the faith of each individual member. As Christ Himself was, at His baptism by John, "anointed with the Holy Ghost and with power," inducting him into his public ministry; so the hundred and twenty, ("the number of the names together,") were, on the day of Pentecost, "anointed with the Holy Ghost and with power;" thus anointing them as the visible body of Christ—the Christian Church, under the dispensation of the Spirit. As the anointing of Christ was divinely attested by the miraculous "voice from heaven," and the visible symbol of the Spirit "descending like a dove and resting upon Him," so the anointing of His body, the Church, was divinely attested by the miraculous symbols of the presence and power of the Holy Ghost, at Pentecost. These miracles were: The sound, as of rushing mighty wind, the tongues, like as of fire sitting upon each of them, and the speaking with tongues. These miracles, signs and wonders, open to common observation, constitute the divine testimony to the reality of the anointing or baptism with the Holy Ghost in fulfilment of "the promise." This promise stands out with more or less prominence all through the Old Testament Scriptures, from the outflow of the waters, in response to the smiting of the rock by Moses, on down to Joel and John the Baptist, whose baptism of Christ points forward to the Pentecostal baptism with the Holy Ghost.

Christ Himself also takes up this promise saying to His disciples "it is expedient for you that I go away, for if I go not away the Comforter will not come unto you, but if I go away I will send Him unto you. And finally commanding them not to "depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father which saith He, ye have heard of Me." What is involved in the fulfilment of this promise is the great question to be settled. The Pentecostal baptism! What does it mean? The indwelling of the Spirit in large measure? The indwelling of the Spirit in large measure, for all that it is the special work of the Spirit to perform in the application of the finished work of atonement and in the development of the divine life within us? The indwelling of the Spirit in large measure, for the greater works, that is for the aggressive work of the Church? The indwelling of the Spirit in large measure to endue with power to witness for Christ—enduement for service? "The inauguration of the dwelling of the Holy Spirit?" Doubtless the Pentecostal baptism means, or includes more or less of all these, except the theory of the inauguration of the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. This goes to the farthest extreme. Though, in order to appear to say something new, one might say this, provided he meant by this, a historical confirmation of what, up to this time had been by anticipation. But this would only be setting forth the old doctrine, in a new, but rather ill-fitting dress. If there was no indwelling of the Spirit before the day of Pentecost, how were people saved before that day? This question admits no answer. The indwelling of the Spirit was inaugurated when the first sinner was saved. There is no salvation for a sinner except by union with Christ through the indwelling of the Spirit, unto new birth and faith. Therefore the Pentecostal baptism, the inauguration, could not be of the indwelling of the Spirit, in the sense that, before Pentecost, the Holy Spirit was with His people, but only after Pentecost was He in them, in the sense of giving a birth from above, and a partnership with Christ unknown to the Old Testament saints. As there could be no failure in the covenant between the Father and the Son in behalf of the elect, there was no need of delay in the application of the benefits of that covenant. These benefits to the Old Testament saints, on the credit of what Christ would do, were as real as the same benefits to the New Testament saints, on the credit of what Christ has done. Must the bread that sustains physical life sustain those who get it on time in a different way from that in which it sustains those who pay cash for it? Those who buy on time, when they pay for it, only confirm the historical fact of right to it. But enough on this point.

Christ Himself tells us what the Pentecostal baptism means for us. "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you, and ye shall be witnesses unto me." The Jewish dispensation was the conservative dispensation: to preserve the knowledge of the true God. The Christian, is the aggressive dispensation—to preach the Gospel to every creature. Power to witness for Christ therefore is largely this aggressive power—power for those greater works. It is in the manifestation of this greater works power that the Holy Ghost still witnesses to us of the finished work and exaltation of Christ, as he did those of Pentecost by the miraculous symbols of his presence. "By one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified, whereof the Holy Ghost is witness to us."

The Pentecostal baptism therefore was not for the apostles only, or for the time of the apostles only, but for all the succeding times of the Christian dispensation. If this blessing comes in answer to prayer, then what the Church needs is earnest, importunate, united prayer for the outpouring of the Holy Ghost upon us in a Pentecostal baptism, enduing us with power to witness for Christ. God's people seem to be waking up to this promise, and to be praying for its fulfilment. Shall we not all join in this prayer, and pray and pray again, and without ceasing for this blessing?

Let us remember that the day of Pentecost has fully come, that we are living in the age of the Pentecostal blessings, that the Holy Ghost, the Paraclete, the Comforter, is now with us; with us, not only to comfort in trouble, to guide us in perplexity, but to fill us with the holy fire of zeal for the upbuilding of the the Kingdom of the exalted Christ And last, but not least, if there is any truth in all we have said, is not a Pentecostal chair in all our seminaries an urgent need of the age.

UNION SEMINARY BUILDINGS.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Certain open letters between Col. J. P. Fitzgerald, and the Rev. A. W. Pitzer, D.D., have appeared recently in your columns, making an impression upon the uninformed reader that the endowment, and present Seminary buildings at Hampden Sidney will be imperiled by debt to be incurred in the erection of new buildings at Richmond. The trouble with Dr. Pitzer is that he is not in possession of all the facts, and because he takes it for granted that his suppositions are true. What he takes for granted is that the building committee will borrow to the amount, $75,000, named as the limit by the Board, and also that the whole amount of the building fund, $125,000, is subscribed payable in five annual instalments.

Let me correct him. The amount subscribed to be paid thus during five years was originally about $77,000. Of this sum, over $17,000 has been paid, leaving $60,000 unpaid, and of this $60,000, one-half is promised during the present season, as the buildings go up. This comes about by the noble generosity of Mr. Spence of Baltimore, who subscribed $25,000, and who, having paid $5,000 last year, has since arranged to anticipate his four remaining annual instalments, and provided for the whole amount ($20,000) remaining, to be turned over to us during the present year.

Mr. Watts, who having subscribed $50,000, still owes $40,000, will pay another $10,000 during this season; so that instead of there being $125,000 to be paid in five annual instalments, the amount remaining to be paid in three annual instalments will be $30,000.

The other mistake made by Dr. Pitzer, was in supposing that the $15,000 which Col. Fitzgerald tells him has passed through his hands is all that has been collected on subscriptions. In addition to what was paid through Col. Fitzgerald, we have received in actual cash, and materials as good as cash, to be used in the buildings, from Richmond subscribers, over $15,000, besides deeds to $12,000 worth of the best building sites in the suburbs of Richmond, to be sold for the benefit of the building fund. It is probable that nearly all of the Richmond subscriptions of $50,000 will be turned into cash within a year.

Now as to the question of imperiling the endowment. Suppose there should be a debt of $30,000 incurred for a few years, (it is not expected that there will be any debt carried more than three years), it will be secured by a mortgage on the Richmond site and buildings, worth in all $145,000, and on Mr. Watts' personal bond for $30,000. Is not this sufficient security for the $30,000 mortgage? It is a security of $185,000 against $30,000 debt.

As to the cost of the buildings to be erected, Dr. Pitzer seems to think that it will be $200,000; why he thinks so, I do not know.

The Building Committee had instructions from the Board to erect the buildings for $125,000, and this the Committee intends to do, unless generous individuals give us more money in the mean time.

The main building now roofed in is under contract to be built for $48,900, and business men of Richmond say that in ordinary times it would have cost $75,000. Building is cheaper now than it has been in many years.

I am not, and never have been, a member of the Seminary Board of Trustees, and like Dr. Pitzer, "I have the very highest regard for the Board of Directors." I also believe with him that "they have acted as they believe for the best interests of the trust committed to them;" but I will go further and say that if Dr. Pitzer had known all the facts, a few of which I have now given, he would have been spared "grave concern and apprehension," and would have fully justified the Board in what they have done.

I have never known a more conservative, and prudent body than the Trustees of Union Seminary. I hope when Dr. Pitzer wants any more information, and writes, as before, to Col. J. P. Fitzgerald, of Farmville, that Col. Fitzgerald will kindly communicate with us, and we will put him in possession of all the facts as they stand at the time. We have no secrets. We are instructed to do a work for the Church, and the Church has a right to know all about it.

As to the Building Committee, with which I am associated, I will say that the members of it, except myself, are business men of the highest standing, and they have shown the greatest judgment and prudence in conducting the great work entrusted to their hands. The confidence of the Board of Trustees in the Committee is manifest from their whole course since they were appointed, and when the Trustees were in session here recently, those present were unanimous in their judgment that they had never seen a better building than the one now approaching completion, and that the site is splendidly suited to the purpose in view.

ROBERT P. KERR.

TRUE BEAUTY IS INWARD.

Beauty is not simply an outward thing; it is something far more than that. Like Helen of Greece, you may have every one of the thirty points which the ancients held were necessary to perfect womanly beauty, and yet be lacking. Outwardly you may be as lovely as Aphrodite the golden, and yet be lacking. Mechanically you may be a Juno or a Dido, and yet be lacking. "The king's daughter is all glorious within." True beauty is inward. The woman within must be looked after. The use of the intellect in thinking beautiful and kindly thoughts has a powerful effect in molding the features. It removes the marks of sensuality and replaces them by the fineness of a lofty self control; it substitutes the signs of energy and thoughtfulness for those of vacancy and insipidity; it makes the eye keen and bright and the mouth sensitive and delicate. On the other hand, let a woman encourage the caustic forces of her nature and give way to the thoughts which they suggest, and they will fume discontent into the eye, brood wrinkles into the forehead, and fret the curves of the mouth into eternal spite. A woman, though she consult only the fineness of her face, will look after her soul. A chaste soul, that is the acme of beauty. The recipe for bodily splendor is this: Take care of your soul. The thoughts and purposes and hopes and loves and emotions of the soul are invisible sculptors, cutting and carving with their tiny chisels the human features, and beautifying them and making them transparent until mind and character shine through them. The beauty of soul, that is the deeper beauty of woman. Let any woman have soul beauty, and she will be loved and respected and will have the power to charm. Soul beauty penetrates outward through the physical frame until it gives the whole physique a transfiguration.—Rev. David Gregg, D. D.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

The first literary productions of Washington Irving were when at the age of nineteen he contributed a series of sprightly letters signed "Jonathan Oldstyle" to his brother's newspaper, The Morning Chronicle.

Hawthorne had reached his forty-sixth year when he published "The Scarlet Letter." His early attempts to support himself by his pen had been unfortunate and a feeling of deep despondency had taken hold of him. When giving this work to the public he had little hopes of its success and would hardly believe the kind and enthusiastic reception given it.

Charles Dana Gibson, in illustrating a short story that narrates the romance of a Princess, for the March Ladies' Home Journal, has created what he regards as his typical English girl. She is said to be as distinctive and striking as his famous American girl, and while essentially different she is quite as interesting. The drawing will illustrate Robert C. V. Meyers' story, "The Morning After the Servia Got In."

When Joel Barlow, the poet and diplomatist, published his "Vision of Columbus," the "great American epic," in 1787, George Washington subscribed for twenty copies, his name being second on the list of subscribers, preceded only by the King of France, who subscribed for twenty-five copies. Washington, apparently, gave most of his copies to his friends, and one of them, which he presented to Mrs. Bache, daughter of Benjamin Franklin, has just been secured by Messrs. Dodd, Mead and Company, of New York.

The book is in the original sheep binding. There is laid in a letter in the handwriting of George Washington: "George Washington presents his respectful compliments to Mrs. Bache and prays her acceptance of Barlow's 'Vision of Columbus.' The [illegible] one of several copies for which he subscribed some years ago, and has received since its arrival in this city. Tuesday, September, 18th, 1787.

THE ASSEMBLY'S FORM OF BEQUEST.

I do hereby give and bequeath to the Trustees of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States (popularly known as the Southern Presbyterian Church) the sum of .....Dollars for the benefit of [here name cause to which the legacy is given.]

CHANGES OF ADDRESS.

Correspondents will please note the following changes of address:

Rev. M. McG. Shields, from Burlington, N. C., to Gastonia, N. C.

Rev. G. S. Robinson, from Pineville, N. C., to Palestine, Texas.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Immanuel Church:—Saturday afternoon a Junior Christian Endeavor Society was organized with seventeen members. At the Sunday night service after the sermon there were eight requests for prayer. Four and a half dollars were raised for the plague sufferers in India. Rev. B. E. Wallace, pastor.

Greensboro:—The First Presbyterian Sunday-school of Greensboro, since it went into its new quarters in the new church three years ago, has outgrown the space allotted in said building, and has had to move the school proper into the auditorium, Sunday, a week ago, at which time we had 301, the most ever present at one time. It has never been in a better or more prosperous condition than now. The infant department outgrew its quarters also, and had to move. Dr. Egbert Smith, will now give his whole time to this church, and of course the congregation are all glad. M.

Pilot Mountain:—On January 31st, Rev. R. W. George began a meeting at Pilot Mountain, N. C. The meeting was held in the Missionary Baptist church. It was well attended. There were eight professions of religion and a number asked for prayers. Hitherto not much interest has been manifested in Pilot Mountain in connection with protracted meeting services. In view of this fact the meeting was very encouraging. Bro. George may return and hold another meeting there at some time in the near future.

Antioch:—Messrs. Joseph A. McBryde and John A. Hodgin were ordained and installed elders on Sunday February 21st.

Philadelphus:—The Pastor states work has begun on Philadelphus church and we hope soon to have one of the nicest churches anywhere in the country.

Waxhaw:—The church here is supplied by Rev. H. W. Hoon for one half his time. Two members were received on Feb. 21st, by letter.

Rocky River Church:—At a congregational meeting on February 28th, moderated by Rev. W. C. Alexander, of Concord, Rocky River church unanimously called Rev. C. Miller, of Danbury to become their pastor. It is earnestly hoped that Mr. Miller will accept the call.

Home Mission School at Patterson's Mill:—Our Home Mission School work at Patterson's Mill is a great success. Very interesting exercises were held in honor of Washington's birthday, consisting of recitations and singing by the scholars and addresses by the principal of Sunderland Hall, Miss Montgomery, Dr. C. A. Duncan, of Knoxville, Tenn., and M. M. H. Caldwell, Esq., of Concord. We are indebted to Miss Sne Sherrerd, of Philadelphia, Pa., for a number of flags for the occasion and for two handsome pictures of Washington and Garfield, and to the Busy Bees of the First church, Concord for a portrait of Lee. The exercises reflected great credit upon the scholars and also upon our enthusiastic teachers Misses Spinning and Allison.

VIRGINIA.

Evangelism in Virginia:—Rev. L. A. McLean, evangelist of Synod of Virginia preached recently a few sermons at Olivet church and Providence Forge in East Hanover Presbytery. There were six professions of faith; four were received into the church and two adults baptized.

He with Rev. H. C. Brown, pastor of Samuel Davies church, closed a meeting at Bethlehem in Hanover county, on Thursday night. There were fourteen professions of faith. Congregations were full and deep interest prevailed, and no doubt much good was done to the church community.

LOUISIANA.

Alexandria:—The new church here was occupied on the 14th of February for the first time. The membership has increased from thirteen to sixty four.

MISSOURI.

Platte City:—The meeting conducted by Rev. Xenophon Ryland resulted in fifteen additions to the Presbyterian church and a spiritual uplifting of the Christians in the town.

Perryville:—A Church was recently organized here during the services of Evangelist J. W. Roseborough. There are ten members. Mr. Arthur V. Cashion was elected and ordained ruling elder and Mr. Lawrence Meyer, deacon.

TENNESSEE.

Knoxville:—The centennial of the First Presbyterian church, and semi-centennial of the ministry of Rev. James Park, D. D., observed Oct. 11th, 1896, constitute a valuable publication recently issued under the auspices of the church. An excellent likeness of Dr. Park forms the frontispiece, and his historical discourse from Psalm 105: 4-5, covers forty-four pages, most interesting of which are the venerable author's own reminiscences, who was born and bred in the congregation, and began preaching to it in February, 1866, being elected as pastor a year later. The church was organized four years after the town was laid out by Gen. White in 1792, and its present edifice was built in 1852, adjoining the ancient burial ground that contains graves of several eminent in Church and State. The sanctuary was closed as a place of worship from Sept. 1863, until January, 1866, but used for various purpose by the Federal authorities, who held it from Nov. 1863, to May 1st, 1866; such as hospital, barracks, quarters for refugees and finally turned over to the Freedmen's Bureau for a schoolhouse nearly two years. Dr. Park still continues ministering to the church he has served so long and well and together with his wife, long the sharer of his joys and sorrows, is universally respected and esteemed.

Bristol:—Rev. W. A. Cochrane was installed pastor on Feb. 14th. The services were conducted by Rev. Messrs. John R. Herndon, J. C. Carson and J. G. McFerrin.

GENERAL.

The series of services conducted by Evangelist Weston R. Gales in the Maryland Avenue Presbyterian church, Baltimore, have resulted in many being brought to Christ and much spiritual awakening among Christians.

We see by the secular papers that Rev. J. C. Collins, of New Haven, Conn., Secretary of the International Christian Workers' Association and J. H. Lucker, Esq., of Asheville are interested in securing a charter for the "Mountain Retreat Association. This organization proposes to establish a retreat for health, rest and Christian fellowship, modeled largely after that of Ocean Grove. They have an option on five thousand acres of land near Asheville. Prominent among those interested is Mr. Wm. H. Wanamaker, of Philadelphia. Religions assemblies will meet each year.

Dr. C. H. Duncan, of Knoxville, Tenn., an evangelist of the Northern Presbyterian Church, has recently held an interesting meeting at Sunderland Hall school near Concord. There were a number of professions among the scholars. Dr. Duncan preached very acceptably for us at our service in the First church of Concord.

At the recent commemoration of the jubilee of Dr. Alexander McLaren, in Manchester, England, a portrait of the minister, prepared by Sir George Reed, President of the Royal Scotch Academy, was presented to the city. Addresses were made by the Bishop of Manchester and a number of prominent men, to which Dr. McLaren replied expressing his acknowledgment for the general kindness not only of his own immediate friends, but of his fellow-citizens.

PERSONALS.

Rev. A. J. McKelway was in Raleigh last week the guest of Rev. Dr. Eugene Daniel, pastor of the church of that city.

Rev. H. W. Hoone, of Waxhaw, N. C., is visiting his old home in Western Pennsylvania.

Rev. Dr. Jere Witherspoon, pastor of First Presbyterian church, Baltimore, has been invited by the session of the College Hill Presbyterian church of Easton, Pa., to deliver the sermon at the ordination of Rev. Charles Scholl, pastor elect.

Rev. D. M. McIver formerly of North Carolina, now residing in Bolivar, Tenn., is editor of the Bolivar Observer, a religious monthly. Our best wishes are extended.

Rev. J. E. L. Winecoff is spending a short time at Rome, Ga., where his wife is undergoing a course of medical treatment.

Rev. S. C. Byrd, pastor of Lafayette church, New Orleans, is recovering from a serious illness.

A friend informs us that Mrs. Sullivan Bradford, of Columbus, Miss., daughter of the late Dr. R. F. Matthews, of this city, has given her check for five thousand dollars, to the deacons of the church, to be forwarded to the treasurer of Foreign Missions, in compliance with her father's wish informally expressed in a letter found among his papers after his death.—Southwestern Presbyterian.

Rev. W. L. Lingle, of Hampden Sidney will fill the pulpit of Rev. Dr. Turnbull, of Durham, during March.

The Rev. and Mrs. W. D. Reynolds write from Seoul, Corea, of date January 17th; when all were well. Mr. Reynolds is engaged in Bible translation, being the representative of the Southern Presbyterian Church on a Committee now at work on this important work of giving the Bible to the Coreans.—Central Presbyterian.

Dr. Thos. H. Law, of Spartanburg S. C., Agent for the American Bible Society filled the pulpit of the First church of Concord very acceptably on last Sabbath morning. In the evening he presented the Bible cause at a union meeting in St. James Lutheran church of Concord, N. C.

HAMPDEN SIDNEY NOTES.

The college celebrated "Washington's Birthday" with a concert on Saturday evening in behalf of the college Y. M. C. A., an athletic exhibition on Monday afternoon, and a speaking by members of the two Literary Societies on Monday evening, followed by a general reception in the society halls. The rain poured down almost in torrents part of the time, but it did not dampen the ardor of the young collegians, and their exercises as a whole were highly commendable. Among the visitors were Misses Sproul and Bumgardner, of Staunton, the guests of Mrs. Lane, and Misses Watkins and Venable, of Farmville, the guests of Maj. Venable.

Alexander Ossian, the eighteen year old son of Mr. J. M. Hart, died the 17th of this month. The funeral exercises were conducted the following day by Dr. Murray in the college church, and the body was borne to its last resting place by the four older brothers of the deceased, a touching sight indeed! The bereaved family have the sympathy of the entire community in the affliction.

Rev. J. W. Lafferty, recently pastor of the Presbyterian church at Piedmont, W. V., has come to the seminary to engage in some post-graduate study.

Rev. W. L. Lingle, of the seminary, will supply Dr. Turnbull's church, Durham, N. C., during the month of March.

DR. SMITH'S CRITICISM.

EDITOR N. C. PRESBYTERIAN:

Dear Sir:—Sometime ago there appeared in your columns a criticism of Dr. Watson's book "Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush," my heart prompted a reply then, but I neglected it; now Dr. Sam. Smith in the new "Religious Outlook" brings his clever brain and facile pen to make the same charge of "Humanitarianism" against the little "bookie." Here is one of his sentences, "Enveloping the sketches like a subtle atmosphere is the alleged existence and the implied efficacy of a blameless, a beautiful, a Christless morality." Dear me! The book fairly bristles with Christianity. But one generally finds only what one seeks for. A tiger will spring through a tangle of the rarest orchids to crush the life of a tiny fawn helpless in his clutches. Surely the Doctor's eyes were holden when he read the book. Such hypercritical efforts do more harm than good and unlike mercy, injure most of all the writer.

What is the point of the opening sketch of the love of the old "pagan" pedagogue "Domsie," for his brilliant pupil George Howe? The lad buys his college honors with his life, and as the shadow of death darkens on his face he pleads with his old master who replies, "I said nacthing to ony man against Christ. He aye seemed beyont man, and noo the veession o' Him has come to me in this garden. Laddie ye hae dune for me far mair than ever I did for you." Does not the boy's death bring the old man to a knowledge of the life eternal in Christ Jesus?

What was the vision of the mystic Donald Menzies whenever he could tear himself away from Satan? "Donald has seen his Lord hanging upon the Cross for him." What was the text John Carmichael's dying mother put in his mouth wherewith to feed his future flock? "O Laddie be sure ye say a gude word for Jesus Christ." Afterwards speaking of the young minister's first sermon he writes: "The subject was Jesus Christ, * * * and before he had spoken five minutes I was convinced that Christ was present. The preacher faded from before one's eyes and there rose the figure of the Nazarene, best lover of every human soul, with a face of tender patience and stretching out his hands to old folks and young children as He did before his death in Galilee." What were the words wherewith "that censorious body Lachlan Campbell" gave utterance to his full heart when his erring daughter returned to him? Leaving the Psalms with their rough, rugged metre, shrinking instinctively from the thought of God as Jehovah, turning with all his soul to the true source of human help and comfort, his trembling lips took up the words of the hymn:

"There is fountain filled with blood,
Drawn from Immanuel's veins."

I grant that stress is laid on Dr. MacLure's neglect of public profession. The busy Dr. found no time" for "professing" Christianity, he did better, he lived it. Does not his beautiful life for others speak more clearly than all of Milton's piety of Him who said, "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven?"

Suppose a traveller comes to your house in the heat of a July day weary and worn, hot and dusty with parching tongue and feverish lips, begging for a drink of cool water. You give him a goblet filled to the brim with the life giving fluid, clear and sparkling as crystal, he seizes it with eager hands and drains the last drop, craving more in his intense thirst. When he thanked you for a draught so refreshing would you say, "Yes it does look like very good water, it is pure and clear, its taste is sweet, cool and most refreshing, but you lust ought to see that very water thro my new microscope, cross-eyed microbes in it as big as tadpoles?"

Would your guest thank you for your information? I think not.

Why doesn't some dyspeptic critic call attention to the "Humanitarianism" of Christ's own life and doctrine, for it is written, "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."

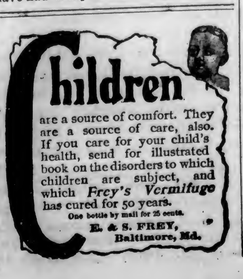
LETTER FROM WILKES COUNTY.

As you very seldom have any thing in your paper from Wilkes I will give you a short account of our Oakwood Mission school. Some of the members of Orange Presbytery have heard something of it. Wish I could give you a full account of it, but cannot do so now, will simply state that we have the building about complete, lot paid for and deeded to Orange Presbytery with the members of the session of the North Wilkesboro church trustees. Although several of the churches of Orange Presbytery have very kindly sent us contributions for it, and our church has given over $125 to it, still we need a little more funds very much and would very thankfully receive any contribution. Send to Rev. C. W. Robinson, North Wilkesboro, N. C.

Although the building was not ceiled, have had a day school taught by Miss Kate Cranor, a splendid teacher and a strong Presbyterian, and a Sunday-school conducted by one of the elders of our church there for about four months. The attendance of day school is about twenty-two and Sunday-school about thirty five, and the children of the Sabbath-school are very bright and eager to learn. Little Bertha Clark, only six years old, learned her catechism and said it perfectly to her teacher in January. Others have said theirs since, and I suppose none of them had ever hardly seen a catechism before the Sunday-school started. The majority of the Bible class attend very regularly and seem to be progressing very well.

Mr. Robinson preaches there every first Sabbath evening and the people of the community are very much attached to him, as they seem to be everywhere he preaches through this mountain country. He is an earnest, plain, persistent worker, but he has too a large a field for one man. He is the only Presbyterian preacher in five counties, big ones at that. "A word to the wise is sufficient." We hope the Home Mission Committee will take notice.

Yours truly,



J. R. FINLEY.

The fire that occurred in Wilmington on the night of Friday last and which consumed the stock of goods of Messrs. C. W. Polvogt & Co., and the building which contained it, came perilously near destroying the Messenger office and other buildings near by. Nothing but the superb efforts of the firemen under most admirable direction and control averted the impending destruction. The praises of the firemen are on all lips—better work was never done. The enterprise of the Messenger was exhibited in the paper coming out next morning as if nothing had happened, notwithstanding a good part of the material which had been removed had to be returned to the building, and there were numerous obstacles and delays caused by removal and replacement of electric machinery, involving loss of light, and the unavoidable confusion and general displacement of type and other material which occurred.

LETTERS TO A BEREAVED FRIEND.

II.

MY DEAR FRIEND:—In my last letter I urged in neglecting the services of the Lord's house, you were neglecting a duty, and in this neglect doing a grave injury both to yourself and others. Permit me still further to press this thought upon your attention.

Your present course is in conspicuous violation of your covenant vows. Do you not remember, dear Mary, that day in our happy girlhood, when we stood up before our venerable pastor, in the presence of the congregation, and bowed the assent we could not speak to the vows which he pronounced for us? Do you not remember that we vowed then to keep God's holy commandments diligently all the days of our lives? Did we think, then, either of us, that we could serve God and yet wilfully neglect His holy ordinances? Did we not at that time purpose fully to be faithful in our attendance upon the public means of grace? And did you not keep that vow for a number of years? Now that you need, more than ever, the comfort and strength which are promised to those who "wait upon the Lord," do you think your bereavement has absolved you from the duty of seeking to supply the necessities of your spiritual life in God's "appointed way?" "Thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths:" does not this command apply equally to all our covenant vows?

Are you sure that you cherish a strong and genuine desire to attend church services? If not, you have in this a grave reason to be much concerned about your spiritual condition. You remember that when Dr. Tanner underwent his famous fast of forty days, he declared after fasting for a certain length of time that all sensations of hunger had left him. Freedom from hunger was thus demonstrated to be one of symptoms of an advanced stage of starvation. Is it not bound to be so spiritually? Is it not true that those who have the most relish for the Word and worship of God, are those who are most accustomed to them; while those who have the smallest appreciation of church services are those who for any reason have become accustomed to neglect them? In such cases we cannot doubt that the same law obtains in the spiritual realm which has been observed in the physical. Not only are we in very great measure creatures of habit, but many of our tastes are acquired, and depend in some degree upon cultivation for their perpetuity. Thus, a man may become so used to sleeping out in the open air that he at last may come to find the close atmosphere of a civilized dwelling exceedingly oppressive; and may live upon barbarous food until his system abhors the choicest delicacies of a Delmonico. This is the law of "adaptation to environment," which may account both for development and for degeneration. Thus it is that we tend to conform to the habits of those about us, and being in Rome to do as Rome does; and similarly our habits tend to become so fixed that the will may lose all its power to resist the inclination which tends to repetition of a familiar act. Here the inebriate must fight his battle. Here, too, the careless Christian may find himself, ere he knows it, involved in a life-long struggle, whose issue must decide his destiny. He must submit to be led captive by the Evil One, or else, rousing himself for the struggle, he must resist temptation until at last sin subdued is under his feet and he has come off "more than conqueror." Here, my dear friend, is your danger, and on this line you will have to fight your battle. The "High instinct of worshipping

And habitude of praise"

must be cultivated, if we would keep our spiritual appetite and strength up to the standard of health. We must remember that in spiritual life, as in natural, there is such a thing as invalidism. Undoubtedly there are souls who have so far starved themselves that they are weak and nerveless in the presence of temptation or trial, when had they but fed their souls aright they might have been strong in the Lord and in the power of His might. And, as in certain cases the sick must be required to take nourishment, even when their systems reject it repeatedly, so must we deal with our own souls in the matter of hearing the Word. Regarding the lack of desire as the sure evidence of spiritual sickness and starvation, we should apply the remedy without heeding the rebellion in our soul that may be roused by the old carnal nature. May God give you strength of will to do this, and thus save you from perishing as a spiritual suicide by wilful starvation!

Accompanying this want of desire, are you not conscious of a subtle spirit of self-indulgence? Is not your neglect of the sanctuary due in part to the fact that it would break the routine of your ordinary life, and require special exertion? You would need to make a special toilet, and would have to endure the fatigue of walking, or else order your carriage, and endure the temporary discomfort of the drive to church in a warm or a frosty atmosphere. Is it not also a fact that you prefer your comfortable rocking-chair to the uncomfortable pews, and the delightful temperature of your own chamber to the uncertain atmosphere of an ill-ventilated church? Going to church, or while there, you may get too warm or too cold or too weary. And then, perhaps you have your fears also about the sermon. That may be too tedious. Do you not suspect that if your beloved pastor, Mr. Jones, whose lovely character you so much admire, were as fluent and as flowery in his discourses as Dr. Sky-scraper, of New York, with whom you were so much charmed when he preached for us years ago, you would be much more inclined to leave your luxurious retreat for an hour to hear him? And if the desire to be diverted and entertained by a man whose Gospel you regard as a most uncertain sort of Gospel, would suffice to draw you, ought not the love of Christ constrain you to avail yourself of the ministry of your pastor, whose sermons always contain so much of spiritual food?

I pray you, forgive my plainness of speech. "Faithful are the wounds of a friend." I do not charge you with wilful, deliberate, reckless sin in this matter. I doubt not you have always intended at some future day to do better in the matter of your attendance at church. But since your great sorrow you have post-poned the beginning, and you have thus cultivated whatever of natural indolence there may be in your character. Now, in all this have you not yielded to temptation? Do you not feel that you have been too slothful in spirit? And can you dare hope that your sorrow shall sanctify that amiable indolence which you have cultivated by indulgence for so long? If God's day has been for you chiefly heretofore a day of ease and of social pleasure, surely there is need that you should make it henceforth a holy day. As you value your immortal soul, I beg you to repent of this negligence. In this connection, will you not think seriously of the Word of God through Ezekiel: "Thou hast despised mine holy things, and hast profaned my Sabbaths. * * * Can thine heart endure, or can thine hands be strong, in the days when I shall deal with thee?" Think it possible that this may be God's message to you. Did you turn away from God in the sunny days that are gone, and do your own pleasure on His holy day? Must you confess that his holy day was not to you "a delight, the holy of the Lord, and honorable;" and that you failed to honor your Lord as you should, in the assembly of the saints? If so, may it not be that you have had your will; and that now God is having His will, and so it is that your house is left unto you desolate? If your conscience assures you that you have lived selfishly, and have forgotten your Lord, will you not kiss the hand that smites, and confess and forsake the sin that burdens your heart? If you will, you may repeat in the joy of your covenant renewal, the words of David, "Before I was afflicted I went astray; but now have I kept Thy Word." And if not, you cannot escape further chastisements. "You must either bend or break." Will you, even in the very bitterness of your grief, be like Pharaoh, and harden yourself against God yet more? Shall he yet break you in pieces like a "potter's vessel?" "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." Will you turn these ministries of His love into visitations of wrath and preludes to eternal despair?

Do not say, "I can't go to church." Speaking thus, you would speak, not like the mature woman you are, but like one one of your own little children. How often have they refused to attempt some childish task, making the same excuse! Knowing they were wrong, you required them to obey you. So in this instance God knows where the trouble lies, and if it lies in any of things that I have pointed out, He will yet find means to bring you to his feet. Will you challenge Him to send yet further chastisements upon you? As one who agonizes for your soul, I beseech you to rouse yourself from the unchristian sloth and the unwomanly weakness into which you have fallen, and "let the time past of your life suffice to have wrought the will of the flesh." Ever praying that you may be led into the sanctuary to receive the help you need, I am,

Faithfuliy yours,
MARTHA.

First Quarter—Lesson XI.

March. 14, 1897.—Acts ix. 1-12; 17-20.

Commit to memory verses 17-20.

Subject.—Paul, The Persecutor, Converted.

Golden Text. "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." 1 Tim. i. 15.

CATECHISM.

Question. 31. What is effectual calling?

Answer. Effectual calling is the work of God's Spirit, whereby, convincing us of our sin and misery, enlightening our minds in the knowledge of Christ, and renewing our wills, He doth persuade and enable us to embrace Jesus Christ, freely offered to us in the Gospel.

Time. A. D., 37.

Place. Damascus, Syria.

INTRODUCTORY.

The lessons we have been studying thus far show the persecutions and trials of the early Church, from within and from without, and the dispersion of the disciples, out of which the Church was to have great blessing and enlargement. Two steps through Samaria are taken, Samaritans are added and the Eunuch, converted, returns to his own country to turn the hearts of many to this salvation. Among these tradition says the Queen Candace was converted.

The present lesson turns us toward Damascus in Syria 140 miles northeast of Jerusalem whither many of the persecuted ones fled. Saul, whom we have seen as the young man, at whose feet the witnesses cast their clothes at the stoning of Stephen, goes away from that scene, probably more bitter in persecution by the effort to cast off the conviction wrought by the death of the martyr. The present lesson shows his conversion. Saul was his Hebrew name, and Paul his Greek name. He may have had both from his youth. He was born in Tarsus probably about A. D. 2. He learned the trade of tentmaking. His education was begun in Tarsus. At an early age he went to Jerusalem where he studied the law under Gamaliel the great teacher of his time. He was of a religious nature and must have been deeply affected by the atmosphere of Jerusalem.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 1. And, in contrast with the conduct of Philip the R. V. has, "but" Saul yet, ever since the persecution begun on the day of Stephen's death, breathing out threatenings and slaughter, R. V. "breathing threatening and slaughter" as his vital air. Slaughter, vid xxvi. 10, implying that others besides Stephen were slain. Went, of his own accord.

Vs. 2. Letters to Damascus, because the persecution had driven a large part of the Christians away from Jerusalem and many doubtless had taken refuge in Damascus. This is the oldest city of the world, built, according to Jewish tradition, by Uz, the grandson of Noah. Of this way. Way should be spelled with a capital W as a name of the Gospel for Christ is the way, though probably used by the persecutors as a term of derision or depreciation. Bring them bound to Jerusalem: to be tried by the Sanhedrim that would be severer than the courts of Damascus and could claim control in religion.

Vs. 3. As he journeyed, paintings show him on horseback, though Canon Cook thinks he rode a camel. Suddenly (about noon xxii. 6) there shined round about him a light from heaven, ("above the brightness of the sun," xxvi. 13.) The hour was chosen and the light to show that this was not a natural phenomenon, and that Paul might see Christ in this blaze of glory.

Vs 4. Fell to the earth "blinded and amazed." Heard a voice, distinct to him, but only a round to the others. Saul, Saul, in the Hebrew is distinguished from the Greek for used elsewhere. Why persecutest thou Me? Not the followers of a poor rabbi as he supposed, but Jesus Himself in His disciples.

Vs. 5. I am Jesus. In answer to Saul's question the Lord Christ speaks from His Father's throne as the glorified Jesus, Saviour, ready to save Saul and send him penitent to preach this salvation.

Vs. 6. Arise, go. This same Jesus as Lord directs Saul to go into Damascus and find, from one of the disciples whom he was seeking to persecute, the beginning of that instruction in which he would grow and glow and glory as the fullness of God. He was to take time for the full revelation of Christ and His commands.

Vs. 7. Stood speechless, xxvi. 14, "they fell to the earth," but now having risen came to a stand still, dazed and amazed. They heard a sound of a voice, but did not hear it distinctly.

Vs. 8. Saw no man, though his eyes were open, because he was totally blind from the brightness of the light in Christ appeared to him. It has been suggested, that if "the thorn in his flesh" was an affection of his eyes, it may have originated here.

Vs. 9. Three days without sight, that he might attend more earnestly to the things taught him. He took no food and could not read the Scriptures, but was shut up to the message sent him from God.

Vs. 10, Named Ananias, so there is nothing in a name apart from the character and conduct, for this is not the Ananias of chapter iv, but "a good man having a good" reputation.

Vs. 11. Street....called straight, from eastern to western gate, a mile long, a hundred feet wide, divided into three avenues by rows of Corinthian columns. Behold he prayeth, not now as a formalist, or Pharisee, but as a new man, with a new feeling and a new power.

Vs. 17. Brother Paul, showing that he accepted him as a fellow disciple. Sight ....the Holy Ghost. These two gifts, the former, the physical type of the blessings of the latter, were bestowed by Jesus on His new disciple and another disciple was sent to bear witness of the fact.

Vs. 18. Arose, literally "standing up" —was baptized as a confession of Christ and the ordinance of admission to the communion of saints.

Vs. 19. Received meat, food after three days fast.

Vs. 20. Straightway, immediately preached, proclaimed Jesus as Messiah and all He had done for him.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

"Note the steps of his progress from a persecutor to an apostle. (1.) Influences from the death of Stephen and the character of the saints he was trying to destroy; (2.) A sudden providence; (3.) Producing conviction of sin; (4.) A desire to know duty; (5.) A sharp, severe conflict; (6.) Light and help from Christians; (7.) Filled with the Holy Ghost; (8.) Confessing Christ in baptism; (9.) Testifying from his experience; increasing in strength.—Peloubet's Notes.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, March 14th, 1897.

BY REV. B. E WALLACE.

How the Christian Endeavor pledge strengthens the Christian's life. 2 Kings 23: 1-3, 21-25.

Text for the week:

"I will pay thee my vows, which my lips have uttered and my mouth hath spoken." Psa. 66: 13, 14.

Daily Readings:

STRENGTH.

Monday, From Trusting. 2 Kings 18: 1-8.

Tuesday, From Daily Prayer. Dan. 6: 1-10.

Wednesday, From Bible Reading. Josh. 1: 1-9.

Thursday, From The Church. Psa. 84: 1-12.

Friday, From The Committee Work. Jno. 4: 27 35.

Saturday, From The Prayer-meeting. Matt. 18: 15-20.

Sunday, Topic. 2 Kings 23: 1-3, 21 25.

Suggestions for Leaders:

1. Have the Christian Endeavor Pledge recited in concert.

2. Select beforehand different ones to emphasize the different sections of the Pledge. e. g Let one member take the first clause, "Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for Strength," and give a three minutes talk, and so on through the entire Pledge.

3. Have special prayers for strength to keep the Pledge.

Notes:

God is the COVENANT keeping One. His promises are conditional. Do this and I will bless you God has pledged His word and will not fail. Some people object to pledges, would join the Endeavor Society but can't go the pledge, etc. They are members of the church and occasionally even ministers of the Gospel. The C. E. Pledge only makes more specific our duties as church members, giving us daily obligations to fulfill, continually striking fire into our cold hearts, and thus with this constant incentive we very soon develop into warm hearted and enthusiastic Christians. Adam took the pledge and failed because he tried to keep it in his own strength. Abraham took the Pledge and kept it, thereby securing for himself and seed the blessings for the nations of the earth. All through God's holy work this truth is taught. The Pledge is the Backbone of the Endeavor Society. Let us square our lives by it daily and we will develop a Christian manhood and womanhood that is so much needed in all of our churches to day. The Secret of Power is in the first clause, TRUSTING IN THE LORD JESUS CHRIST FOR STRENGTH.

P—Prayer.
L—Loyalty.
E—Endeavor.
D—Duty.
G—Going.
E—Everywhere.

She united with Alamance Presbyterian church November 30th, 1851, and remained a consistent member until her death. She was afflicted for years with deafness, but the ear of faith caught the promises, on which she leaned as she walked through death's dark vale, fearing no evil, for Christ was with her.

HERNDON. At Williamsburg, Va., in his 61st year, of pnumonia, Dr. Z. B. Herndon. Dr. Herndon served in the Confederate Army first as private, then as surgeon. After the war he settled in Florida. In Jacksonville he married Miss Maria C. Gilchrist, daughter of Mr. John T. Gilchrist, of New York. In 1883 in Richmond, Va., whither he had removed, and where for years he practiced his profession, he married Mrs. Julia K. Deveanx, a sister of his former wife. Besides his widow four children survive him: Rev. J. G. Herndon, of South Carolina, and Misses Julia K., Annie and Maria G. Herndon.

JOHNSTON. Mrs. Caroline Johnston, wife of Mr. R. W. Johnston, was born February 14th, 1835, and died February 9th, 1897.

For some months her health had been failing; but her friends were not apprehensive until after she was confined to bed—about four weeks previous to her death. From the nature of her disease her suffering was great from the beginning; but it was borne without a murmur, without a complaint. Her chief anxiety seemed to be not to cause her family or friends special trouble, and she would often say, "I am giving you so much trouble." It was characteristic of her to think more of the comfort of others than of her own.

It was my privilege to see her almost every day during those weeks of suffering and waiting; to speak to her often of her Saviour, and the trust she was reposing in Him. In one of those conversations she said, "I have often prayed that I might get well; but it does not seem to be the Lord's will, and I am submissive and only waiting His call." And in this faith and patient waiting she quietly fell asleep. At the age of nineteen she gave her heart to Christ, and united with the German Reformed Church; but after her marriage to Mr. Johnston, she united with the Presbyterian church of which she rdmained a consistent and faithful member until called her reward.

The world has lost the example of an earnest Christian, the church a faithful member and the pastor a warm and devoted friend; no, not lost; for she has only "ceased from her labors," and her "works do follow" her. J. A. R.

Entered Into Rest.

McIVER. Mr. Duncan Fuller McIver died at his home near Tempting, P. O., Moore county, N. C., February 25th, 1897, in his 79th year. He was of a long lived and prolific family. He was the grandson of Roderic, one of the two brothers Roderic and Duncan McIver, who settled in Buffalo congregation before the Revolution, and whose descendants constituted a large per cent of the Buffalo congregation and membership for more than one hundred years. The deceased left surviving him three other grandchildren of Roderic, two of them, Mrs. Catharine Bryan and Mrs. Evander McGilvary, have already past four score years, and the third, Mr. McIver is closely approximating that age. All of these like the deceased are awaiting the last summons with faith and the hope of eternal life beyond the grave. The deceased was a firm believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, and died in the faith. He joined the church at Buffalo in 1869, and afterward transferred his membership to Pocket church. It has rarely been our privilege to witness such beautiful resignation, unwavering trust, and abiding peace as the deceased manifested in his last lingering illness.

M. D. McNEILL.

You may get over that slight cold all right, but it has left its mark on the membranes lining your throat. You are liable to take another cold and the second one will hang on longer than the first. Scott's Emulsion is not an ordinary cough specific, but it is "the ounce of prevention." It builds up the system, checks inflammation and heals inflamed membranes. "Slight" colds never bring serious results when it is promptly taken.

Rev. C. G. Vardell, President of Red Springs Seminary for girls, lectured in the academy at Sanford, Friday night, Feb. 12th, on "Female Education." His address was practical, earnest, and timely. From first to last, he held his audience in rapt attention. Mr. Vardell is an energetic man, untiring and enthusiastic in his work. Under his wise and efficient management, the seminary has prospered beyond the sanguine expectations of its most ardent advocates. Already a new building is needed to accommodate the rapidly increasing patronage.

FOR THE FAMILY.

THE LORD NEEDETH THEE.

Jesus, Thou needest me,
Even me, Thou Light Divine;
O Son of God, Thou needest me,
Thou needest sins like mine.

Thy fulness needs my want,
Thy wealth my poverty,
Thy healing skill my sickness needs,
Thy joy my misery.

Thy strength, my weakness needs,
Thy grace, my worthlessness;
Thy greatness needs a worm like me
To cherish and to bless.

This evil, froward soul
Needeth a love like Thine;
A love like Thine, O living Christ,
Needeth a soul like mine.

Thy fullness, Son of God,
Thus needy maketh Thee;
Thy glory, O Thou glorious One,
Seeketh its rest in me.

It is Thy need of me
That brought Thee from above;
It is my need of Thee, O Lord,
That draws me to Thy love.

THE FOOD VALUE OF STRAW.

The manurial value of straw is much less than its value for feeding, if managed rightly. Its carbon, tho not in best state to be digested, is worth something for feed, while it is very nearly worthless alone as a fertilizer. The trouble with straw is that, being dry, it is not palatable, and being only carbon its nutrition is small in proportion to its bulk. Now there are feeds so highly nitrogenous that they can only be fed in very small quantities. Linseed meal and cotton-seed meal are examples of these. If the straw is cut and steamed so as to make it succulent, and cotton-seed meal or linseed meal is sprinkled over the wet mass, the whole will be eaten as readily as will the best hay, and with greater profit, because the resultant manure pile will be more valuable.—American Cultivator.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S PERSONALITY.

The heart of gold, the will of iron, the royal temper of steel, the pride, the patriotism, and the deep piety of Victoria have been enshrined in a small but vigorous frame, the mignonne aspect of which especially strikes those who behold her for the first time in these her "chair days." It was reported how, when Prince Albert was dying, he roused himself from a period of wandering to turn with ineffable love to his spouse and sovereign, saying to her with a kiss, "Good little wife!" And when the prince consort was actually passing away, after those twenty-one years of wedded happiness, it was told how the queen bent over him and whispered, "It is your little wife," at which last words the angel of death stayed his hand while once again the dear eyes opened and the dying lips smiled. But, though this be so, no one who has ever been honored by near approach to her Majesty or has ever tarried in her presence will fail to testify to the extreme majesty of her bearing, mingled always with the most perfect grace and gentleness. Her voice has, moreover, always been pleasant and musical to hear, and is so now. The hand which holds the sceptre of the seas is the softest that can be touched; the eyes which have grown dim with labors of state for England, and with too frequent tears, are the kindest that can be seen.—Sir Edwin Arnold, in the Forum.

Elizabeth Banks, a journalistic writer in England, took her pocket-book to be photographed under the new X-ray process, in order to see whether the picture would reveal the presence of the coins within it. This it did, and as she was counting the disks shown through the leather she perceived a small black point of familiar outlines. Then she exclaimed: "I have found my ruby!" Opening the pocketbook, she searched in the space indicated by the point on the photograph, and there, tucked in between two folds of leather, she discovered a small ruby which she had lost some time before and could nowhere find. It had slipped from a ring which she wore at a moment when she was taking something from the pocketbook, and had glided in between two thickness of leather. There its presence was altogether unsuspected, and would have remained so until after the pocketbook was worn out and discarded if this extraordinary method of photography had not revealed it.—Philadelphia Presbyterian.

Yoke Fellows.

Many women work too hard. There is no question about that. If they did not have Love for a yoke-fellow they could never endure the daily, hourly grind and drudgery of life. But they bear it cheerfully, sustained by loving thoughts of husband and children.

But when physical weakness or disease is added to a woman's burden it becomes altogether too heavy. No woman can be cheerful or hopeful who is dragged down by continual pain and physical wretchedness.

The special weaknesses peculiar to the feminine organism are comparatively easy to overcome if the earlier symptoms are given proper attention. But if allowed to go unchecked, they are liable to develop into serious, chronic complications.

Any woman afflicted with these delicate ailments ought to have the immediate aid of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a perfect and unfailing specific for all diseases of the feminine organs. It was devised for this one purpose, and accomplishes this purpose as no other medicine has ever done.

For nearly 30 years Dr. Pierce has been chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., where in conjunction with his staff of associate specialists, he has successfully treated many thousand cases of "female complaint."

No physician living has had a more extended opportunity to study this class of diseases in actual practice. No medicine ever invented has done for women what his "Favorite Prescription" has.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure constipation.

MARCH.

Like a frolicsome lion March comes with a roar,
And stirs up the weather as never before.
But the days of old Winter are passing away;
His breath becomes feeble; he stops in his play.
The brooklets are melting, the winds cease to blow,
And the trailing arbutus peeps out from the snow,
While far in the distance the bobolinks sing—
'Tis the Winter's good-by and the greeting of Spring.

HOOKEY COWS.

Hattie and Edna were loving little friends; not only this, but they were little Christian friends, also. They sat side by side in school and kept house and played dolls at home. They read the same books and played the same games. In summer they might have been seen gliding down hill on roller skates, with their arms around one another, while in winter they would skim over the smooth ice in the same loving embrace.

Their greatest delight, however, was to lie under the great trees at the foot of the bluff, beneath whose shadow they lived. There they gave free rein to their imaginations, at times dreaming beautiful dreams that reached away out into the future of their lives. At other times, looking up into the sky, they would try to imagine themselves in heaven, and talk in their childish way of their love for Jesus.

One day, as thy were thus talking, Edna said, "Hattie, do you pray at morning and evening only, or do you pray at any time of day?"

"You had better believe that I pray at any time of day," replied Hattie, "especially if I see hookey cows coming."

This answer made a deep impression upon Edna, and while talking it over that evening, her mother explained that a "hookey cow" might mean anything that could hurt her, or of which she felt any fear.

After this, through Edna's childhood, if she were alone in the dark, or if anything frightened her, she would say, "a hookey cow" and straightway the cry would go up for help.

Through her girlhood, as one temptation after another came to her, the thought also came, "One of Hattie's 'hookey cows'; I know how to drive that off."

Hattie and Edna are both lovely Christian women now. Many a joy, many a sorrow, many a trial has come to them, each doing its own work in developing their characters. But they both think that there has nothing given them such a sense of the nearness of their Heavenly Father, and of the help to be obtained from Him, as the many brief prayers that went swiftly up for deliverance from "Hookey Cows."

THE THREE SIEVES.

It was a rule of Peter the Great never to say anything about a person if he could say nothing good. This is a good rule. Here is a little story that shows how one mother taught her little girl a very important lesson, says The Evangelist:

"O, mamma!" cried little Blanche Powers, "I heard such a tale about Edith Howard! I did not think she could be so naughty. One—"

"My dear," interrupted Mrs. Powers, "before you continue, we will see if your story will pass the three sieves."

"What does that mean, mamma?" inquired Blanche.

"I will explain it. In the first place, 'Is it true?'"

"I suppose so; I got it from Miss White, and she is a great friend of Edith's."

"And does she show her friendship by telling tales of her? In the next place, though you can prove it to be true, 'Is it kind?'"

"I do not mean to be unkind; but I am afraid it was. I should not like Edith to speak of me as I have of her."

"And, 'Is it necessary?'"

"No, of course, mamma; there was no need for me to mention it at all."

"Then put a bridle on your tongue. If we can't speak well, speak not at all."—Presbyterian Journal.

A PRETTY CUSTOM.

There is a pretty custom in the imperial family of Germany which dates from time immemorial. On the birthday of one of the royal children the Empress goes through the stock of toys which has been accumulating since the child's last birthday, and sends all, except a few special favorites, to the sick children in hospitals.

The present Kaiserin, who is the most motherly of women, has paid special attention to this custom, and, on the occasion of little Princess Victoria Louise's birthday, which occurred some time ago, Her Majesty packed with her own hands a large case of dollies, picture-books and little dishes, all in a fair state of preservation, and had them sent to the little sufferers.

The sick children are always told who sends the presents, and in past years this has resulted in the saving of some curious and interesting relics. In this way the battered tin soldiers which amused the childhood of old Kaiser William have been saved from the wreck of time. —Sunday Afternoon.

TWO GOOD TIMES.

"Pretty! pretty! pretty!"
Lulu was blowing bubbles.
"O, mamma! Do come and see how beautiful they are."
Mamma came, and watched while the little girl blew a larger one.
"Now—see!"
With a careful little jerk, Lulu shook it off the pipe. She clasped her hands as it slowly rose in the air.
"See the colors in it," she cried. "Red and purple and green and gold. Why, mamma, they are like the flowers—or the birds. The colors are just as bright."
"Yes," said mamma, "there are so many bright-colored things in the world."
"I think," said Lulu, "it is very good of God to make so many pretty things for us to look at."
She went on blowing, thinking each bubble brighter than the last. Soon she heard a voice at the door.
"Let me blow!"
It was Willie, a little boy who lived next door.
"Yes," said Lulu. "We'll take turns."
But very soon she saw that Willie did not like to take turns. He wanted the pipe all to himself. At last Lulu went to her mother.
"Mamma," she said, "I wish you'd tell Willie to go home. He wants to blow all the time."
"I am sorry," said mamma, "but don't you think you can bear with Willie a little? He has been sick a long, long, time, and has forgotten that he ought to do his share of giving up."
"But I don't think it fair that I should do it all, said Lulu.
"That is true," said mamma. "But we all sometimes have to submit to what is not fair. Now, listen my little one. You think it good of the Lord to make the bright things for us. It pleases you to see them. Just so it pleases Him to see a little heart which for His dear sake is willing to show loving patience with others."
"I think I'll do it," said Lulu, with a smile.
"I've had two good times this morning," she afterwards said to mamma. "First it was the pretty bright bubbles, and then it was being good to Willie."—The Sunbeam.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I have been thinking of writing to your paper but I am going to school and do not have much time to write you. My school teacher is Miss Sudie Hutchison. I am eleven years old and I am in the sixth grade. Cousin Lizzie Scott is my Sunday-school teacher. I am with my grandma. My mama takes your paper and sends it to us. I am so glad when it comes. My sister and brother and myself wrote to you once before. I have another little sister since I last wrote to you. Her name is Rebecca. She is just seven months old, but she will be eight months old the 25th of this month. Our pastor here is Rev J. R. Howerton: He has four little children. Three girls and one boy. The little girls are my playmates. I expect I had better close in fear of the waste basket.

I remain your little unknown friend,

BESSIE SCOTT.

Charlotte, N. C.

Dear Presbyterian: I have a little baby sister who will be two years old Sunday. I am six years old and have just started to school and our teacher is Cousin Sallie Howard. I am in the infant class at Sunday-school and was one of the three that got a prize for going every Sunday last year. I will now close in fear of the waste basket.

Your little friend,

SUE F. BAKER.

Tarboro, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I have seen so many little letters in your paper I thought I would write one too. I enjoy reading the letters every week very much. I will be twelve years old the last day of March. I have three little pets and that is two little calves and one little dog. I can milk, wash dishes and do many other little things We have preaching and prayer-meeting once a month Rev. E. E. Pressly is our pastor. I got both of the prizes in spelling. I will name some of the books that I have read through: Sunshine and Snowflakes, Gipsy John, Rip Van Winkle. If this escapes the waste basket I will write more next time. I hope to see this in print.

Your little friend,

MYRTLE E. HAGER.

SAY SOES.

Young men who spend many years at school and college are too apt to forget the great end of life, which is to be and to do; not to read and brood over what other men have been and done.—William Mathews.

Every man having a beard should keep it an even and natural color, and if it is not so already, use Buckingham's Dye and appear tidy.

I lay it down as a fact, that if all men knew what they say of one another there would not be four friends in the world. This appears by the quarrels which are sometimes caused by indiscreet reports.

THINGS USEFUL.

Dissolve a little salt in the alcohol that is to be used for sponging clothing, particularly where there are greasy spots.

Alabama Hoecake.—Pour one pint of boiling water on an equal quantity of corn meal, add one and a half teaspoonfuls of salt and one teaspoonful of sugar; mix well, stir in a beaten egg and spread thin in a small dripping-pan; smooth it with a knife dipped in cold water, and score it. Bake in a quick oven.

When food scorches in the kettle, the latter seems ruined beyond redemption, but a possible remedy is to take the kettle at once from the fire and set it in a pan of cold water. This treatment, oddly enough, will nine times out of ten remove the burned taste entirely.

Dainty Sandwiches.—Are made of grated cheese, whipped cream and minced celery. Having chopped the celery up fine, chill on ice. Then add cheese as a seasoning. Now lightly mix in the whipped cream. Cut squares or triangles of thin bread relieved of the crust. Spread these with the above mixture.

FRIENDSHIP.

O thou most holy Friendship! wheresoe'r
Thy dwelling be—for in the courts of man
But seldom thine all-heavenly voice we hear,
Sweetening the moments of our narrow span;
And seldom thy bright footsteps do we scan
Along the weary waste of life emblest.
For faithful in its frail and wayward plan,
And perfidy is man's eternal guest,
With dark suspicion linked and shameless interest!

'Tis thine when life has reached its final goal,
Ere the last sigh that frees the mind be given,
To speak the sweet solace to the parting soul,
And pave the bitter path that leads to heav'n;
'Tis thine whene'er the heart is rak'd and riv'n
By the hot shafts of baleful calamity,
When the dark spirit to despair is driv'n,
To teach its lonely grief to lean on thee,
And pour within thine ear the tale of misery.

But where art thou, thou comet of an age,
Thou phœnix of a century? Perchance
Thou art but of those fables which engage
And hold the minds of men in giddy trance.
Yet, be it so, and be it all romance,
The thought of thine existence is so bright
With beautiful imaginings—the glance
Upon thy fancied being such delight
That I will deem thee truth, so lovely is thy might.

—Tennyson.

Christ's sufferings are a rebuke to our softness and self-pleasing. It is not indeed wrong to enjoy the comforts and the pleasures of life; but we are too terrified to be parted from them, and too afraid of pain and poverty.—James Stalker, D.D.

REV. K. A. McLEOD.

Rev. K. A. McLeod, the son of Wm. J. and Margaret N. McLeod, was born Feb. 13th, 1858, in Richmond county, N. C. He received his academic education partly under the tuition of Prof. Murdock McAskill, of Ellerbe Springs and partly under Prof. N. D. J. Clark, of Jackson Springs.

In the fall of 1882, he entered Davidson College and graduated from that institution in 1886, receiving the degree of A. B. In the same year, he entered Union Theological Seminary in Virginia and graduated there in 1889. Soon after completing his course at the Seminary Mr. McLeod was ordained by Fayetteville Presbytery to the full work of the ministry and installed as pastor of Pee Dee and Sharon churches. He labored in this field successfully for about five years, receiving a number of additions to the churches and organizing a new church at Wadeville, which is to-day in a thriving condition.

REV. K. A. McLEOD,
Moderator of Fayetteville Presbytery.

In the spring of 1894, Mr. McLeod received and accepted calls to Jonesboro, St. Andrews, Mt. Pisgah and Salem churches. Here he entered upon his duties at once and has labored ever since with much success, having received a number of additions to the membership of the churches.

As a preacher, Mr. McLeod is earnest and affectionate. His sermons abound in tender illustrations of the love of God. Under his preaching about three hundred persons have made a profession of faith in Christ as their Savior.

Mr. McLeod is loved by his people. Proof of this is seen in the numerous gifts that are made to him and his family by his congregations.

In 1889, Mr. McLeod was married to Miss Cornelia H. Shore, daughter of Capt. R. E. and Mrs. W. J. Shore, of Virginia.

At the last meeting of Fayetteville Presbytery Mr. McLeod was unanimously chosen moderator and conducted its business to a "speedy and proper result."

SIX SHORT RULES FOR YOUNG CHRISTIANS.

1. Never neglect daily private prayer; and when you pray remember that God is present, and that He hears your prayers. Heb. 11: 6.

2. Never neglect daily private Bible reading; and when you read, remember that God is speaking to you, and that you are to believe and act upon what he says. I believe all backsliding begins with the neglect of those two rules. John 5: 39.

3. Never let a day pass without trying to do something for Jesus. Every night reflect on what Jesus has done for you, and then ask yourself, what am I doing for Him? Matt. 5: 13-16.

4. If ever you are in doubt as to a thing being right or wrong, go to your room and kneel down and ask God's blessing upon it. Col. 3: 17. If you cannot do this; it is wrong. Rom. 14: 23.

5. Never take your Christianity from Christians, or argue that because such people do so and so, therefore you may. 2. Cor. 10: 12. You are to ask yourself, how would Christ act in my place? and strive to follow him. John 10: 27.

6. Never believe what you feel, if it contradicts God's Word. Ask yourself, can what I feel be true, if God's Word is true? and if both cannot be true, believe God, and make your heart the liar. Rom. 3: 4; 1 John 5: 10, 11.—Brownlow North.

When you hear an old man say that he has trusted God and has been sustained by Him, that he has found Him faithful to His promises you may accept that testimony as a guide for you. If you accept it, you will be stronger, and walk more safely.—United Presbyterian.

A perfect faith would lift us absolutely above fear. It is in the cracks, crannies and gulfy thoughts of our belief, the gaps that are not faith, that the snow of apprehension settles, and the ice of unkindness forms.—Macdonald.

The rootlets that moor a tree to the soil and gather nutriment for its growth are very slender and delicate. So the actions to which the Spirit prompts us on behalf of others may seem very trivial, but each one gives us greater constancy and strength, and makes us quicker to understand Christ's love to us.—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

What is wanted in order to give the Church a stronger hold upon business men and the world, is not the bright, erratic, unbalanced man, but the one who for years has lived a life of honest Christian report. A great deed may be done in a moment, a great battle fought in a day, but the honest report and the moral nation are the work of years.—Herald and Presbyter.

It should never be forgotten that machinery and halls, and rooms, and holy tables, and elaborate music, and the thousand of things on which many set such store, are not essential. In the absence of them all, love will burn its way by its own vehement flames. We have often been much more refreshed in spirit listening to Christian sermons in small and humble chapels, than hearing great orations in elaborately organized and magnificent churches. The fact is that so much is being made of the externals of worship in these days, that there must be a reaction soon, a reaction to absolute quiet simplicity and to the religion of the heart.—British Weekly.

"YOUR HEAVENLY FATHER."

God as Creator is the Father of all His creatures and is often thought of and spoken of as only that. In that sense He takes care of, and provides for, all creatures. He openeth His hand and satisfieth the wants of every living thing. As such He is viewed by many in the words we have chosen from Matthew vi. 26. We must avoid this mistake. Our Lord does not say "their Father," nor yet "your Father," but your Heavenly Father." He is giving an illustration to His disciples, to whom He has just given the prayer commonly called the Lord's prayer. He has taught them to say "Our Father which art in heaven." He has not yet offered Himself a sacrifice for sin and declared that true prayer is in His name. So He does not stop to explain how and upon what condition God is their, or our Father. But we know, God is "our Father which art in heaven" and "your Heavenly Father" in the meaning of the sermon on the Mount, only as "the God and Father of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ," and to those only who by the exceeding great and precious promises are "made partakers of the divine nature," "born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the Word of God which liveth and abideth forever."

To such He is Father in heaven, Heavenly Father. As Father He has authority. This is dimly shadowed to us in an earthly father. He holds, has always held, must ever hold, as head and representative of the family, the place of authority. As protector He must be between the family and the world. As responsible for the family to the world and the medium of the world's approach to the family He must have authority. But as head for the teaching, training and good of the children and the proper final resort in all questions there, He must have authority mingled with and modified by affection. He can thereby expect and demand obedience and this obedience should be most cheerfully rendered. So God our Father with rightful authority and tender affection, has a right to expect the loving obedience of His children.

Fatherhood is a kingly attribute. The father of the model family has honor as well as obedience, reverence as well as affection. So "our Father which art in heaven," is rightful King in Zion: is "the King eternal, immortal, invisible." But he has given all authority to His Son, whom He hath appointed heir of all things, who is now seated on His Father's throne. If we have dread, and stand in awe of the King, and gaze trembling on the crown, we shall soon see that crown fade away in the glory of His face who wears it, in the loveliness of His features who is "the only wise God our Saviour." If we tremble at the sceptre of righteousness in the hands of the King and find ourselves shrinking from it, a little patient waiting will see it stretched out as the golden sceptre to make welcome and to promise peace. As we gaze upon that sceptre, of iron to His enemies of gold to His friends, we shall soon see the sceptre fade away, leaving only a hand stretched out to lift up and to bless as He says: "Peace I give unto you."

The father provides for his children, so "your Heavenly Father" provides for the fowls of the air and much more as His children through faith in His Son. How much more will He feed you, oh ye of little faith.

The expressions "Heavenly Father" and "Father in heaven" are different and worth our careful study. But we are now considering the faith, we as God's children ought to have in Him to care for us. It is not "their Heavenly Father," but "your Heavenly Father," children of the Father, who feedeth the fowls. He will much more feed you.

A traveller who had been several times to Palestine said he saw the flocks of wild pigeons who roosted in sight of our Saviour when He spoke these words, and calculated that it would require a hundred thousand bushels of grain to feed them. And they were but a few of the millions that God feeds every day." "Behold the fowls of the air, they sow not, neither do they reap nor gather into barns, yet your Heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?"

WE ARE compelled by stress of matter to leave over from this issue the "Letter to a Bereaved Sister" which would come in regular course. These letters are thoughtful and are calculated to do good practically, as they suit cases which too often occur in life's experience.

ON OUR eighth page we publish charges recently delivered to church officers by Rev. S. O. Hall, of Westminster church, Greensboro. These charges it will be well to read.

It is strange what erroneous ideas and what exceedingly low views obtain, not to say prevail, with regard to the ruling eldership, its nature and its duties.

Every ruling elder is as certainly called of God to his office as is the preacher of the Gospel ministry. Called of God to his office and work; called of God, through the voice of the people, is what a ruling elder is, or ought to be. There is no infallibility in what man does, and so undoubtedly men sometimes get into office, who, not having been called of the Spirit are not rightly there; this is true of the ministry, as it is of other officers of the Church. But if called of God where is the justification for applying the rules or practices of politics to the duties and responsibilities of the eldership? Many ruling elders regard themselves as merely representatives of the congregation, and so bound to ascertain the wishes of the people and to conform their actions or rulings thereto. This view comes of seeking, in politics, for an analogy to the eldership. If an analogy could be found it would be in the civil courts, for undoubtedly every ruling elder is a constituent part of a church court; tho apart from the court, duly organized, he has no authority whatever. But secular affairs cannot furnish an analogy in this matter, which belongs to the spiritual realm. The ruling elder is not set apart to register, or to enact the will of the people. He is not the servant of man, or of any number of men, and to make him merely the representative of a constituency is to reduce Presbyterianism to a diluted form of Congregationalism, nothing better, but rather the worse than the original article. The ruling elder is the servant of Christ, and he is set apart to ascertain by the use of such means and opportunities as are available, what is right in the sight of the Master whom he serves, and that to do. The will of the people is entitled to serious consideration in the matter of determining what is duty, but it should never be allowed to control in the performance of duty.

Proper consideration of the limitations of authority on the one hand, and of the amenability to God alone for its exercise, on the other, would tend to teach church officers that while they may not lord it over God's heritage, neither need they fear the face or frown of man while going forward in the path of duty.

THE FOURTH year of the publication of "Our Fatherless Ones" has closed. It has kept us well advised of what was doing among our orphans—God bless them!—and we trust it has many more years of usefulness before it.

AN ESTEEMED friend who has been for long, probably since the first issue, a reader and patron of the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN writes as follows:

"I am more pleased with the new feature of the paper than I was at the first. I mean its folio form and its album features. I expect I am rather old fogyish. I am well pleased with the reading matter. It is improving weekly. Much more yearly. It ought to be in the house of every Presbyterian in North Carolina. The amount of assistance to parents in the raising of their children is incalculable. The nurture and admonition columns will add much to help train the tender minds, to direct them in the right path. I like the Children's Letter column for children. It gives them an interest in their religious paper. I think parents who have young children would do well to encourage their dear children, whom the Lord has given them to write short letters.

Now let me say in conclusion that all the ruling elders and all the deacons, and every church member belonging to the Presbyterian Church should resolve themselves into a committee of one and see if the paper cannot be put in every Presbyterian family in the North Carolina Synod.

Now wishing you God speed in your noble work, and also let length of days be added thereto.

Yours sincerely,

P.

P. S.—God bless our dear old paper.

THE COUNTRY has quietly passed from under one administration to that of another and Wm. McKinley has now the reins in hand. The feeling seems to be one of confidence in his integrity and in his ability. Whether or not the policy of his party, to be administered or executed by him, will prove advantageous is one which will be decided in accord with one's political opinions or prejudices. But all good men will fervently pray that God's blessing may rest upon all honest efforts to promote the prosperity of our country.

"You take a daily paper, do you not?"

"Yes, several of them."

"Why not give them up and save the money?"

"What! Don't you suppose I want to know something of what is going on in the world?"

"How many Church papers do you take?"

"None."

"Then am I to understand that you do not want to know what is going on in the Church of God?"—The Parish Rubric

THE MINISTER who studies to preach so that the uninformed of his congregation shall understand him perfectly and shall go away informed and helped by what he says will not lack for hearers. Cultured and cultivated people who have spiritual tastes are pleased with such preaching. Many a minister has ruined himself by trying to preach for some judge, or Senator, or professor, or doctor of divinity in his congregation, the result being that this special person apprehended the ineffectiveness and inappropriateness of the sermon for the congregation, and like the congregation, was displeased and disgusted.—Herald and Presbyter.

DEATHS OF MINISTERS.

A telegram from Colton, California announces the death there on Feb. 28th of Rev. W. B. WHITE. Mr. White was a minister at Lebanon church, Bethel Presbytery, for some years, and was afterwards sent to China as a missionary. From China he returned in broken health some time ago, and he has been in California for the sake of his health. He was thirty-five years of age.—Southern Presbyterian.

Rev. A. W. GASTON died about the middle of February, at Dalton, Ga. He was one of our older ministers and esteemed for his work's sake. He was a graduate of Emory and Henry College in eastern Virginia. He entered Columbia Theological Seminary in the year 1861, but by the vicissitudes of war his studies were interrupted so that he did not complete his course till the year 1867. Almost immediately on graduation he was called to the church at Dalton, Ga. There he labored unremittingly for more than twenty years, leaving a good record. His later years were spent at his home at Dalton; and from thence he was gathered to his eternal rest.—Christian Observer.

DAVIDSON NOTES.

The Junior Class held its annual banquet on the evening of March 6th. The menu was quite attractive, the tables handsomely decorated and the proceedings enlivened by speeches, toasts, and songs ad libitum.

Dr. Harrison delivered a lecture on The Romance Period before the students of the Presbyterian College in Charlotte a few days ago. The lecture was favorably commented upon by the Charlotte papers. On last Friday Dr. Smith lectured on the Xrays in the Y. M. C. A. Hall of Charlotte.

Monday, March 1st, will long be held in pleasant memory by the students and citizens of Davidson. Prof. and Mrs. Griffin, of the Presbyterian College of Charlotte, gave one of their charming concerts in our Y.M. C. A. Hall. The hall was crowded, and the few who stayed away have been regretting it ever since. Mrs. Grffin has a voice which is at once clear, sweet, powerful, and well trained, and the Professor is a perfect master of the violin. They were rapturously encored again and again.

Miss Elizabeth Bennett, of Brooklyn, N. Y., will spend some time in the village, the guest of Miss Mary Martin.

From the Junior orators of the 22d the Faculty has chosen the following as representatives of the Literary Societies at the ensuing commencement:

Phi Society.—S. H. Hines, Milton, N. C., R. A. Love, Gastonia, N. C., H. W. Wilson, Charlotte, N.C.

Eu. Society.—F. C. Barth, Atlanta, Ga., W. L. Dick, Charleston, S. C., W. J. Garrison, Pineville, N. C.

LOIS.

OUR PREMIUM BIBLE.

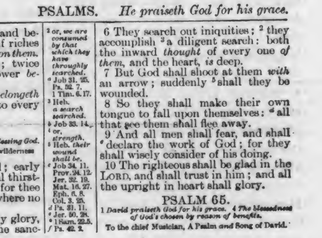
Measures 5x7 inches when Closed, and Contains 1,600 Pages of Reading Matter—Several hundred pages of Useful Information, besides the Scriptural Text.

At length we find ourselves with pride and pleasure, able to offer a Bible premium to workers for the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN. The size and quality of type of our Bible is represented by the cut here given:

The binding is flexible, the edges are gilt and the references within are full. The Bible contains besides 1050 pages of Scriptural text, the HELPS to Scripture reading and study including Subject Index, Concordance, a most serviceable General Topical Index, a large number of pages treating of the Titles, Authorship, Distinctive Characters, Contents, &c., of the various books of the Bible, A Description of the Inhabitants, Physical Geography, Customs and Political Condition of the Holy Land at the beginning of the Christian era, the Botany of the Bible, Glossary of Antiquities, Customs, 12 maps, etc., being the Oxford Helps, acknowledged to be the very best, besides 124 full page illustrations of the Languages, Writing, &c., of the Old and New Testaments, of the bas reliefs and the like, discoveries in archæological researches, and now in the British museum—and very much else; making altogether the most desirable copy of the Scriptures for Bible students that has come to our knowledge. The book contains over 1,600 pages.

The Bible is an offer in connection with the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN—the only medium thro which one can become well acquainted with what is going on in the Synod of North Carolina—on the folowing terms:

We will give this Bible as payment for help rendered to any old subscriber who will send us the name of a BONA FIDE new subscriber along with $2.25.



The new subscriber gets the paper very cheap—we offer it to any bona fide new subscriber for $1.50 for the first year—and the worker gets amply compensated in a magnificently cheap Bible for his or her good work.

A new subscriber to get the Bible can subscribe for himself at $1.50 and then send another new subscriber with $2.25.

The Premium offered is the Genuine Edition of the Oxford Teacher's Bible.

We trust our friends will go to work promptly on this plan.

A VISIT TO THE HOME OF LUTHER AND MELANCTHON.

BY T. W. LINGLE.

One evening about eight o'clock early in October as my train approached a station just after crossing a long bridge over the Elbe, the porter called out "Wittenberg!" Getting my umbrella and valise together I stepped off to stay till the next day and see something of this ancient German town known to all the world to-day as "the cradle of the Reformation." After spending a few minutes in the depot looking at the railroad schedule, I was surprised to find no one still remaining who could show me a place where I could put in for the night. After sometime I discovered a small boy and girl with a wagon whom I requested to show me the way to the Bahnhof (depot) hotel. The boy gave me a very prompt reply in a miserable German dialect scarcely intelligible to a native, much less a foreigner, and politely requested that I lay my valise in his little wagon and he would take me to the place desired. As we passed under a railroad bridge and up a dark street, I was delighted with the simplicity of the two children and their conversation, though they found it about as difficult to understand my German as I did to understand theirs. Having reached the hotel I gave them a few pfennigs, probably the first they had ever had, and they smiled as if they were as deeply indebted to me as I felt to them, as I told my little friends good-bye. After supper, a good night's sleep, and some inquiries from the proprietor as to the best way to see certain buildings, I stepped out to catch my first glimpse of the streets hallowed by the footsteps of preachers, professors and painters in centuries gone by. I observed that the street I was on was called Kollegian Strasse, in honor of the university past which it leads. This famous institution was founded by [illegible]erick the Wise in 1502, and si[illegible]rs later, Martin Luther, who had studied in the university at Erfurt and was now twenty-five years old, was called to the chair of philosophy. In 1512 he was transferred to the chair of theology, and six years later Philip Melancthon, then only twenty-one years old, was called from Tubingen University to teach Hebrew and Greek. These two men were soon acknowledged as the profoundest scholars of Germany and without a peer in all Europe, excepting Erasmus at Cambridge, and thousands of students from all parts crowded in and Wittenberg became at once the greatest center of learning on the continent. After the death of these two professors the university lost its prestige forever, though it continued work till the year 1817, when it was united with the university at Halle. The main building is now used as barracks for soldiers, which seems almost sacriligious when one recalls what this noble old institution did for the world.

On the same street is the building in which young theological students were trained for the active work of their calling, and in the court behind this building stands the residence occupied by Luther. It is an immense structure, part of which was used as an Augustinian monastery before Luther went to Wittenberg. The visitor is shown five rooms of the house that contain some relics of the great reformer. Among these relics are to be seen Luther's stove, chair, table, cup, and a copy of the first edition of the Bible ever printed in the German language. Luther completed this translation on the Wartburg, at Eisenach, during his years of seclusion upon returning from his trial at Worms, putting the Word of God for the first time into the common language of the people, or as one has tersely expressed it, "he made God speak German." This translation of the Bible is the standard of the German tongue to-day, and for hundreds of years preserved the only unity of the German people, that of language, literature and thought, and furnished the ground of hope for national unity and regeneration.

Between the Luther house and the university with end towards the street, stands a respectable, well preserved building on which is a tablet bearing the following inscription: "In this house lived, worked and died Philip Melancthon." He had been called to Wittenberg at the recommendation of the humanist and Hebrew scholar Reuchlin. Though fourteen years younger than Luther, he taught him more Hebrew as well as Greek, thus preparing him to give the German peoples the Bible, which was to serve as the foundation, not only of their religion, but also of their literature and national life. He introduced the Greek Testament, the first edition ever printed, gotten out by Erasmus "who learned Greek at Oxford and taught it at Cambridge." To-day Melancthon is still known as the greatest teacher of his time, and Feb. 16th, the whole German nation celebrate the 500th anniversary of his birth.

A little farther out the same street at the town market, under Gothic roofing, stand twin statues of Luther and Melancthon, on the pedestals of which are inscribed well-known sentences from their writings, among which is the first line of Luther's immortal hymn, "A strong tower is our God." Not far from here stands the house where Lucas Cranoch lived and became famous for all time by painting pictures of his two more famous fellow-citizens, and such Biblical scenes as were illustrative of the stern and rigid temperament of the stormy days of the Reformation.

Near the end of the steeet stand the ruins of the castle occupied by the electors of Saxony till 1542. Two round, roofless towers, with holes made by cannon ball in previous centuries give some evidence of the history of the town. Just beside it, as it were, stands the "Castle Church" on whose doors Luther posted his ninety-five theses Thursday, October 31st, 1517. Pope Leo X. desired a large sum of money for the building of St. Peters at Rome, and had given Albert, the archbishop of Mainz, instructions to sell certificates of the forgiveness of sins at certain rates, according to the nature of the sin. Albert borrowed 40,000 florins from a banker to begin the undertaking with, and gave a sub-contract to John Tetzel, a former student here in Leipzig. No such indulgences had been sold in Wittenberg by the Church for many years. Members of the parish church went to Luther for advice. The result was that Luther prepared his views in theses and posted them on the church door, at the same time sending a copy to Albert; thinking that they contained nothing rash. He was astonished to wake up and find himself famous and the leading figure in the movement towards a great reform in the Christian Church. The wooden doors on which the theses were posted were destroyed by fire at the time of the bombardment of Wittenberg by the Austrian troops in 1760 during the seven years' war, and the church was further injured by a French bombardment in 1813, since which time it has been restored. There are inscriptions all around the church, both inside and out, in Latin, Greek, Hebrew and German, placed there in the 16th and 17th centuries. The wooden doors were replaced in 1858 by the king of Prussia with heavy metallic doors which bear the original Latin text of the theses. In the arch is a crucifix with a picture of Luther and Melancthon reverently kneeling. Above the doors stand the statues of the electors, Frederick the Wise and John, as if still guarding the reformed doctrine. Within the church bronze plates with Latin inscriptions mark the spot where the bones of Luther and Melancthon quietly rest. The many inscriptions and pictures of reformation scenes give the visitor the feeling that he is standing at a holy shrine.

Across the street stands an immense marble statue of Kaiser Friederich erected in 1894, which reminds one of the fact that a noble empire of the German people has been reared on a part of the ruins of the Holy Roman Empire of the Middle Ages.

In the center of the town stands the "City Church," also bearing many inscriptions and paintings by the two Cranochs. On the east side of the church in an open place Luther often preached to thousands of eager hearers, and there in 1520 the Lord's Supper was for the first time celebrated by people of the reformed faith, nine years before they received the name of "Protestant" at Speyer.

Returning towards the depot I happened to observe an oak tree carefully surrounded with an iron enclosure. On examination I discovered a tablet announcing that this tree marks the spot where Luther publicly burned the Pope's bull and the papal laws December 10th, 1520, in the presence of the professors and students of the university; the special act that caused the emperor Charles to summon the dict of Worms for his public trial. A hundred years before John Huss of Bohemia had been condemned to death by the council at Constance for advancing the same principles that Luther now supported. Huss died at the stake the death of a heretic. When Luther appeared the time was ripe for reform, and all Germanic nations became Protestant within a few decades, and instead of regarding him as a heretic the world honors him as the greatest of all reformers.

Only a short distance away flows the beautiful Elbe coming down out of the mountains of Bohemia, which is the scene of an extensive river trade between Hamburg and Dresden. Wittenberg containing a population of 17,000 people forms an important intermediate station.

As I left this fascinating old town, and as I thought of the tremendous labors and hardships of the reformers in attempting to give to the world a purified faith in the living God, I could not avoid being filled with an increased desire to devote my own humble life to the work of extending a knowledge of the mighty principles and precious truths spoken by our Lord and Master, and transmitted to us by his noble servants who lived and worked in the years gone by.

LETTER FROM MRS. G. C. WORTH.

WUSIH, CHINA, Jan. 20, '97.

Yesterday the mail came bringing the little book the children made, and after looking over a part of it, I was about to put it away when it opened of itself to the middle and I found myself looking at a very familiar house, but I was so surprised that for an instant I did not recognize it. Then how glad I was to see it! I have gloated over every part of it.

Well, we are in trouble now with our cook. I wrote yesterday that G. was afraid Ahmeh had appendicitis, he is no better and an operation is the only treatment for it. With a trouble of that kind and the danger of an operation, of course, it would not do to operate on one of these ignorant superstitious people, so he has been giving him only beef juice and brandy. The boy does not want to take it, and yesterday G. found him taking some Chinese mess, so he told him he must decide to take foreign medicine alone or Chinese alone, and last night his brothers sent word to Mr. McG. to tell us not to give him any more medicine. (This is the Chinese round about way of doing things, always have a "middle man" for every affair.) We feared he would not recover before, now there is still less hope and so it would not be very safe to have him die in our house. G. and Mr. McG. are now at work trying to make his brothers take him home, which is fortunately just across the narrow street. This all seems very inhuman and not Christlike, but here is a boy who has been working for foreigners about five years and now he is ill refuses to trust us. His family have never been friendly and as we can do nothing for him, we feel that it is right to protect ourselves.

We are "eating bitterness" too, as the Chinese say, by having no cook. The same day I wrote the above the old woman's son came in to help us. It was a rather discouraging prospect to take a man in who had no idea how to build a fire; did not know the plates and cups etc., even by name and who of course had not the faintest idea how to start to cook. Anything but nice, but he is rather bright and anxious to please and has learned wonders.

This morning Mr. McG. had a man to come in from a village ten miles away only to hear "the doctrine;" he has been in before and seems very much in earnest. Mrs. McG. preached to him for about two hours and promised to go out to see him in a few days. I am learning Chinese so slowly that sometimes I do not feel that I am learning at all, but as I listened to Mr. McG. this morning I found I could understand nearly all he said; of course there were a great many words I did not know, but I could follow him easily. He preached yesterday morning on the parable of the Prodigal Son, and in the afternoon I asked my woman to tell we what he said, as I wanted to see how well she understood. She told me the first part of the story all right, but said that when he went back to his father, his father told him to get out and would have nothing to do with him. I tell you this to show how discouraging the work often is. My woman listens better than most of those who attend the services and yet you see she lost the whole teaching of this lesson. I corrected her and tried to tell her the story as it is, but my speech is so halting that I never feel any confidence that I can make them understand in the least.

To-day was a beautiful day and none of us had been out for some time. So after dinner we hired a little boat for fifteen cents. We went first to the new cotton spinning mill as I had not been there since last year. I never saw such a marvellous change in so short a time. The mill is a very handsome brick building and is fitted with intricate and delicate machinery, besides this there are several foreign houses for the overseers and good native houses for the foremen, all are finished and they were just waiting for two steam pipes to begin work.

How I wish some of the good mechanics and machinists at home would come out here. We just long for some good Christian business men; there are many interested in missions who do not feel like being missionaries. If they only knew it they might do almost as much good by leading a good honest business life here as if they became missionaries. The missionaries have much to contend with in the example set by ungodly foreigners.

CHRISTIANITY IN EARNEST.

The story is related of the late Hon. Thomas Corwin, formerly governor of Ohio, that he dropped into a meeting one evening in Lebanon, Ohio, to see what the church was doing. It waa a meeting of the Bible Society, and the business was done in a very lifeless way. The secretary reported that two hundred families in the county were without a Bible in their homes.

One man deplored the shameful fact, when Mr. Corwin rose and said;

"Mr. President, may I be allowed to say something on the subject?"

"Certainly, Mr. Corwin; we shall be glad to hear you."

"Well, sir, I want to say that you are not in earnest. Your report says that there are two hundred families in this county without the Bible. This could not be if you were in earnest. In the great contest for the election of Harrison we Republican members of Congress gave our whole salaries to carry that election. We thought the salvation of the country depended on it. If you want to carry on this work and really mean that every man shall have the Bible, you must be in earnest. You must go to work and give every man the Bible."

The meeting was electrified. Some one immediately rose and moved that Thomas Corwin be elected president of the Warren County Bible Society. It was unanimously carried, and Mr. Corwin again rose and said:

"Sir, if I accept the presidency of this society, it is on one condition—that you go to work, that no such report as this ever be made again. When this society meets three months from to-day the report must be that every family in Warren county has a copy of the Bible."

The work was done, and every family supplied.—Exchange.

TEST YOUR SINCERITY.

Test your sincerity by the manner in which you control or resist your evil thoughts. Do you suffer your thoughts to tamper with evil, to dally with wrong-doing? If so, you are not sincere. The tyrant Nero tried to degrade some of the great Roman nobles to as low a level as his own, by making them appear as actors in the arena on the stage. To disobey was death. Florus was bidden thus to appear, and, doubting whether to obey, consulted the virtuous and resolute Agrippinus. "Go, by all means," answered Agrippinus. "Well, but," replied Florus with astonishment, "you yourself refused to obey." "Yes," answered Agrippinus, "because I did not deliberate about it." The categorical imperative, the naked, absolute prohibition of duty, must be implicitly, unquestioningly, instantly, obeyed. To deliberate about it is to be a secret traitor; and the line which separates the secret traitor from the open rebel is thin as the spider's web.—Canon Farrar.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Charles Reade once gave a recipe for writing novels to a young novelist now well known. It ran thus: "Make 'em laugh; make 'em cry; make 'em wait."—From "Chronicle and Comment," in The Bookman.

Mrs. Ruth McEnery Stuart has been recently giving readings in New Orleans. She is now in Texas.

According to Professor Gregor, of McGill University, who has been lecturing upon French-Canadian literature, Louis Frechette, Phillippe de Gaspe, and Octave Cremazie are the three most notable French-Canadian authors.

Washington Irving never married. While at work upon the last part of his Knickerbocker History of New York, Miss Matilda Hoffman, to whom he was engaged, died. The blow was severe and drove him for a time from all society, though he had the courage to finish his humorous history. It is stated that Irving was deeply attached to an English girl with whose family he was intimate at Dresden, but when he died at the age of seventy-six the lock, to which he had always himself kept the key, was found to contain a braid of hair and a miniature upon which wss written the name of his early betrothed.

There is no one living now to bear the name of Lowell and "Elmwood;" his home at Cambridge has a deserted air. The house is rented to strangers and is in marked contrast to the home of Longfellow, at some distance from it. Miss Longfellow still lives in her father's house, with its large verandah and spacious rooms. The poet's books are many of them just as he left them, and his library abounds in handsome and complete volumes of famous authors.

CHANGES OF ADDRESS.

Correspondents will please note the following changes of address:

Rev. R. M. Caldwell, from Dunmore, W. Va., to Moorefield, Ky.

Rev. B. F. Patton, from Tunica, Miss., to Clarksdale, Miss. His field of labor remains the same.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Home Missions in Mecklenburg Presbytery:—By invitation from the Home Mission Committee of Mecklenburg Presbytery a meeting was held, Feb. 23d and 24th, in Gastonia, N.C., by members from Concord, Bethel and Mecklenburg Presbyteries for the purpose of conferring about the work of our church among the cotton mill population in this Piedmont section.

Deep interest and enthusiasm pervaded each session. The importance, the needs and difficulties of the work were thoroughly discussed. Several important recommendations, looking to practical, united efforts, were adopted to be sent to these Presbyteries for their consideration at the approaching spring meetings. R. P. S.

Tarboro:—Rev. J. B. Morton, pastor of this church, writes of an excellent feature to encourage the children: We have in connection with our Sabbath-school what we term "The Old Guard" whose effort it is to attend every Sabbath. If a scholar is from home and produces a certificate from another school, that he has attended there, he does not lose his place. A prize is awarded each winner. The longer this may continue from year to year, the greater honor. A Christian Endeavor Society is to be organized at an early date.

Evangelization in Stokes:—Rev. R. W. George closed a meeting on the 1st inst., at Friendship Baptist church in Stokes county. It was a good meeting. Twenty-two made confession of faith in Christ. Five of these were colored people. Bro. George has an invitation to return and hold another meeting at Pilot Mountain. The people promise to close their stores and factories during the times of service if he will come. The Lord is indeed blessing wonderfully the work of this brother.

Statesville:—Rev. A. T. Graham of Davidson, N. C., assisted Rev. W. C. Brown in the communion services held at Front Street Mission on last Sabbath.

Fayetteville:—The first Sunday in March was the fifth anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. A. J. McKelway of Fayetteville. There have been added fifiy-six members during the present year and two hundred and forty during the pastorate. Rev. Dr. Rosebro, Rev. A. D. McClure, Rev. William Black, and Dr. Guerrant have all conducted special services and the pastor has been assisted during the summer months by Candidates C. M. Richards and C. E. Hodgin. Fifty-six infants have been baptized and seventy-one adults, and one hundred and two children of the church received into full membership. There are now five Sunday schools under the care of the church and there is regular preaching at seven points. The work of the church is on the eve of still larger expansion from the industrial development of the town. A new church will be begun this month at Holt's factory and Rev. H. T. Graham has entered upon his work under circumstances the most happy and fortunate. He has already won the hearts of the people and his sermons have been universally admired. Mr. Graham preaches in the church in the absence of the pastor in the conduct of the Synodical mission work, and gives the rest of his time to the mission points and to Sherwood church.

First Church, Charlotte:—The installation services of Rev. Dr. Howerton as pastor of the church were conducted by Rev. Dr. Shearer who preached upon Roman 11:13, "I magnify mine office," and Rev. J. W. Stagg who delivered the charges to pastor and people. A pleasing incident was the fact stated by Dr. Shearer that Dr. Howerton had commenced his preparation for the pastorate under his ministry twenty years ago.

Alamance Church:—Has lost heavily by death and removals, but has not only made up the amounts lost by these causes, but has gone beyond the original subscription of pastor's salary, in addition to giving liberally to all the objects of the church.

FLORIDA.

Plant City:—Rev. J. M. Forbis has begun his labors here. He will preach on the first and third Sabbaths.

ALABAMA.

Citronville:—The membership of this church has been doubled since its organization, five months ago. Messrs. J. H. Bushong and Henry Rurdemann were recently elected elder and deacon respectively.

LOUISIANA.

Third Church, New Orleans:—The fiftieth anniversary of this church was celebrated last week. The services beginning on Friday evening by an address by Dr. Palmer. On Saturday evening, after a sermon by Dr. Nall, a report of the secular history of the church was given from which we glean that among the pastors who have served this church are Dr. James Richard. Dr. H. M. Smith, Rev. A. C. Hyland, Rev. N. Keff Smith and Rev. R. W. Mecklin. On the Sabbath morning Rev. R. W. Mecklin, the pastor, preached an historical sermon and at night the pulpit was occupied by Rev. Dr. Mallard. The impressive and interesting exercises closed with a short sketch of the religious institutions of the church.

KENTUCKY.

Woodland Presbyterian Church:—Rev. W. E Keller was recently installed pastor. The services were conducted by Rev. Thos. E. Converse, Rev. D. M. Sweets and Rev. J. S. Lyons, D. D.

Versailles:—The pastor, Rev. Dr. G H. Rout, has recently been assisted by Evangelist Rev. J. H. Hopper in a series of most precious services. Seventeen were received into the church upon profession and one by letter.

GENERAL.

At a meeting of the Presbytery of Brooklyn, held lately, a petition was presented by thirty-four Italians, for the organization of an Italian church, to be located not far from the Hamilton ferry.

Rev. D. L. Moody is holding a series of services in Cincinnati. He will return to New York in April.

Rev. Dr. Geo. P. Wilson, of Philadelphia, has been installed pastor of the Presbyterian church (Northern) of Hagerstown, Md.

PERSONALS.

Rev. R. E. Caldwell, of Winston, is assisting Rev. D. J Currie during the present week in a series of services at Chapel Hill. May the blessing of the Holy Spirit accompany the preaching of the Word.

Rev. W. J. Sechrest has resigned the pastorate of the First church at Orange, Texas.

Rev. R. G. Pearson will hold a meeting at Marshall, Texas. beginning March 11th.

Mr. Edgar Tufts, of Union Seminary, will, upon his graduation in May, take charge of the Watauga Field now occupied by Candidate L. E. Boston. Mr. Tufts is already a favorite with the people of Watauga county and will be an acquisition to our band of workers.

Mr. Boston writes that the people have responded with great liberality to his canvass for Mr. Tufts' support. As lumber is one of the articles contributed, we suppose Mr. Tufts desires to build.

Rev. John L. Allison, now of Portsmouth, but pastor-elect of the Westminster church, Baltimore, will take charge of his new pastorate on April first.

Rev. Alexander Sprunt, of Rock Hill, S. C., recently visited Henderson, N. C., preaching two sermons on the Sabbath to this, his former charge. The visit was one of great pleasure to his many friends.

Rev. J. R. Howerton, D. D., of Charlotte, will deliver the missionary sermon before the Columbia Theological Seminary in May.

THE POWER OF GOD'S WORD.

At the ninety-second anniversary of the British and Foreign Bible Society, Rev. Henry Haigh, who has been for twenty-two years distributing the Scriptures in the country of Mysore, India made an address showing how the Bible is being circulated in India. Among other instances of the same sort, the two following pointedly and beautifully show how the Scriptures testify to their own excellence and prove their own power over the human heart.

The first of these is about a great Sanskrit scholar who on reading a Sanskrit Bible was so carried away with its teachings that he carried it with him wherever he went. He became an enthusiastic student of this, to him, "most wonderful Veda," and, though not a professing Christian and having no desire to be baptized, went about on his own responsibility expounding and reading it to all he mingled with. He would go out on long journeys for this purpose and then come back to Mr. Haigh, sometimes after an absence of three months, and give him an account of his trip. In giving an account of what had happened at one of the places he visited on one of his trips, he said: "As soon as I got there I asked for the chief pundit of the place, and was introduced to him. He came, and we spoke in Sanskrit together, and he seemed pleased with me. Then I asked him if he had any disciples whom he would call together, so that we could talk, and he called them together, sixty of them. When they came, I sat down, opened the Bible and began to chant from the Bible, as we chant from our Vedas, and the chief pundit and the disciples listened. I chanted from the Psalms, and they said, 'What Veda is that?' It is beautiful. We have never heard that Veda before. Where did you get it? Still I went on, and then when I had chanted some of the Psalms I went to the Gospels, and I began to chant some of the stories from the lips of Christ, and they listened again and wondered again, and at last they said, 'We must have that Veda;' and I have brought home sixty rupees from the people in that place in order that I may send them sixty Sanskrit Bibles at once.' And yet men dare speak of the sacred literature of India and the Christian's Bible in the same breath!

The second instance is a beautiful and touching example of simple child-like faith in the plain teachings of Scripture and shows how that faith was rewarded. Mr. Haigh says: "There was a man living away across the country, miles from any missionary. One day the missionary went there, and found one who was instructed in the Gospels. The man had never seen a missionary; he had never seen a native teacher, but he had read the book carefully, read it repeatedly, and had adopted as his the Guru whom it portrayed, and what was the consequence? That man, having seen how good the Guru was, had said to himself, 'I must obey this Guru. What are his commands?' Turning to the Gospel once more, he found the command that he should be baptized in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. What was he to do? He had never seen a Christian church, he had never seen the ordinance of baptism administered, but he had a way of obeying the command which was quite his own. Day by day he went down to the tank and looking up toward heaven he said, 'I baptize myself in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost,' and at each name he plunged into the water and came out again. Who shall say that, that man was not baptized from heaven? Nay, more than that, he saw another command which was that he was to eat and drink to the memory of Christ's death till He came, and so, although he had never been in a church, as I say, day by day he took a handful of rice and putting it into his mouth, said, 'This I do in remembrance of Christ,' and drinking a little water he said, 'I drink this because Christ died for me.'"

Surely the words of the psalmist are still true: "The entrance of thy words giveth light"

TRAINED NURSES NEEDED IN SOOCHOW, CHINA.

The following letter was read before the Executive Committee of Foreign Missions at its meeting on February 9th, and the letter was ordered to be published in order that the attention of the Church might be called to the urgent need therein mentioned.

At the same meeting of the Committee, Miss E. C. Lee, of Baltimore, a graduate of the nurses' hospital of Baltimore, was appointed as a missionary to China. She is ready to go whenever the funds necessary to send her can be obtained. She cannot be sent now unless these funds can be obtained by special contribution. The amount needed to send Miss Lee in response to this call will be $150 for her outfit, about $250 for her traveling expenses, and $500 for her support for one year. The letter published below will speak for itself:

S. H. CHESTER,
Secretary.

Soochow, Dec. 28th, 1896.

"This is a call for two trained female nurses for the Soochow hospital. Dr. Wilkinson wrote to you on this subject March 30th, 1896. Now after nearly a year we, the three undersigned, unite in this urgent request that you give this call your particular attention.

"We have the lot enclosed and a few buildings erected: expect to erect more buildings soon. Two young Chinese women are under training in the Methodist hospital in this city and will be ready to do efficient work in the female wards as soon as the hospital is opened.

"The Chinese women come freely to the dispensary now, and there is every prospect of having a large number of female patients to enter the hospital.

"We unite in making an urgent call to you to select and send out as soon as possible two trained female nurses. They ought to be on the ground now learning the language and becoming familiar with the leading features of medical mission work in China.

"We call for two because they are needed. The work for which they are intended will go on day and night and one will rest while the other is on duty.

"And now allow me to emphasize one point. We wish to avoid the mistake of leaving the medical work too much in the hands of the natives. Experience has shown that native helpers must be constantly under careful guidance and oversight. Those who neglect this rule find that great abuses promptly appear and injure the work looked at from a medical as well as from a missionary point of view. Patients have been submitted to extortion and exaction. In other words the native helpers in hospitals have practiced the plea of squeezing money out of patients, and foreigners have felt themselves powerless to prevent it.

"Now this is something that we intend to neither ignore nor allow. We must have native help: that is plain. But we most earnestly desire to so arrange this work that we may have a full corps of foreign helpers. Two competent trained female nurses—trained fully at some first-class hospital—are greatly needed. There is here a field of of usefulness for two Christian women that cannot be surpassed. They ought to know the language and ways of the Chinese; and they ought to be sent out to begin the study of the language as soon as possible, so that they may be fitted for work—medical and missionary—at the bedside of the women and children who come to the hospital. There is no one in sight on the field who is willing to undertake the work or fitted for it. If you can find one good nurse send her along; don't wait till you get both.

PRESBYTERIAN HIGH SCHOOL.

The Y. M. C. A. of the Presbyterian High School of North Carolina, held a business meeting at 12 o'clock, Sunday 14th ult., for the purpose of electing its yearly officers. The following men were elected: Mr. A. B. Croom, president; Mr. J. H. Allison, vice-president; Mr. J. A. Ratcliffe, recording secretary; Mr. W. T. Johnson, corresponding secretary. Delegates were elected to attend the Y. M. C. A. convention held at Winston, N. C., Feb. 19th-22d, 1897. Short speeches were made by all the new officers also by several others. No other business before the house the meeting adjourned. We were dismissed with an earnest prayer by Mr. S. V. Scott. And in the afternoon the regular prayer-meeting was held in the hall conducted by Mr. J. H. Tolar, who made an earnest talk from Acts 5:19. The Y. M. C. A. has a nice reading room, and all the best reading matter in it. The boys have reorganized the Athletic Association and are now practicing for the baseball team. Mr. M C. Tuch is president of the association, and Mr. R. H. Bellamy vice-president. The school is doing nicely now. The boys are working hard.

FOREIGN MISSION RECEIPTS FOR FEBRUARY.

The receipts for Foreign Missions in February were $16,538 37, an increase as compared with last February of $7, 127.32. Of this increase $5,000 was a single donation, and $2,000 was a legacy, leaving $127.32 as the increase in the regular Church contributions.

The March receipts for the past two years have been something over $17,000 If they pass the limit of $10,000 this year, we shall hope to close the year again without debt.

We cannot send out this last bulletin of the year without an earnest expression of thanks to all those whose sympathy and interest and help during the year, have made this announcement possible.

CALLED MEETING OF ORANGE PRESBYTERY.

The constitutional requirements being met, a special meeting of Orange Presbytery is hereby called, at the First Presbyterian church, Greensboro, March 18th, 1897, at 3 p. m, to consider and act upon the resignation of Rev. Cornelius Miller as evangelist in the Stokes county field, and to grant him a letter of dismission to the Presbytery of Concord, if the way be clear, that he may accept a call the Rocky River church. Also to arrange for the supply of the Stokes county field until the regular meeting of Presbytery.

ROBT. E. CALDWELL,
Moderator.

CHARGE TO OFFICERS.

The following charges were delivered on Sunday, Feb. 14th, 1897, in Westminster church, Greensboro, N. C., by the pastor, Rev. S. O. Hall. The occasion being the ordination and installation of two ruling elders and two deacons.

A high honor has been conferred upon you. By vote of the church you have been called to your respective offices. After repeated announcements had been made, and sermons had been delivered from this pulpit setting forth the warrant for these offices, and the Scriptural qualifications and duties of ruling elders and deacons, a congregational meeting was held. Before coming to this place on that occasion, we trust that petitions had been offered by each one in private for divine guidance. And then before entering upon the election we paused and prayed for the leading of the Spirit, invoking that wisdom from above which is profitable to direct, and which is promised to all them that ask. We besought the Lord who knoweth the hearts of all men to show us whom He had chosen. No nominations were made. Believing that while the lot is cast into the lap the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord, the lots were given forth and the lot fell upon you. The methods used secured the full and fair expression of the choice of the church, and we believe this choice received the sanction of her Great Head.

The session as a church court does not profess by this ordination to bestow upon you any grace beyond that which God had already imparted by His Holy Spirit. After solemn vows assumed by you and the congregation, we laid our hands upon you, to send you forth to your work with the authority and blessing of the Church.

We have just separated you four men for the work whereunto the Spirit has called you.

In view of your responsibilities, your obligations and duties, do you ask: "Who is sufficient for these things?" With a hopeful spirit you may add: "Our sufficiency is of God." From Him you may obtain "official grace for official usefulness."

Would you seek greatness—attain pre-eminence? Keep before you the gospel principle announced by Him who "came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many." "Whosoever of you will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all." Act upon this apostolic injunction: "As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God."

While yours is a post of honor it is also a post of danger. Temptations will be many and severe. You will be assaulted by the Evil One as never before. Each of you must guard his own heart and life. Neglect not the interests of your own soul. Cultivate personal piety. To this end use the means of grace. Study the Word of God, become acquainted with its teachings that you may order your life by its precepts. Be often at the throne of grace, seeking needed supplies of grace and strength. "Be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer."

ELDERS, you have been called to rule in the Church. I charge you by the interests of your immortal souls, by the worth of souls committed to your care, by the welfare of the Church, by the love you bear to the Redeemer in whose name I speak, be faithful to the trust committed to you: "Rule with diligence," "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the Church of God, which He hath purchased with His own blood." "The elders which are among you I exhort, who also am an elder. Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being examples to the flock, and when the Chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

DEACONS, remember that you in connection with the other members of the board are intrusted with the finances of the church. Upon your faithfulness depends her financial prosperity. The cultivation of the grace of giving depends upon you—upon your proper presentation of the needs of the Church, upon your proper presentation of the demands of the different causes, upon your attention to your duties. The Church rightly expects you to perform these duties. If you neglect them they go unperformed. Are you unwilling to give the necessary time to these matters? Then you are doing the Church and the Master's cause most serious injury by accepting the office and violating those solemn vows. Be slothful in your own business, neglect your own affairs if you will; but I charge you by the sacred trust committed to you by the Saviour's hands, be not slothful in His business, neglect not the affairs of His kingdom. Though you find it a thankless task, persevere in the face of all discouragements.

Be incited to high endeavor. "They that have used the office of a deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus."

RED SPRINGS SEMINARY IN FAYETTEVILLE.

The Fayetteville Observer reads thus: "February nineteenth will be known as "Red Springs Day" in Fayetteville until those delightful and talented people make a new epoch by visiting us again."

The occasion was a concert given by the musical corps of Red Springs Seminary, and some of Fayetteville's finest talent. Through the kindness of Mr. Kyle, the C. F. & Y. V. railroad ran a "College Special" from Maxton to Fayetteville. This train, decorated as it was from engine to the rear car, with pennons of blue and white (the college colors) presented quite a gala appearance.

When the seminary coach discharged its cargo, and fifty-four girls lined up in couples on the platform, Fayetteville realized the success of Red Springs Seminary. Later on, during the concert, she realized one of the reasons for the success. The girls took possession of hotel LaFayette, and with their neat college caps and fresh, rosy complexions, made so by drinking the delightful Red Springs mineral water, changed the aspect of the place, and caused it to "blossom as the rose."

For once the drummer had to take a back seat, when supper hour came, and the young ladies filled the dining-room to overflowing, while they partook of the delightful viands set before them.

The program of the concert was interesting, as was proved by the attention and repeated recalls, given by one of the finest audiences Fayetteville has ever furnished, and it was thoroughly up to the mark from an artistic standpoint.

Mrs. Linda L. Vardell, the musical director of Red Springs Seminary gave the most of the piano numbers, and her friends were glad to hear her again in concert. Her selections comprised both the classical and modern styles and were rendered with an ease of manner and freedom of touch that showed the finest training. Her octaves were given with the greatest brilliancy and the finger work in Perry's Lorelei with a wonderful velocity and certainty of touch. But we think Mrs. Vardell was at her best in the Chopin numbers. The fine touches and delicate work in the Berceuse, and the artistic phrasing of the Ballade in A flat, betokened in truth the possession of the feu sacre of the real artist.

Miss Margaret Knox and Miss Beulah Witherspoon, the two assistant music teachers of the Seminary, merited well the liberal applause they received. Miss Witherspoon played Liszt's Twelfth Rhapsodie with that abandon and poetical fire, that Liszt's music, especially the Rhapsodies, demands. And Miss Knox, in her rendition of Chopin's Polonaise in A flat, showed a clearness of touch, and a decision of manner truly delightful. Her conception of the piece was very artistic.

Perhaps the most popular numbers on the program were the two quartets, Fidelin by Brahms, and Annie Laurie, arranged by Dudley Buck. They were given by the college quartet, composed of Mrs. Mary W. Rankin, Miss Christiana McFadyen, Mrs. Vardell and Mrs. Jennie V. Rumple. This quartet, trained by Mrs. Vardell, sang with clearest enunciation and delightful phrasing, the first number, Fidelin, a little gem in itself. Dudley Buck has indeed "painted the lily" and done it successfully too, in his charming arrangement of that delightful old English ballard, Annie Laurie, and it was in this, that the quartet showed to the best advantage. They sang with perfect sympathy, and while every note of the theme was heard, the accompanying voices blended with perfect harmony in all the various modulations. The quartet sang Kienzl's German Shepherd Song as an encore, and were compelled to give still another.

Fayetteville contributed greatly to the success of the occasion in two ways: First, by furnishing several fine voices, and Mr. Frank Blount, as violinist, and secondly, by contributing an audience of about four hundred, who gave the most perfect attention, thus showing their appreciation of the high order of music given.

Mrs. A. J. McKelway, one of Fayetteville's stars, gave a delightful selection, with violin obligato by Mr. Frank Blount. Her tones were smooth and round, and she took the high notes with perfect ease. The vocal solo by Mr. Carr and the final number, a trio by Mrs. McKelway, Mr. Novitsky, and Mr. Woodmansee were beautifully rendered and the performers were enthusiastically recalled. The concert was a great success—another one of the many successes achieved by President Vardell in his work at Red Springs. We hope soon to see his girls with their bright faces, and hear some more delightful music.

BOOKS.

Charles Force Deems. This name is most grateful to many people of our State, and to a multitude who knew and loved Dr. Deems in his life and labors amongst us, and as the successful pastor of the Church of the Strangers of New York City.

His sons have edited the autobiography and added a memoir of their father. It is before us in a goodly volume of 365 pages well bound in cloth from the press of Fleming H. Revell Co., New York. Price $1.50.

This book is entertaining and helpful and instructive from first to last. Not only for our personal interest in the subject, but for its intrinsic merit, it is one of the most pleasing of the books that have lately come to us. Former friends and admirers of Dr. Deems and lovers of good wholesome religious reading and examples of good courage for right and truth will do well to get this book and read it.

St. Paul: His Life and Times, by James Iverach, M. A. This last volume in "Men of the Bible" series published by Fleming H. Revell Co., 112 Fifth Avenue, New York, is from the pen of the "Professor of Apologetics and Exegesis of the Gospels, Free Church, Aberdeen," Scotland. It is published uniform in style and binding and price (75 cents) with the others of this valuable series. The series is meant to be popular, and brief, but clear results of Biblical scholarship on the life and times of important Scriptural subjects. This one is excellent.

Did the Pardon Come too Late? By Mrs. Ballington-Booth.

This is another and equally pleasing addition to the list of "Attractive Booklets, bound in board covers, decorated with delicately shaded colors of ink illustrated" from the press of Fleming H. Revell Co., at 30 cents each, or $3.00 per dozen. These booklets deserve a wide circulation. They teach good moral lessons, and arouse kind feelings. They also stir souls to be better and do nobler deeds of charity and mercy.

MAGAZINES.

The frontispiece of McClure's for March is a fine portrait of Mark Twain painted by Charles Noel Flagg, and never before reproduced. The initial number of Robert Louis Stevenson's new novel, a brief critical paper of Rudyard Kipling as a poet by W. D. Howell's, personal impressions of the great illustrative artist, Daniel Verge, by his intimate friend, August Jaccase, personal adventures of Canon Doyle on board a Greenland whaler and Mr. Garland's paper on General Grant are among the interesting features of this number. The S. S. McLure Co., New York.

CATECHISM.

Question. 32. What benefits do they that are effectually called partake of in this life?

Answer. They that are effectually called do in this life partake of justification, adoption, and sanctification, and the several benefits which in this life do accompany or flow from them.

Time. A. D., 57.

Place. Written in Ephesus.

INTRODUCTORY.

This year our lessons are in the Acts and such parts of the Epistles as make the history plainer or apply certain principles, or illustrate the views and purposes of the apostles and founders of the early church. The lessons of this quarter have brought us to the conversion of Saul of Tarsus, the proud persecutor, henceforth to be the humble obedient and courageous Paul the apostle to the Gentiles.

The present lesson was chosen to be the lesson on temperance for the Quarter, but is more than that a statement of the motive power of the life and labors of Paul. The selection is from the first Epistle of Paul to the Corinthians. It seems to have been written in answer to a letter and upon reports received from visitors. It was written at Ephesus near the close of the three year's stay of Paul in that city. Paul was on his third missionary journey. The church was founded about five years before this was written.

In the earlier verses of this chapter Paul asserts his apostolic authority and his right to maintenance as a minister of the Gospel of Christ. He does not claim this under the circumstances, seeking to give them an example of unselfish devotion to the cause of Christ. This, continued in the lesson, shows self-sacrifice to commend Christ to sinners and saints.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 19. Free from all men. Not under any personal obligation to give his service and yet labor for his support. Made myself servant. Voluntarily undergoing toil and privation to save some. Might gain. Not for any personal advantage, but souls for the salvation and service of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Vs. 20. Because as a Jew. Conformed to the rites and customs of his own people, so far as not wrong, not as believing them necessary, but in order to gain the Jews. Under the law. Those who laid great stress on the ceremonial law and literal obedience to the commandments.

Vs. 21. Without law. The Gentiles who had not the law of Moses. As without law. Not binding them to keep the ceremonial law or to practice the peculiar rites enjoined in the law of Moses, but showing that the obligation to observe them had been done away by their fulfillment in the Gospel. Being not without law to God. As he did not mean that any one could be without the obligation to obey the moral law.

Vs. 22. To the weak. Carnal Christians, babes in Christ, who did not know their freedom, or understand their privileges, narrow in mind, imperfect in conscience, offended by things in themselves, lawful, but not expedient. Became I as weak. Gave up my rights and privileges. All things to all men. Not to do any thing wrong which would only lead into sin, but whatever was not sinful that would save some. He used every possible endeavor that at least some might be saved.

Vs. 23. For the Gospel's sake That it might be advanced and successful. Partaker thereof with you. Being in sympathy not with sin or sinning, but with the weak and sinful in the consciousness of common weakness, and the desire to overcome it, and to get the victory over self and sin, to "mortify the deeds of the flesh," with a longing and a hope and a striving for better lives and nobler deeds through the grace of Christ.

Vs. 24. Run in a race. The duty of practicing self-denial for good results. Paul now illustrates by reference to the great Grecian games. The Isthmian games at Corinth, held every two years at the Isthmus about eight miles from Corinth and in full view of the city, were very ancient and famous. One receiveth the prize. One of these games was the foot-race. All who entered and trained ran, but only one could receive the crown. In the Christian contest all may secure the prize, by bending the body to the utmost exertion, straining the soul to the intensest interest, stirring the spirit to the sublimest self sacrifice. But the prize is worth more than the cost. The prize is largely in the posture of the contestant and the spiritual victory all along the way.

Vs. 25. Striveth. Is "agonizeth," puts forth intensely every power. Is temperate Abstains from all that would excite, stimulate and ultimately enfeeble, even from some things lawful that would weaken. Hence the lesson here of total abstinence from intoxicating drinks.

Vs 26. Not as uncertainly. Not, "without seeing the goal," or "in the dark," or "deviating to the right or left," as if uncertain where or what for the racer is going. Beateth the air. Fighting a shadow. The boxer is in earnest fighting the Prince of darkness, and wicked spirits in high places.

Vs. 27. I keep under my body. Strike under the eye a deadly blow whenever the body rises in rebellion against spiritual interests. Bring it into subjection. To lead as a captive. Be a castaway. Not finally lost, but rejected as useless or unfaithful or unfit for the service of Christ, to preach to others. The thought is not of salvation, but of service. Lest he should have to say I have preached to others in vain.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

The temperance truth here is specially that every Christian should contest the claims of Satan and allow nothing to appetite or passion, or lust that would weaken for the fight. Such an one is running a race also "looking unto Jesus."

1. The prize is the crown of glory.

2. The runner can count on the fulness of grace. "My grace is sufficient for them."

3. "Lest where I have preached to others I myself should be a castaway."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, March 21st, 1897.

BY REV. B. E. WALLACE.

How Our Bodies Influence Our Souls. Daniel 1: 8-21.

(A TEMPERANCE TOPIC.)

Text for the week:

"Glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's." 1 Cor. 6: 20.

Daily Readings:

Monday, Samson's Mother, Judges 13: 11-24.

Tuesday, The Nazarites, Num. 6: 1-8.

Wednesday, The Rechabites, Jer. 35: 1-19.

Thursday, John The Baptist, Luke 1: 5-17.

Friday, Solomon's Opinion, Prov. 23: 29-35.

Saturday, Paul's Opinion, 1 Cor. 9: 23-27.

Sunday, Topic, Dan. 1: 8-21.

Suggestions for Leaders:

1. Use this topic to impress lessons of emperance.

2. Show the intimate relation of soul and body—how the one influences the other.

3. Illustrate the beauty of temperate habits as seen in Daniel's life.

4. If convenient have a physician to address your society on the evils that intemperate habits bring upon the body.

5. Have your pastor to show how the same intemperate habits affect the soul.

Notes;

God gave us our souls and our bodies, and closely linked them together with an inter-dependence that is clearly seen yet never understood. The body influences the soul, and the soul in turn influences the body, How or where they are connected no dissecting room has revealed. Our bodies and our souls belong to God and He commands us to use them for His glory. The body is made the abode of the Holy Spirit Being thus highly honored and set apart to such holy use, therefore the supreme necessity of keeping it pure, seeking its noblest developement. To establish this purity and purchase this noble development habits of strictest temperance must be cultivated.

Let us specify some rules for producing strong bodies:

1. Do not touch the wine cup; be a Nazarite.

2. Do not use tobacco). The habit is filthy, a nerve eater and a tissue consumer.

3. Be temperate in eating. Think of the horrors that follow a dyspeptic.

4. Do not keep late hours. There is nothing so helpful to the body as sleep.

5. Work at manual labor. Do not be afraid to swing the axe or grapple the plow. Any honest work is honorable.

6 Get the mastery over your body and your spirit by bringing them into complete subjection to the Lord Jesus Christ.

Concord Presbytery will meet in regular session in Statesville, N. C., April 27th, 1897, at 7.30 p. m.

HOLT. — Suddenly, in Burlington, N. C., on the morning of Feb. 13th, 1897, Mr. James H. Holt, in the 64th year of his age. Mr. Holt was well known as a very successful cotton manufacturer in North Carolina. He was an elder in the Burlington Presbyterian church, a man who for many years had walked with God. In all the relations of life as son, husband, father, as an employer of labor, he was an exemplary man; his whole character and bearing that of a Christian gentleman, what more could be said, who would wish for more. His life was pious, his end was peace, his home is heaven. His memory is loved and honored.

E. H. H.

MATHESON.—At his home in Moore county, on the 5th day of February, 1897, Kenneth Matheson aged 82 years. His parents came from Scotland when quite young. He joined Bensalem Presbyterian church in 1838, and was shortly afterward made ruling elder. He lived a consistent Christian to the end. In the language of another, "A character without spot or blemish, with scarcely an enemy among his fellows, he bore all the marks of an earnest Christian."

He was a member of the North Carolina Synod at Wilmington and at Concord. He was a justice of the peace for a good while before the war and up to 1895, with the exception of four years succeeding the war. During this long period he did an immense volume of business and the good he did the community cannot be estimated. He rarely had an appeal from his decisions and in every case where there was an appeal his judgement was sustained. He was a liberal supporter of his church and his seat was rarely vacant. Truly the merits of this man can only be told in the courts above.

Mrs. CORA I. CARTER.

In Madison, N. C., on February 17th, 1897, full of years and good works, honored, respected and beloved by all who knew her, Mrs. Cora I. Carter peacefully entered into rest.

She was the daughter of Robert and Susan S. Gallaway and was born in Rockingham county, N. C., February 12th, 1832. She was educated at Edgeworth Female Seminary, Greensboro, N. C.

When seventeen years of ago, she was married to William Franklin Carter. Four children who are all still living were the fruit of this union. Their wedded life was a brief one, the devoted husband and father being called in a few years to his heavenly home.

On May 19th, 1859, she was united in marriage to Dr. Jesse Carter, who died on the thirty first anniversary of their wedding day Three of the four children born of this union survive them.

While young she gave her heart to the Saviour and consecrated her life to His service. In the communion of the Presbyterian church she lived and labored She was an intelligent Christian, a well-informed Presbyterian, well acquainted with the doctrines and polity of the church. Ardently attached to the church of her choice, she instilled into her children the principles of the religion which she professed. Well may they rise up and call her blessed.

Strictly conscientious in the performance of religious duties, the Bible became her daily study and the throne of grace her continual resort. Remarkable for fidelity, her life was one of loving trust and self-sacrifice.

She was an attentive and helpful hearer of the preached Word. She could truly say: "How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts! My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord." Her successive pastors bear testimony to her encouraging words and acts. Her home life was beautiful. In the hospitable Christian home, known as the ministers' home, it was her delight to receive those sent by the Master. Her prayers and her alms went up as a memorial before God. Ready to help in every good work, she stretched out her hand to the poor; yea, she reached forth her hands to the needy.

She was at times a great sufferer, her body often racked by pain, her life shadowed by many sorrows; yet she was sustained by faith in the Redeemer. We must adore that grace which proved sufficient, causing her to bow meekly beneath the chastening rod and kiss the smiting hand.

Never can the death-bed scene be forgotten by those who were privileged to witness it. Several hours before her departure she called her children to her side and with perfect composure she gave to each tender words of advice lovingly commending them to God.

Her spirit now unfettered has soared to the realms of endless day, where no shadows ever fall.

"No hidden grief
No wild and cheerless visions of despair;
No vain petition for a swift relief—
No tearful eyes, no broken hearts are there.

"No night distills
Its chilling dews upon the tender frame;
Nor moon is needed there. The light which fills
That land of glory from its Maker came.

"No parted friends
O'er mournful recollections have to weep;
No bed of death enduring love attends
To watch the coming of a pulseless sleep."

S. O. H.

At a recent meeting of the session of Ashpole church the following resolutions anent the death of Mr. D. P. McKINNON were adopted:

The session of Ashpole church, having been deprived by death, of one of its most esteemed members, Mr. D. P. McKinnon, desires to place on record its high estimate of the character and worth of the deceased. Of all that makes a true and worthy man Mr. McKinnon had his share. His conception of life was exalted, and his effort to attain the true Christian standard was sincere and constant. The sincerity and success of his religious life were clearly attested by the peace and comfort which cheered his closing hours.

Active and progressive in church matters, Mr. McKinnon was also prudent and conservative, but when assured of the rightfulness and desirability of any movement he was zealous and liberal in support of it. As a church officer Mr. McKinnon was highly esteemed by the congregation, the session and the Presbytery; ready and wise in his own counsel, he was fully deferential to the views of others and willing to take a full share in any work of the Church

The session desires to express its deep and abiding sense of the loss sustained by the death of Mr. McKinnon, also the sincere sorrow of its members over the removal of a brother beloved in the Lord. At the same time the session would bow in humble submission to the King and Head of the Church who hath been pleased to deprive it of the presence and services of this brother, and records with gratitude its comfort in the thought that his call was to come up higher to the rest and reward of the people of God.

The session extents its heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family, and prays that the God of all consolation may support and cheer them in their day of trouble and sorrow.

The session directs that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of session, a copy sent to the family of the deceased, and also a copy sent to the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN for publication.

We tell your doctor all there is in Scott's Emulsion, just how much cod liver oil, hypophosphites, glycerine. But we do not tell him how these are combined. You have your secrets; this is ours. This knack of making the very best thing has come to us from years of experience with just one thing. We make only Scott's Emulsion—all our energy is bent on making that better than any other emulsion in the world. We have no other business thought. Is it any wonder that it is the standard?

FOR THE FAMILY.

"THOU GOD SEEST ME."

When you think, when you speak,
When you read, when you write,
When you sing, when you walk,
When you seek for delight,
To be kept from all evil, at home and abroad,
Live always as under the eye of the Lord.
Whatever you think, both in joy and in woe,
Think nothing that you would not like God to know.
Whatever you say, in a whisper or clear,
Say nothing you would not like God to hear.
Whatever you read, though the page may allure,
Read nothing, of which you are perfectly sure
Consternation at once would be seen in your look,
If God should say solemnly, "Show me that book."
Whatever you write, in haste or in heed,
Write nothing you would not like God to read,
Whatever you sing, in the midst of your glees,
Sing nothing that God's list'ning ear can displease.
Wherever you go, never go where you fear
God's heart-stirring question, "What doest thou here?"
Whatever the pastime in which you engage,
For the cheering of youth, or the solace of age,
Turn away from each pleasure you'd shrink from pursuing,
Were God to look down and ask,
"What are you doing?"

ANNE BRONET'S GRAVE.

On one side of the steep cliff separating the two bays at Scarborough, England, is an old church surrounded by gravestones that thickly cover the slope allotted to their use. It overlooks the south part of the town, picturesquely situated on the sides of a beautifully-wooded gully running down to the bay, says an exchange.

Here in an older part of the church yard, visible from the road that leads up to the ancient gateway of the ruins that surmounted the cliff, is the stone that marks the last resting place of the gentlest and least assertive of three gifted sisters. Anne Bronte, the authoress of two novels, "Agnes Grey" and "The Tenant of Wildfell Hall," also a poetess—though many of her poems are unpublished—was born at Thornton, near Bradford, in 1819, and was taken a little baby to the noted Haworth Parsonage, where she spent her life with little knowledge of the outer world.

She was the only one of that fated family who was not carried for her burial through the rough door separating the garden from the Haworth churchyard, which, as we are told, "was reserved for the passage of the dead." The awful sorrow that within a year fell upon the parsonage home by the death from consumption of the only brother and her sister Emily caused Charlotte, the eldest, when she saw Anne slowly drifting the same way, to bring her to Scarborough, in the hope that sea air and change from the gloomy moors might avert for a time the dreaded blow. That hope was unfulfilled.

In a few days the patient spirit of Anne was at rest. She died happy because, as had been told of her a short time previously, "she looked beyond this life, and regarded her home and rest as elsewhere than on earth." The plain upright stone bears this record:

"Here lies the remains of the body of Anne Bronte, daughter of the Rev. P. Bronte, incumbent of Haworth, Yorkshire. She died, aged 28, May 28th, 1849."

The Evil Eye.

Savage people have a superstition that an evil eye may be cast upon a person to bring all sorts of trouble and misfortune. That seems like a pretty foolish notion; but it isn't much worse than some of the notions which civilized people indulge in. One worn out superstition is the belief that if a man inherits weak lungs from his parents he is pretty sure to die of consumption. The actual fact is that if such a man will only take proper care of himself he will really be safer from consumption than a careless person who has no inherited weakness. Carelessness is the real evil eye. Carelessness will develop a tendency to consumption in any body.

The lungs are composed of very delicate, sensitive tissue, even in the healthiest person; that is why they yield so quickly to the attack of tainted blood. If the blood is allowed to get impure and impoverished, and bile-poisoned, the seeds of consumption will spring up in the best kind of a constitution. The real consumption-taint is in the blood.

Hundreds of cases of so-called "hereditary" consumption have been completely and permanently rooted out of the system by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery simply because it gives the blood-making glands power to pour a fresh abundant supply of rich, red, healthy, blood into the circulation. This drives out all poisonous and unhealthy germs. It stops the waste of tissue and the formation of morbid deposits builds up fresh, normal, healthy lung tissue and solid, muscular strength.

In all the weakened debilitated conditions which are the forerunners of consumption, Dr. Pierce's Discovery is the most perfect nutritive and strength-builder. It is assimilated by the weakest stomachs.

THE GRUMBLIES AND THE SMILIES.

THE GRUMBLIES.

Ah! There never was yet
Such a hard-used set!
They have to study, or have to sew,
When every one knows they hate it so
And mamma is always a-saying "No"—
While grandmamma's getting the dreadfullest way
Of asking for something 'most every day!
At dinner there's nothing that's fit to eat;
And somebody else has the brownest meat.
Or the soup's too hot, or the bread's too dry—
And they never did like that kind of pie!
So they're grumbly and growly,
And sulky and scowly—
Till every one thinks we could get on without them—
Poor Grumblies—I feel so sorry about them!

THE SMILIES.

But who could be glum
When the Smilies come?
They're always polite, and errands, they say,
Are never too hard or too far away;
And whether they work, or whether they play,
Their faces are bright as a new-coined dime,
And they have just the jolliest kind of a time.
And every one's happy to have them nigh,
For if ever a bit of a cloud comes by
They're whisking it inside out in a minute,
And finding the silvery lining that's in it.
And they're funny and sunny,
And sweeter than honey,
And always a-scattering sunshine about them—
Dear Smilies! Why, how could we live without them?

GRACIE'S CONSCIENCE.

BY C. H.

"O Mrs. Dean! I've lost my penny, I've lost my penny, and now I can't put any money in the bank!" cried one of the little girls in the sewing-school one Saturday morning.

"If any little girl has found a penny, I wish that she would raise her hand." "You know, my dear children, that a penny found on the floor is not yours, and it is just as bad to keep it as though you took it from some pocket."

Still no hand was raised.

Little Gracie Ericson meanwhile sat very still, something she rarely did; for she was more like a humming bird, flitting hither and thither as her fancy dictated. This morning, however, a great change had come over her, and her teacher, noticing it, said:

"Gracie, what was that you picked up a moment ago?"

Gracie's bright eyes looked straight at Miss M——. There was evidently a struggle going on within. Then she said;

"It was a penny, Miss M——."

"It was! Well, then, don't you think you ought to give it to Mrs. Dean, so that she can return it to the little girl who lost? You don't want her to cry any more, do you, when you can make her happy?"

A very determined look came into Gracie's bright face.

"It's my penny. I found it, and I am going to keep it, and I won't come back to this sewing-school any more if I can't keep it!"

"Very well, Gracie; if you think the penny belongs to you, keep it; but, had I found it, I should feel that it belonged to that little girl with tears in her eyes, over there."

Gracie pressed her lips together, looked gravely over at the child, but said nothing.

To-day, however, Gracie sat, one knee crossed over the other, head bent down, and not a word did she utter during the entire lesson. Her work promised to make up for past deficiencies. At last the bell was rung for silence.

"Put your work away, now," said Mrs. Dean, "and then we will sing."

The children needed no second bidding, and soon sat quietly waiting for Mrs. Dean to announce the song. The children always seemed delighted when singing-time came, and none more than Gracie, who seemed to give some of her own brightness to every note. To-day, however, she was perfectly silent. The singing over, Mrs. Dean called for perfect quiet, and then said:

"It makes me very sad to say to you what I feel that I must say this morning. Almost every Saturday morning some little girl loses a penny, sometimes two, and is compelled to go home without having put any money in the Penny Providence Bank. I have never said very much about it, but feel that I ought to speak of it to-day. The money is lost here, and yet seems never to be found. How many of you know what God has said about taking things that do not belong to us?"

Two or three of the older girls raised their hands, and once answered:

"Thou shalt not steal."

"Yes," said Mrs. Dean, "that is God's command. Now I know that it is a very hard thing to call this stealing, but how many of you think that it is not stealing to keep a penny that you find on the floor, when you know that it does not belong to you, but to some other little girl?"

The children seemed rather uncertain as to what they thought, some raising a hand, others not.

"Do you think it would be stealing to go over to the coat-room and take pennies out of the coat-pockets?"

"Oh, yes!" said every little voice without hesitation.

"Then, my dear children, it is just as much stealing to keep a penny that you find when you know it belongs to some other little girl. Now I am going to ask once more if any one has found a penny, and I feel sure that each one of you will remember God's command, and answer truly."

After a pause, Mrs. Dean added:

"Has any one found a penny this morning?"

Perfect silence. Gracie's face was very grave, and she sat perfectly still, with her bright eyes riveted on Mrs. Dean's face. Suddenly the little hand went up, as though she was afraid she might change her mind.

"Here 'tis! here 'tis! I found it, Mrs. Dean." And all the old sweet Gracie had returned.

She danced up and down, holding the penny high above her head.

"Oh! did you find it, Gracie? I'm so glad. Now Mary will be happy again. Go right over and give it to her—won't you?"

Gracie stepped over and gave the penny to its tearful owner, now all smiles.

"I am quite sure," said Mrs. Dean, "that Gracie is much happier, knowing that she has been not only honest, but kind, to her little companion. And I do hope you will all remember what has happened this morning, and that I shall never have to speak such hard words again."—Sunday School Times.

Tenderness does not mean weakness, softness, effeminateness. It is consistent with strength, manliness, truth and bravery. It does not show itself alone in the touch, but in unselfishness, thoughtfulness, considerateness, forbearance, patience, long suffering. But however it shows itself, it is as the bloom on the peach, as spring showers on the earth, as the music of the angels stealing down on the plains of Bethlehem. You may not have much of this world's wealth to distribute, but you may give something better and spend a useful and beneficent life, if you will practice this lesson of shedding around you the grace of human tenderness, in word and act and by the spirit of your life.—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I thought I would write to you as I have not done so before. I am nine years old. I have four sisters and one brother. I have a sister and a brother dead. I have two sisters off at Peace Institute. Papa takes your good paper. I like to read the letters in your paper. I have a grandpapa and two grandmama's living. Our pastor is Rev. Mr. Hoon. I like him very much. My school teacher is Mrs. Good. I will close hoping your paper much success.

Your unknown friend,
LOLA RODMAN.

Waxhaw, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I am six years old to-day, and as I was born on the 22d of February, I was named Mary Washington. I cannot be a soldier like Gen. Washington, but I try to be like him in never telling a story. I have a little hatchet made at his home. I had some nice birthday presents, but I like the pretty playhouse best of all. It has two rooms, glass windows and two doors and a porch. In the little room I have a real nice cooking stove. I have only one pet, a white bantam hen which every day flies up on the window-sill and pecks the glass, then I open the door and she walks in and lays an egg under the bureau. I have all the letters in your paper read to me every week, and enjoy them very much.

Your little friend,
MARY WASHINGTON WALKER.

Spray, N. C.

Dear Editor:—I will write you a letter for my first time. Papa has been taking your paper for several years. I am going to school every day, Mr. Bradley and Miss Irene McGehee are my teachers. I had a serious accident four years ago. I fell off of the front porch and broke my right arm and last year I fell off of the horse and broke my left arm, both of my arms were broke on Saturday, so Saturday is my unlucky day, I am ten years old. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday and church. I am in the Shorter Catechism and Miss Sue Carter is my teacher, Mr. Curtis is our superintendent. I have two brothers and two sisters. Well, I must close for fear of the waste basket.

Yours unknown,
JIM APPLE.

The grain traffic of Norfolk is growing rapidly and attracting attention. The total export of corn in 1896, amounted to 12,887,291 bushels. The total exports of corn for January, '97, were 1,399,377 bushelss, a gain of 138,203 bushels over last year

The catch of fish for one day at Homosassa, Fla., was 1,900 pounds. There are twenty-two varieties of fish on the river.

Don Jorge Moutt, formerly president of Chili, and now vice-admiral of the Chilian navy, recently visited the U. S. Naval Academy making a thorough inspection of the naval school and renewed with marked honors and expressed himself as highly pleased with the work of the cadets and seamen.

FOREIGN.

A dispatch from Constantinople to the Daily Mail London, says that Mr. Terrell, the American minister, was refused admission to the ceremony of Leilei Kader at the Mosque of St. Sophia, to which Europeans have hitherto had free access. On this occasion it was feared that their presence might arouse fanaticism and lead to bloodshed.

The minister of foreign affairs of Greece has cabled to the Greeks of this country asking their aid. All able bodied Greeks that belong to the reserve as far back as 1866, are called back to their ranks in the Grecian army.

Revolution has broken out in Urnguay, the city of Montevider being the only tranquil town. The white and national parties are against the government. The latter has 5,000 men under arms and is mobilizing the national guard. The number of revolutionists is unknown, but is supposed to be large.

The Union Elevator No. 2, with a capacity of 1,000,000 bushels, of Peoria, Ill., was destroyed by fire last week, entailing a loss of $500,000.

SAY SOES.

If castor oil is applied to a wart once a day for a month the wart will entirely disappear. In many cases it will not require so long a time

Neglect of the hair often destroys its vitality and natural hue and causes it to fall out. Before it is too late, apply Hall's Hair Renewer, a sure remedy.

While we are in the world we need not be of the world. There is no need to trouble ourselves because everything does not run according to our own ideas. Let us trust in God and He will direct our feet.

THINGS USEFUL.

All green vegetables growing above ground should be cooked in salt water. Those growing below ground in fresh water.

A delicious salad which is a welcome variety to the heavy meat salad is made from sweetbreads. They should be simmered until tender, and then cut into minute bits, marinaded in French dressing, and either mixed with celery similarly treated, or served with a border of lettuce. In either way a rich mayonnaise is poured over at the last moment.

Hominy Griddle Cakes.—To a large coffee cup or small bowl of well-boiled hominy add an equal quantity in bulk of prepared flour. Mix thoroughly, and then add one tablespoonful of baking powder, a saltspoonful of salt, and one egg. Make of the proper consistency for baking by adding a cupful or more of rich sweet-milk, and at last add one tablespoonful of melted butter. They should stand about an hour after being mixed, and should receive a final beating just before being baked.

Rice may be substituted for hominy, or stale bread which has been reduced to a pulp by having been soaked in warm water or milk, and then carefully squeezed from the liquid, before mixing in the same manner as for hominy cakes.

"UNTIL THE DAY BREAK."

A human soul went forth into the night,
Shutting behind it Death's mysterious door,
And shaking off with strange, resistless might
The dust that once it wore,
So swift its flight, so suddenly it sped—
As when by skilful hand a bow is bent
The arrow flies—those watching round the bed
Marked not the way it went.

Heavy with grief, their aching, tear-dimmed eyes
Saw but the shadow fall, and knew not when,
Or in what fair unfamiliar guise,
It left the world of men.
It broke from Sickness, that with iron bands
Had bound it fast for many a grievous day;
And Love itself with its restraining bands
Might not its course delay.

Space could not hold it back with fettering bars,
Time lost its power, and ceased at last to be;
It swept beyond the boundary of the stars,
And touched Eternity.
Out from the house of mourning faintly lit,
It passed upon its journey all alone;
So far not even Thought could follow it
Into those realms unknown.

Through the clear silence of the moonless dark,
Leaving no footprint of the road it trod,
Straight as an arrow cleaving to its mark,
The Soul went home to God
"Alas!" they cried, "he never saw the morn,
But fell asleep outwearied with the strife"—
Nay, rather, he arose and met the Dawn
Of Everlasting Life.

REV. A. M. HASSELL.

Rev. Andrew Morrison Hassell was born at Cassville, now Bartonville, Georgia, on the 14th day of January, 1847. When he was six years old his father moved to Chattooga county and made his home at the foot of Lookout mountain. Like so many of the sturdy servants of the church, Mr. Hassell was brought up on the farm, and his active life there and in the army laid the foundation for the vigorous constitution which has enabled him to endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. At the age of seventeen he joined a company of Confederate scouts, operating within the Federal lines. His commander was the celebrated John Gatewood, whose very name was a terror to the enemy, and young Hassell had his full share of thrilling adventures and hair-breadth escapes. It was not until President Johnson's proclamation of amnesty was issued that the lives of "Gatewood's men" were safe even in their own homes.

Mr. Hassell joined the Presbyterian Church in April, 1866, and in the following year was taken under the care of Cherokee Presbytery as a candidate for the Gospel ministry. After studying two years, one under the direction of Rev. A. W. Wilson, he accepted a position as teacher in a school in Texas, in order to save the means for a further prosecution of his studies. He entered Austin College in 1871, and at the close of the Junior year at college, entered Columbia Seminary where he took the full course, graduating in 1876. While serving his first charge, Lynchburg, Beulah and Fair Hope churches in South Carolina, he was married to Miss Kate McGregor, who died within a year of their marriage. He was licensed and ordained by Harmony Presbytery in 1876.

In 1879 he was married to Miss Sallie R. Taylor of Summerville, Georgia, who has been to him a true help-meet in the Master's work.

Mr. Hassell's second field of labor was the churches of Eatonton and Monticello, Ga., which he served four years. He then preached in Newberry county, S. C., three years and in Laurens county a year. He came from South Carolina three years ago to his present charge, containing the historic old church of Bluff, and the younger colonies of Dunn, Bethlehem and McMillan's chapel, which he served with great acceptance.

As a Presbyter Mr. Hassell is useful and efficient. He has an accurate and ready knowledge of the principles of church order and is a clear-headed and forcible debater. As a pastor he is popular and beloved. He has learned the art of being all things to all men, mingling freely with all classes of his people and sympathetically entering with them into the practical business and healthful recreations of country life.

Mr. Hassell is also an earnest and effective preacher. His style is his own, simple and direct, abounding in illustration, fervent in appeal. The fruits of his preaching have been manifested in the conversion of many souls in the fields where he has labored. And since his coming to Fayetteville Presbytery there have been many additions to the churches where he has helped his brethren in protracted services. He strives to have it said of him, as was said of the Master, that "common people heard Him gladly."

A weight is anything which, without being essentially wrong or hurtful to others, is yet a hindrance to ourselves. We may always know a weight by three signs; first, we are uneasy about it; second, we argue for it against our conscience; third, we go about asking people's advice, whether we may not keep it without harm.—F. B. Meyer.

PERSONS AND PAPERS.

Attainment is a hope rather than a possession on our journey through the storms and troubles and dangers of the world. However they may rage and swell, though the mountains shake at the tempest, our Rock will not be moved; we have one Friend who will never forsake us.—Bishop Heber.

* * *

God within us! Not only ever with us unseen, not only watching us in our secret moments and reading the very thoughts of our hearts, not only covering us with the shadow of his wings and lighting us with the light of his countenance, but within us—our bodies his temples, our hearts his home. O, if we could but grasp the thought we should live lives nobler and more beautiful. —F. W. Farrar.

* * *

The man who in literature or religious teaching aims to reach the highest rather than the mass, seldom finds himself on the way to success. He is a teacher, leader and commander of the people who reach downward rather than upward. When the churches begin to look for nice neighborhoods, for the better class of people, the cultured and the wealthy, they run to leanness and disappointment.—Western Recorder.

* * *

When men become so liberal that they love every other church as much as their own there is danger and likelihood that they will love none to any commendable degree. We do not love humanity in a general way. We love individuals. He is loyal to the whole community who is first true to his own flesh and blood. Our own spiritual mother is more to us than any adopted mother ever can be. We must be loyal to Christ at some place, with certain people. Our faith must make for itself a local habitation.—Reformed Church Messenger.

EFFECTUAL FERVENT PRAYER.

The late, lamented Dr. Preston, or was it Dr. Roseboro?—we think the latter—in one of the sermons at the First church of our city a few years since called attention to the original Greek of James v. 16. He pointed out that the meaning of the word effectual was not that of prevailing with God which would weaken the sentence by a repetition because the later words are "availeth much." The meaning is rather that the prayer has taken effect on the one who prs

There is a [illegible] at one reason why God often delays to answer the prayers presented to Him. They are prayers in the sense of petitions or requests, more or less definite and desired, but they are made carelessly or in haste, or with indifference as to the result. The thing sought may be desired without considering whether there is any warrant of God's Word to seek it, or without raising the condition that it be the thing to seek for the greatest good.

The point is here, that we make many petitions without sufficient waiting on God for warrant to ask, or approval in asking, or without asking to be emptied of self seeking and to be filled with desire for the glory of God.

There may be a hint here at our want of sincerity or earnestnes as we pray. That is not a condition on God's part to give what we ask, but it surely is a condition on man's part of fitness or preparedness or privilege to approach God and to expect His favor and blessing. Much saying of prayers may fall short of real praying in this essential element.

This is not the same as a reflex benefit of prayer, however great a good that may be. It is not that one who prays must seek fervency as a blessed result of prayer and a good to be attained, but as a test to himself whether the prayer has yet become genuine and all the words have become more than words. In this is the further meaning, that the prayer is effectual to that extent that the one who prays has become so earnest as to become the agent for the answer of the prayer. It may be that one has been asking God to do, what can be done in God's way, only by such an act or such a life of the one who prays as selfishness or sin has made hitherto impossible. But here the prayer becomes fervent and burns up the selfishness consumes the sin. Then the prayer is already being answered in the reflex benefit to the one who prays. It will become effectual by that one arising and doing all he can do of human agency to answer his own prayer.

Such a prayer availeth much. It claims, it expects, it secures answers and that is the purpose of prayer. It is the privilege of prayer, and the power of prayer that it availeth much. The example of Elijah is one of many in the Scriptures. He prayed and the heavens were shut for three years and six months, and there was no rain in all that time. Again he prayed and the heavens gave rain. During that three years and a half Elijah was getting preparedness to pray an effectual, fervent prayer. The prayers of all that time of drouth became effectual when he feared not to call Ahab and the prophets of Baal to a test, and they built those altars and Elijah did the human part, then his prayer became fervent, unselfish and for the glory of God so that it availed much. Fire came down. Then was rain. The prophets were slain. Ahab became obedient to the word of the prophet.

The prayer of Elijah on Carmel was not one of those careless, cold, chilling and formal, however beautiful and eloquent, addresses to men. It was the culmination of the prayers and communing with God during all that drouth. It took hold on Elijah as He was holding on to God.

The delays to the answers we have a right to expect and God's trainers and teachers should desire that, we may pray fervent and effectual prayers, not that we may be better or more important. This last is important, very important. But the seeking of that may have much of the selfish element in it. What is needed most is the realization that prayer is the privilege and the power of the Christian to prevail with God. But God may wait to answer until the prayer prevails with the one who prays. That may require more time and self-sacrifice and sense of dependence on God than many of us have. But when it comes, God may honor the one who prays by using him to answer his own prayers.

OF COURSE MANY of our readers have heard or read the old story of the two knights and the shield, but others probably have not done so. The moral is so obvious and so suited to practical application in the ordinary concerns of life, that we reproduce it here as it is told in the sermon of Dr. Walter W. Moore in the "Southern Presbyterian Pulpit." "Two knights who were approaching each each other saw a shield suspended over the road! 'What a beautiful golden shield' said one. 'It is not golden' said the other, 'it is silver.' The first knight insisted upon his view, the second continued to deny, and as they were about to pass from the clash of words to the clash of swords, a white-robed figure, whose name was truth, rushed between and required them to change places, and lo! the shield was golden on one side and silver on the other."

A BROTHER enclosing money for subscriptions, very kindly adds:

Thanks for Bro. Lingle's letter in N. C. PRESBYTERIAN this week, giving such a timely, interesting and instructive account of his visit to the home of Luther and Melanchthon, the great Reformer and gentle and peerless scholar, whose bones rest side by side in the Castle church at Wittenburg, Germany. Some one made a mistake in saying the 16th February was the 500th anniversary of Melanchthon's birth; it was the 400th, and was observed with much enthusiasm in some places in this country as well as in Germany.

You have done good service in publishing Bro. Hall's "Charge to Officers," so happily conceived and so solemnly and beautifully presented—it does me good, "who also am an elder," and it will do all elders and deacons good to read and study it. The editorial comments on it are timely. How shall we all get the spirit of our high calling?

It is just such commendations that do good and that cheer and encourage us in our work. The "Charge to the People" by Rev. S. O. Hall appears on our fourth page.

PROF HENRY DRUMMOND, the distinguished scientist and theological writer died in London early on the morning of Friday last. He is best known to the world as the author of "Natural Law in the Spiritual World" which created a great sensation on its appearance and set him at once in the front rank as a profound and original thinker and as a most forcible writer His next work which took the ear and mind of the world was "The Greatest Thing in the World." It is a charmingly heart-cheering little booklet and not amenable to the objections which attach to his "Natural Law." He was an evolutionist in belief and taught that doctrine freely. Dr. Drummond although only about forty-six years of age, having been born in Stirling, Scotland, in 1851, had held many positions of eminence in the literary and educational world. He was a fellow of the Royal Society of Edinburgh and of the Geological Society. In 1877 he became professor extraordinary, and in 1884 professor of natural science in the Free Church, Glasgow. In 1893-'4 he was engaged in exploration in Central Africa. He lectured in various countries including our own on religious, scientific and sociological subjects.

Besides the works mentioned above he was the author of Tropical Africa, Pax Vobiscum, the Changed Life, the Programme of Christianity, and The City Without a Church. Many of his works have been translated into German and other languages.

WE HAVE FELT, as doubtless have our readers, some curiosity to know the denominational preferences of the chiefs of the new administration, and so we give the information as far as gathered. The President is a Methodist and will worship at the Foundry M. E. Church in Washington. His wife, who has been written as a Presbyterian, will doubtless accompany him. Vice-President Hobart and Mrs. Hobart are Presbyterians and the latter a prominent worker. General Alger, Secretary of War and his wife are Presbyterians. Mr. James A. Gary, Postmaster-General, and his wife belong to the same Church—Mr. Gary is a ruling elder. Mr. Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture is a United Presbyterian.

Mr. Gage, Secretary of the Treasury, attends Dr. Swing's church in Chicago. Mr. Sherman, Secretary of State leans to the Roman Catholic Church, and Mr. McKenna, Attorney General, is a member of that church. Mr. Long, Secretary of the Navy, is a Unitarian.

WE WAITED, AFTER hearing the painful news that Dr. P. L. Murphy had been displaced from the Superintendency of the Morganton Hospital for the Insane and the appointment of Dr. J. P. Monroe thereto, with at least a vague hope that we would hear something that would dispel the unpleasantness of the situation. Dr. Murphy has been long in the place and has justly earned a reputation for pre-eminent ability in treatment of mental disease, for exceeding gentleness and kindness in his conduct towards his patients, and for admirable management in the business affairs of the institution so far as they were in his charge. On the other hand Dr. J. P. Munroe in his superb management of the School of Medicine at Davidson has earned for himself a fame most enviable; his students attesting, in the success of their subsequent careers, the thoroughness and exactness of the knowledge they have acquired through him.

It is peculiarly pleasant then to be able to give to our readers the following extract from a letter written by Dr. Munroe to Dr. E. C. Royster, editor of the Charlotte Medical Journal. We take it from the Charlotte News:

"I am by no means insensible to the high honor conferred up me, especially as it was entirely unsolicited by either myself or my friends.

"I trust, too, that I have given due weight to the call of patriotism involved in this offer; but when I considered my work here, its present status and its prospect for future usefulness and honor, I could not see my way clear to make the change and have so notified the Governor."

IN ANOTHER column an urgent appeal is made to ministers and sessions of Fayetteville Presbytery to raise the collection for Education and to give liberally to this most important cause.

The following extract from our "Washington Letter" is encouraging:

—"The President and Mrs. McKinley have given two informal dinner parties, one to their relations and the other to visiting neighbors from their old home, and at both wine was banished from their table. This is pleasing to all the temperance folk, and just what was expected by those who were acquainted with the domestic habits of the President and his wife. That intoxicants will be shut out of the private dining room of the White House for the next four years is certain, but no formal announcement has been made, and probably none will be made, as to whether wine will be served at the State dinners given by the President, or the cold-water example set by President and Mrs. Hayes will be followed in its entirety. There will be no more State dinners given at the White House until next winter. Mrs. McKinley has been formally thanked for not having wine upon her table, in a letter from an official of the W.C.T.U.

DAVIDSON NOTES.

Governor Russell's appointment of Dr. J. P. Munroe, President of the Medical College here, as Superintendent of the State Hospital at Morganton affected us last week like the bursting of a bomb-shell in a peaceful bivouac. As teacher, physician, elder, town commissioner, and cotton factory President, Dr. Munroe is indispensable, and the town was panic-stricken at the prospect of losing him. Outside of Davidson it was taken for granted that he would accept a position so prominent and much coveted, and telegrams of congratulation came in from various directions. After two days of deliberation, however, to the great relief of the community, Dr. Munroe decided to remain here, and wrote a positive declinature of the tempting offer. It is needless to say that he was not an applicant for the place, nor even aware that his name was being considered. That he is a Democrat and not even a personal acquaintance of the Governor, makes the appointment a high testimonial to his ability and prominence.

Dr. Shearer was absent last Sunday assisting Dr. Rumple at Salisbury. To-day we are expecting Dr. J. M Rose, of Morganton, who will conduct a week of special services, beginning this evening. Those of us who are acquainted with the power and impressiveness of Dr. Rose's sermons anticipate with much pleasure the privilege of hearing him twice a day for a week.

Miss Cornelius, of Statesville, has been conducting a successful vocal and instrumental class here for a month or more. Her pupils gave a recital Saturday evening at Mr. Stirewalt's residence, which was skillfully rendered and much enjoyed.

OUR PREMIUM BIBLE.

Measures 5x7 inches when Closed, and Contains 1,600 Pages of Reading Matter—Several hundred pages of Useful Information, besides the Scriptural Text.

At length we find ourselves with pride and pleasure, able to offer a Bible premium to workers for the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN. The size and quality of type of our Bible is represented by the cut here given:

The binding is flexible, the edges are gilt and the references within are full. The Bible contains besides 1050 pages of Scriptural text, the HELPS to Scripture reading and study including Subject Index, Concordance, a most serviceable General Topical Index, a large number of pages treating of the Titles, Authorship, Distinctive Characters, Contents, &c., of the various books of the Bible, A Description of the Inhabitants, Physical Geography, Customs and Political Condition of the Holy Land at the beginning of the Christian era, the Botany of the Bible, Glossary of Antiquities, Customs, 12 maps, etc., being the Oxford Helps, acknowledged to be the very best, besides 124 full page illustrations of the Languages, Writing, &c., of the Old and New Testaments, of the bas reliefs and the like, discoveries in archæological researches, and now in the British museum—and very much else; making altogether the most desirable copy of the Scriptures for Bible students that has come to our knowledge. The book contains over 1,600 pages.

The Bible is an offer in connection with the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN—the only medium thro which one can become well acquainted with what is going on in the Synod of North Carolina—on the folowing terms:

We will give this Bible as payment for help rendered to any old subscriber who will send us the name of a BONA FIDE new subscriber along with $2.25.

The new subscriber gets the paper very cheap—we offer it to any bona fide new subscriber for $1.50 for the first year—and the worker gets amply compensated in a magnificently cheap Bible for his or her good work.

A new subscriber to get the Bible can subscribe for himself at $1.50 and then send another new subscriber with $2.25.

The Premium offered is the Genuine Edition of the Oxford Teacher's Bible.

We trust our friends will go to work promptly on this plan.

LETTERS TO A BEREAVED FRIEND.

III.

MY DEAR MARY:—As a further incentive to regular attendance upon the preaching of God's word and the public worship of the church, I urge you to reflect upon the influence of your example.

First, how will it affect your own family, if you persist in your present course?

Your husband does not claim to be a Christian. If he counts you a sincere and well-informed believer, he will not doubt your conciencitiousness, and your religious habits will be right in his eyes. He will measure Christianity by the standard of your piety; and if he sees you, who are enjoying at least moderate health, justifying yourself in your habitual neglect of the public means of grace, he will not fail to conclude that he can do the same thing and be blameless. And, besides, you offer him a special inducement, and an almost religious reason, for his irreligious behaviour on the Sabbath. You give him this flattering unction to lay to his soul: Deprived of your society in great measure on other days, he feels that on Sunday he cannot, as a loyal husband, leave you alone. You must not be left without any protection from tramps and burglars; and to whose society are you entitled, if not to his? If, on the other hand, he does not think your piety anything more than an amiable sentimentality, your course is better adapted than anything else to rivet such a conviction on his mind. If he saw you in your affliction feeding on the comforting truths proclaimed by your pastor, and evidently thinking less of the past and more of the eternal future as the days go by, he would come to believe more in the reality of religion. You can hardly expect him to cherish any special regard for the public ordinances of religion, when he sees you, week after week, ignoring them, and even showing a positive aversion from them. If you, a Christian, do not esteem these things necessary to your soul's well-being, why should he? Do you not see that you are not encouraging him in his continuance in unbelief? Can you not see that if in this case, the unbelieving husband is to be sanctified by the believing wife, it must be by your consistent discharge of your religious obligations?

"So, too, with your sons. They mourn their sister as sincerely as you mourn your daughter. And, like their father, they are "without God and without hope in the world." You are encouraging them all to form a wretched habit of neglecting the house of God. "How shall they believe on him of whom they have not heard?" And how can you expect them to hear to the saving of their souls, unless they attend the services in which they will hear the Gospel proclamations of mercy? Granted that their conversion is not impossible, even if their "hearing" shall come through the mere reading of the Scriptures, is it at all likely that they will ever be led to seek their soul's salvation in any other way than through the public ministry of the word? "How shall they hear without a preacher?" Is it not said that the preaching of the Gospel is the "power of God unto salvation unto all that believe?" I suppose you have hardly forgotten the teaching of the old catechism on this question:

"Q. 155. How is the word made effectual to salvation?

"A. The Spirit of God maketh the reading, but especially the preaching of the word an effectual means of enlightening, convincing and humbling sinners, of driving them out of themselves, and of drawing to Christ," &c., "and establishing their hearts in holiness and comfort, through faith unto salvation."

Our fathers were right. The word is a fire; but only in the assemblies of his people does it burn like some mighty conflagration. It is a hammer; but rarely, save when wielded by some "master of assemblies," does it break the heart of stone. My observation is, that persons who do not attend the public worship of God, and rarely hear a sermon, must first become regular attendants upon the preaching of the Gospel, before they even so much as begin to feel its power. Believe me, my dear friend, you will in vain expect your Christian example to lead your husband and sons to the Saviour, as long as your example is defective at a point so vital as that of church-attendance.

Nor can you ignore the effect of your example upon your neighbors. Many of these cherish for you a warm affection, and just in proportion as you have endeared yourself to them by neighborly kindness, and acquired an influence over them, does your conduct become a potent force for evil. Seeing your place in the sanctuary always vacant on Sunday, and observing that you not unfrequently take a drive on Saturday or Monday, they must conclude, that in your estimation attendance at church is not a duty. A healthy professor, who never goes to church, becomes for that very reason an agent of the devil, whose office it is to proclaim, in deeds that speak louder than words, just this: that religion is such a purely personal matter, that those who stay at home and attend to their own business are perfectly safe, even if they never honor the Lord by appearing in his house. And if you do so, are you not especially in danger of doing injury to the souls of some of the work believers, the "little ones" who believe in Jesus, and who need all the encouragement and stimulus you can give them?

In leaving this subject, let me make one other suggestion: You are failing in your duty to your faithful pastor. I know that on personal grounds you are disposed to show him every kindness. I have often heard you speak of the pleasure which his visits have afforded you, and of his sympathetic and faithful ministries in your trials. You would not in the least particular, discount his ministry among the people, nor put the smallest obstacle in the way of his attaining the largest possible success in his labors. You do sincerely pray for the welfare of Zion. You would rejoice to hear that the old church is crowded every Sabbath with eager listeners and devout worshippers. But have you not failed to see that in continuing to indulge your present aversion to appearing in your place in the house of God, you are doing not a little to discourage him?

Doubtless, he has tried faithfully, in his own gentle manner, to show you your duty, and to induce you to rise above this reluctance to do your acknowledged duty. You have been too candid not to confess your delinquency, and yet he sees no signs of any disposition on your part to do otherwise than as you are now doing. You may tell him kind things that others say about his preaching, but you do not know anything that you can say for yourself. It has been many a day since any sermon of his ever comforted or cheered or strengthened you. Your presence in the sanctuary would of itself cheer him not a little. He cannot fail to notice your continued absence. Were you present he would have one more to preach to, and one less to worry about. Your presence would be one of the best evidences you could give that you are not backsliding in heart. It would assure him of your personal interest in his preaching, and of your desire that he may succeed in winning souls.

No amount of second-hand compliments, no expressions of good-will, mingled with apologies for your habitual absences; no personal kindness, even though it take the form of most generous contributions to his larder and wardrobe, can avail to make up for the discouraging effect of your neglect of duty. The truth is, you are in danger; and as long as he sees you continuing to do as you are now doing, he must feel, as one who watches for your soul, not a little anxiety. Nor can he fail to estimate the probability that your influence tends to keep others away from church, and be distressed accordingly. While he seeks to gather, you are scattering abroad. You are his friend, but through your indifference to duty, he is, like his Saviour, wounded in the house of his friends.

But I have said enough, I hope, to suggest serious reflections on one point in your neglect of duty. In my next, I shall try to point out another particular, in which your present seclusion is working injury to yourself and to the cause of God. Trusting that you will pardon the freedom of an old friend. I am, with the old love still undiminished,

Affectionately yours,

MARTHA.

CHARGE TO THE PEOPLE.

[This article is a continuation of the charges delivered by Rev. S. O. Hall, of Westminster church Greensboro. We published the charge to officers of the church, last week.]

And now I charge you members of the congregation: Remember that while there are duties to be performed by these officers, there are also duties to be performed by you. By the relation formed this day duties are reciprocal.

These men have not been thrust upon you. These positions which they now occupy in the Church were not of their seeking. As a session we ordained them—inducted them into these offices to which you called them by your suffrages.

We trust that God spoke through you. These men are not "novices." We did not "lay hands suddenly" upon them. They have been tried and found to be true. They are "sound in the faith"—"men of wisdom and discretion"—men of prudence and sound judgment." In addition to other Scriptural qualifications in their favor may be mentioned thus: They "have a good report of them which are without."

May I not pledge them your continued and hearty support in the discharge of their many solemn and arduous duties? Must I remind you that they need your support—your moral support? Encourage them by yielding it. You do them and the cause incalculable injustice if you withhold it.

They are entitled to "all honor, encouragement and obedience in the Lord." They have a right to expect it. It is justly their due.

They do not claim to be perfect men in their conduct; they do not claim infallibility in their judgment; but they do claim to be men conscientiously striving to know their duties that they may perform them. How are you to encourage them? Not by indulging in fault-finding disposition; not by harsh, uncharitable censorious criticisms. In the name of the Master I charge you to shield them from ever false accusation, from every unjust suspicion, from anything that is likely to weaken public confidence in them—thus destroying their good name—while in the faithful performance of their duties.

Remember you called these elders to rule in the Church. They with the others constituting the bench of elders, and he who statedly ministers unto you, are co-pastors. We are under-shepherds. These elders are to "exercise government and discipline, and take the over-sight of the spiritual interests" of the Church. They are to "watch diligently over the flock committed to their charge, that no corruption of doctrine or of morals enter therein," "evils which they cannot correct by private admonition, they should bring to the notice of the session. It is your privilege and duty to invite them to visit your homes—especially during sickness. Have them to read God's Word and pray with your families. Remember they "seek not yours but you." Heed the apostolic injunction: "Obey them that have the rule over you, and submit yourselves: for they watch for your souls, as they that must give account, that they may do it with joy, and not with grief."

Encourage the deacons in the performance of their duties. To them has been committed the management of the temporal affairs of the Church. You ask them to be a channel through which your sympathies are to give expression. You ask them to be a medium through which those who are taught in the Word shall communicate of their good things to those who teach. You ask them to come and acquaint you with the needs of the Church, promising to respond to their appeals. If faithful they will use great plainness of speech. They may convince you that you are not altogether free from the spirit of covetousness.

Surely you will from this time forth pray for these officers, elders and deacons, as never before. Surely you will remember them daily at the throne of grace. "We beseech you, brethren, to know them which labour among you, and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you; and to esteem them very highly in love for their work's sake, and be at peace among yourselves."

May God's blessing rest upon the relation established this day between these officers and this people. May fruit abound in the lives of all to eternity.

THE HAPPIEST MAN IN LONDON.

There has been circulated in English and American papers the story, the pathetic story of "The Happiest Man in London." Our readers will thank us if we give it to them as we find it:

"This man and his wife were found living in a single room with nothing but the most necessary furniture. For twenty-five years the wife had been paralyzed, and her husband had been her nurse, her protector, her support, and, most of all, her lover all the time. She could scarcely speak, and her only strength of expression lay in her eyes, looking 'straight out, clear and shining.' In response to a new doctor's question, this hero of a man told in the simplest and most sincere way how he lived. 'I get up early of a morning, you see, sir,' said Temple, 'and make our breakfast and attend to her. Then, before I start for work—I'm in an engineer's employ—I just boards her up in bed so as she can't fall out. I'm back at dinner hour, and we have it together. Then, when I leave work, my evenin' soon passes. There's usually a bit of cooking to be done, and washing up, and the room to be seen to. An invalid must have things clean about her; it isn't agreeable to just lie and look at anything dirty. I like Lucy to keep bright—but, there! she always is; and occasionally if she gets down, I soon cheer up; don't I, Lucy? I said I'd love her, comfort her, honor and keep her, in sickness and in health. I've tried, and we've been happy. Sir, love does it all. You'll want to comfort her, you'll have to honor her, and if sickness comes you'll love her all the more.' From the bed there came a strange sound. It was some thing between a laugh and a sob And the doctor, turning, looked away again. Her husband's words had moved the wife to tears, but her face was radiant with the joy in her upturned eyes. Temple laid his hand on hers—hers which could give no answering pressure. 'Sir,' he said, 'I can't wish you better happiness than I've had. I wish you as much. And I take it I'm about the happiest man in London.'"

Comment? What's the use? The story is history and comment and moral and interpretation and appeal and invocation combined. Better for reading it? Let us hope so.—Southern Churchman.

Usually the traveller's strength decreases in proportion to the length and toil of the way he has traversed, but here it is the very opposite. They go from strength to strength; i. e., from one degree to another, ever increasing the nearer they come to the longed for goal, which at last they are sure to reach; and the individual, each one, appears before God in Zion, and has the full fruition of that union with God in which man's highest joy consists.—T. W. Chambers, D. D.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

The distinguished traveler, writer and lecturer, Mr. George Kennan, whose writings on life in Russia have so stirred the thinking world, is making a southern tour under the direction of the Southern Lyceum Bureau.

The students of the University of Georgia have placed in the library of that institution a life size and well executed painting of Henry W. Grady, the distinguished journalist. Mr. Grady was born and raised in Athens, Ga.

At last the tardy world is beginning to appreciate the genius of Sidney Lanier and to lavish its belated eulogy upon the creations of the Georgia poet.

The Chicago Chronicle in a recent editorial on Lanier declares that his genius entitles him to a front rank among American poets and that few other writers of verse have left behind such a tuneful legacy of enduring songs. Says The Chicago Chronicle:

Only now and then, to a few men in a century, does there come a fine posthumous fame. Such a fame, however, is coming to Sidney Lanier, the Southern poet who wrote in the '60s and '70s and gave to American poetry its passionate note. For awhile after his untimely death his genius appeared to be unrecognized save by a very few. He was remembered by those who knew him as a musician or a lecturer and his verses were regarded as the pleasant avocation of a troubled life. But little by little America, which is forever searching for its great poet, and not finding him, is coming to appreciate Lanier. * * * Lanier has a number of poems so true individual, prescient and lofty that to read him is to have a new wonder and delight grow in the soul, such as comes in reading Shelley or Wordsworth. No other writer of our land is so simple in touch with nature, or, to put it otherwise, has so successfully escaped the estrangement which civilization brings. Capable of as much style and bewitchment as Poe, he has far more sincerity and nobility of thought. Not only does he present in new form the ideas most inviting to the pure mind, but he shadows large and lofty thoughts which may not express themselves in common words, but which require a poet and a seer for the insinuation.

These words coming from such a leading exponent of Northern sentiment as The Chicago Chronicle, should not be undervalued. While they do honor to this section of the country, they also do honor to the critical appreciation of the paper from which they proceed. The time is surely coming when the name of the Georgia bard will be a household word in America and when the production of his pen will be as familiar as those of Longfellow of Whittier.—Savannah News.

CHANGES OF ADDRESS.

Correspondents will please note the following changes of address:

Rev. J. S. Morrow, from Asheville, N. C., to Harmony Grove, Ga.

NORTH CAROLINA.

First Presbyterian Church, Wilmington :—On last Sabbath one member was announced as having been received by letter and four upon examination. Rev. Dr. P. H. Hoge, pastor.

Louisburg :—Mr. W. G. Rackley and Mr. Allen have been elected and installed as elders and Col. W. T. Hughes and Mr. J. A. Turner as deacons in the Louisburg church.

Raleigh Church :—On Sunday morning Dr. Daniel, the pastor of the Presbyterian church, announced to the congregation, that work would begin on the new church, on Monday, 15th. He also stated that Mr. Geo. W. Thompson, Chairman of the Board of Deacons, desired to make a statement regarding the finances of the church. Mr. Thompson said that it gave him pleasure to report the success of the new plan, which had been arranged and put in operation by the deacons of the church, and which had been approved by the session. This plan if properly carried out will bring to the Church Treasurer each Sunday, one fifty-second part of the entire amount needed to meet the ordinary expenses of the church, and to cover the apportionments to this church for all the causes of the Assembly and Synod.

Pledges have been received from nearly all of the congregation, the same to be paid weekly, through envelops. At the close of the address, the pastor requested the congregation to sing the Long Meter Doxology, which was done with spirit.

Evangelistic Notes :—Rev. William Black preached several days at Hub, Wilmington Presbytery. There were several professions of faith, four were received on profession and some by certificate and eleven members signed a petition asking for a church organization. There is no church of any denomination at the place. The sum of $200 was pledged for the salary of a minister and $25 raised for Synodical Missions. Mr. Black then went to Chadbourn and preached a few days there. At Chadbourn twenty-two signed a petition for a church, $300 was pledged for a church building and $100 for the support of a preacher. Mr. Black thinks that a man should be placed in the field at once. Certainly it looks as if God's Providence were leading the way by the evident blessing of His Spirit. But how shall they preach except they be sent?

Patiently awaiting the answer,

A. J. McKELWAY,
Superintendent.

First Church, Greensboro :—At the last communion services the names of sixteen persons were announced as having been received into the church since the last sacramental season. During the present week, Rev. A. A. Little is assisting the pastors in special services. The Christian Endeavor of this church is growing and showing other signs of spiritual life. May the Holy Spirit abundantly descend upon this church during this week of prayer.

VIRGINIA.

Bridgewater :—This church is doing efficient service under the pastorate of Rev. Carr Moore. Eleven have been recently received into the church.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Greenwood :—The Presbyterians here have decided to build a new brick church. They have the amount needed $12,000, in hand.

Yorkville :—A friend send us the program of an interesting series of weekly lectures upon the Reformation, the series beginning on Feb. 21st and extending to March 21st. The Events Leading to the Reformation was delivered as an introductory by Rev. W. G. Neville, of Yorkville; Rev. O. G. Jones, of Rock Hill, discoursed upon Martin Luther; Rev. J. H. Thornwell, of Fort Mill, John Calvin; Rev. J. K. Hall, pastor of Bethesda church, Zwingli, and Rev. Alex. Sprunt, of Rock Hill, John Knox. These very interesting and instructive exercises have been well attended by all denominations.

GEORGIA.

Columbus :—A Second Presbyterian church has been organized in this city bearing the name of the beautiful suburb in which it is situated, Rose Hill. Mr. W. C. Pease has been chosen elder and Messrs. C. W. Munroe and E. H. Rawls, deacons. While the membership is small the church starts out under very favorable circumstances.

FLORIDA.

High Springs :—The Presbyterians here are raising funds to rebuild their church which was destroyed by the storm last fall.

MARYLAND.

Baltimore :—Fifty-five persons were received into the Maryland Avenue church on Sunday the 7th inst. Of these persons all but three were the fruits of the recent gracious revival. The services were conducted by Evangelist Weston R. Gales who is continuing his labors at Waverly and Franklin Square churches.

KENTUCKY.

Louisville :—Three new members were received into the Stuart Robinson Memorial church, of which Rev. J. Ernest Thacker is pastor, Sunday March 7th, 1897.

MISSOURI.

St. Louis :—On Wednesday evening, March 3rd, the congregation of the Page Boulevard church voted to transfer their connection from the Northern to the Southern Assembly. The St. Louis Presbytery has to ratify this action—Trans-Mississippi Presbyterian.

OXFORD NOTES.

Rev. A. J. McKelway, Superintendent Synodical HomeMissions, spent ten days in February with the Oxford church, assisting the pastor Rev. A.S. Caldwell in a ten days meeting. Though LaGrippe was prevalent and the weather often inclement, both the day and night services were well attended. The earnest faithful presentation of the truth as it is in Jesus was richly blessed and owned by the Spirit. Christians were led to a higher life-level and thirteen confessed Christ for the first time as their Saviour. Seven have united with the Presbyterian church.

The cause of Home Missions in North Carolina was presented with persuasive power and a liberal subscription was made for the work.

Before preaching his last sermon, Mr. McKelway spoke of the debt of $1.700 on the building as a mountain of difficulty in the way of the progress of the Church and as a result of his appeal $1,400 has been subscribed. Contingent on all of the $1,700 being raised by Oct. 1st. The congregation has done nobly and should command aid from the Presbyterians of North Carolina in raising the balance of $300.

The Oxford church is thankful to God for the coming of Mr. McKelway, and rejoice over the good he has done, and pray for God's continued blessing on his work.

Messrs. C. J. Cooper and W. I. Howell have been elected and installed deacons.

A Westminster League of Christian Endeavor has been organized for those over fourteen years of age and a large and flourishing Junior for those under that age.

The Home and Foreign Missionary Society conducts a missionary concert in interest of missions the second Wednesday night in each month. Its members have adopted the one cent a day plan in place of dues.

Rev. A. S. Caldwell has received eighteen new members into the Oxford church since he began his work as pastor last October. In January the church arranged for all Mr. Caldwell's time to be given to them.

FOREIGN MISSION COMMITTEE NOTES.

The Executive Committee of Foreign Missions met at the Mission Rooms on Tuesday, March 9th.

The following overture to the General Assembly in regard to Church treasurers was adopted:

"The Executive Committee of Foreign Missions would respectfully overture the General Assembly to adopt the following:

WHEREAS, Confusion sometimes arises, and there is frequent and often serious delay in forwarding to their proper destinations contributions for the benevolent causes of the Church; the General Assembly does hereby advise and instruct, through its Presbyteries, all church sessions to elect from their number, a special treasurer, who shall serve as treasurer of the benevolent funds of the Church. The duties of this treasurer are in no wise to conflict with or encroach upon the duties of the Church treasurer in whose keeping shall be the care of all funds save those contributed for the causes of systematic beneficence.

This overture has grown out of much experience which our Committee, doubtless in common with others, has had in this matter; and whether the Assembly may see proper to act favorably upon it or not, we hope that at least attention will be called to the facts which gave rise to it. It is not uncommon to receive contributions of Foreign Mission funds on the 21st of March, which have been made months, and sometimes a whole year before that date. The inference would seem to be that those funds have lains the general treasury, possibly having been used along with the other general fund, for Church expenses during that time. If they were promptly remitted when first made it would it would oftentimes relieve us of great trouble and embarrassment.

A letter was received from Miss Margaret E. White, of Colton, Cal., reporting the death of her brother, Rev. W.B. White, of the China mission, on February 29th. The following resolution was adopted with reference to Mr. White's death;

Resolved, 1. That while bowing in submission to the will of God, the Committee would report its profound sorrow at this dispensation of His providence, and of the loss to our work in the death of our brother in the early morning of his youth and promise.

2. "That we rejoice to know of the meekness and patience with which his long and distressing bodily afflictions were borne, and of the triumphant have with which he anticipated the heavenly rest.

3. "That we hereby extend our heartfelt sympathy to his family and friends in their bereavement and especially to the sister who watched and tended him in his last days of weakness and suffering; and pray that the God of all comfort may minister to them abundantly the consolations of His grace.

4. That a page in our minutes be inscribed to his memory."

A long and interesting letter from Rev. S. P. Verner was read, stating that he arrived at Luebo Sept. 22d, finding all well, and the work going on prosperously. There were two letters from Mr. Sheppard announcing recent additions to the church. There are now 100 members in the church established at Luebo.

Mr. Sheppard reported that he had recently built a new chapel forty-five by eighteen feet, at a cost of six dollars, the natives using their own funds for putting on the roof. He also stated the chapel was filled every Sabbath, and that Sabbath-schools had been started in ten neighboring villages.

The treasurer reported receipts for the month of February to the amount of $16.578.37; and the secretary stated that if the receipts for March passed the limit of ten or eleven thousand dollars, we would close the year without debt, unless there should be some unexpected matter of expense between now and the end of the year.

A letter from Rev. W. C. Porter at Natal, Brazil, and Miss Rebecca T. Morrisette, of the same place, stated that small-pox had been prevalent there, but none of our missions had suffered. One native, a member of the church, had died with it. Mr. Porter also stated that there had recently been five more members added to the church since the first of January.

A letter was read from Rev. W. M. Morrison, dated Tumba, Africa, January 18th. He had been waiting there a few days for carriers, and expected to start on his journey to Stanley Pool within a week from that date. Mr. Crowley was waiting at Matadi for the arrival of goods shipped from London, in order that he might carry them with him when he went to Tumba.

Rev. H. B. Price, of the Japan Mission was present, and spoke to the Committee in regard to the needs of the mission. He stated that owing to losses recently sustained only one of our stations would have when he returned, more than one resident missionary, so that if any of our missionaries should be disabled a station would be left vacant. There ought to be at least three more male missionaries sent out during this year to that mission. Mr. Price expects to start on his return journey about the first of April.

After the transaction of the usual routine business the Committee adjourned to meet April 6th.

Secretary.

"BAPTIZED FOR THE DEAD."

1 Cor. 15: 29.

Is self explanatory, it seems to me, by taking the little word "oios" as the key to its interpretation. The argument runs thus, "If in all instances (oios) the dead rise not," then Christ is not risen, and if Christ be not risen, then Christ is dead, and baptism for Christ is baptism for the dead. The text might be paraphrased thus: "Else what shall they do who are baptized for Christ, if in all instances the dead rise not? Why are they then baptized for Him?"

Rankin, N. C., Feb. 26th, '97.

Please remember the fiscal year of our church closes March 31st. Please forward all funds for Assembly's Home Missions and for the Invalid Fund (to aid aged and infirm ministers and the widows and orphans of ministers deceased) to the Treasurer W. A. Powell, Atlanta, Ga., before that date. Mr. Powell also receives the Colored Evangelistic Fund.

Secretary.

Reduced rates have been granted over the Seaboard Air Line, Southern Railway, Ohio River and Charleston Railroad, and the Carolina and North Western Narrow Gauge Railroad, to Gastonia and return from all points within the bounds of our Presbytery. Tickets will be on sale April 8th and 9th, with final limit April 17—Mecklenburg Presbytery.

EUGENE L. SILER,
Stated Clerk.

The following from the Gastonia Gazette refers to an address delivered at the close of exercises of Globe Academy of which Prof. W. T. Marshall is principal: "The hour for the annual address has arrived. The orator of the occasion, Rev. H. D. Lequeux, always prompt, is present and prepared. After a short and fervent prayer led by Rev. R. L. Patton, the audience listens to one of the most charming speakers in Western North Carolina. When he long years ago entered the ministry, the speaker made it a rule to sit down when he did not have the attention of his audience. He has never had to sit down. And he never will. Never long, he never wearies, hence is never long. We are unable to give an outline of this valuable address. Wish we could give it in full. Chaste thought, touching in sentiment powerful and ornate in style, and smooth and eloquent in delivery, he could have held his audience over twice as long."

At a meeting of the Sea Coast Railroad Company last Saturday the old officers were re elected; and it was well, for President French, Vice-President Smith and General Manager Grant to whom active management of affairs has been intrusted have directed affairs most admirably. The prospects of the road are bright and improvements have been made, or are making, that will add greatly to the comfort and safety of travel and convenience to stoppers-over on Ocean View beach. The change of location of the offices and passenger and freight rooms not only shows enterprise, but indicates prosperity. Taken altogether the comfort and convenience of the traveling public will be amply provided for the coming season, and the manager will be prepared to rush them through with "neatness and dispatch."

HURRY.

When, as if in the vain effort to attain the rapidity with which electricity and steam accomplish their work, the world seems to be possessed with a very demon of hurry, is there not a danger of Christians, and especially of Christian men, forgetting that this spirit is entirely opposed to the earnestness and the zeal of the Christian life, as it is pictured in the Bible? We think so.

Can any one be very earnest in a matter which he is anxious to have "over and done with," in order to begin something else? We think not.

Is hurry what Paul meant when he exhorted the Roman Christians to be "not slothful in business; fervent in spirit serving the Lord? We think not.

Can a man, who has persuaded himself that he has only ten minutes in which to accomplish what ought not to be done in less than twenty, do that work as earnestly and effectively as it ought to be done?

It would seem that the interpretation that many men put upon the sentence: "It is good to be zealously affected always in a good thing," is: It is good always to be in a hurry in a good thing! We eat in a hurry. Many may be said to sleep in a hurry, in as much as they retire late and rise up early. We make short calls in order to pay more, and to get to something else, or do one piece of work hurriedly in order the sooner to get at another.

We read hurriedly, giving as an excuse that we would never finish all that we want to read in any other way. We multiply our wants, and then of course, must hurry in order to satisfy all.

And the worst of it is, that it is not alone in secular things that this hurry is manifest. Insiduously it is creeping into every department of religious life. We rise in the morning with the spirit of hurry upon us, consequently we take time for only a hurried prayer and we strive to satisfy conscience by thinking that we are "not heard for our much speaking." Breakfast is eaten without time to add the pleasant converse, which is such a healthful garnish for a meal. Then, family prayers, the one time when the father exercises his priestly function, and commends his family to the keeping of Jehovah God, is too often conducted with such haste that one scarcely realizes that the service is fairly begun, before it is over, and we hurry off to something else!

Now, what is the effect of all this upon the character and life? Is it productive of growth, mental and spiritual? It cannot be.

There is comfort in this thought to those who find themselves unable to keep pace with this unseemly haste; who, in order to enjoy the peace of God, find that they must maintain a quiet spirit; who would rather do less and do it well. Very few Christians realize that they are adopting the world's way, when they use these methods of work, nor do they see that the spirit of reverence and that dignity that should characterize the Church, are being undermined by them. They pray "hallowed by Thy name, and yet hurry through the services of the sanctuary to get to the next thing.

We need to study our own limitations, or rather, God's limitations for us. There is work, God knows! for every Christian man to do, but it ought to be done in such a way as shall glorify God. Here is the program of one Christian man's Sabbath, (the day of rest!)

Breakfast at eight, with family prayer and hurried study of the Bible lesson till 9 o'clock. Sunday-school from half past nine until quarter of eleven. Prayer meeting till eleven. Meeting of session after service. Dinner at one. Mission Sunday-school at three. Y. M. C. A. meeting at four. Supper at half past six. Night service at half past seven. Meeting of session after service. Now when has that man had time for his own quiet communion, and study of God's Word, and preparation for the coming week, with all its business temptations and care and frets? He is bound to be a spiritual dyspeptic unless he speedily discovers his limitations and lives up to his convictions, and diets accordingly.

Some one has wisely said: "If the people about you are carrying their business or their benevolence at a pace which drains the life out of you, resolutely take a slower pace. Be called a laggard, make less money, accomplish less work, but be what you were meant to be.

You have your natural limit of power as much as an engine, ten horse power, or twenty, or a hundred. You are fit to do certain kinds of work, and so much of it, and you need a certain kind, and amount of fuel, and a certain kind of handling."

MY MOTHER.

A RECOLLECTION.

At the close of the war my mother was left a widow with six small children. It was not her custom to have family prayers. Her children were boys except one and she did not somehow feel equal to praying before them. Instead she formed the habit of retiring every morning to the room that we called a parlor and there praying to the Judge of the widow and the Father of the fatherless. I can remember how quiet and lonely the house seemed during that time. No one dared open that door. If a child came calling or crying into the house the cook would say: "Sh—!! don't you know Miss —— is in the parlor?" Sometimes a rollicking boy would rush into the house and then a thought would strike him and he would stop, grow serious and step on tip-toe past that door. Sometimes if we wanted her very much we would creep to the end of the hall and wait for her to come out. And I can remember to-day how her face and eyes would sometimes look when the wrestling was over and she was ours again.

It was in that same room that she took us when it was necessary to correct us for our faults. When in there with us we thought of the times that she had been there alone, and, some how, it made a difference. It was by a window in that same room that my mother was sitting on a Sunday morning in the spring time when she called me in and made me read a few verses out of her big-print New Testament and Psalms. It was the first time that I knew that I could read well enough to read in the Bible.

So for each of us there clustered around that room where our mother prayed, associations that have left their mark. Every one of us has helped to guard her quiet from invasion. Every one of us has wanted her and had to wait until the door was opened, and every one of us knew for whom our mother was praying when the door was shut.

Thirty years have gone by. The baby boy when a youth of twenty-two died in a distant State; but we heard that he died in peace. The only daughter is a minister's wife. Two boys are themselves preachers. One is an elder in the Presbyterian church. The remaining boy is perhaps the kindest-hearted one of us all, but he has some bad habits. We are looking for a time when all of us shall be humble, faithful followers of the Jesus who was so often with our mother in that room in the old country home. She prayed in secret, but a mighty sermon came to every child through the closed door, and

I do not believe that any one of us has forgotten it. Then God too remembers those petititions still, and so I think the boys will all come straight in the end.

STUMBLING BLOCKS.

A person may come to you and say, "I am afraid I am not one of the elect. I know I feel my sin; I cry out to God for mercy; but this obstacle stops me—what if I should not be one of the elect? What if God should not have chosen me unto eternal life? Then my supplications must be in vain, and I must be forever shut outside the gates of heaven." Let us take up this stumbling-block out of the way. He that believeth on the Lord Jesus Christ is elect. Tell the fearing soul that he who has faith in the Saviour, and is prepared to renounce all other confidences, and to trust and believe in Christ and Him crucified, is as surely elect as are the glorified saints before the eternal throne. Bid him make his "calling" sure, for then shall his "election" also be made sure unto him. Tell him, as a guilty sinner, to hie away to the cross, and there prostrate himself, and look up to the wounds that bleed out new life for him, and there, at Calvary, shall he learn the certainty of his election, and be no more troubled by his doubts upon that point. You will find a thousand hindrances vexing the sinner when he is coming to Christ. Do your best, by kind words, by wise exposition of Scripture, by showing the real nature of the difficulties, to clear the way, and take up every stumbling block.—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

BEYOND ALL COMPUTATION.

Surely God's grace, like His love, is beyond all computation. When you can measure the ocean in the hollow of your hand and comprehend the dust of the earth in a measure and weigh the mountains in scales and the hills in a balance, then may you hope to obtain a faint conception of the outer edge of God's measureless grace. It is grace which came by Jesus Christ. It is sufficient for all the needs of all men. One of the favorites of Alexander the Great became hopelessly involved in debt. One night as he was waiting in the ante-room of the Emperor he took a piece of paper and wrote down all his obligations, one after another, and under the long list he idly wrote, "Who will pay all these?" Finally he fell asleep. The Emperor, passing through the room, was attracted by the paper, and when he read the query, "Who will pay all these?" he took the pen and added, added, "I, Alexander." So we may gather together all our spiritual obligations and all the wants of society, and we say, "Who can meet all these?" And the infinite God comes and writes, "I, the Holy One of Israel, who offereth to all grace, 'without prescribing how much.'"—The Treasury.

CONDUCTED BY REV. A. D. McCLURE.

First Quarter—Lesson XIII.

March. 28, 1897.—Review of the Quarter.

Golden Text. "The Word of God grew and multiplied." Acts xii. 24.

CATECHISM.

Question. 33. What is justification?

Answer. Justification is an act of God's free grace, wherein He pardoneth all our sins, and accepteth us as righteous in His sight, only for the righteousness of Christ, imputed to us and received by faith alone.

INTRODUCTORY.

The time of ten years seems short for the events of the quarter's lessons we have been studying, occurring between the years A. D. 30 and A. D. 40 Other years in centuries of the past gave time for the slow, but sure preparation for the coming of the Holy Ghost at Pentecost. He wrought mightily and swiftly in these ten years now under review.

The separate lessons of the quarter include the first nine chapters of the Acts and one from Paul's letter to the Corinthians. The prominent subject has been the difficulties, hindrances and opposition encountered in the first ten years of the history of the Christian Church. In these separate lessons, studies, principles, and forces such as still oppose the progress of the Church are found. This review should show these and seek the teachings of the Golden Texts and the catechism, questions and answers.

LESSON NOTES.

The first lesson is preparatory, showing the ascension of Christ to present to His Father His own finished work of redemption that the promise of the Father to send the Holy Ghost might be fulfilled. The second lesson is summed up in the Golden Text, in which is a phrase, "filled with the Holy Ghost," which is now much discussed. This much we can say and claim by common consent, that the disciples "filled with the Holy Ghost" were thereby furnished and possessed to be witnesses to the risen Christ as Saviour and Lord, so that their testimony won multitudes to confess Him. It is further plain that the disciples then and later, as recorded in the fourth chapter of the Acts, were "with one accord" in prayer when they were so filled.

The third lesson brings to view the work of the Spirit in the conversion of the multitude on the day of Pentecost. The Golden Text, Acts ii. 39, does not refer to the promise of salvation by Christ, but the promise of the coming of the Holy Ghost, made by God the Father, and repeated by His Son Jesus Christ our Lord. When this truth is fully received, will be an hour of great possibility and responsibility, such as should surprise us and startle us in our complacency over the small success of the Church. There should be mourning in Zion and heart-searchings over our selfishness in the past. The truth may then prevail. When the Church returns to that truth and accepts it fully, and surrenders wholly to Christ as Lord and yields loyal hearts to be filled with the Holy Ghost, the same or similar opposition, such as the remainder of the lesson shows may be expected. Then the Church will rely less on the human and world conditions of success and turn more to the divine and heavenly. Preachers will think less of their own importance and more of the glory of Christ and the good of the Church. The hypocrites will be unmasked, prison doors will be opened, the opposition of science and the arts of Satan will fail and simony will be rebuked. There will be martyrs. The disciples may be dispersed and distressed, but the martyr blood shall be good seed and the dispersed will scatter it and see its rich fruit, Even the Sauls will be made blind of their natural vision that they may see the Lord. Then "Christian Self-Restraint" will be practiced.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

This age needs martyrs—those who have the cause of Christ at heart, who "know Him and the power of His resurrection" and count it all joy that they are found worthy to suffer for the name of the Lord Jesus.

1. "We ought to obey God rather than men."

2. The prison may receive us, but God will open the door, that we may testify here or go to Him in heaven.

3. This testimony ought to be given to the ends of the earth.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, March 28th, 1897.

BY REV. B. E. WALLACE.

What Christian heroism is and does. Luke 9:18-26, 51-62.

Text for the week:

"No man, having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the Kingdom of God." Luke 9:62.

Daily Readings:

HEROISM.

Monday, Like Paul's. Acts 21:7-14.
Tuesday, Like David's. 1 Sam. 17:17-37.
Wednesday, Like Caleb's. Josh. 14:6-14.
Thursday, Like Hezekiah's. 2 Chron. 32:1-8.
Friday, Like Nehemiah's. Neh. 6:1-14.
Saturday, Like Christ's. Mark 10:32-40.
Sunday, Topic. Luke 9:18-26.

Hints for Leaders:

1. Define the meaning of a hero.

2. Show the difference in Christ's estimate of a hero, and the world's estimate.

3. Have different members to call attention to the special traits that marked the heroes as set forth in the Daily Readings.

4. Show that heroism is in restraining as much as in attaining

Notes:

To know what Christian heroism really is and does, go read its composition and deeds in Bible history and the early Church. Here we find a noble type, a very pattern of the Christ himself. To be a martyr to a cause in its very beginning, not fully knowing its world-wide benefaction showed a more heroic spirit than to be a martyr now seeing what Calvary's Cross has done. Is there such a spirit to-day, one that will go to the stake for Christ? Surely there is, for every true disciple of Jesus Christ knows that if he loses his life for Christ's sake he shall find it again. The Christian hero is noblest and grandest of all. Like a colossal pyramid he towers far above the world's devotees, exhibiting the spirit of endurance, obedience and love borne alone from the Father's Hand above. Christian heroism is:

1. Unquestioning obedience when the Master calls.

2. Suffering for Christ's sake.

3. Denying one's self of worldly ambition.

4. Doing daily the little duties that lie in our paths.

He that would be great in the kingdom of God, let him be servant of all.

OPEN DOOR NOTES.

A Westminster League has been organized at Harrisonburg, Va., with eighty members.

The Ladies' Missionary Society of Greenville, S. C., recently held its regular meeting, discussing the topic or the month. Among the interesting features was a map exercise illustrating the mission work carried on by Southern Presbyterians in Mexico, and a paper on "Protestantism versus Romanism in Mexico." This society is actively employed in the partial support of Miss Emma McKnight, a native of Greenville, now a missionary to China.

To "ENDEAVORERS":—Having just been appointed to act as corresponding secretary pro tem of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the First Presbyterian church at this place, I take advantage of this privilege to write you a few things concerning our society, for I have heard indirectly, that our State secretary is about to lose sight of us, and that we are not willing should be, so I trust she may hear from us through this communication.

Our society is not dead; on the contrary it is growing in interest and helpfulness to its members, and we feel that through the society, many of us have been spiritually strengthened, and led to testify our love for the Master, and drawn closer to each other by ties stronger than earth can give.

While our number is less than we should like it to be (there being about forty active members) we are grateful to note that with the increased interest, and zeal manifested during the past few months, our membership is also increasing.

On account of our dear pastor's rather frail constitution, we have no church service on Sabbath evening, so our society chose this evening for its weekly prayer-meeting; the attendance at these meetings is usually very good, and I notice that that part of our pledge where we promise "to take some part aside from singing," is heartily carried out.

At a recent business meeting it was proposed by one of the members that we should give $10 of the funds on hand to the cause of Home Missions in Asheville Presbytery; this proposition meets with the hearty approval of those present. If we find it practicable, we will pledge ourselves to give a certain amount at stated times to this same cause which is indeed a most needy and worthy one. "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few."

At frequent intervals, we have "socials" which bring many of our young people together, and possibly in this way, we become acquainted with many of the young people of the church, as well as the visitor or stranger, whom otherwise we might never know, for as you may not know, Asheville is made up largely of a floating population, and this is felt in the church as well as in the town. We always give a most cordial welcome to the stranger to be present at all of our meetings, and it was with pleasure we greeted many new faces at a social given last week, which, by the way was a most decided success in that every one seemed to let formality flee, and no one felt himself to be a stranger long. Beside being very pleasant, I think these socials are strengthening to the society.

With the Second Presbyterian church will come another society of Christian Endeavor, no doubt, and my prayer is that it may be the stimulus to our society, that the new church will be to the First church.

I could say much more, but fearing that I have already made this my first letter too long, I will close.

Yours "for Christ and the Church,"

A. ELIZA LOVE,
Corresponding Sec'y. pro tem.
Asheville, N. C.

McLAUCHLIN. At her home in Richmond county, N. C., after a brief illness, Miss Lizzie McLauchlin, aged, 73 years and 2 months,

In early life she joined Laurel Hill Presbyterian church and remained a most devoted member thereof until Sabbath morning, February 28th, '97, when she, by the hand of death, was transferred from the Church militant to the Church triumphant. While she grew to a good old age in years, she never grew old in spirit; was always cheerful and full of life.

She was especially gifted in conversational powers, and the pleasing humor and originality of thought which characterized her conversation, made her all the more entertaining.

In her death a good woman has passed away; one that will be sadly missed; not only by her immediate family, but also by many families in the community, and especially will she be missed in the sick-room and in the house of mourning. For in these places her light shone brightest. Always so kindly attentive, and sympathetic was she in such places, that her presence was most highly appreciated, and regarded as a real benediction. And these things she did for the Master. "I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was sick, and ye visited me." "Come ye blessed of my Father inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Of all the nerve-tonics—bromos, celeries or nervines—your doctor will tell you that the Hypophosphites are best understood. So thoroughly related is the nervous system to disease that some physicians prescribe Hypophosphites alone in the early stages of Consumption. Scott's Emulsion is Cod-liver Oil, emulsified, with the Hypophosphites, happily blended. The result of its use is greater strength and activity of the brain, the spinal cord and the nerves.

Let us send you a book all about it. Sent free.

SMITH. Jessie Slocumb Smith was born in the Bluff congregation, Cumberland county, N. C., January 7th, 1849, and died February 9th, 1897, in Harnett county, N. C., near Little River Academy.

Mr. Smith was a ruling elder in Sardis church, more than twenty years and clerk of the session for a number of years. In December, 1872, he was united in marriage with Miss Ida Hodges the only daughter of Mr. James P. Hodges of Harnett county, N. C., which union God blessed with six bright intelligent children, four daughters and two sons, all of whom with their mother survive him.

Mr. Smith was a good man and a kind and obliging neighbor, and an intelligent Christian. He knew that he believed, a great attainment to know by the grace of God, that we have believed, he knew what he believed, another attainment to know intelligently what we believe, but above all, like Paul, "he knew whom he believed," and he could always give a reason for the hope he entertained. He was a devoted churchman, he loved his church; her walls, her ways, her duties, her doctrines, her communions were each dear to him. For her his "tears fell," his "prayers ascended" and to her his "toils and cares were given."

He was often the superintendent of the Sabbath-school, and he was a most excellent superintendent and a good teacher. In addition to these duties in his own church, he did much good in organizing Sabbath-schools for the negroes, and teaching them the truth of the Gospel. The large number of negroes in attendance at his funeral was a testimony in part of their appreciation of the great work he did for them. He was most useful in the prayer meeting of the church; he had the tact and talent to make the services both interesting and edifying. He was a devoted and genial husband, he was an affectionate and tender father. He will be sadly missed in the home, in the neighborhood, in the church and especially by his pastor.

J. S. BLACK.

McGILVARY. On March 8th, 1897, Mr. Evander McGilvary of Pocket, N.C., in his 82 year. He was an older brother of the Rev. Dr. Daniel McGilvary, missionary to the Laos country, Siam, and father of the late Rev. William McGilvary, an only child. In 1854 he was ordained a ruling elder in Buffalo church, and transferred his membership to Pocket church in 1890, where he held the same office. He was one of the purest, noblest and best of godly men.

TO THE MINISTERS AND SESSIONS OF FAYETTEVILLE PRESBYTERY.

Will you please bear in mind that April has been set apart by the General Assembly for taking collections for ministerial collection, and as our candidates for the ministry are sadly in need of the aid promised them, please secure as liberal contribution as possible. At the last fall meeting, Presbytery by a unanimous vote, agreed to make earnest effort to raise for the current year at least $500 for this cause. Up to January 1st only $147 had been forwarded to the General Assembly's secretary. Brethren will you not for the Master's sake urge upon your people the importance of this contribution, and when taken, see that it be forwarded immediately to the treasury of Presbytery.

FOR THE FAMILY.

THE EVERLASTING LOVE.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

Never, dear child of the Father, forget
That His love since all time upon thee hath been set,
That forth from the ages it floweth to thee,
And will last through the ages, thy comfort to be.

When this life of the pilgrim is over and done,
And the life in the home of thy rest hath begun,
Then too and forever the love of the King
To the infinite gladness his dear ones shall bring.

So what is the pang that endureth a day,
And the hindrance what though thy progress they stay,
But messengers sent to remind thee of Him
Whose love is thy star when the night gathers dim?

Dear child of the Father, oh! never forget,
That the love of thy Father on thee hath been set,
That out of the heavens it floweth to thee
Forever and ever, a great tidal sea.

That wonderful love, if thou in it canst live,
Each day to thy spirit new sweetness shall give,
And the grace that is in thee, a radiance divine,
On the weary and stricken shall tenderly shine.

A DUTCH INVENTION.

SIGNALS BY WHICH SHIPS MAY SPEAK TO PERSONS ASHORE.

An Amsterdam correspondent writes to the Westminster Gazette: "It looks as if we dull Dutchmen are upon the point of giving to the world a priceless invention—the means by which ships at sea may be on speaking terms under all circumstances or to have the power to communicate with the shore. Some weeks since, people living on the outskirts of the town, returning home in the dark hours of the evening, were scared by the very peculiar unearthly sounds, something akin to the deep penetrating scream of a steamer's siren in the mist, although there was no water near to speak of, and consequently no possibility of a steamer. The riddle is now solved. It has been found possible to produce a constant, unvarying sound, which may—

"1. Be heard at a distance of at least five miles against a stiff breeze.

"2. Is of such nature and quality that it is quite easy to determine to a nicety the direction from which it comes.

"3. Is produced by an instrument which can be moved about without altering the sound, that is, in the same manner as an electric searchlight.

"4. Last, but not least, that parts of the instrument may be differently tuned, which makes it possible to give constant alternative signals which may be codified, so that a conversation may be kept up.

"It appears that the inventors some weeks ago made trials in the dark, and, of course, in lonely, outlying places in the neighborhood, and so produced the ghostly noises aforesaid. Competent persons are of opinion that the thing really is a great success. The Zealand company has resolved to give the invention a fair trial, and the world may soon hear more of it. It is quite clear that if the steamer which met the Drummond Castle had possessed such an instrument, and its signals could have been understood by the Drummond's officers, the disaster might not have occurred."—Picayune.

Love is the keystone of a woman's life. Her fondest hopes rest upon this tender emotion; her highest pride is in her capacity to awaken the love which makes a happy wife; her noblest ambition is to become a loved and loving mother.

Any weakness or disease which incapacitates her to fulfill the exalted function of motherhood is the saddest blight which can come upon a woman's life.

But there is no reason in nature why any hindrances or derangements of this kind should continue to exist. Ninety-nine times in a hundred they are completely overcome in a perfectly natural and scientific way by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which gives healthy power and capacity to the special organs; reinforces the nerve-centres and makes natural, healthy motherhood possible, safe and comparatively easy.

It makes the coming of baby almost free from pain; gives strength and cheerfulness to the mother, and constitutional vigor to the child. It is the only medicine in the world devised for this one purpose by an educated physician, a skilled and experienced specialist in this particular field of practice.

"I cannot say enough in praise of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as it has done me a world of good, and has, undoubtedly saved my life," writes Mrs. Florence Hunter, of Corley, Logan Co., Ark. "I miscarried four times; could get no medicine to do me any good. I concluded to try the 'Favorite Prescription' and after taking several bottles of it I made my husband a present of a fine girl. I think it is the best medicine in the world."

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

A QUESTION.

If you will kindly tell me, please,
What animal I am,
I shall be very thankful—
I'm grandma's "blessed lamb."

My brother Archie says "that kid"
Upsets our whole big house;
And when I tease my grandpa,
I'm just his "little mouse."

I give Aunt Bess a letter, and
She says, "Thank you, my dear."
And then I'm papa's "monkey,"
Which certainly is queer.

And Uncle Charlie says I'm stubborn
As a "good sized mule."
My mamma calls me her "sweetheart,"
When I've been good at school.

Now, this is all confusing
To a man who is so wee,
I call myself just "Teddy,"
Pray, what would you call me?

THE GRANGERS—A HAPPY FAMILY.

BY RACHAEL RICHARDSON.

(Continuation of Chapter 2.)

The weeks rolled on and the last week of November came. Jerry's month of trial for the prize would be out on Friday. He woke up on Monday morning with many resolutions, and a red string tied around each wrist! Besides the strings there was the piece of white paper pinned on his coat. But the frosty weather, or the fact that Christmas was coming,—something affected him, for he seemed perfectly wild with mischief.

Monday he hid Lucy's favorite doll, and tripped up Rob. Tuesday he was quieter and penitent. Wednesday he knocked a boy down at school because he laughed at his "bracelets."

Thursday, what did he do? Oh yes, he put salt in Lucy's coffee, on the sly, then, in the evening he hid behind the parlor door, and scared poor little Mar and Bar as they were coming down stairs and they both fell down, and Bar fell across a stick of wood and cut his forehead.

Mrs. Granger was afraid that Jerry had done the mischief, but she waited for him to confess, for the Grangers were required to tell her themselves of their own wrong doings. She believes that "an honest confession is good for the soul." So that night when he went to his mother's room for the ten minutes each of them always had alone with her before bed time, he began:

"Mama, I know I've lost my chance at the prize. Those strings don't do a bit of good. When the mischief rises it seems as if I had to to it."

"Well, dear, let me ask you something:

"Does my boy ask God to help him? This should be one of your first petitions every morning."

Jerry hung his head. He had never thought of asking God to help him about these little things, they were not real sins, and mama had never really forbidden him to do them.

"Try it to-morrow, will you dear?"

"I will" said Jerry very sorrowfully. But it was too late to help him win the prize this time, and he saw Ethel take it, and bore it right bravely.

CHAPTER 3.

ROB'S LESSON.

The supper bell brought the story to a rather abrupt conclusion, but as it was Friday night and the Holmeses always took holiday, they all begged Aunt Susie to "talk Grangers" again, as Allyn said.

"Well," said Aunt Susie, "there is a plenty more to tell and I will tell you how Rob learned a very valuable lesson.

"If Jerry found it hard to win the prize because he was full of mischief, I think Rob's trouble came from his temper."

Poor fellow! he certainly had a hard time trying to get the upper hand of it.

If he was hungry, he was cross, and you know boys are hungry so often. If any body differed from him, the hot words came pouring out.

He had a strong will, and made up his mind quickly, as to what he would do, and then he could not wait a minute or be argued with at all, but, as Lucy expressed it, would just "fall to pieces."

So you see, I have shown that another of the Grangers was not perfect. But, no matter how cross he was, no matter how set in his way, one thing Rob Granger knew, and that was the meaning of the word obedience.

When his father or mother spoke, no matter how angry he was he stopped off short. Then, he never talked or pouted. Under that quick temper there was a loving heart, and a sweet nature.

But when the spring days came, being in school, and studying was a sore trial to Rob. He loved hunting and fishing and all out door sport, so that sometimes, when he would come out of school with all his pent up energy, and love of pleasure it was dangerous to teaze, or to oppose him.

The great lesson of his life came to him just way.

Rob was now thirteen years old and little Rosebud, the youngest girl of the family was his especial pet. He loved her I think, next best to his mother, of all the world.

He came from school one day hungry, tired and eager to go fishing. Poor little Rosebud was taking measles that day, though nobody knew it. She was, consequently very fretful and had been crying for "Buddy" all the morning, and when he came home, of course she expected to be with him and to be petted.

But Rob was busy getting his fishing tackle ready, and so had not time—or thought he had not, to bother with Rosebud, and so, in a tone, in which he did not often, speak to her, he said:

"Oh, Rosebud, get away from here. Go 'long in the house to mama. I'm going fishing after dinner and have to fix mp tackle now." And he pushed her rudely away.

Poor little feverish Rosebud! her heart was almost broken at these cross words, and she tottered away and threw herself down, with her lovely face on her arm, and sobbing pitifully:

"Oh Buddy! Buddy! me so sick!" Now, if Bob had'nt been hungry and cross and going fishing, in the bargain, he would have lifted her and coddled her to her heart's content, as it was, he said a second time;

"Go 'long to mama and he gave her another push, and turned away to make a search in the Tool-house for something.

When he came out Rosebud was gone, and just then the first bell rang for dinner.

Rob dropped his tackle and ran quickly to get ready for dinner, for there were only ten minutes between the bells.

When he went into the dining room, Mrs. Granger said:

"Where is Rosebud? Who has seen Rosebud?"

Then Rob remembered the pleading voice in the yard, and his face flushed, still he did not offer to look for her.

Lucy went to the nursery, and then to the kitchen, but nobody knew where she was.

The cook had heard her crying in the yard, and calling: "Buddy."

Here Mrs. Granger looked at Bob, and he looked up quietly and said:

"She came to me when I was busy, and I sent her off, but I'll go find her mama."

His heart was in the right place again, and he rushed out into the yard calling Rosebud and beginning to feel frightened.

As he turned away from the Tool house, the last place he had seen her, he spied the dear little thing lying asleep on the side porch under his mother's bedroom window.

She had sobbed herself to sleep and was lying on the floor with her flushed face, and looking like a beautiful picture.

Rob gathered her up in his arms and took her into the house, kissing her as he went. She opened her eyes, and when she saw who was carrying her, threw her arms around his neck saying:

"Oh Buddy! Buddy, me love you."

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Mr. Editor:—Marian and Bessie are writing to you so I will write too. I go to school and study fourth reader, geography, spelling, and arithmetic. Mr. Fleming is my teacher, I am nine years old. My papa is a preacher. He preaches at four churches and a chapel. I like books about adventures. I have been reading "Bonny Scotland." I like it very much. I send an enigma.

Your little friend,
C. FLINN ARROWOOD.
Woodleaf, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor:—We are two little girls and two little boys. We go to the same Sunday-school and love our teacher. We all take your paper and our mothers read the letters to us. Willie Edmunds went to the seashore last summer and had a nice time fishing and wading. We hope we can all go next summer. We will close for fear of the waste basket.

Your little unkown friends,
POLLY MARSHALL,
PHOEBE RUFFIN,
WILLIE EDMUNDS,
WILLIE STAMPS.
Davidson, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I am a little boy seven years old, and my sister Etta is going to school. My first school and I am at the big dog in the first reader. I can't write well enough to write you, but sister will write for me. She will write the rest for herself. I am still paying my 25cts to the Foreign Mission every month from my Japan hen. She is laying as hard as she can! She will set again soon. I think every little one that writes to your good paper might raise a great deal this way, hope they will try.

Your little friends,
ETTA MCKAY,
ARNEL MCKAY.
Floral College, N. C.

Dear Presbyterian: I am the little girl at the Annie Louise Cottage. The girls call me the pet. I pass the cups to the grown persons. We had a splendid time George Washington's birth day and we had a big game of base. I have a China cat and a doll chair. One of our matrons went away and stayed a month. We were glad when she came back. She invited the little girls at the Annie Louise Cottage to come and see her, but it rained and we were disappointed. The people of High Point clothe me. Good by,

MYRTLE AUSTIN.

SECULAR NEWS.

NORTH CAROLINA.

The work of the Women's Exposition of the Carolina's is progressing rapidly, and it is hoped all will be in readiness at the opening. The large two story buildings are in course of erection, and the exhibits are fast being booked for the opening May 1st. The collection of portraits in the art department will be notable. Charles Broadway Rouss, the donor of the Confederate Battle Abbey, has loaned his famous war-time portraits of Generals Lee and Stonewall Jackson, painted by Bouce. The noted portraits of James K. Polk, Dobbin, once secretary of the navy, and others at the State University will be seen.

The past session of the A. & M. College has been the most successful and most satisfactory in every respect in the history of the institution. Never has there been so large a number of students or the interest manifested by them in their work been so great. The faculty is a strong and enthusiastic one. The enrollment for this year has been 247. The graduating class will number fifteen splendidly equipped young men.

The Public Building of New Berne has been completed and is the handsomest in the State.

The Stone Mountain Railway company will build a standard guage road from North Wilkesboro across into Alleghany county, thence to the Virginia and Tennessee line connecting a road under construction from Aberdeen, Va. This company owns Stone Mountain which is solid granite 750 feet high.

DOMESTIC.

Stock to the value of 300,000 has been subscribed for a new cotton mill to be erected at Birmingham, Ala.

A plan is on foot to have an extensive horticultural and agricultural exhibit at Americus, Ga., without the usual side-show and racing tracks.

A cyclone of twenty miles north of Wheeling, W. Va., destroyed the large casting houses of the Junction Iron and Steele Co., killing two men A number of homes were badly damaged.

A new coal field will be developed in the southern part of Wayne county, Va., at an early date.

A fire on Sunday last at Elkin, W. Va., destroyed a dozen business houses, six residences and the bank of Elkin.

The annual series of lectures given by Mr. Eugene Levering to the Johns Hopkins Y. M. C. A., will be by Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott upon "The Christian in the Commonwealth."

Four thousand acres of the best farm land in middle Georgia has been purchased for the location of a colony. The Georgia Railroad Land and Colonization Company is at the head of the movement.

The Associations of Sewing Schools will hold an exhibition in New York on next week. This association was organized three years ago and aims to put within the reach of the schools included in its membership the latest information concerning new theories and methods in the art of teaching sewing. Collections have been sent from England, Swden, Belgium and Japan.

Of the sixty-three graduates of the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery, four are from North Carolina. Twenty-one States and Germany are represented.

Barney McKernan, a survivor of the Light Brigade, which was made famous by the charge at Balaklava in the Crimean war, died at the home of his daughter at Phoenixville, Pa., on the 13th inst., aged seventy-two years. He was probably the last survivor of that famous charge who lived in this country. Mr. McKernan received medals for bravery from Queen Victoria and the Sultan of Turkey.

FOREIGN.

Honorary degrees were conferred on the 11th inst by Cambridge University to U. S. Ambassador Bayard and the French Ambassador Baron de Courcel.

Ranavalona III., the queen of Madagascar, who on October 1, 1895, signed a treaty recognizing the protectorate of France, has been exiled to the Island of Reunion, a French possession near the Island of Mauritius.

It is stated that Prime de Rivera who was to have succeeded General Weyler in Cuba has been ordered to the Philippines. Six thousand troops which were to have been sent to Cuba from Spain have also been ordered to the Eastern Archipelago. Arrears due troops and for supplies now amount to $46,000,000. The Spaniards state that the only hope is negotiating with Gomez, but that this is impossible while Weyler is on the island.

SAY SOES.

A judge, in crossing the Irish Channel one stormy night, knocked against a well-known witty lawyer, who was suffering terribly from seasickness.

"Can I do anything for you?" asked the judge.

"Yes," gasped the seasick lawyer, "I wish you would overrule this motion."

If the care of the hair were made a part of a lady's education, we should not see so many gray heads, and the use of Hall's Hair Renewer would be unnecessary.

Broiled Chicken.—Split the chicken open and broil it on a gridiron over a clear fire, season with salt and pepper, spread on plenty of the best, fresh butter and serve at once on a hot platter. Only tender chickens are nice cooked in this way.

THINGS USEFUL.

To clean a sewing machine, cover all the bearings with kerosene, run the machine rapidly a few minutes, then, with a soft cloth, remove all the kerosene and apply machine oil.

One of the most satisfactory ways of giving an invalid raw beef is in a sandwich. Butter lightly on the loaf bread twenty-four hours old, and then slice it very thin. Scrape a choice, tender piece of beef, season it with salt, and also pepper, if the latter can be taken; spread it upon the buttered bread, put another piece of bread over it, and then cut the sandwich into finger pieces, being sure to remove all the crust.

Virginia Egg Bread.—Take two cups of buttermilk, two eggs, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt one cup of cornmeal. Mix all into a batter, which will be quite thin, but so much the better. Then put a skillet on the stove with a tablespoonful of lard, and let it melt. Run the lard all around the sides of the skillet to grease it all round; pour the melted lard into your batter and stir until well mixed; pour the batter into the hot skillet and let it set on the stove until it curls away from the sides of the skillet, then set in the oven and bake until brown.

HYMN TO THE NIGHT.

I heard the trailing garments of the night
Sweep through her marble halls!
I saw her sable skirts all fringed with light
From the celestial walls!

I felt her presence, by its spell of might,
Sweep o'er me from above;
The calm, majestic presence of the night,
As of the one I love.

I heard the sounds of sorrow and delight,
The manifold, soft chimes,
That fill the haunted chambers of the night,
Like some old poet's rhymes.

From the cool cisterns of the midnight air
My spirit drank repose;
The fountain of perpetual peace flows there—
From those deep cisterns flows.

O holy night! from thee I learn to bear,
What man has borne before!
Thou layest thy fingers on the lips of care,
And they complain no more.

Peace! Peace! Orestes—like I breathe this prayer!
Descend from broad-winged flight,
The welcome, the thrice prayed for, the most fair,
The best-beloved night!

—Longfellow.

And now, adorable Spirit proceeding from the Father and the Son, descend upon all the churches, renew the Pentecost in this our age, and baptize thy people generally—O baptize them yet again with tongues of fire! Crown this nineteenth century with a revival of "pure and undefiled religion" greater than that of the first, greater than any "demonstration of the Spirit" ever yet vouchsafed to men!—Rev. William Arthur.

The Bible is the only book that can prove the inspiration of the Bible.

HON. ALFRED ROWLAND.

Hon. Alfred Rowland was born in Lumberton, N. C., 1844. He was the son of the late John A. and Flora A. Rowland. In May, 1861, he entered the Confederate Army and was made a Lieutenant of Company D. 18th Regiment of North Carolina Volunteers. On May 12th, 1864, at the battle of Spottsylvania Court House he was captured and imprisoned at Fort Delaware until June 18th, 1865, when he was paroled and returned home. One characteristic of his soldier life as related by a comrade was "That he never said go boys, but always said come boys." He led and expected his men to follow. In 1867, he was elected Register of Deeds for Robeson county. In January 1867-'68, he was licensed to practice law by the Supreme Court of North Carolina and admitted to the bar in the latter year. He began the practice in his native county and was soon noted as an able and upright lawyer and discreet counsellor, and is still one of the leaders among the number of able lawyers with whom he has been so long associated. He twice served his county in the General Assembly of North Carolina, first in 1876-'77, and again in 1880-'81. In the latter he manfully championed the bill to submit the question of prohibition to the people of the State, and when submitted to the people, he urged them in a public canvas in his native county to vote for its adoption, when many of his friends thought by so doing he was committing political suicide. In 1884, he was a Cleveland and Hendricks elector for the 6th Congressional District. He was afterwards elected to Congress twice from this district. First to the 50th Congress in 1886, and the 51st Congress in 1888. As a public servant these repeated honors speak for themselves, but in addition here are two quotations from leading newspapers published in this State. "No county, district, or State ever had a better man; his people not only admire him, but love him; they know him. His purity, his stainless record, his genial manner, his moral courage, his sturdy practical judgment, and his rare modesty all conspire to make him beloved and popular where ever he is known." "Col. Rowland in retiring carries with him the highest respect of those whom he represented, for purity of character, high moral purpose and conscientious regards to the best interest of his constituents."

In 1873, he made a public profession of his faith in Christ and connected himself with the Presbyterian church in his native town. In 1880, he was ordained a deacon therein and in 1884, a ruling elder. In 1887, he was a delegate from Fayetteville Presbytery to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, which met at St. Louis. In 1891, he was the moderator of Fayetteville Presbytery at Laurel Hill church. He has been again and again elected Superintendent of the Sabbath-school of his own church, and a most efficient Superintendent he has been. As his services to his State were honest and faithful, so are his services to his church. Modesty, humility, purity of heart, moral courage, practical judgment and genial manners are some of his most prominent features of character.

On January 6th, 1870, he was married to Miss S. R. Blount, daughter of the late William Blount, Esq., a leading and successful farmer of Robeson county. Col. Rowland is at his best in his home with his family around him, and he should be for he possesses a happy one: his wife a most amiable and gentle woman, his accomplished daughters whose every effort is directed to make a home bright and happy and his one son John A. who is one of the first honor men in the present law class of the University of North Carolina, constitute his family. In his home he knows how to make his friends feel welcome.

Between us and His visible presence—between us and that glorified Redeemer who now sitteth at the right hand of God—that cloud still rolls. But the eye of faith can pierce it; the incense of true prayer can rise above it; through it the dews of blessing can descend.—F. W. Farrar, D. D.

There has never been such an opportunity for the Church to take possession of this country and of the world for Christ as there is now. The Church has never been so splendidly equipped for battle; the world, perhaps, has never been so ripe for conquest.—The Occident.

* * *

The people want plain and simple preaching. A sermon that states some doctrine of God's word, applies it pointedly and lovingly to the needs of those present, and that closes in such a way as to leave the hearers in an eager and receptive frame of mind, is one that will do good. Lengthy and elaborate disquisitions, full of scientific, political or literary acumen and polish, are not often wanted. A Christmas dinner is demanded only once a year; a Fourth of July oration is called for only at the same interval. Plain, sensible, health, instructive devotional preaching is always in order, and will be relished, and will nourish and strengthen any congregation.—Herald and Presbyter.

"TOO HARD."

"Is any thing too hard for thee?" Jeremiah the prophet asked this question of God. He had courageously and faithfully warned and taught the king and people of all the Lord had commissioned him to speak. For his faithfulness he was cast into prison as every one who declares the whole counsel of God would be if worldlings had their way. So suffered the prophets of old for telling the truth and the apostle was writing both from experience and principle when he handed us from the Spirit this abiding truth: "If any man will live godly in this world he shall suffer persecution."

The truth taught by Jeremiah was that Israel should be carried into captivity and be restored to their own land. In prison he was given an occasion to show the truth and express his faith in our act of redeeming a piece of land. He paid the price, secured the title and gave instruction to preserve the documents, both the sealed and the open.

Then came a season of difficulty to his faith, a temptation to doubt God. He had no doubt that God had spoken to him what he had spoken for God. But the question came as to how it was possible for God to do what He had said He would do. The essence of the doubt was not as to God's ability, but the faith to rest on that ability. The prophet did not attempt to reason out a doubt, for no man can reason out what was not reasoned into our thinking.

The prophet did the wiser thing. He betook himself to prayer. And as he prayed he received the answer, even as a part of his prayer. So have the tempted servants of God in all ages found prayer, the sure refuge in God from doubt and the very means of God to give relief and blessing to tried faith. That was the blessed experience of the famous Westminster Assembly of Divines, when they wished an answer to the question; What is God? As philosophy and learning were helpless, the proposition to engage in prayer, beginning with the youngest was agreed to. And all the world knows how the prayer of the youngest member furnished this answer: "God is a Spirit infinite, eternal and unchangeable in His being, wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodness and truth."

Thus the very prayer of the prophet, is confirmed in personal experience, that for the removal of difficulties, the escape from temptation to doubt and the safety from doubt itself is found in prayer. The very question, "Is anything too hard for thee?" is an answer to all doubt, because faith can make no other response than to affirm the truth and say to God: Nothing is too hard for Thee. We find in the same chapter of Jeremiah the condescension of God in direct answers to the prophet's prayer and assurance of his faith, in saying, "Behold, I am the Lord, the God of all flesh, is there anything too hard for Me?"

Whatever God has said He is able to do. It is therefore the duty to take Him at His word whether we can see or understand how He can do it or not. If God says it and it even seems contrary to reason it is our duty to accept. The highest reverence of right reason is to say that God can, will, and must do whatever He has said.

God can do with human instruments what may be impossible for those instruments to do of themselves. If He calls or appoints any to speak in His name, to engage in His service, or to live in His grace, He will be mouth and wisdom to the speaker, strength and success to the the servant, and life to the dead. If any timid one hesitates to step out on the promises or to confess Christ for fear of not holding out, God says to such that they will fail if trusting their own strength, but the promises are to you "who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation."

If any saint be troubled from persecution, poverty or weakness, or disease, God says "Fear not; for I am with thee: be not discouraged; for I am thy God; I will strengthen thee; yea I will help thee; yea I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness."

Here is a firm foundation for faith, a sure support for courage, a sweet solace of consolation, as we say humbly and confidently, nothing is too hard for the Lord.

BIBLE CHURCH STUDIES. Rev. Dr. Herbert H. Hawes, of Bluefield, West Virginia, published by the author. Cloth 8 vo. Pp. 398. Price $2, is at hand and welcome. It is an original, independent and characteristic study of the Church in the Bible alone. The thought to prepare these studies was suggested by another, and was taken to prepare this volume as a result of years of labor. The aim is to set forth just what the Bible has to say as to the nature, design, organization, officers and sacraments of the Church. The book in manuscript was read and endorsed by some of the best preachers and teachers. It makes clear and establishes the claims of the Presbyterian Church, to be the Biblical Church. Its Form of Government, is set forth. Baptism by sprinkling, as a seal of the covenant for believers and their infant children is shown to be taught. The position of the Presbyterian Church in its principles of polity, order and ordinances is shown to be Scriptural. The book is refreshing and helpful and instructive and should be widely read.

THE FOLLOWING bit of information which we gather from the Independent will prove interesting to our readers. Such things ought to be known and remembered:

Notwithstanding the many protests against it, a permit to erect a chapel on the Government reservation at West Point has been issued from the War Department, and strangely enough it was issued March 3d, the last full day of the term of Secretary Lamont. This case is so peculiar that it is worth while to recall some of its features. Some weeks ago it was announced by The Western Watchman that the permit had been granted by Secretary Lamont and that work on the chapel had been begun. Asking for information of the War Department, we were informed, under date of February 17th, that the question was still pending, that a resolution prohibiting such concessions was before Congress, and that from the records of the War Department it appeared that there are two Catholic chapels at military posts; also one Episcopal, and a fourth dedicated to "Protestant religious worship," and that these churches were erected by permission of former secretaries of War and paid for with funds contributed by individuals. The inference is that Secretary Lamont granted the permission because the pending resolution in Congress was not acted upon. The permit is issued to Archbishop Corrigan, and it empowers the Superintendent at West Point, an officer whose term of office shortly expires, to select the site and approve the plans for the proposed chapel. We have already given the reasons which, in our judgment, make any such permits for either Protestant or Catholic chapels unwise, unnecessary and objectionable. There is no lack of accommodation for worship at West Point. There is the cadet chapel where the Government chaplain officiates, and there is a soldiers' chapel, which is free to all denominations and is used principally by the Catholics. Catholics have worshipped there for many years and have their own altar, which is so arranged as to be screened from view when Protestant services are held there. Neither of these chapels is sectarian, tho the Government chaplain, whoever he may be, conducts the service in the cadet chapel according to the rites of the particular denomination to which he belongs. The permit given by Secretary Lamont was issued in persistent disregard of strong protests and ought to be revoked by Secretary Alger, together with those for all sectarian chapels, Catholic or Protestant.

We heartily concur in the suggestion last made.

WE HAD prepared a notice of the "Gospel as Taught by Calvin," a charming little book from the facile pen of Rev. R. C. Reed, D. D., but we give way to the admirable critique of Rev. Dr. S. H. Chester which will be found on our fourth page. We heartily recommend this book to our readers, especially to our ministers and other church officers.

REV. E. C. MURRAY has resigned the presidency of the Presbyterian College of South Carolina in order to return to the work of the pastorate. Mr. Murray spent some two years of his ministry in mountain work in Concord Presbytery (1885-'87) and afterwards for several years labored in Orange as pastor of Alamance church. Afterwards in connection with the pastorate of Mebane and Bethlehem churches he had charge as principal of the Presbyterian High School at Mebane. So by his ministerial labors he is well known, and favorably known, in our Synod. As a correspondent of this paper he has helped to edify our readers, and for ourselves we are free to say that we hope some church or churches in our Synod will secure his services and that he will return to North Carolina; but if not, at least that he will find a place pleasant to himself, in which he can most acceptably and profitably serve the cause of the Master. He may be addressed at Clinton, S. C.

HERE ARE extracts from the summary given in "Our Premium Bible" on the Book of Jonah. Note particularly what is said about "Jonah and the whale:" "A great fish swallows him and he remains in his belly three days and three nights. He prays earnestly and the monster casts him forth on land." * * * * "The Book of Jonah has always been regarded as canonical both by Jews and Christians and this is corroborated by the character of the language, the archaic idioms which pervade it, and the accuracy of its historical and geographical details." * * * * * "In reply to the Pharisees asking 'a sign from heaven' He [Jesus] * * * declares that the swallowing up of Jonah by the sea-monster, and his restoration to life after apparently certain destruction, was a figure of his own resurrection from the grave."

There is absolutely nothing in the summary, from first to last, that discredits the narrative of the swallowing of Jonah as an actual transaction—on the contrary, as evidenced above, the history is endorsed throughout.

THE NEWS comes now through press telegrams that Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott will not lecture before the Y. M. C. A. of Philadelphia, because of his recent utterances regarding Jonah and the whale. The hall was engaged for Dr. Abbott before he delivered his recent sermons, but when he advanced his theories about Jonah the managers of the association took steps to keep him away from their building, on the ground that his teachings were not altogether desirable for such a place. The committee of Hicksite Friends who had Dr. Abbott in charge have consented to cancel the engagement. Dr. Abbott will lecture in Horticultural Hall.

Dr. John Watson [Ian MacLaren] author of the "Mind of the Master" and other popular works may be arraigned before the Church court for heterodoxy. A petition looking to that end is in circulation. Dr. Moore says:

"The petition calls the attention of the Synod to the fact that Dr. Watson has not repudiated the public charge that his teaching tends to Unitarianism. If the business committee of the Synod reject the petition the promoters intend to raise the matter and force a discussion."

For the N. C. Presbyterian.

UNION SEMINARY NOTES.

Monday, March 15th, chronicled quite a number of events in our usually uneventful seminary life. The day was begun with the usual weekly missionary meeting, when Mr. L. F. Harper discussed the question as to whether a medical missionary should have a Theological Training before going to the foreign field.

This meeting was followed by the regular annual meeting of the Seminary Book Association to elect officers for the ensuing year. Mr. S. S. Oliver was elected Book Agent and Messrs. J. W. Goodman and R. E. Vinson were chosen as President and Secretary respectively.

Immediately upon adjournment of this meeting, the Magazine Association was convened for the election of an editorial staff and business manager. Mr. R. W. Jopling was chosen Business Manager, Mr. R. L. Wharton, Editor-in Chief, Messrs. J. E. Ballou and G. Sevier, Associate Editors; Messrs. C. C. Anderson and E. E. Lane, Missionary Editors, and Drs. Moore and Johnson were unanimously re-elected as Review Editors. The staff is considered an unusually strong one, and gives assurance that the Magazine will be kept up fully at its present high standard.

On Monday afternoon one of the gymnasium classes, consisting of Hammond, Grey, Parker, Vance, DeVane, Bull, and Preston, gave a public exhibition which was enjoyed highly by all present.

Dr. W. W. Moore is at Princeton Seminary, where he is delivering a course of six lectures on Historical Criticism of the Bible. His fame has already gone abroad as being an authority in this department of sacred learning, as shown by the fact that he was honored above all others in being invited to fill a lectureship of such prominence as the Stone Lectureship of Princeton. Dr. Moore's pupils and friends, however, feel sure that he will meet fully the high expectations of those to whom he has gone.

Below is a list of the young ministers which Union sends out this year to go into the regular work of the ministry: A E Baker, Baltimore, Md.; H R Borthwick, Roxburgh, Scotland; W C Flournoy, Farmville, Va.; Chas Friend, Lynchburg, Va.; J H Grey, Huntersville, N. C.; E E Gillespie, Greensboro, N. C.: C E Hodgin, Antioch, N. C.; J A Kee, Chester, S. C.; J A Paisley, Gurdon, Ark., N A Parker, Pickaway, W. Va; Cochrane Preston, Seven Mile Ford, Va.; L H Query Query's, N. C.; C F Rankin, Greensboro, N. C.; J M Reynolds, Worsham, Va.; J C Shive, Bartlett, Texas; V G Smith, Lynchburg, Va.; T B Southall, Charlottesville, Va.; Edgar Tufts, Maitland, Fla.; G W Winn, Decatur, Ga; S H Williamson, Yanceyville, N. OUR PREMIUM BIBLE.

Measures 5x7 inches when Closed, and Contains 1,600 Pages of Reading Matter—Several hundred pages of Useful Information, besides the Scriptural Text.

At length we find ourselves with pride and pleasure, able to offer a Bible premium to workers for the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN. The size and quality of type of our Bible is represented by the cut here given:

David's thirst for God. PSALMS. He praiseth God for his grace.

10 Trust not in oppression, and become not vain in robbery: [2]if riches increase, set not your heart upon them.
11 God hath spoken [3]once; twice have I heard this; that [4]power belongeth unto God.
12 Also unto thee, O Lord, belongeth mercy: for [5]thou renderest to every man according to his work.

PSALM 63.

1 David's thirst for God. 4 His manner of blessing God.
A Psalm of David, [6]when he was in the wilderness of Judah.

O GOD, thou art my God; early will I seek thee: [7]my soul thirsteth for thee, my flesh longeth for thee in a dry and [8]thirsty land, [9]where no water is;
2 To see [10]thy power and thy glory, so as I have seen thee in the sanc-

[2] or, we are consumed by that which they have thoroughly searched. [3] Job 33. 14. Ps. 62. 11. [4] 1 Thes. 4. 17. [5] Heb. a work marched. [6] Job 33. 14. [7] or, strength. [8] Heb. their second shall be. [9] Job 34. 17. Prov. 24. 12. Jer. 32. 19. Mat. 16. 27. Rom. 2. 6. Gal. 6. 8. [10] Ps. 29. 2. [11] Jer. 50. 29. [12] Num. 22. 5. [13] Ps. 42. 2.

6 They search out iniquities; [2]they accomplish [3]a diligent search: both the inward thought of every one of them, and the heart, is deep.
7 But God shall shoot at them with an arrow; suddenly [4]shall they be wounded.
8 So they shall make their own tongue to fall upon themselves: [4]all that see them shall flee away.
9 And all men shall fear, and shall [5]declare the work of God; for they shall wisely consider of his doing.
10 The righteous shall be glad in the LORD, and shall trust in him; and all the upright in heart shall glory.

PSALM 65.

1 David praiseth God for his grace. 4 The blessedness of God's chosen by reason of benefits.
To the chief Musician, A Psalm and Song of David.

At the bottom of each page will be found a number of Scripture references, explanations, etc., which will be found very helpful in Bible study. The Bible contains besides 1050 pages of Scriptural text, the HELPS to Scripture reading and study including Subject Index, Concordance, a most serviceable General Topical Index, a large number of pages treating of the Titles, Authorship, Distinctive Characters, Contents, &c., of the various books of the Bible, A Description of the Inhabitants, Physical Geography, Customs and Political Condition of the Holy Land at the beginning of the Christian era, the Botany of the Bible, Glossary of Antiquities, Customs, 12 maps, etc., being the Oxford Helps, acknowledged to be the very best, besides 124 full page illustrations of the Languages, Writing, &c., of the Old and New Testaments, of the bas reliefs and the like, discoveries in archæological researches, and now in the British museum—and very much else; making altogether the most desirable copy of the Scriptures for Bible students that has come to our knowledge. The book contains over 1,600 pages.

The Bible is an offer in connection with the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN—the only medium thro which one can become well acquainted with what is going on in the Synod of North Carolina—on the following terms:

We will give this Bible as payment for help rendered to any old subscriber who will send us the name of a BONA FIDE new subscriber along with $2.25.

The new subscriber gets the paper very cheap—we offer it to any bona fide new subscriber for $1.50 for the first year—and the worker gets amply compensated in a magnificently cheap Bible for his or her good work.

A new subscriber to get the Bible can subscribe for himself at $1.50 and then send another new subscriber with $2.25.

The Premium offered is the Genuine Edition of the Oxford Teacher's Bible.

We trust our friends will go to work promptly on this plan.

LETTERS TO A BEREAVED FRIEND.

IV.

MY DEAR FRIEND; Your letter of——th inst., afforded me no little pleasure. I am grateful for your many expressions of affection, and glad that you have not allowed yourself to become offended by my plain talk. I fondly hope that, as you are not offended, neither are you wounded by what I have said. You know I would not say anything willingly to wound you, but in what I have said it has been my aim simply to "speak the truth in love." And I would be grieved beyond measure if you should count me "your enemy because I tell you the truth."

You tell me that you cannot bear the thought of entering that church again, since you saw it draped in black at the funeral of your daughter; that you could not hear the sermon for the harrowing thoughts that would fill your mind, nor see the minister for the vision of that horrible casket, which, you are persuaded, would keep its place before the pulpit.

Dear Mary, that vision will never fade from your mind, and will come before you whenever and wherever you choose to summon it from the past; and such thoughts will continue to come to you as long as you fail to occupy yourself with pleasanter thoughts. Your mind is a basket, which you can fill at your pleasure with sweetest flowers or most noxious weeds—with violets or with nightshade. Sorrows must needs multiply as we grow older, and the cords that bind us to this earthly life are severed one by one. Your whole life must be soon overclouded, if you do not quit your brooding and get about your Father's business. Will you not rouse yourself, and determine to follow the guidance of reason and of conscience?

Does not your own judgment protest against the course you have mapped out for the indulgence of your morbid aversion to the house of prayer? Can you think of anything or any place in your home or near it, that is not somehow associated with your daughter, as living, or dying, or dead? If you enter the house or leave it, you must of necessity enter and pass through the door which she opened so gladly the day she came home from S——, and through which her fair form was so soon afterward borne to the grave. There is no road or even path that you can walk but you pass over ground which her feet have pressed; no scene that you can view, which her eyes have not looked upon. If the church must become hateful to you because of her death, with equal reason you might turn away from home, friends, and even the world itself. In yielding to such a spirit, do you not realize that you are yielding to a temptation of the Evil One, which will inevitably lead you toward suicide?

And what does your conscience testify, touching the uselessness of your present life? What good are you doing for yourself or others? Are you not convicted of wrapping your talent in a napkin and hiding it? of putting your light under a bushel? "Be not weary in well-doing: for in due season ye shall reap, if ye faint not." How often has that sweet word served to stimulate your flagging energy and your fainting faith! But now you have folded your hands, and have laid down the weapons of your warfare, and you consent to be a cypher in the great work of the world's redemption. There is sound sense and sound religion in the words of Tennyson, as some one has adapted them to the case of one who indulges a grief like yours:

"If life be heavy on your hands,
Are there no beggars at your gate?
Nor any poor about your lands?
Oh, teach the orphan boy to read,
Or teach the orphan girl to sew;
Pray heaven for a human heart,
And let your selfish sorrow go."

Only in so doing can you truly honor the memory of your dead. Have you forgotten your daughter's zeal for her church? She loved to attend the services; to join in the prayers and the singing; to feed upon the Word preached. She found in every sermon something to commend, and could profit by the ministry even of the plainest men. You remember how she denied herself, and thought no discomfort too great to be endured for the sake of attending the services; how often she became a sort of second conscience to you, and insisted upon your going when you would have allowed some trifling indisposition to keep you at home; how she braved summer's heat and winter's cold that she might "appear in Zion before God."

Now, being dead, she yet speaks to you most eloquently of the duty and privilege of attending the services of the church. The memory of her faithfulness reproaches you for your long neglect of duty. You are now doing continually what would pain her beyond measure, if she were here to witness your conduct. The highest honor you can pay your sainted daughter, is to imitate her holy example. No monument you could build, no memorial window, however beautiful and costly, that you could place in the church, would change the fact that you dishonor your daughter's memory by neglecting the house of God.

And in dishonoring her memory you dishonor the memory of all your sainted dead. What would your mother say to your weakness in yielding to present disinclination to appear in public, even on the Lord's day? You remember how, the Sunday after your father died, she gathered the family, and took you all to church. She mourned her dead as sincerely as you mourn yours; but she thought her grief made it all the more necessary that she should seek God in the assembly of his people, and feed upon the word of His grace. Voices from the grave reprove you.

Suppose, too, that all who have had occasion to attend the funerals of kindred and friends in our church, should do as you are doing. How long would it be until the church would be deserted, and the services given up for lack of hearers?

But you tell me that you are too nervous to endure the ordeal of appearing in a house whose associations are so sad, or to bear the excitement of being in a crowd for such a length of time.

This brings up a subject of which I wanted to write somewhat at length, and so I must wait for a more favorable opportunity to say what I wish to say on that topic. Meanwhile, I suggest this passage for your instruction and comfort. "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." As ever,

Your devoted friend,

MARTHA.

THE GOSPEL AS TAUGHT BY CALVIN.

This is the title of a little book recently issued by our Committee at Richmond from the pen of Rev. R. C. Reed, D. D., well known in North Carolina as former pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, of Charlotte.

To say new things on the topic embraced in this title, after three centuries of such discussion as it has had, could scarcely come within the limits of mortal achievement. But the things said in this volume are said in a new way, and in a way which, in the writer's judgment, for adaptation to the need of our congregations for a statement and defence of our Presbyterian doctrines which they will read and can understand, has not heretofore been equalled. The discussion of the celebrated "five points" is prefaced by "A Historical Glance" tracing the genesis of Calvinism, its connection with the Reformation and its historical relations with Armenianism, and supplemented by two chapters on "Calvinism tested by love" and "Calvinism tested by fruit." The book is issued in paper covers at the price of fifteen cents and in cloth at twenty-five cents. Believing that its circulation will do incalculable good, the special purpose of this notice is to call attention to it especially by our country pastors and to urge them to get it scattered broadcast among the people, as its size and price make it entirely practicable for them to do. If they will read it themselves I believe the verdict will be unanimous that the author has been pre-eminently successful in his aim, which was "to set forth the 'five points' against which a considerable part of modern Christendom has revolted, in such a logical, lucid and Scriptural manner as to win for them a heartier assent from Presbyterians."

S. H. CHESTER.

THE OLD SCOTCHMAN'S PRAYER.

I was pleased the other day with a story which an aged Scotch minister told me about an old Scotchman, who, many years ago, was on his way to a meeting of the people of God, held in a tent, or some such temporary structure.

The old pilgrim was poor, and ill clad, and partly deaf, but he trusted in the Lord whom he served, and rejoiced in His kind providence. On his way to the meeting he fell in with another Christian brother, a younger man, bound on the same errand, and they travelled together.

When they had nearly reached the place of meeting, it was proposed that they should turn aside behind the hedge and have a little praying before they entered the meeting. They did so, and the old man, who had learned in everything to let his requests be made known unto God, presented his case in language like the following:

"Lord, ye ken weel enough that I am deaf, and I want a seat on the first bench, if ye can let me have it, so that I can hear thy Word. And ye see that my toes are sticking through my shoes, and I don't think it is much to your credit to have your children's toes sticking through their shoes, and therefore I want ye to get me a pair of new ones. And ye ken I have nae siller, and I want to stay there during the meeting, and therefore I want to get me place to stay."

When the old man had finished his quaint petition, and they had started on, his younger brother gently suggested to him that he thought his prayer was rather free in its forms of expression, and hardly as reverential as seemed proper to him in approaching the Supreme Being. But the old man did not accept the imputation of irreverence.

"He's my Father," said he, "and I'm weel acquainted with Him, and He's well acquainted with me, and I take great liberties with him."

So they went on to the meeting together. The old man stood for a while in the rear of the congregation, making an ear-trumpet of his hand to catch words, until some one near the pulpit noticed him, and, beckoning him forward, gave him a good seat upon the front bench. During the prayer the old man knelt down, and after he rose a lady who had noticed his shoes, said to him: "Are those the best shoes you have?"

"Yes," said he, "but I expect my Father will get me a new pair very soon."

"Come with me after the meeting," said the lady, "and I will get you a new pair."

The service closed, and he went with her to her house.

"Shall you stay during the meeting?" said the good woman as they went along.

"I would, but I'm a stranger in the place, and have nae siller."

"Well," said she, "you will be perfectly welcome to make your home at our house during the meeting."

The old man thanked the Lord that he had given him all the three things he had asked for; and while the younger brother's reverence for the Lord was right and proper, it is possible that he might have learned that there is a reverence that reaches higher than the forms and conventionalities of human taste, and which leads the believer to come boldly to the throne of grace to find all needed help in every trying hour.—Baptist Weekly.

THE SINNER'S PART.

Is it true that, in view of Christ's finished work, "Nothing either great or small remains for me to do?"

It is dangerous, from any motive, to add in human words to the simplicity of the Gospel truth. When St. Dominic conceived the thought of the rosary, it was with the pious intention of making every bead the register of a heartfelt prayer; but what a world of evil that same rosary has proved to be! Its only good use to-day is to teach the folly of adding man's wisdom to the complete Word of God. When Christ said, "Come unto me," He said it all; law, Gospel and philosophy. And nothing remains for His evangelists to do except to keep before the minds of men the simplicity of that invitation—to remind them evermore that heaven, with all its exceeding great and precious gifts, is conditioned only upon our coming to Christ, and that whosoever cometh unto him shall in nowise be cast out. It is implied here that something is required on the part of the sinner. He must "come," whatever that may be. No greater mistake was ever made than to suppose that God's grace is impressed on men whether desired or not—that it is among the blessings which He "giveth to his beloved sleeping." It is true that redemptive love is free; it is free just as water is. A man may stand upon the bank of the river of life and miserably die of thirst; the abundant flood of grace, so sweet and refreshing, will avail him nothing unless he stoops and drinks it. The light of heaven is free, but if a man refuses to open his eyes he makes a dungeon of this sunlit earth. The benefits of republican citizenship are free, but what advantage are they to one who declines to be enfranchised? "Whoever will" is the preamble of grace; whosoever will may come, and he that cometh shall in nowise be cast out.

It is true that God is sole agent in regeneration. We say, "He does everything." So the physician does everything for the patient; he studies the symptoms, determines the proper mode of treatment, makes up the prescription and brings it to the bedside; yet all his professional skill and the virtues of the healing draught are unavailing if the patient will not take it. The physician has, indeed, done everything, yet the one thing needful remains to be done. And when the invalid has taken the draught, and the flush of health comes back to his wasted cheek, we yet say, "The physician did it," and regard him as sole agent in the cure. Thus we are exhorted to work out our own salvation, because it is God that worketh in us. He stands before us holding out the gifts of eternal life; we are called upon only to accept them.

Still further it is true that man is impotent. Our condition by nature is that of the paralytic who sat begging at the gate Beautiful. His limbs were numb and useless; from his birth he had never stood upright. Yet when Peter said to him, "Arise and walk!" he went running and leaping and praising God. Notwithstanding his palsy, he did what he was commanded. At the very instant when the thought of obedience came to him, the shriveled cords of his body were made strong by the grace of God, and he was enabled to obey. Thus to every sinful soul comes the word "Arise and walk!" Shall we answer, "It is impossible; we are paralyzed?" Nay, rather, whatsoever he saith unto you do it. Power to break our chains comes to us only in the effort to do it.

Our Lord said: "Him that cometh unto me I will in nowise cast out." No matter what his name or character may be. His past life may have been altogether bad—a thief perhaps he may be or a murderer—nevertheless I will not cast him out. He may have wasted his substance, all his substance of health and talent and influence, "in the far country," living riotously; and may have nothing left to bring me but dust and ashes, a sickly body, an enfeebled mind, a guilty and remorseful soul; yet I will not cast him out. His repentance may be of an imperfect sort, his prayers mere wingless things, his faith no better than a cry, "Help mine unbelief!" his graces may be faint as the beginnings of dawn or of an infant's life; he may be ignorant of creeds and symbols, may never have learned aught of controversy, or of the difference between sub and supralapsarianism; may never have heard the name of Augustine or John Calvin; may never have read the Bible nor a word of it; but if he knocks at my door for shelter while the storm is beating, I will not cast him out. He may have been exiled from society by reason of some nameless crime, or driven out from the synagogue with a mark on his forehead, put there by priestly hands, but I will not cast him out. He may come to me like Nicodemus, under cover of the night, afraid, ashamed to be known as a seeker after truth; he may come like the Magdalen, blushing, and shrinking before the world's pointed finger, motives criticised, penitence sneered at, seeking only to break upon my feet an alabaster box of love; he may come like the dying thief with nothing to offer but a "God have mercy!" trembling on his pale lips; but however he comes—only so that he come—I will in nowise, in nowise, cast him out!—Rev. David James Burrell, D. D., in Christian Intelligencer.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

At a dinner recently given at Princeton Inn to Prof. Woodrow Wilson by the class of '79, the guest of honor was presented a bronze bust of Washington, the work of Howden of Paris. The gift was in commemoration of Prof. Wilson's latest work on the life of Washington.

The eminent Parisian scholar M. Ferdinand Brunetiere, editor of the Revue des Deux Mondes, will deliver a course of lectures in French at Johns Hopkins University upon "Poesie Francaise."

The Greek Marseillaise was written by Constantine Rhigas, the Tyrteus of new Greece, who died in 1798. Rhigas was born at Valestini in 1753. He was an ardent patriot, ever dreaming of the liberation of Greece from the hated Turk, and he founded an extensive association called "Hetatairistes" (The Companions), belonging to all classes of society. He traveled throughout Greece to kindle the hearts of his countrymen, and he composed several patriotic songs and warlike hymns. Meanwhile the French revolution broke out, and he became acquainted with Rouget de Lisle's celebrated French "Marseillaise," which inspired him to compose the war song of the Greeks. He died in a tragic manner. The patriot went to Italy to enlist the aid of Bonaparte for Greece, but he was betrayed to Austrian emissaries and spirited to Vienna and thrown in prison. He tried to commit suicide by stabbing himself, and failed. The Austrian government, yielding to the importunities of the Porte, delivered Rhigas over to the latter power, and he unfortunate Greek was dispatched in secret in prison. Some say he was strangled to death; others that he was drowned. At any rate the unspeakable Turk took good care that Rhigas should not be seen any more in the land of the living.

CHANGES OF ADDRESS.

Correspondents will please note the following changes of address:

Rev. Jas. A. Wallace, D. D., from Highland Park, Tenn., to Braidentown, Fla.

NORTH CAROLINA.

First Church, Wilmington:—Rev. Dr Hoge being absent on Sunday morning the services were conducted by the elders of the church. Mr. C. H. Robinson read a sermon by Rev. Jas. I. Vance, D. D., from the Southern Pulpit. There was a large congregation in attendance and the service was very impressive. The evening service was conducted by the young people of the Westminster League.

St. Andrews Church, Wilmington:—Special services were conducted in the afternoon and evening of last week by the pastor, assisted in one service by Rev. B. E. Wallace. As a result the church was revived and there was an unusually large attendance at the communion service last Sabbath morning. Five were added to the church during the week, making nine since last communion, one by letter and eight by examination.

This church has just made a valuable improvement by running a partition with sliding glass windows, cutting off the space under the gallery for the Primary Department of the Sabbath-school which is now in a flourishing condition. The church is completing the best year of its history, taking all things into consideration.

Springwood Church:—Messrs J. W. Sharp and Q. Q. Boon were ordained and installed ruling elders on Sunday, the 14th inst. Rev. H. D. Lequeux, pastor.

Gastonia:—The undersigned and his family met with a warm and cordial reception on their arrival in Gastonia to begin the duties of his new charge. On entering the manse it was found that it had been visited before, and the visitor or visitors had left an abundance of those things so very necessary to the culinary department of successful housekeeping. Scarcely a day has passed, but that some evidence of kind thoughtfulness has been seen. May the Lord be their sure reward! The church is in good condition, and is girding itself for an onward movement in the Lord's work. With the Master's blessing much good will be accomplished. M. McG. S.

Chapel Hill:—Beginning March 9th Rev. R. E. Caldwell preached for us nine days with great acceptance. His affable manner and his plain, pathetic presentation of the Gospel won the hearts of all our people, and did us good. Though there were no open professions, the pure word of truth was not spoken in vain, for Christians were strengthened and refreshed, sinners were touched and will, we hope, yet come out on the Lord's side. The weather was frequently forbidding, yet the attendance, both from the village and from the University, was good and the attention of the listeners very marked.

Chapel Hill will always have a hearty welcome for Bro. Caldwell to whom we are very grateful for leaving his large and busy charge to come to our help. D. J. C.

LATER. On Sunday, March 21st, three members were added to the roll of communicants in the Chapel Hill church—one by letter and two (Sabbath-school scholars and children of the covenant) by profession.

Danbury:—At a meeting of Orange Presbytery on the 18th, Rev. Cornelius Miller's resignation as evangelist in Stokes county was accepted and he was granted a letter of dismission to Concord Presbytery that he might accept a call to Rocky River church. His address will be Harrisburg, N. C.

Red Springs:—Much to the regret of his people Rev. S M. Rankin has offered his resignation as pastor here, and also at Antioch and Philadelphus, the two country churches near by which he serves. Since he came here, three years ago, thirty-three families and one hundred and seventy-five members have been added to these churches. The field now has about two hundred families and five hundred members. Mr. Rankin considers the field too large now for one man to give the people either as much pastoral attention or preaching as they ought to have, and also that the field is financially able to support two men, so he resigns with a view to getting two men in the field which he now occupies.

In addition to his immense pastoral work, Mr. Rankin has, during the last year, been the prime mover in bringing into successful operation the Redsprings Seminary; for it was through his energy and personal attention that the necessary money was collected and suitable buildings erected and equipped for this noble institution of Fayetteville Presbytery.

Greensboro:—Sometime since a notice appeared in the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN calling for a donation of old hymn books for Rev. C. M. Tidball, Charleston. Ark. I have collected from First Presbyterian congregation, Greensboro, twenty-five copies of Psalms and Hymns, and seventeen copies No. 5, notes, Gospel Hymns, which will go forward to-day. We are having a gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit, under the very efficient preaching of Rev. A. A. Little, who is exceedingly clear in preaching the truth. Eight new members added yesterday and the meeting to continue through the week. W. S. M.

Banner Elk:—Rev. L. E. Boston writes of the mountain section in which he labors: The field is an intensely growing one, but needs continued prayerful occupation and encouragement and support. We have prayer-meetings every Wednesday night here, with a good working interest, and the young people to some extent have taken an active part in them. The services at Boone, the county seat of Watauga, have been attended with deep interest, and I feel that rich results would follow if we could have some one to hold a revival meeting there. There was one held a few weeks ago by the Baptist brethren, and many good seeds were sown.

Raleigh:—The praise service in the interest of Foreign Missions at the Presbyterian church last night was exceedingly interesting and instructive. The ten-minutes' talks by Dr. Daniel, Prof. Hill and Mr. Whiting inspired all those present with a new interest and zeal in this great cause. The music, under the direction of Miss Enid Smith, of Peace Institute, was very delightful, a beautiful chorus being rendered by the young women of Peace Institute. Miss Gertrude Bush sang with much feeling, "Crucifixion," by Faure. A collection was taken up afterwards, from which a very gratifying sum was realized for Foreign Missions.—News and Observer.

Charlotte:—The special services conducted by Dr. Guerrant, of Kentucky, closed on Sunday, but the meetings will be continued by the pastors of the three churches in the city. There were thirty accessions on last Sabbath and others will follow.

VIRGINIA.

Evangelism in Virginia:—Rev. L. A. McLean, evangelist of Synod of Virginia closed a meeting on Sabbath 14th inst., which continued a week at Bethany church. There were eighteen professions. Twelve were added to the church, seven of whom were baptized. Congregations were excellent and much interest prevailed through the community.

Hot Springs:—This place is supplied by the Rev. Wm. C. White of Warm Springs, Va., and we manage to have services here every Sunday afternoon. The congregations have been very encouraging this winter. There are more people here now than ever before at this season of the year. There are at present more than four hundred here. Last Sunday the pastor was very glad to find the Rev. George Buckle of Elizabeth, N. J., present, and he preached an excellent sermon from II Saml. 14:14, which was enjoyed by all. There are two of our Northern brethren here for a season, viz: Rev. Robert B. Booth, D.D., of New York, moderator of the General Assembly of 1895 at Pittsburg, Pa., and Rev. Dr. Kempshall, of Elizabeth, N. J.

Lexington Presbytery:—The commissioners from Lexington Presbytery to the General Assembly are as follows (nominated at fall meeting): Principal Rev. C. D. Gilkeson, of Beverly, W. Va., Rev. A. R. Cocke, D. D., Waynesboro, Va. Elders, Hon. Wm. McAllister, Warm Springs, Va., Mr. J. P. McClure. Buena Vista, Va. Alternates, Rev. W.H. Groves, Millboro, Va., Rev. Geo. W. Finley, D. D., Fisherville, Va. Elders, Ed. M. McCue, Fort Defiance, Va., J. T. Bear, Churchville, Va.

Charlottesville:—Eleven persons recently received upon profession and seven by certificate. Rev. G. L. Petrie, D. D., pastor.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Hopewell:—Rev. J. W. McClure was recently installed pastor. Rev. J. H. Dixon and Rev. E. C. Bailey conducting the services.

ALABAMA.

Mobile:—Two Chinese pupils of the Government St. Presbyterian church recently united with the church and a third was received upon certificate from New Orleans.

LOUISIANA.

Red River Presbytery:—The South-Western gives an account of the three months labors of Rev. Dr. Morton in this field. The organized churches Mansfield, Oxford, Keachie, Smyrna and Memorial which have been vacant for a long time are ready for work, and new supplies and an opening has been made for an advance of Presbyterianism into new parishes. Besides cheering additions to the various churches, it is probable that Dr. Morton's efforts have resulted in preparing the ground and ensuring salaries for two ministers instead of but one, with long vacancies, as heretofore. Our brother is showing how rare good sense and management, as well as zeal and eloquence, are valuable endowments in an evangelist.

TEXAS.

Laredo:—The First church has recently received five additions. Rev. S. J. McMurray, pastor. The Mexican work is progressing encouragingly under the care of Rev. H B. Pratt.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Lick Branch:—Rev. C. M. Howard recently held a three weeks service. Nineteen were received into the church.

MARYLAND.

Baltimore:—Rev. John L. Allison will assume charge of the Westminster church on the first Sabbath in April.

TENNESSEE.

Edgar Church, Nashville:—Rev. A. S. Allen, pastor. Seven members recently received.

GENERAL.

Rev. Dr. George F. Pentecost, of London, will arrive in this country next month and take charge of the First Presbyterian church, of Yonkers. N. Y.

Rev. D. L. Moody was to have begun a series of meetings in Louisville, Ky., on the 24th inst., continuing for five days. Mr. Moody's purpose is to stimulate and strengthen the churches, thus indirectly reaching the unsaved. May the blessing of the Holy Spirit descend in abundant measure upon these services and the city in which they are held. Mr. Moody will be in Chicago from March 30th to April 30th.

PERSONALS.

Rev. J. M. Grier, of Caldwell, N. C., will assist Rev. H. M. Dixon of Munroe in a series of meetings this week.

Rev. Edward Mack, of St Louis, is on a visit to Goldsboro, this State.

Rev. Dr. Hoge is on a short visit to Hampden Sidney, Va.

Rev. S. L. Grigsby of Manchester, O., has accepted a call to the church at Holly Springs, Miss., and will enter upon his work the first of April.

Rev. Ernest Thompson of Texarkana, Tex., who has been in Edinburgh, Scotland, for sometime, is expected to resume his pastorate at an early date.

Rev. J K. Thomson, of Texarkana, has received a call to the church at Calvert, Texas.

Licentiate J. H. Henderlite is supplying Accomac and Onancock churches, Virginia.

Rev. R. L. Benn, has resigned charge of McNeilly church, Nashville, Tenn.

Rev. S. M Rankin, of Red Springs, N. C., is considering a call to Kentucky.

The following gentlemen comprise the senior class of Columbia Seminary: J. A. Dorritee, W. H. Hafner, W. H. Mills, W. R. Miffter, Hugh R. Murchison, C. A. McPheeters, C. B. Ratchford, R. L. Rodgers, W. W. Sadler, Frank K. Sims, L. C. Vass.

Our sympathies are extended Rev. Dr. Fair of Richmond upon the death of his aged mother which occurred in Richmond on the 16th inst. We are sorry to learn that Rev. R. A. Fair, the father of Dr. Fair, is quite ill.

Rev. H. C. Kegley, of Mebane, N. C., has accepted a call to the church at Union City, Tenn.

Rev. and Mrs. Colin Shaw of Kinston visited friends at Magnolia, their former home, last week.

Rev. W. G. White, pastor of Graham Street church, Charlotte, has accepted a call to the church at Colton, California. He will leave for his new charge about the middle of April.

Rev. and Mrs. H. B. Price expected to leave Clarksville, Tenn., for San Francisco on the 19th inst., sailing on steamer Coptic via Hawaii, April 1st.

Our thanks are due Miss Claude Grier of Tokushima for two views of the house occupied by Misses. Grier and Patton. We hope to give them to our readers at an early date.

We are glad to note that Rev C. W. Maxwell who has been sick for sometime at the home of his mother, Davidson, N. C., is convalescent and will soon be able to return to his labors at Durham.

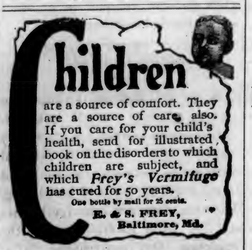
Rev. A. J. Smith, pastor of the First church, Savannah, assisted us in a series of services at Pooler, Ga., last week.

Rev. Dr. W. M. McPheeters, of Columbia, occupied the pulpit of the Independent church, Savannah on last Sabbath. Rev. Dr. Fair, pastor elect, will be present on next Sabbath.

For the N. C. Presbyterian.

LAURINBURG CHURCH AND RED SPRINGS SEMINARY.

We held our quarterly communion last Sabbath. The pastor announced seven new members added to the roll of communicants since the last quarterly communion. Two of these were received on profession of faith and five by letter.



Rev. C. G. Vardell, the president of Red Springs Seminary, came to us Friday evening and preached four earnest, practical, inspiring sermons which our people enjoyed very much.

Brother Vardell not only did good preaching but made a fine impression for our seminary over which he presides. He impressed all as being the right man for the responsible position which he occupies, and made parents desire more earnestly to see their daughters under his care.

The success of that institution is simply marvellous. More than one hundred students are enrolled already. All the available room is now occupied, and future applicants for admission will have to be turned away until enlarged accommodations are provided. The contract for the frame work of a new building has already been let. This house must be finished before the beginning of another term. We have the faculty. We have the girls. We have the divine blessing and favor, shown by the wonderful success and prospects of the school. What we want, and need, and must have, is money. This the Lord's stewards have, and it will find its way into His treasury for this glorious work. It is indeed a glorious work to bring the blessings of higher Christian education within the reach of the man of moderate means whose daughters could not otherwise get a finished education. Ten thousand dollars could be wisely and economically expended on buildings and equipment necessary for the greatest efficiency of the school. If the church will promptly furnish the equipment commensurate with the demands, I shall not be surprised if four hundred girls are there in less than that many years.

We Want You

to subscribe for the Presbyterian Quarterly. It is the one magazine all Presbyterians should read. Its articles are written by eminent Presbyterians—both clergymen and laymen—to Presbyterians. It is edited under the auspices of an association of ministers of the Presbyterian Church.

Every article in it is vitally interesting—it is orthodox—is progressive—stimulates study and investigation.

The Presbyterian Quarterly has always been $3.00 a year and has always been worth it. It is now $1.00 a year but is still worth $3.00. We have lowered its price because we want to put it in every Presbyterian's hands, but there has been no change in either the number of pages or the appearance of the magazine. LETTER FROM DR. GEORGE C. WORTH.

[Extracts from a letter of Dr. Worth to his parents.]

Wusih, China, Nov. 15th, 1896.

Though it is nearly December the weather is magnificent, just cool enough for comfort and reminds me of some of the best days that we used to have at Shandy in September and October. We have not yet had any frost and have fires only in the morning for the baby, though to-day a little fire is smouldering in the stove. We have been planning a great trip for some weeks, but one thing or another has interfered with it so far. We have at last arranged to go to-morrow. It would be fine if you all could be here to go with us. We are going to the great lake, cross a small arm of it and visit a large mountain called the Horse mountain. It is an island and uninhabited except by a few priests in the temple on its summit. I think I wrote you about the place sometime ago. We hear that there are lots of deer and wild hogs there and Mr. McG. and I are going to be loaded and primed for them. We expect to start from here about one o'clock to-morrow—just as soon as my clinic is over—eat our dinner on the boat and probably reach our destination by dusk. It is about ten or twelve miles away. I know E. and the other ladies will enjoy it very much. We will have two boats, but will take our meals in picnic style together with the McGinnises. The route will be beautiful, first, for three miles through canals that remind me of Smith's Creek in width and depth, beautifully lined with tress—in sight of the mountains all the time. Then for three miles across the small lake, then out on the great lake with its mountains and beautiful islands. The ordinary canal boats about here are very shallow and as they have houses on them they are afraid to venture out upon the great lake which gets quite rough in a hard wind—so Mr. McGinnis will get two lake boats at the North Gate to-day. These are pretty good for rough weather. We will spend a night and day at the Horse Mountain and come home during the following night.

I had a surgical case from the forts at Kiang Yin day before yesterday. One of the soldiers was handling a small dynamite cartridge when it exploded and blew off two fingers, injuring both hands, one ye and one ear. He was sent here by the officers on the advice of Mr. Haden. Two other soldiers came with him to take care of him. He is getting along very nicely. My other patients are improving. I am enjoying this medical work so much and only wish now for a good trained nurse.

We have another offer of land for building purposes. It is the same large, fine piece that we tried to get last year. This year we have had nothing to do with the land agents, telling them that their prices were high and we would not ever discuss the matter with them. One came to us not long ago with a smart dodge. He said that, that large piece of ground was about to be sold to foreigners for business purposes, but he would give us the first chance at it. We told him we would have nothing to do with it. Now, we understand that the owners are poor and are forced to sell, but are trying every means to get us to buy as they expect to get a better price from us than any one else. I think we will continue to have nothing to do with the matter and they will soon come to some decent terms. I have begun to think that we are really on the right road to success now. I must tell you about one of my hospital patients whose leg has been under treatment for several weeks. He had what you would call a very large rising in his leg. I had to open it. He is now better and says that he wants to join the church. I don't know yet how serious this will prove, but he keeps on talking about it. If there is no pecuniary object back of it we will have much to rejoice over.

NEAR TO JESUS.

Get near Jesus Christ, and you will catch His manner. Dwell in fellowship with Him and whether you are thinking about it or not, there will come some faint resemblance to that Lord into your character and your ways of doing things, so that men "will take knowledge of you that you have been with Jesus." The poor bit of cloth which has held some precious piece of solid perfume will retain fragrance for many a day afterward, and will bless the scentless air by giving it forth. The man that keeps close to Christ, and has folded Him in his heart, will, like the poor cloth give forth a sweetness not his own that will gladden and refresh many nostrils. Lie in the light and you will become light, keep near Christ, and you will be Christlike. Love Him, and love will do to you what it does to many a wedded pair, and to many kindred hearts; it will transfuse into you something of the characteristics of the object of your love. It is impossible to trust Christ, to obey Christ, to hold communion with Him, and to live beside Him, without becoming like Him. And if such be our inward experience, so will be our outward appearance.—Alexander MacLaren, D. D.

THERE IS FORGIVENESS WITH THEE.

Psalms cxxx: 4.

Revenge is human, but mercy is divine. To return evil for evil may be considered manly, but to forgive, and to do good to the person forgiven, is God-like. It might be difficult in every case to act out this gracious spirit, but it is a nobler work and a higher triumph to conquer self than to conquer your enemy; and He whose spirit you cherish, and whose rule you follow, will give you all the help that you need. The best way to adorn the doctrine of God your Saviour is to let it flower and fruit in this beautiful forgiveness of disposition. Triumph over the pride and selfishness of your own nature, and you will conquer with your kindness when you can conquer in no other way.—Hugh MacMillan.

ABIDE IN CHRIST.

If you are abiding in Christ you are reproducing yourself in thousands of instances when you are wholly unaware of it. Out of the personal relationship between the soul and Christ come the fruits of holy living. The vine does not bear fruit of itself; it bears its fruit through the branches. Our unconscious influence thus becomes far more fruitful than our conscious influence. In the last great day many will bewail that they have accomplished so little, and, looking at the scanty results, will say, "When saw we thee hungry, and fed thee? or athirst, and gave thee drink?" to find that unconsciously their lives had abounded in fruits well pleasing in the Master's sight. It is from such holy lives as this that is derived our Master's highest joy. It is when the whole body of Christ becomes instinct with His Spirit that the world is made conscious of His Divine headship over the Church.—Bishop Hendrix.

PASS IT BY.

There are a great many troubles, and trials, and unpleasant things in this world, enough to keep one in perpetual fret and fever and turmoil, if one will allow oneself to be fretted by them. But many of them are not worth fretting about or caring for: they are of little consequence, and we should pay little regard to them.

A man says something which is not pleasant. If we make trouble about it, he will perhaps repeat what he has said, and say as much more. If we say nothing, that will end it. The best course in such a case is to pass it by, and say nothing. We shall always have trials, but we need not grow peevish, or fretful, or impatient over them. We can bear more than we have borne. We can bear more than we think we can bear. Many a quarrel which is exceeding bitter to-day will to-morrow be lost to view. Next year we shall wonder that we worried or fretted or were disturbed by the petty trials that crossed our path. A friend may grow unkind, an enemy may be malicious; never mind, pass it by. Clouds may be dark to-day, but the sunshine will come to-morrow, and the afflictions and trials of the present will pass before the brightness of the days to come.

Bury the troubles that are past; bear the troubles of the present; do not worry about the troubles of the future. Meet each trial as it comes, and in a majority of cases the best course will be to pass it by, and leave it with God.—The Christian.

Test your sincerity by the manner in which you control or resist your evil thoughts. Do you suffer your thoughts to tamper with evil, to dally with wrong-doing? If so, you are not sincere. The tyrant Nero tried to degrade some of the great Roman nobles to as low a level as his own, by making them appear as actors in the arena on the stage. To disobey was death. Florus was bidden thus to appear, and, doubting whether to obey, consulted the virtuous and resolute Agrippinus. "Go, by all means," answered Agrippinus. "Well but," replied Glorus with astonishment, "you yourself refused to obey." "Yes," answered Agrippinus, "because I did not deliberate about it." The imperative, the naked, absolute prohibition of duty, must be implicity, unquestioningly, instantly, obeyed. To deliberate about it is to be a secret traitor, and the line which separates the secret traitor from the open rebel is hin as the spider's web.—Canon Farrar.

The Lord Jesus never insures anyone who unites with His Church and yet has no "anchor sure and steadfast, which entereth into that within the vail," and binds fast to Christ Himself.—Selected.

One of the most vicious and ensnaring maxims of the day is the expression, "Business is business." Under its influence things are done against which the conscience revolts. As the result, a dual character is developed, one for the store or office, and the other for the church or the Sabbath. People often wonder how so good a man as Elder A——, or Deacon B——, or Superintendent C —— seems to be, can conduct his business in the way in which he does. It is hard to reconcile the inconsistency, but whatever may be said in extenuation or justification of the course pursued, the injury to himself and to the cause of religion is none the less potent.—Presbyterian.

First Quarter—Lesson I.

April 4, 1897.—Acts ix: 32-43.

Commit to memory verses 32-35.

Subject.—Peter Working Miracles.

Golden Text. "Jesus Christ maketh thee whole." Acts ix: 34.

CATECHISM.

Question. 34. What is adoption?

Answer. Adoption is an act of God's free grace, whereby we are received into the number, and have a right to all the privileges of the sons of God.

Time. Probably about A. D., 40.

Place. Lydda and Joppa.

INTRODUCTORY.

We begin with this lesson the second quarter of the year's studies in the book of the Acts. Two lessons at the close of the last quarter on Temperance and the review led us away. Now we return to the chapter we were last studying. It is a time of rest from persecution. The church is at peace being edified and multiplied. The probable date is confirmed by the fact that during A. D. 39 and 40 Petronius, the governor of Syria, was causing great consternation among the Jews by attempting to set up the statue of the Emperor Caligula in the temple at Jerusalem. This gave so much to occupy the time and attention of the Jews that they could not engage in persecuting Christians. The persecution had turned on them. Under these conditions the infant Church enjoyed a period of rest from persecution by the Jews. There was with this outward peace and rest, rest from internal conflicts, rest of peace and love in the heart, and the best rest of tireless Christian activity. Then the Church as a whole and Christians as individuals were edified, built up. Believing the more were multiplied. As times of trouble had been a blessing to the church so had times of peace. Both are necessary. We need night as well as day. All of either is injurious. Both in proper proportion are blessed.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 32. Peter passed throughout all quarters. Confirming the churches already established and doing the work of an evangelist in other parts. Work beyond its borders helps the home church. So Peter helped the Church in Jerusalem. He came down to the saints which dwelt at Lydda. All Christians were called and are saints as sanctified ones, not as being freed from all sin, but as separate from the world and dedicated to God, with His consecration upon them. Vid Rom. 1:7. Lydda was the Lud of the Old Testament in northwest Judea about a day's journey from Jerusalem.

Vs. 33. There he found a certain man. Being led by the Divine Providence. This man Eneas, a different name from the hero of the poem of Virgil. Had kept his bed eight years. So there could be no doubt of the reality and long continuance of his disease palsy or paralysis and of the genuineness of the miracle. The term palsy was used by ancient physicians in a much wider sense than by the modern including some painful maladies.

Vs. 34. Jesus Christ maketh thee whole, or "Jesus the Messiah healeth thee." Thus Peter guards against having the miraculous power attributed to himself. Like all true preachers he called attention to his Lord, not to himself. Maketh thee whole is a very expressive term for complete health where every part of the body is present and in perfect condition. In like manner Jesus Christ maketh the Spirit whole. Arise and make thy bed. As proof of his cure and ability to take care of himself He arose immediately. Showing that the cure was miraculous.

Vs. 35. Lydda and Saron. Saron or Sharon was the beautiful plain, the district of which Lydda was the chief city. Saw him. The man, who was well known, walking about the city cured. And turned to the Lord. They believed that Jesus who wrought this miracle was the Messiah.

Vs. 36. There was at Joppa (which name means beauty) the modern Jaffa, the seaport of Jerusalem, thirty miles to the northwest and connected now by a railway. It was a flourishing Jewish city in the time of the apostles. Tabitha: Meant Gazelle in Aramaic, the language of the common people. Dorcas is the equivalent in Greek, the language of the officials and cultured. This may have been descriptive of her personal beauty, but probably had reference to her loveliness and attractiveness for her good deeds. Full of good works and alms deeds. Especially in making coats and garments for the widows which in that country were a most unfortunate class.

Vs. 37. She was sick and died. For some mysterious, but always good reason the Lord permits sickness and death to the best and most useful. Sometimes their death is more potent than their life. Laid her in an upper chamber. Contrary to the Eastern custom of immediate burial to see if Peter could help them.

Vs. 38. Lydda was nigh to Joppa. About nine miles or two hours journey. Not delay. Lest decomposition begin.

39. Shewing coats and garments. The poor widows showed how many inner and outer garments Dorcas was accustomed to make. This they did by pointing to the garments they had on.

Vs. 40. Put them all forth. To concentrate his thought and pour out his prayer without interruption and display. Possibly he did not know what the Lord meant to do.

Vs. 41. Presented her alive. To the joy of all and as another of those "greater works," the apostles were to do.

Vs. 42. Many believed on the Lord. Thus the death of Dorcas was a blessing, and her restoration a proof of the power of the Lord Jesus Christ. In the Gospels and the Acts the physical benefits lead to spiritual blessings.

Vs. 43. Tarried many days at Joppa. To reap the great harvest, instruct the disciples and to be where God would have ready to receive the messengers of Cornelius with one Simon a tanner, whose house was by the seaside.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

1. The finding of Eneas, shows that we should find the sick as one proof of our true religion and our opportunity to do good.

2. The life of Dorcas shows the good deeds characteristic of Christianity, having the personal element prominent and saving from the dangers, narrowness and temptations of worldliness.

3. The death of Dorcas brought into notice the kindness and love of Christians; it showed that Christ had risen and the reality of immortal life.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, April 4th, 1897.

BY REV. B. E. WALLACE.

LESSONS FROM CHRIST'S MIRACLES. Matt. 11: 2-6; John. 14: 8-14.

Text for the week:

"They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick." Matt. 9: 12.

Daily Readings:

Monday, Blindness Cured, Mark 10: 46-52.

Tuesday, Paralysis Cured, Mark 2: 3-12.

Wednesday, Leprosy Cured, Luke 17: 11-19.

Thursday, Tempest Calmed, Mark 4: 35-41.

Friday, Bread Multiplied, March 6: 35 44.

Saturday, Death Conquered, Mark 5: 35-43.

Sunday, Topic, Matt 11: 2-6; Jno. 14: 8-14.

Suggestions for Leaders:

1. Tell how many miracles Christ performed.

2. Show that they were all used to relieve some one in need and not simply to display His power.

3. Mark is the Hand Gospel. Note how many times Hand is used.

4. Have different ones to bring out the points in the Daily Readings.

Notes:

When John the Baptist sent so Christ for proofs of His Messiahship this answer was returned:

"Go and show John again those things which ye do hear and see; the blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them."

So one lesson we learn from Christ's miracles is that they prove His Divinity. None but God can work a miracle. His works followed Him as monuments establishing all His claims. There was nothing predicted of Christ but what was fulfilled to the very letter. Jesus was the greatest teacher of the truth, "Faith without works is dead." Let us then like Nicodemus say, Rabbi, we know that thou are a teacher come from God: for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him. Another lesson we learn from Christ's miracles is, that they were done not for display of power as such, but to help some one in need. The Master never worked a miracle to satisfy idle curiosity, He came to minister, to bind up the broken heart, to strengthen the palsied arm, to make the lame to leap as an heart, to calm the troubled sea with His Peace be Still, yes to give life, joy and peace, and bring heaven's sweetest benefactions to the needy and troubled of earth.

The greatest of all Christ's miracles is the Miracle of Grace—"Ye must be born again," is a truth that all who would be saved must learn. To raise a dead body to life requires great power, but to bring life into a dead soul there must needs be greater power. O, Thou Divine Healer! Helper in time of need! Resurrection and the Life! Speak Thou the gift of God, Eternal Life, to the dead souls of earth that lie sleeping in trespasses and sins.

OPEN DOOR NOTES.

A. Y. M. C. A. has been organized in Charlotte among the young colored men.

The Y. M. C. A., of Charlotte, celebrated their twenty-fourth anniversary on last Sunday by appropriate services. An address was made by Rev. Howard A. Rondthaler, of Salem an association worker of large experience.

Hon. John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia, has given $30,000 for the erection of a building for the use of the Young Men's Christian Association in Madras, India. Other gifts have been pledged. The intention is to erect a handsome and convenient four-story building.

At the last C. E. meeting of Immanuel church, a joint meeting was held of the Senior and Junior Endeavorers on a mock trial of king alcohol. A fine temperance lesson was taught.

State Secretary Turner paid the Presbyterian High School at Mebane a visit last week, talking to the boys on Saturday night, Sunday evening and Sunday night. Sunday morning he held services in the village church. He found the Y. M. C. A. in good condition and sends the new officers out to their work prepared for their battles. Let him come again.

The Christian Endeavor Society of South River church held its usual service on last Sabbath afternoon- owing to the inclemency of the weather and sickness, only a few of the members were present. Mr. W. I. Shaw, Jr., conducted the prayer-meeting—after which delegates were appointed to attend the Endeavor Convention at Faison. Those appointed were Miss Margaret J. Cromartie and Miss Pearl Murphy, and Mr. G. S. Cromartie and Mr. Lewis Cromatie as alternates.

HUNTER.—James McKnight Hunter fell asleep at Hunterville, N. C., Jan. 19th, 1897, aged four-score and five years. In 1834, he was happily married to Miss Susan Porter, who shared his joys and sorrows for fifty-five years. With the exception of a brief sojourn in Indiana, his whole life was spent in his native county, Mecklenburg.

During a number of years prior to and after the war, his venerable form was one of the land-marks of the village of Davidson College. In 1862, he removed with his son, Alexander, and settled seven miles south of Davidson, forming the nucleus of the town of Huntersville, becoming a charter member of the Presbyterian church of that place.

He was a devout Christian, with a calm sturdy character which rose serenely above the petty annoyances of life. His mind was a store-house of Scripture, and in his latter years he delighted in singing hymns. A few days before his death he spent almost a whole day singing in a clear sweet voice his favorite songs of praise. Since the departure of his devoted wife, he had been expecting the summons and longing for it "as they who watch for the morning."

He fell asleep as peacefully as a child in its mother's arms, surrounded by kindred and friends. Three children survive him—Mr. H. H. Hunter, Mrs. C. H. Wolfe and Mrs. J. H. Clintock.

HOLT.—James Henry Holt, third son of Edwin M. and Emily Farish Holt, was born April 23d, 1833, and died at his home in Burlington, February 13th, 1897.

Thus was begun and ended a life that was a success in every respect. He was "diligent in business, fervent in spirit," always "serving the Lord." He followed his father as a manufacturer of cotton goods, and was eminently successful in his business career. For the past ten or twelve years his care has been the establishment of his sons in successful business enterprises, and giving them the assistance of his wise counsel and prudent foresight. The result is he has been largely his own executor, and leaves those who will continue his business affairs the advantage of the experience he gained in a long and successful life.

Very early in his life he gave his heart to Christ, and from that period became prominent in the life and affairs of the Church of which he was a member. For a number of years he served the Graham Presbyterian church as a faithful deacon, until made a ruling elder in said church. The duties of this office he faithfully discharged until he removed his residence and his church membership to Burlington, of which latter church he was a valued and faithful elder at the time of his sudden departure.

He was modest, unassuming, unostentatious, undictatorial in his bearing; gentle, tender, and charitable in his constructions; liberal and sympathetic in his dealings; but as firm as the unyielding hills in his devotion to truth, justice and right. He was undisturbed by business reverses or premonitions of difficulty. But with his faith firmly fixed on Him who "doeth all things well," he moved calmly forward in the conscientious discharge of known duty. His speech was at all times as pure as the driven snow, and the purity of the stream gave evidence of the unsullied abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. In his many deeds of benevolence, he never allowed his right hand to know the deeds of his left. The influence of his life was for purity, uprightness, justice, truth and God.

But the work was done. The life was finished. As the hands on the dial point ed to the midnight hour, he realized that the end was fast approaching. With the same calm and steadfast faith that had been his stay and comfort through all the years, he faced the last messenger without a tremor, and with the name of his Saviour on his lips, he departed to be with Christ.

"At midnight came the cry
To meet thy God prepare!"
He woke, and caught his Captain's eye
Then, strong in faith and prayer,

His spirit with a bound
Left its encumbering clay;
His tent, at sunrise, on the ground
A darkened ruin lay. . .

Soldier of Christ, well done!
Praise be thy new employ,
And while eternal ages run
Rest in thy Saviour's joy."

M. McG. S.

JOHNSON.—Departed this life at the home of his parents at Ivanhoe on March 4th, Mr. Henry McMillan Johnson, age, twenty-six years and two months.

A young man of promise, full of zeal and earnestness for the Master's cause, the stay and comfort of his parents, loved and honored by the whole community, always ready and willing to aid in every good work, pleasant and genial, he was loved and respected by us all. We miss him, in the home and in the community, but above all we miss him in the church, where rarely his seat was ever vacant unless hindered by providence. But God took him and we say amen and are comforted. May God comfort the sorrowing ones.

PASTOR.

ANDERS.—At her home in Centerville, Bladen county, N. C., on the evening of the 9th of March, 1897, Mrs. Lou Anders in the 45th year of her age. A good woman is gone to be with her Saviour, that Saviour whom she loved and served. His service was her delight. The poor and rich, all fared alike at her hands as she went out and in before them with a beautiful Christian character, unselfish and lovely in all that she did for the Master. She had three-score children in her Sunday-school class and they testified to her worth, as many of them gathered around her tomb and scattered flowers upon her grave in grateful remembrance of their beloved teacher. She leaves a husband and five children, with an aged mother and a host of friends to mourn their loss. May God comfort them and at last receive them all into everlasting habitations.

Writer requests the Fayetteville Observer to be pleased to copy.

The session of Sardis church adopted the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, In the providence of God, our beloved brother, Ruling Elder JESSE S. SMITH, clerk of this session has been called from the Church militant to the Church triumphant.

Resolved 1st. That while we bow in submission to the will of our Father in heaven, we hereby express our profound sorrow at the death of our brother in Christ and fellow elder, whose presence will be greatly missed in the Church and community.

2nd. We would record our thankfulness for the divine support granted him in sickness and trial. And for his example of cheerful service in all branches of church work.

3rd. That we extend to his bereaved family our heartfelt sympathies in this great trial and our prayers, that God would comfort them.

4th. That these resolutions be placed on the records of the church, a copy sent to the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN for publication, and a copy to the family.

SCOTT.—At 2 o'clock on the night preceding Sunday, March 13th, Samuel Kerr Scott passed away at his home, Mebane, N. C. The summons came suddenly and without warning. He retired in usual health. During the night awoke with a sensation of sickness, arose from his bed, in a moment toppled and fell to the floor, and instantly expired. "At midnight there was a cry made behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye forth to meet Him." We trust there was oil in his vessel, and as one ready he "went in with Him to the marriage."

Mr. Scott was a man universally esteemed. Rather reserved in manner, he was yet of disposition so kindly and temper so genial, that to meet him was to be drawn toward him, and to know him was to feel that he was friend. With no lack of prudence, with singular clearness of judgment, he had much of that charity which "thinketh no evil." Harsh words seldom or never passed his lips, and hard deeds were strangers to his hands. Many an act of his, of kindness and helpfulness, was known only to the Father in heaven which seeth in secret and shall one day reward openly. Feelings of no common emotion were stirred, as, in the gray dawn of that Sabbath morning, the news passed from lip to lip that Samuel Scott was dead. Not simply was a good and useful man gone, but to each came a sense of personal loss; and every one heard as it were a voice from heaven saying: "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh."

Mr. Scott was born April 25th, 1850. He was twice married; first to Miss Nora Graves (of which union one son remains now, lying prostrate with disease); the second time to Miss Hettie Neal, who is left with eight children to mourn the loss of a husband and father. When a little more than twenty years of age Mr. Scott connected himself with Hawfields church, and soon after was made a ruling elder. As a member and officer in the church he has ever shown the same qualities of quick kindliness and sanctified prudence which distinguished him as a man. We feel that we have lost one who was a pillar in Hawfields church. He is gone out from us; but the Spirit saith, "Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out."

PASTOR.

There doesn't seem to be very much the matter with your child. He doesn't actually lose weight, but there is no gain. He belongs to that large class of children that don't seem to prosper. You look at him a little more thoughtfully than you do at the rest and say "He is not doing well." Failure to gain in weight in a child is a danger signal. Scott's Emulsion should be taken at once. It puts on fat where health demands it, strengthening the digestion.

FOR THE FAMILY.

THE FORTUNATE ISLES.

You sail and you seek for the Fortunat Isles,
The old Greek Isles of the yellow birds' song?
Then, steer straight on, through the watery miles—
Straight on, straight on, and you can't go wrong;
Nay, not to the left—nay, not to the right—
But on, straight on, and the Isles are in sight—
The Fortunate Isles where the yellow birds sing,
And life lies girt with a golden ring.

These Fortunate Isles, they are not so far—
They lie within reach of the lowliest door;
You can see them gleam by the twilight star,
You can hear them sing by the moon's white shore—
Nay, never look back. Those leveled grave-stones,
They were landing steps; they were steps unto thrones
Of glory of souls that have sailed before,
And have set white feet on the fortunate shore.

And what are the names of the Fortunate Isles?
Why Duty, and Love, and a large content,
Lo, these are the Isles of the watery miles,
That God let down from the firmament.
Lo, Duty and Love, and a true man's trust,
Your forehead to God, though your feet in the dust;
Lo, Duty and Love, and a sweet babe's smiles,
And these, O friend, are the Fortunate Isles.

SOURCES OF GUTTA PERCHA.

Gutta-percha, like India rubber, is obtained from the juices of certain trees and climbers. The best is produced by a tree, the Isonandra gutta, of the order Sapotaceæ, which formerly abounded at Singapore and in all Malaysia, but which now tends to disappear under the ravages committed by gatherers. Gutta, in Malay, signifies gum or lime; percha signifies scrap. Incisions are made in the bark, as on rubber trees, and the liquor flows of perfect whiteness, darkening at contact of air. Coagulation takes place spontaneously in a short time. Like rubber, the liquid forms a film on top. This cream is removed, kneaded into a large lump and plumped into boiling water. Under the action of a high temperature it softens and forms the cake usually found in commerce. Other trees in Malaysia and Farther India, in Cambodia and Cochin China, produce good gutta. In Hindustan different grades are mixed by the natives Chinese merchants, in their depots, mix and manipulate to give a good superficial appearance to the product, as the price is constantly advancing. As the gatherers also do not scruple to add vegetable debris, earth, or sand, it has become difficult to secure a pure article. An inferior quality is obtained from trees and climbers in Africa and Madagascar, and, with the development of those countries, more may be expected—From India Rubber and Gutta percha, by Clarke Dooley, in Appletons' Popular Science Monthly for March.

To make peanut jumbles weigh a scant half pound of butter, add a half pound of powdered sugar and stir them to a cream. Add two beaten eggs and a little nutmeg. Take one cup of finely rolled peanuts and stir them in with three-quarters of a pound of flour. Break off pieces of the dough and roll them in sugar on the molding board with the hand, and form them into rings on a buttered pan, leaving a space between them to spread. Put four half peanuts on each ring and bake them in a moderate oven to a very delicate brown.

Father Time has to halt when he meets a woman who knows how to take care of her health. Time can't make her seem old.

She may be the mother of a family; that makes no difference. She is bound to be young because her heart is young and there is rich, young blood circulating in her veins. She doesn't need cosmetics and face-powders and skin-preservers. Pure blood is the only true skin-preserver.

But when a woman's blood is full of bilious impurities, she can neither look young nor feel young. Her whole constitution is poisoned with bad blood. It permeates every part. It paralyzes the nerve-centres; weakens the stomach; irritates the heart, preys upon the lungs and bronchial tubes.

It reduces a woman to a state of weakness, nervousness, irritability, dejection and melancholy. Such a woman can't possibly be youthful, no matter what her age may be. She needs the youthfulness of highly vitalized blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will give it to her. It will help any woman to get back her youth and freshness again.

It gives the digestive and blood-making organs and the liver power to produce good, pure, healthy blood. It gives color to the cheeks, and sparkle to the eyes; drives away pimples and blotches; wipes away wrinkles; rounds out emaciated forms, and creates firm, natural, healthy flesh.

Mrs. Rebecca F. Gardner, of Grafton, York Co., Va., writes: "When I was married I weighed 125 pounds. I was taken sick and reduced in health and broke out with a disease which my doctor said was eczema. He treated my disease but failed to do me any good, and I fell away to 90 pounds. I began using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and thank God and you, I began to improve. Now I weigh 120 pounds and have only taken two bottles. I cannot say too much about the medicine. My husband says I look younger than I did the first time he saw me, 15 years ago."

A NEW VERSION.

"Sing a song of a sixpence,"
And pocket full of dimes;
Shall I spend them on myself,
To help me have good times?"

Not while many girls and boys,
In far-off heathen lands,
Have no chance to hear of Christ,
And learn the King's commands.

I think I'll give for missions
At least one dime in ten;
Then, if for funds you're lacking,
Just call on me again.

THE GOLDEN TEXT AND DIAMOND RULE.

Coming to school the first day of a new term meant a great deal to the five little girls who were hanging their hats in the wardrobe of the schoolroom.

"I wonder," said Grace Williams, the eldest and tallest of the five, "if our new teacher will put Jane Hawley in our class; she is too young and small," and she thought, but did not say, "and too poor."

"Why not?" said Ruth Morrison, as she threw her arms around Jane: "I don't think size and age should count, but lessons and behavior."

"Just what I think," said Mary White.

"Well, I don't care what you girls say; I'm not going to have Jane in our class club, and I am the president," said Grace.

Poor Jane looked hurt, but said nothing, and the other girls looked sorry, while Mary whispered to Jane, as the bell rang:

"Never mind; Grace doesn't mean half she says."

The new teacher, Miss Ames, had, what Ruth afterwards said, a drawing face; "for she drew all of us to her," she added.

"And no wonder," exclaimed Grace, "she is so beautiful."

To this they all agreed, not then understanding that it was the sweet spirit within her which made Miss Ames beautiful.

After the tap of the bell, Miss Ames said:

"Instead of a Scripture lesson, I will give you a Golden Text, which is, 'Little children, love one another;' and I will add to it what I call my diamond rule—'Giving the preference each to the other.'"

At the noon recess there was a special meeting of the Pansy Club, and by motion of Grace Williams, seconded by Mary White, and adopted by the four girls, Jane Hawley was made president of the club, to the great surprise of the modest little girl, and they chose as their motto, the couplet their teacher had given them:

"Little children love one another,
Giving the preference each to the other."

AN EVERYDAY HERO.

Reuben was a boy who dreamed of the heroic, but unheroically allowed his mother to weary herself out in matters where he might have given the helping hand. One day he took up a pamphlet that was lying on the schoolmaster's table. In it he saw a story called "The Hero." "Halloo!" he cried. "What is this about? I want to be a hero."

The story was somewhat like this: "A few years ago the traveler might have seen a charming little village—now, alas! no longer in existence. A fire broke out one day, and in a few hours the quaint little frame houses were entirely destroyed. The poor peasants ran around wringing their hands and weeping over their lost homes and for their burned cattle. One poor man was in greater trouble than his neighbors even. True, his home and the cows were gone; but so also was his only son, a bright boy of six or seven years old. He wept, and refused to hear any words of comfort. He spent the night wandering sorrowfully among the ruins, while his acquaintances had taken refuge in the neighboring villages. Just as daylight came, however, he heard a well-known sound, and, looking up, he saw his favorite cow leading the herd, and coming directly after them was his bright eyed little son. 'O my son! my son!' he cried, 'are you really alive?' 'Why, yes, father. When I saw the fire I ran to get our cows away to the pasture lands.' 'You are a hero, my boy!' the father exclaimed. But the boy said: 'O no! A hero is one who does some wonderful deed. I led the cows away because they were in danger, and I knew it was the right thing to do.' 'Ah!' cried the father, 'he who does the right thing at the right time is a hero.'"

Reuben read the story two or three times, and then he gave a long, low whistle which meant that he was seriously considering something. "I wonder now if that is true," he thought. "'A hero is one who does the right thing at the right time.' There are plenty of chances for me to be that kind of a hero."—Our Boys and Girls.

"JESUS DOES LOVE ME."

A celebrated minister tells a story of a little girl who once went to him and said, with tears in her eyes, "Please, sir, it's a dreadful thing, but I don't love Jesus."

"And how are you going to love Him?" he replied.

"I don't know. Please sir, I want you to tell me." She spoke so sadly, as if it were something she could never do.

"Well," he said, "the disciple John, who loved Jesus almost more, perhaps, than any one else ever did, says that "we love Him because He first loved us.' Now, if you are going home to-night saying to your heart, 'Jesus loves me,' I am sure that to-morrow you will say, 'I love Jesus.'"

She looked up through her tears and said very softly "Jesus loves me." She began to think as well as to say it—about His life and His death on the cross—and she began to feel it too.

The next evening she came to Mr. Pearse again, and, with a bright happy face, said, "O, sir, I do love Jesus to-night, for He does love me so."—S. S. Messenger.

LETTER-BOX.

My Dear Mr. McLaurin:—The PRESBYTERIAN is the first paper I ever remember seeing, and mama says I will feel my importance, to have the privilege of writing for it, and I wanted to know what that meant? I remember you with so much pleasure. You traveled from Salisbury to Durham with us. We were on our way to Goldsboro to see auntie. You told us such funny stories about the frogs and brer rabbit, and something about an Irishman too, and that was the funniest of all. There are five of us. We all go to school but Harry. We love our teacher. Our school is near home, but I wish it was farther so I could ride my pony like my little friend Parks Lafferty. Papa preaches at three churches, Bethpage, Gillwood and Shearer chapel. We live in the manse near Bethpage. I am eleven years old. You will hear from us again, for we all wanted to write at the same time this time, and mama said that would not do.

Your little friend,
CARL SHAW.
Mill Hill, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor:—As it has been a long time since I wrote to you I thought I would write now. We live about three quarters or a mile from the village called Woodleaf, N. C. I study geography, spelling, grammar, physiology and arithmetic. I have just finished reading "Bonny Scotland" and "Marooner's Island." We go to school now, but our school will soon be out. I will ask a question, "What king is said to have gathered the riches of the nations like eggs out of a nest?"

Your little friend,
BESSIE ARROWOOD.
Woodleaf, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I thought I would write to you as I have not seen a letter from any of the little ones here. I am going to school now. Miss Rice is my teacher. We like her so much. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. Mrs. Reinhardt is my teacher. She is so good to me. Mr. R. Z. Johnston is our preacher. He preaches twice every month. I have one sister and four brothers. We have a big time playing after school. I am nine years old.

Your unknown friend,
KATE BURGIN.
Lincolnton, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I have seen so many nice letters in your good paper I thought I would write one too. I am a little girl eight years old. I am going to school at Red Springs. Mr. D. R. McIver is my teacher. I like him very much. I study spelling, arithmetic, geography, grammar and reader. I have two pets, a little dog and a calf. My little dog is named "Bryan." As this is my first letter I will close.

Your little friend,
BENJAMIN J. MCGOOGAN.
Red Springs, N. C.

Dear Presbyterian:—I have enjoyed reading the letters in the PRESBYTERIAN so much I thought I would write a letter too. I can't write well enough myself, so my sister will write for me. I am a little girl seven years old and will be eight years old the 26th of this month. I am going to school now. My teacher is Miss Lelia Moring and I like her very much. I study five books: Reading, spelling, arithmetic, geography and grammar. I like to go to school ever so much, and especially when we have recess. Sometimes I take my little sister Kathleen with me, but she doesn't say any lessons. Kathleen and myself have a fine play-house and we play in it most of the time. We play with our dolls and playthings we got last Christmas. To-day was so rainy and damp we could not go out in the yard to play, and we were mighty glad we had made our play-house indoors. I have written you a very long letter already, and so I will close for fear of never seeing it in your paper. I will write again soon.

Your little unknown friend,
ANNA CLAUDIA LONG.
Elon College, Alamance co. N. C.

DANGER FROM EVIL CONTACT.

Take heed as to the company you keep. You are more likely to be like your lowest chosen companions, than to be like your choicest associates. "He that toucheth pitch shall be defiled," is a truth as old as Ecclesiasticus. On the other hand, he that toucheth snow is not always made pure white. It is easier to be defiled than to be cleansed by mere contact. If you do not want to get into bad habits, it is better not to pick as your associates those who already illustrate them.—Sunday School Times.

I CURE FITS

When I say I cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a lifelong study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Postoffice address.

The ministers and church sessions of Albemarle Presbytery are respectfully reminded that collections are in order in April for the cause of Education for the Ministry, and for Church and Christian Education.

Not more than seven or eight churches have sent in anything for the former cause from the November collection.

Please, brethren, see to it that the April collections do not fail.

F. H. JOHNSTON,
Chairman and Treasurer.
Elizabeth City, March 19th.

The officers of the Fourth Regiment of Virginia Volunteers returning from Nashville where they had been to complete arrangements for attending the Nashville Exposition which is to open May 1st, and continue six months, adopted among other resolutions the following:

"We thank Colonel T. J. Anderson, Major H. W. B. Glover and Captain J. W. Brown for their kind and courteous treatment and their genial companionship throughout the entire trip, and express our hearty approval of the run made by the 'Atlanta Special' and believe that the way to Nashville is via Atlanta, and the 'S. A. L.'"

The following program for the Westminster Standards Anniversary to be observed by Albemarle Presbytery during the session in Wilson in April, has been prepared by the committee appointed for that purpose:

1st: "The Politico-Ecclesiastical Conditions which led to the Calling of the Westminster Assembly," by Rev. Dr. E. Daniel, Raleigh.

2d. "The Composition and Work of the Assembly," by Rev. F. W. Farries, Goldsboro.

3d. "The effects of Calvinistic Doctrines, Ethically Considered, on Communities and Individuals," by Rev. Fred. D. Thomas, Rocky Mount.

4th. The Doctrinal System of the Assembly in its Relation to the Establishment and Maintenance of Civil and Religious Liberty," by the Rev. G. L. Leyburn, New Berne.

For the Committee,
F. H. JOHNSTON,
Chairman.

SECULAR NEWS.

NORTH CAROLINA.

The prospects for a hotel at Wrightsville beach this summer are very bright. Mr. Campbell, the well-known manager of the Central of Charlotte, will have charge and is largely interested. We learn that our interior friends are enthusiastic over the prospect.

The Southport Leader has been discontinued and its subscription list transferred to the Semi-Weekly Messenger. The Leader leaves behind an excellent record and especially we note the valuable aid it gave to our State in publishing the early history of our Cape Fear section—a series of papers most admirably gotten up by Mr. James Sprunt.

The prospects for a fine crop of huckleberries is good.

A factory is to be established in Marion for novelty woodwork.

Arbor day was observed at Ellenbro, 900 trees being planted.

Wheat and oats are looking well around Henderson and the crop is promising.

Mr. Washington Duke, of Durham has subscribed $1,000 towards the mill to be erected by colored people in Henderson.

Chapel Hill is shipping large quantities of dogwood to be used by the Durham Shuttle Mills. So far about $8,100 has been invested.

We are glad to see it stated that Burgaw has a bright outlook before her. A town hall, mayor's office and guardhouse are being built and the town is in an excellent financial condition.

DOMESTIC.

The Jackson Memorial Hall will be dedicated during the coming commencement of the Virginia Military Institute. The services will be held on June 23d and addresses will be made by Senator Daniel upon the military life and career of Jackson, Rev. Dr. Smith, of Richmond, upon his Christian life and Dr. Hunter McGuire will give personal reminiscences.

Tip the monster elephant of Bridgeport, Conn., who has developed vicious traits was strangled on last week by block and tackle. The act consumed thirteen minutes.

The outlook from Avon Park, Fla., is that 25,000 pineapples will be shipped during the coming summer.

The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., will have a line from Cumberland to Hagerstown. This will connect all points in West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

During the path of the cyclone which swept through Georgia, Mississippi and Texas, a school house was destroyed at Arlington, Ga., killing many children and wounding in all about 100 persons. Serious injury was everywhere the result.

The Tampa Metropolis says that Florida will make rapid strides this year. Orange groves will about double in value as the result of the favorable winter; vegetable shipments are turning out well: thousands of acres will be planted in field crops and tobacco, and the State will abound in peace and plenty.

THINGS USEFUL.

Ginger Snaps.—Rub half a pound of butter or lard thoroughly into two pounds of flour. Then add half a pound of brown sugar, just a dash of cayenne and a large tablespoonful of ground ginger. Mix well and moisten by adding gradually one pint of milk; knead, and roll out into a very thin sheet; cut with a small round cutter and bake in a moderate oven until a light brown.—Ladies Home Journal.

A delicious sauce is made from grated horse-radish root mixed with lemon juice, a little salt, and a suspicion of white sugar. Served with cold meats, it makes them much more inviting and palatable.

Southern Corn Bread.—One pint of white cornmeal (coarse or granulated meal is best), sift with a teaspoonful of salt in a large earthen bowl and pour over it a quart of boiling water; cover it close and let it stand in a cool place over night; in the morning add two eggs and a cup of cold-boiled rice, if you have it, and beat all well together. If too stiff thin with milk (sour milk is best, if you have it), put a half teaspoonful of bicarbonate soda in a cup of milk, well mixed before it is put into the mixture; dissolve the soda in a little hot water. This may be less or more according to size of family. Bake an hour in a well-greased pan.

IF WE KNEW.

BY GENESEE RICHARDSON.

There are gems of wondrous brightness
Oft-times lying at our feet,
And we pass them, walking thoughtless
Down the busy, crowded street;
If we knew, our pace would slacken—
We would step more oft with care,
Lest our careless feet be treading
To the earth some jewel rare.

If we knew what hearts are aching
For the comfort we might bring;
If we knew what souls are yearning
For the sunshine we might fling;
If we knew what feet are weary
Walking pathways roughly laid:
We would quickly hasten forward,
Stretching forth our hands to aid.

If we knew what friends around us
Feel a want they never tell—
That some word that we have spoken
Pained or wounded where it fell;
We would speak in accents tender
To each friend we chance to meet—
We would give to each one freely
Smiles of sympathy so sweet.

There are two points which the eye of man has never beheld; the deepest depths of darkness in the Mammoth cave and the center of light and effulgence in the middle of the sun. There is, says the Bible, a "mystery of iniquity," but there is also a "mystery of godliness." "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him." No man can understand a Christian's joys except by personal experience of them. Jesus will come in and sup with the soul that opens unto him, but the happiness of the saved with the Saviour is behind the wall and door of the guest chamber. Our life with our Lord is not a picnic in the woods, but a communion into which no stranger enters. The more constant and intimate this relation of the soul becomes, the more is realized the sweetness of the promise, "I will sup with Him." One ceases to think of God then as a lawgiver but welcomes Him as a guest.—Interior.

REV. J. Y. MC GINNIS.

My father and mother were both of Scotch-Irish, and of Presbyterian descent. Though my father and some of his relatives joined the Campbellites, in their early days in Kentucky.

Our ancestors on my mother's side came from South Carolina. So far as I know they never won any widely extended distinction for themselves, yet always had more than a local reputation for goodness and true worth, and generally led their neighbors in all good works for their fellowmen, and the beloved Presbyterian Church; and we are always glad to claim kin with any from Old South Carolina, named Fair, Young, or Boyd, provided they are under the description given above.

I was born in Memphis, Tenn., June 5th, 1868. I was youngest of three children and the only son. My father died when I was only three years old. As our family had been greatly impoverished by the war, my mother had quite a struggle to raise and to educate her three children.

Her lot was made harder still by the fact that I was quite delicate and often sick until ten years of age. My mother made her living by teaching the public school just outside of the city of Memphis, and of course the three children got their first training under their mother.

Up to the time I was ten years old, I had been going to school with my mother because she had no place to leave me at home, but I had not been encouraged to study much on account of delicacy of health.

At the age of ten, I left school and went to work; a few years of vigorous exercise as a messenger in the telegraph office gave me a strong body as well as an appreciation of the advantages of an education. Attending school again for about three years, I quit school at about eighteen with a fairly good high school education.

Having decided to become a minister, at the age of twenty I spent five years in the college and theological seminary at Clarksville, Tenn., during which time, all our family had decided to come out as missionaries to China.

Having been ordained in the First church, Memphis in July, 1893, we soon sailed for China, and reached Wusih on the Grand Canal, thirty miles north of Soochow on October 3d of the same year.

Since that time the study of the language, and a little tentative work has occupied our time, and we can only now say that we are ready to begin our life's work in China.

The Lord has different ways of calling people to do His work. I never had felt any great longing to preach the Gospel to my fellow-man in America, nor did I ever give much time to thinking about the millions of heathen in foreign lands until after I had decided to become a missionary to them, and I never had any interest in anything Chinese, nor any love for any Chinamen, but rather disgust, until I had been living in China for sometime.

With me it was simply a feeling of responsibility. I knew something of the Gospel, and millions of people did not, it was then my clear duty to carry it to them.

This feeling of mere responsibility in the matter has been changed to one of intense interest in and growing love for the work in China.

While I cannot say that I love the Chinese as I should, yet I think the fact that I love them at all, since I know them as well as I do, is somewhat encouraging, and I trust that the Lord will more and more fit me for the great work which I feel that He has undoubtedly called me to do.

Very sincerely,

JAMES YOUNG MCGINNIS.

"One thing is needful." Mary and Martha were both Christians. It is a good thing to serve, but it is also a good thing, a better thing at times, to sit at the Master's feet. There must be fellowship, communion with the Master, and that is experienced when we imitate Mary and sit at the feet of Jesus.—D. L. Moody.

This is a question that each member of the church should ask himself or herself; and say, "Yes, I am truly trying to live a Christian life, and I have Jesus reigning within." Such a person can use his or her influence for good. And what about those that are living a life of pretense? It would be well for such to fall on their knees before God and implore him to help them to quit living a life of pretense and actually begin living for God and the good of humanity by sending forth a gleam of Christian light.—Trans-Mississippi Presbyterian.

ANGELS TO HELP.

That was the sound of the going in the tops of the Mulberry trees which David was to hear and know that the Lord would deliver Israel from the Philistines. The servant of Elisha saw the hill full of chariots and horses of the hosts. "Are they not all ministering spirits sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?"

Our point of departure is the fifth chapter of second Samuel. This chapter is a record of the chief characteristics of David's life. It shows how David received a complete fulfillment of God's promise that he should be king of all Israel and that without any effort on David's part to hasten the fulfillment or to secure the promise by human means. Instead of taking any advantage of apparently opportune circumstances he always turned to trust in God who made the promises and to enquire His will.

He had been three times anointed to be king. Samuel, disappointed with Saul, was sent to select a son of Jesse, and called him as the young shepherd and anointed him. With this in mind David refused opportunities take advantage of Saul or to ki . It was only after several years, when Saul and Jonathan were dead, but not by the hand of David, that David was anointed in Hebron as king over Judah. It was seven years and six months, during which time David would do nothing to overthrow his rival of the house of Saul, until Ishbosheth was out of the way and Abner was dead, and then David was chosen and anointed at Hebron, this third time to be king over all Israel. Having waited God's own good time and way to bring him to the kingdom David could count on God's protection and look to His power against all his enemies, for they would be the enemies of God.

By waiting for God, David gained the favor of the world. Hiram, king of Tyre, who was ever a lover of David, sent to David gifts and workmen and they built David a house. This favor of the world turned David's thoughts to seek resemblance to other kings and to copy their customs. This brought the sin and shame of polygamy and concubinage.

As long as there was civil strife in Israel the Philistines thought to let them alone, with the confidence that they would destroy themselves and leave their lands and wealth to the enemy. But when David was settled in peace over a united people the Philistines saw the need to make war with him. Then "David enquired of the Lord, saying: shall I go up to the Philistines?" "And the Lord said * * * go up." Then the Philistines were defeated, routed and despoiled even of their gods.

A little later the Philistines came again to attack Israel. They were defeated before. They were weaker now. David might well say, there was no need to enquire of the Lord this time. But he did not. He enquired of the Lord this time also and the Lord answered, but not as before. He gave entirely new and quite different directions. David was not to fight, but to wait for the sign, the sound of a going in the tops of the mulberry trees, the tramp of the marching hosts of the Lord in the air, marching as angel help to deliver David from the enemy.

It is plain from all this that whatever God has given as promises He will fulfill with power. It is further evident that we cannot hasten God's fulfillment by any rash interference or by mere human agencies or means. Any attempt to do so will only recoil on the one who makes the attempt. Therefore the proper position for any who would inherit the promises is where God puts them and the attitude should be of waiting on God for guidance and grace. In this way God will always surpass Himself. He will direct or empower the human agent or say: "Stand still and see the salvation of God."

In this case of David, enquiring the second time concerning the enemy, the relief came and deliverance was wrought by angel help. If our eyes were opened, we might see between us and any enemy of our souls, trusting in God, the company of the hosts of Heaven, sent forth to minister to them who shall be heirs of salvation. For this is one way in which God can work and does work salvation.

TO GET AWAY from the desk and from the stiffy stiflingness of the editorial quarters, and to breathe the sweet pure air of heaven, to feast the eyes upon the woodland trees and flowers, to feel the soothing influence of the half mournful notes of the soughing pines under gentle pressure of the fragrance-laden breeze—all this is pleasure as it is given us to know pleasure here below; but to meet kind friends and to mingle in congenial intercourse, and to partake of lavish hospitality this is happiness: and these for a few short hours were given us one day since last we met our readers.

Kenansville is not a bustling town, though it is not devoid of life, as we are apt to suppose all towns without noise and confusion and stir to be. It is the county seat of a good staid, solid old county, with a history that carries back Presbyterianism to its earliest advent in eastern Carolina. Restful and calm, but steady and safe—these are the characteristics of Kenansville and its surrounding, its people and its principles—at least that is what it has been and in essentials will continue to be—but this goodly town and intelligent and hospitable people are taking on the spirit of Presbyterian aggressiveness, of which we are coming to know so much. Kenansville has a school building most eligibly located on four acres of land—a building in which a school is even now in operation, presided over by a lady superintendent and conducted by lady teachers who are thoroughly competent to carry pupils through the curriculum of any of our modern higher schools and colleges. A building which may easily and at little expense be fitted to accommodate all the pupils that may offer—a school whose very name is an inspiration to all in Eastern Carolina—The "James Sprunt Institute." You have never heard of it! No, but you will—let us hope—for a visit to it convinces us that upon the success of this Institute depends the successful solving of the question of the spread of evangelical teaching, along with the tenets of Presbyterianism in our section of the Synod of North Carolina. The Institute is yet to send out its educated and aggressive missionaries broadcast and to furnish an uplifting moral influence second only to that of the preached gospel itself. This good work is at present in charge of Rev. Peter McIntyre with lady assistants, Misses McFarland, Tipping and Loftin. The gentlemen to whom primarily and principally the public and the Church are indebted for what has been done are, Mr. Henry Farrior and Dr. R. H. Blount, of Kenansville. Rev. R. V. Lancaster, whose work of itself as evangelist in this section is most promising, is in heartiest accord with what the Institute has done, and hopes to do, and is actively colaboring to secure the results which it is hoped are to be achieved.

This much we have written, to prepare our readers for a most liberal proposition which will be made to Wilmington Presbytery to take charge of this work so full of promise for the future of Presbyterianism and of the cause of Christ, our Master.

MRS. MARGARET J. PRESTON than whom the South, probably, has never had a more gifted daughter, died at the home of her son, Dr. George J. Preston, in Baltimore, on Sunday last. The few lines at our disposal do not justify an attempt to even touch upon the superlative gifts and graces of one so eminent in letters and so abounding in good works, yet so modest and retiring withal.

Mrs. Preston was the daughter of Rev. Dr. George Junkin, founder of LaFayette College, Pa., and late President of Washington College (now Washington and Lee) Virginia. She married Prof. J. T. L. Preston of the Virginia Military Institute, afterward an aid to General Stonewall Jackson.

WE HAVE not heretofore noticed the effort making in Louisville, Ky., among elders and deacons of the Northern and Southern churches to re-open the question of Organic Union. We write now to deplore the agitation of this subject at this time. There would seem to be absolutely no occasion for it. We are glad to see that in the impropriety of such a movement we are in hearty accord with our neighbor the Southern Presbyterian. For years the Northern Assembly has been so large as to be unwieldly, and as we believe not so effective in the outworking into good results as would be two or even three smaller Assemblies. We certainly have avoided a great deal of strife and trouble by separation and, it seems to us, have accomplished a vast deal of good that otherwise would have been impossible.

INK SPOTS.

To such a being as man as he now is in himself, and his condition, trust, love and hope, are more than all else what he needs. The three states which will do more for his comfort and well being than aught else. Christianity, the religion of Jesus presents that toward which these three can go out in their fullest measure. Man's sense of dependence and need is fully met in Christ the Supreme object of trust and love, and hope is richly fed and supported by the promises and objects which Christ reveals as the soul's ultimate end here and in the world to come.

"Among all the hopes upon which man relies for courage, cheer and moral purifying, the most elevated and effective are his religious hopes. To lose the hope of the coming life, from the present life would destroy in large measure the motive which mankind feels for the activities of the present life. The hope of preserving a continuity of consciousness gives zest in the formation of character. Solidarity is necessary to holy character, an entire union of interests and responsibilities on the part of all the faculties of man. It is therefore difficult, if not impossible to build up holy character without the impulse and outlook furnished by religious hope." We all remember how prominent in the Bible is religious hope; the whole attitude of the Christian is the attitude of hope.

"The higher is the humanity of the age," the richer and more full becomes the development of man in moral force, nobility of feeling and elevation of sentiment, the more profoundly will he live on hope that the future world will bring a sphere to him of broader and more intense action and feeling, along moral and religious lines; and this hope finds its ground upon which to stand in the Christian revelations which so open up the unknown world beyond the grave.

Trust, love and hope, how these elements have been woven into the life of humanity since Christ brought life and immortality to light in his mission. Strike them out of our lives, what would we have left us? The very foundation upon which character in its loftiest sense is builded, would be gone. It seems strange that men should refuse to accept that revelation which presents such an object as our Lord Christ, so absolutely needful for our trust as dependent creatures, sinful and helpless, so suited to call out all our love, and so inspiring to our souls in the hope of being like Him when we shall see Him as He is.

A REMINISCENCE.

A friend sends us some memories of the Presbyterian church of Madison at the time Rev. W. N. Mebane was pastor.

The session was composed of Rev. W. N. Mebane, Moderator, and Ruling Elders Dr. Robert Galloway Hon. A. M. Scales, W. R. D. Lindsay, W. B. Carter, and T. D. Roseborough. The moderator and four of this session have long since passed over the river. The writer, alone, is left to tell the tale. He still loves to cherish in memory those who have gone before. Mr. Mebane died May 5th, 1859, in his 51st year. Not more than seven or eight of his old members survive him. Truly we are passing away like a short winter day.

Mr. Mebane was no common man. He left his church well indoctrinated. In Presbytery, session, pulpit, parlor, in the sick room or at the grave he was always at home; always instant in service in season and out of season, and faithful to the last. To all that visited him in his long sickness, saint and sinner, he had the right word. Rev. Joseph M. Atkinson on leaving from a visit remarked that he was a second Bunyan. His last words were; "My peace flows like a river." His request was that his remains be shrouded in linen like his Saviour. At his request Dr. Phillips, of Chapel Hill, preached the funeral discourse, from the text; "We have this treasure in earthern vessels."

We really think our

LETTERS TO A BEREAVED FRIEND.

V.

MY DEAR FRIEND:—I promised to write you something about nervous disorders. Your account of your symptoms leads me to conclude that your case is by no means desperate, and that you may, by the grace of God, become your own physician and cure yourself quickly. The treatment I shall recommend possesses two advantages not to be denied: one is, that the method is easily tried, and the other is that it costs nothing.

It is the belief of all intelligent physicians that a large number of the so-called "nervous" disorders have their origin, not in any organic lesion, nor even in any special functional derangement of the vital organs, but in some want of self-control. The patient, who is usually a woman, is one who has not been accustomed to restraint, and is more or less in the habit of indulging unreasonable whims. In such cases it sometimes happens that the patient will conceive a violent aversion to appearing in public, or a prevalent disinclination to some particular action. And in not a few cases this disinclination grows into inability. One will complain that she has lost the use of an arm or a leg; another is liable to fall suddenly, and is in constant dread of falling. A third will sudden[illegible]e her voice. A fourth will [illegible] she has heart disease, etc., etc.

Such patients furnish the finest possible subjects for the operations of modern faith healing and so-called "Christian Science." The faith-healer will first seek to arouse the patient's conscience by inquiring into her religious life; and the result is, the discovery and confession of very much of unfaithfulness and sin. In particular, the patient is convicted of having lived upon a very low plane in respect of faith in the promises of God. Then the miracles of healing wrought by our Lord are dwelt upon, and much stress laid upon the cases in which faith was required, and upon one particular passage, found in Mark 11: 24, "Whatsoever things ye desire, when ye pray believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." The patient is then fervently exhorted to "claim the promise," prayer is offered, and the "healer" then insists, "the blessing is yours, if you will claim it;" and it sometimes happens that the woman is thus induced to believe, first, that she is about to be healed, and then that she is healed. And, lo! when she does so believe, her ills have suddenly vanished, and the paralytic is strong again, or the lame begins to walk! The "Christian Scientist" proceeds in almost precisely the same way, only omitting vocal prayer, which he declares unnecessary. He lays down the proposition that there is nothing in the universe but mind; that the body, with all its sensations and ailments, is nothing but "the externalization of our thought;" that the mind, being spiritual and indestructible, cannot be sick; that all sensations of sickness are the results of erroneous beliefs; that in fact, there is no such thing in the world as sickness. "Believe that you are well," says the enthusiastic apostle of Christian Science, "and your distressing symtoms will all vanish." And when the patient becomes a convert to this very pleasing, but sublimely ridiculous philosophy, and resolutely determines not to yield to the "suggestions of mortal mind," the disorder is gone in an instant.

It is perfectly evident that, whatever may be said of cases in which there is a real disease, this quackery of which I have spoken is adequate for all imaginary disorders. It matters little whether the patient is led to believe that she is healed, or to believe that she is not sick, and has power to rise above the "belief in sickness;" the result is the same. She quits complaining, and forthwith sets about her business. And in the effort to do something she finds that her strength has returned. The truth is, it had never left her.

Honest physicians accomplish the same result in ways quite as effective, though not always as gentle. But their treatment, being based upon common sense and the facts of each case, is much ofterner productive of a permanent cure. Convinced that the patient's trouble is altogether imaginary, and due to want of willpower and the habitual indulgence of indolent inclinations, their method seeks to rouse the will to action. Dr. M———, of Richmond, is noted for his direct methods and for his amazing success in the treatment of "nervous" patients. Mrs. A. went to him, to be treated for what she considered paralysis. She had not walked for months. With an indulgent husband, sympathetic friends, plenty of money, and nothing to emply her time and thoughts, she had settled down to chronic invalidism, and seemed to enjoy it. She had tried "water-cure," massage, and sundry other measures, when, almost as a last resort, and hopeless of cure, she went to Dr. M———, and put herself under his care. He found her in excellent health, with good appetite and no evidence of disease. There was no reason why she should not walk, and without arguing the case he proceeded to convince her of the fact. Having made a bargain with some small boys in the neighborhood to let a shower of stones rain upon his carriage as he passed a certain corner, he took Mrs. A. out for a drive. The boys kept their promise, and when the stones were flying like hail, and Mrs. A. was half frightened out of her wits, he suddenly leaped from his carriage; cried, "It isn't safe for you to remain in the carriage;" and, suiting the action to the word, lifted her out and set her down on the curbing and drove away. She thought of course he would in a little while return for her, and sat there waiting for him for more than an hour. By-and-by, beginning to consider herself a very much ill used person, and stung by the curious and sometimes amused looks of passers-by, she got into a towering rage and—got up and walked back to the hospital! She was perfectly well in a week or two, and did not soon forget the lessons in common sense taught her by Dr. M———'s methods of treatment.

Now, Mary, will you let your old schoolmate talk to you frankly about your case? You complain of nervousness; but you remain in bed till half-past eight, and not unfrequent till nine, and you retire at eleven. You are committing the sin of the sluggard every day that you continue this course of self-indulgence; and the disagreeable symptoms of which you complain are most of them due to your habit of spending so much of your time in bed. All physicians are agreed that seven-and-a-half, or at utmost eight hours of sleep are enough for any woman; and that the effect of too much lounging in bed is to unstring the nerves, and bring on a general languor of the whole system. The longer the habit is indulged, the more pronounced these so-called nervous disorders become.

Your case is like the one I have mentioned, save that it has not gone so far, thanks to your good sense, and the fact that your attention has frequently been diverted by providential occurrences, which prevented you for a time from thinking so much about yourself and your troubles and ailments. Thus, when your nephew was brought home from college, three months ago and his illness speedily became so desperate, you left your chamber, and went to your brother's house when John was dying, to sympathize with them and his poor wife in their distress. Nor did you suffer any inconvenience of any sort until after you returned home, and resumed your accustomed habits of self-indulgence. You would make an immense stride towards health and happiness, at the outset, if you would indulge in a little honest reflection on certain passages of Scripture which you have not thought of as being applicable to your case. For instance, this from Proverbs: "Go to the ant, thou sluggard; consider her ways and be wise. * * * * Yet a little more sleep, a little more slumber, a little more folding of the hands in sleep: so shall thy poverty come as one that travelleth, and thy want as an armed man." And you will find others equally as suggestive in the New Testament.

Your husband has sought to shield you from every care, and his love has been too blind to allow him to suspect that your ailments were not as grave as you have seemed to think. Your children, too, in their love and sympathy, have encouraged you to think yourself an invalid. Having an ample corps of trained servants, you have been exempted from all necessity of devoting your time and attention to your household affairs, beyond a few general directions, when you expected distinguished visitors. You have thus become accustomed to a life of ease and of self-indulgence. Your mind, for want of regular occupation to divert your thoughts from your troubles, has preyed on itself and tyrannized over your body as well. Out of the languor resulting from your inactive and luxurious life, your imagination has wrought numerous ailments and many anxieties. You should at once set about finding something to do. You can find work that will occupy hands, heart and brain, if you will. With the large means at your command, you could make many homes blessed and your own life doubly so, if you would strive to follow in the footsteps of Him who "went about doing good."

And last, not least, I would commend a sort of faith-healing you can use without the intervention of any professional saint or faith healer. Be much in humble, fervent believing and penitent prayer. Ask both strength for your body and grace for your soul of Him who "giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not." Try to say, "Thy will be done," not only with regard to the misfortunes of life, which you cannot help, but also, with regard to the duties of life, which have occupied so small a share of your thought and care. And in prayerful, humble reliance upon Him, coupled with active effort to glorify His name, you will not fail to find a well-spring of strength and joy.

Trusting you will receive these suggestions in the same spirit of love in which they are offered, and ever praying that your feet may soon be led into the way of peace, I remain, as ever, with warmest sympathy and affection,

Your Friend,

MARTHA.

PARADOXES OF LIFE.

The hand that beckons us to glory waves us out of impenetrable darkness. We walk in a way that we know not. We labor for our Master, but never know beforehand which shall prosper, whether this or that. We lay wise plans and they miscarry. We commit gross blunders, and they are overruled for good. We run toward the light, and it goes out in darkness. We sink shivering in the darkness, and find the light. We pray for joys, and they mildew into griefs. We accept the griefs, and they blossom into joys. To-day the apple turns to ashes, and to-morrow the stones to bread. We exult in some prosperity, and get leanness with it. We murmur at some adversity, and find it big with blessing. We run toward the open door, and dash our heads against a granite wall. We move against the wall at the call of duty, and it opens to let us through. The lines of our lives are all in God's hands. What shall befall us we cannot tell. What is expedient we cannot know. Only this we know, that God would shape us to Himself, whether it be the discipline of joy or the discipline of sorrow. To make us perfect as He is perfect, this is the end of all his revelations; while everything not helpful to this He hides away out of sight.—Heavenly Recruit Messenger.

ONE TALENT.

The gift or talent which the Lord puts into our hands to use is proportioned to every man's "several ability." He does not require service which we are unfitted to perform. He does not exact day-labor, light being denied; does not require to cut without an axe, or carve without a chisel; does not load the child with the burden of the man; does not require us to use five talents, having ability to use only one. We may, indeed, in our unwisdom and ambition, attempt many things for which we are unqualified, and which are beyond our strength, but we are not thereby serving the Lord truly; it would be far better that we should do that thing, however lowly, which the Lord lays to our hand—and do it faithfully and well.—From The Greatness of Little Things, by James Culross, D. D.

"CLING CLOSE TO THE ROCK JOHNNY.

A long train of cars, fourteen or fifteen, was passing over the Alleghany Mountains, on the way eastward. They were crowded with passengers. As the iron horse snorted and rushed on the passengers felt that they had begun to descend, and needed no power but the invisible force of gravitation to send them down with terrific swiftness. Just as the passengers began to realize their situation, they came to a short curve cut out of the solid rock—a wall of rock lying on each side. Suddenly the steam whistle screamed as if in agony: "Put on the brakes! put on the brakes!" Up pressed the brakes, but with no apparent slackening of the cars. Every window flew open, and every head that could be was thrust out to see what the danger was, and every one rose up in his place, fearing destruction. What was the trouble?

Just as the engine began to turn into the curve the engineer saw a little girl and baby brother playing on the track. In a moment the car would be on them. The shriek of the whistle startled the little girl, and every eye looking over could see them. Close to the rail, in the upright rock, was a little niche out of which a piece of rock had been blasted. In an instant the baby was thrust into this niche, and as the cars came thundering by, the passengers, holding their breath, heard the clear voice of the little sister, on the other side of the cars, ring out: "Cling close to the rock, Johnny! cling close to the rock!"

And the little creature snuggled in and put his head as close to the corner of the rock as possible, while the heavy cars whirred past him. And many were the moist eyes that gazed and many a silent thanksgiving went up to heaven.

In a few hours the cars stopped at a station, where an old man and his son got off. He had come so far to part with his child, who was going to an Eastern city to live, while the aged father was to turn back to his home. All the dangers that would harrass the son seemed to crowd into the heart of the father as he stood holding the hand of his boy—just now to part with him. He choked, and the tears filled his eyes, and all he could say was: "Cling close to Rock, my son!" He wrung the hand of his child, and the passengers saw him standing alone, doubtless praying that his inexperienced son might "cling to the Rock Christ Jesus."—Sunday School Visitor.

WELCOME TO THE SINNER.

Our Lord said: "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." No matter what his name or character may be; his past life may have been altogether bad—a thief, perhaps he may be a murderer—nevertheless I will not cast him out. He may have wasted his substance, all his substance of health and talent and influence, "in the far country," living riotously; and may have nothing left to bring me but dust and ashes, a sickly body, an enfeebled mind, a guilty and remorseful soul; yet I will not cast him out. His repentance may be of an imperfect sort, his prayers mere wingless things, his faith no better than a cry, "Help my unbelief!" his graces may be faint as the beginnings of dawn, or of an infant's life; he may be ignorant of creeds and symbols, may never have learned aught of controversy, or of the difference between sub and supra-lapsarianism; may never have heard the name of Augustine or John Calvin; may never have read the Bible nor a word of it; but if he knocks at my door for shelter while the storm is beating, I will not cast him out. He may have been exiled from society by reason of some nameless crime, or driven out from the synagogue with a mark on his forehead, put there by priestly hands, but I will not cast him out. He may come to me like Nicodemus, under cover of the night, afraid, ashamed to be known as a seeker after truth; he may come like the Magdalene, blushing, and shrinking before the world's pointed finger, motives criticized, penitence sneered at, seeking only to break upon my feet an alabaster box of love; he may come like the dying thief, with nothing to offer but a "God have mercy!" trembling on his pale lips; but however he comes—only so that he come—I will in nowise cast him out!—Rev. Dr. D. J. Burrell, in the Christian Intelligencer.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Donald G. Mitchell who is known to the reading public as "Ik Marvel" author of the "Reveries of a Bachelor" and "Dream Life," spends his declining years quietly at Edgewood, near New Haven, Connecticut. He has no fads or fancies, but has a horror of being "written up" in the newspapers.

Evangelist Ira D. Sankey, the singer and composer, has written a new sacred song for the April Ladies' Home Journal. He has given it the title of "The Beautiful Hills," and considers it superior to his famous "Ninety and Nine." Mr. Sankey wrote it with the especial view of its appropriateness for outdoor choral singing—for camp-meetings and other religious and semi-religious gatherings.

Shakespeare made some great blunders in his time, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. Though universally believed to know all things, he has in quite a number of instances made mistakes in details. He introduced cannon into a period 150 years before cannon were invented. He speaks of printing done in the time of Henry II, of clocks in the time of Julius Cæsar. Hector quotes Aristotle and Coriolanus refers to Alexander. A billiard table is introduced into Cleopatra's palace. Bohemia has a sea coast and Delphos is made ont to be an island.

A remarkable book on oriental ceramic art has been prepared at the cost of the late William T. Walters and his son, to illustrate the treasures contained in the Walters' collection in this city. No expense has been spared to secure through the processes of lithography a faithful reproduction of the beauty of the masterpieces of oriental ceramics. But 500 copies of the book of lithographs, with letter-press, will be printed, but they will have cost nearly $500,000 and many years have been required for their production. The book itself, in fact, is a work of art, as rare in its superb excellence as are the objects it describes. A parallel to it is hardly to be found in modern times. Mr. Vanderbilt, it will be recalled, had published some years ago a sumptuous volume describing the obelisk brought at his expense from Egypt to New York, but the book is not to be compared with this work in cost, to say nothing of dignity of subject and intrinsic value.—Baltimore Sun.

THE ASSEMBLY'S FORM OF BEQUEST.

I do hereby give and bequeath to the Trustees of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States (popularly known as the Southern Presbyterian Church) the sum of .....Dollars for the benefit of [here name cause to which the legacy is given.]

CHANGES OF ADDRESS.

Correspondents will please note the following changes of address:

Rev. W. H. Ferguson, from California, Mo., to St. Charles, Mo.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Kenansville :—The people of Kenansville have lately forwarded $35 to the famine stricken districts of India. The papers seem to have stopped writing about it, but the famine is not stopped.

Mooresville :—At recent communion services there were eight additions to the church. Rev. Dr. Wharey, pastor.

Charlotte :—The services begun by Rev. Dr. Guerrant have been continued by the pastors of the city. There is much and deep interest manifested. There have been sixty additions to the First and Second churches.

May 23rd has been decided upon as the date for the unveiling of the window to be placed in the First church in memory of the late Dr. Preston. The central figure of this window will be that of "John, the Beloved, the Aged," the subject of a sermon of Dr. Preston which was considered one of his finest efforts. Addresses will be made by Rev. J. W. Stagg, a personal friend and Mr. Belt, of Baltimore, in behalf of the travelling men. Mr. W. W. Watt will preside. Messrs. E. V. Finlayson and J. A. Solomons will unveil the window and Messrs. Byers and Foremen will act as ushers.

Westminster Church, Greensboro :—On last Sunday morning interesting services were conducted by the Sunday school. The lessons of the quarter were briefly reviewed in an instructive address. Reports made by the officers show a hopeful outlook. At 11 o'clock the quarterly communion was observed. During the past three months, eighteen have been added to the roll of the church which now numbers one hundred and ninety-eight members.

Danbury :—Rev. Cornelius Miller closes his labors as evangelist in Stokes county by organizing, March 21st, Snow Hill church with nine members. Mr. John F. Foddrill was made elder. This is the fourth church organized in Stokes county. The group is Dan River, one hundred and five members; Danbury, twenty-six; Asbury, forty five and Snow Hill nine. Dan River and Asbury each has a church building now finished. Danbury and Snow Hill two finished so as to be used.

Winston :—We take pleasure in copying the following from the Union Republican; Last Sunday (March 21st.) marked the fourth anniversary of Rev. R. E. Caldwell, as pastor of the First Presbyterian church, this city. The Republican voices the sentiment of the community in the desire that health and life may be spared him for many succeeding years in this especial field of labor and for which he is so eminently qualified as a spiritual leader and pastor. Under his guidance and most acceptable social qualities this congregation has we can safely say, doubled, if not trebled its membership and usefulness in this community.

Sharon Church :—Communion services were held in this church beginning Friday night 12th inst., and continuing till Sabbath night 14th inst. Considering the bad weather and roads the attendance was good. The session received three new members, two of them on profession of faith. One infant was baptized. This church has recently sustained a severe loss in the death of Elder J. S. Caldwell, a man highly esteemed for his many estimable qualities. His was not an ostentatious piety, but his light ever shone steadily and brightly.

Mulberry Church :—The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed in this church on Sabbath 21st inst., an unusually large congregation being present. Services had been commenced the preceding Wednesday night, by the pastor, Rev. Jos. Crockard, and continued until Sabbath night. On Friday and Saturday morning Rev. J. S. Shaw, of Paw Creek came to his assistance and preached two able and effective sermons. Five new members were received, three on profession of faith and two from other churches. One infant was baptized. On Saturday the congregation elected two additional elders and two additional deacons to fill vacancies caused by deaths and removals. Their ordination and installation, it is expected will take place shortly.

Greenville, Albemarle Presbytery :—We have just had Rev. Wm. Black with us in a thirteen days' meeting at this place. We also had the assistance of Revs. Dr. Payne, J. B. Morton, and N. M. Watson of the Methodist church. All denominations united heartily in these services and we had a glorious meeting. There were a number of professions and six have already united with our church and more are to follow. A collection amounting to $35 was taken for the cause of Synodical Missions. Our little church there is greatly strengthened. To God be all the praise.

The Greenville Reflector says: The coming of Mr. Black to Greenville has been a blessing indeed to the town. His earnestness, zeal and consecration impressed every one who heard him. His sermons were of such a character as to awaken his hearers to a higher sense of their duties and to lead them to live nearer to the Saviour and endeavor to do more in His service. He preached the Gospel plainly and forcibly and failed not to declare the whole counsel of God. The Christians of the town have been drawn together in closer bonds of love one for the other and the good results of the meeting will be long felt in our midst. Mr. Black leaves Greenville with the prayers of God's people resting upon him, and their hope that he may some day be permitted to return here.

From The Mountains :—Just beyond the Blue Ridge, from where most of you live, in the edge of Mitchell county, is the community known as Spruce Pine. Here is situated the principal mission chool under the care of Concord Presbytery. Another successful term has just closed. It was my pleasure to attend and enjoy the concert given last Friday night. It was a great success. The playdrill by the girls showed careful training. The dialogues were well chosen and well acted. A beautiful and very suggestive pantomime closed the program.

We are all pleased with the progress of the school. It makes a Presbyterian's heart rejoice to hear those who know whereof they speak tell of the wonderful influence for good our school has had in this community. Would that we could have other schools of the same order in other parts of this mountain country. In the name of the children, patrons and teachers of our school I thank all who have so kindly assisted us in the past. May the Lord prosper you and bless you richly and abundantly.

Yonrs in the work,

L. A. McLAURIN.

Elk Park, N. C., March 22d, 1897.

Rocky River :—Rocky River congregation has been busy for several days getting their comfortable manse in order for their new pastor's family, who are expected on the 30th. The walls have been white washed, all the facings, ceilings and floors nicely washed and the garden partly planted. Rev. Cornelius Miller will find a hearty welcome here, and many humble, earnest men and women to respond to a loving hearty effort on his part to do the Master's work in our midst. We have had helpful prayer meetings and Sabbath school every Sabbath since we have been without a pastor, though nearly every Sabbath has been inclement.

* * *

Dallas Presbyterian Church :—Sunday, March 21st was communion day—large congregations filled the house of worship Saturday and Sunday—services were conducted by the pastor (Rev. R. Z. Johnston) who has been in charge since January, 1874, twenty-three years, one Sunday per month. The old members are gone and the population changed. The church tower was shattered in a storm last summer. A factory population attend services and much anxiety was felt lest the expenses of the little flock could not be paid. But reports to Presbytery were made and all the expenses paid, pastor's salary paid in full, assessment of Presbytery and contributions made to Home and Foreign Missions, Education and to the Synod's Orphans' Home and the shattered tower repaired. Death and infirmities have reduced the strength of the church and left only one officer, a young elder, W. T. Henderson, who has conducted Sunday-school for ten years, and for two years discharged all the official work of the church. The members on last Sunday elected two elders, P. P. Costner and J. L. Clemer, and one deacon, A. W. Ratchford and declined to give up their old pastor, and promised to bring the new factory population under the influence of their church services and encourage their pastor in his attentions to them and efforts to win them to the service of the Lord. The large congregations that attend, too fully occupy the thought of the pastor to let him be discouraged because of the departure of the dear people who built the church and lovingly attended and supported his services in days gone by.

TEXAS.

Georgetown :—On Sabbath, March 21st, the following officers were ordained and installed: Elders, Messrs. W. F. Merrin and Cooper Samsom; Deacons, Messrs. P. D. Koontz and W. C. Craig. Mr. R. G. Latting, formerly an elder in New Orleans and Memphis was also installed elder. The church now has a very efficient board of six elders and five deacons. In connection with the ordination services, a sermon was preached on the Eldership in the morning and on the Diaconate at night. On the same day a member was received on profession. The church is in good condition to begin the new ecclesiastical year.

KENTUCKY.

Louisville Theological Seminary :—The closing exercises for the present session will be held during the last week of April. Rev. S. M. Neel, D. D., of Kansas City, Mo., will preach the sermon on Sabbath, April the 25th, and Rev. Wm. Irvine. D. D., of Bowling Green, Ky., will deliver the Mission address on Wednesday night, April the 28th. The graduating exercises will be held on the evening of the 28th, when Dr. C. R. Hemphill will deliver the address to the graduating class. All of these exercises will be held in the Second church this year.—Christian Observer.

PERSONALS.

Rev. Dr. J. N. Craig, of Atlanta, was expected to be in Clarkton on Wednesday, the 31st, to deliver an address upon the subject of Home Missions.

Rev. Wm. Black is spending a few days with Rev. John Wakefield of Brunswick county.

Rev. R. W. Alexander, of Waynesville, who has been on a visit to his parents at Pineville, N. C., has returned to his labors.

Rev. E. L. Siler, of Wadesboro has received a call to the pastorate of Lexington and Durant churches of Mississippi and has accepted subject to Presbytery. If released, Mr. Siler expects so enter upon his new labor the last of April.

Delegates and visitors to the Presbytery and to the Woman's Missionary Society to meet in Clarkton will please notify Rev. A. McFadyen by postal so that homes may be assigned them.

The Greensboro Presbyterian says of the ministrations of Rev. A. A. Little in their late protracted services: "Bro. Little has won the hearts of all our people and carries back with him to his home and his work the gratitude and prayers of our entire congregation. May God bless him abundantly in his person, his family, his labors, and may his able and eloquent sermons long abide in our hearts to make us humbler, holier, more useful, in the kingdom and service of our blessed Lord."

The ministers and church sessions of Albemarle Presbytery are respectfully reminded that collections are in order in April for the cause of Education for the Ministry, and for Church and Christian Education.

Not more than seven or eight churches have sent in anything for the former cause from the November collection.

Please, brethren, see to it that the April collections do not fail.

COLUMBIA SEMINARY NOTES.

This week the students and faculty had the pleasure of a visit from Dr. Craig, of Atlanta, our secretary of Home Missions. Thursday evening he made an address in the chapel in regard to the present status of the Assembly's work, showing the great need in our Southwestern States, where most of their work is now being done.

He also emphasized the point, which is now so neglected by pastors, namely, the taking up of all of the regular appointed collections of the Church. About one-half of the churches do the work of the Church at large, and this in a great measure is due to the neglect of the pastors to inform their people about the work. Every business enterprise reports regularly to its stockholders. But how seldom do the pastors report back to their flock, and tell them how their money is being invested. Can we wonder that the people grow indifferent in regard to the work. Pastors are instructors, and they must instruct their congregations on these points.

Dr. Craig's visit was very much enjoyed, and all feel that they know more about the working and aim of this branch of the Assembly's work.

The new catalogue of the seminary is just out. It has two full page illustrations. One of the three seminary buildings, and the other of the new dining hall that is to be erected. This latter will be a very handsome building as the cut shows. The ladies are working hard, and sbould be supported and aided by all the alumni and friends of the institution, for this building is a much needed improvement to the seminary. If you have not already been asked by the building committee to aid, let this be an invitation to send something to Mrs. D. J. Brimm, treasurer.

The third number of the "Religious Outlook" has made its appearance. This paper is making quite a good record for itself, and its circulation is steadily increasing.

Dr. Laws was absent for several days last week. He was invited to give a course of lectures at the University of Georgia at Athens. He reports quite a pleasant trip.

Dr. H. L. Smith, of Davidson, will be in the city next week. Monday night he will deliver a lecture at the Presbyterian College for Women on the "Inhabitants of Mars." The Davidson men at the seminary anticipate a great deal of pleasure in hearing the Doctor again on such a "prodigious" subject.

Last Sunday Dr. Plunket of Augusta preached two splendid sermons at the First church. The night service was a union meeting of all the churches of the city, under the auspices of the City Bible Society. It was a pity that all infidels could not have heard the masterly way in which the inspiration of the Bible was treated.

TO THE CHURCHES OF FAYETTEVILLE PRESBYTERY.

According to our scheme one collection is to be made in the month of April for the cause of Church and Christian Education. On account of the acknowledged importance of the cause, the great good that has flowed from it in the recent past and its well known needs right now, we feel it is hardly necessary to even call attention to the matter. It is gratifying to find that from year to year the column from collections made for this object by our Church has been filling up and the amount contributed increasing. We trust the reports from the churches this year will not be an exception. We want to feel as deeply as we can a sense of ownership and interest in Davidson College and our seminary for girls at Red Springs as well as the frontier missionary school planted by our evangelists in the mountains and elsewhere in the regions beyond.

COLLECTION FOR CHURCH AND CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

DEAR BROTHER:—Please suffer Synod's Agent and Chairman to call your attention to the collection for this cause, to be taken up during the month of April.

Please to note the following points:

1. The Synod recognizes that the education of her sons and daughters is a part of her appropriate work and must be fostered and sustained as such. If a mere patriotism prompts a state to a liberal support of a merely secular education, surely the Church has stronger reasons for a large liberality in sustaining her education.

2. The higher education calls every year for larger and more liberal provisions in order that the Church schools, male and female, may keep up with recognized progress in all directions, and also maintain fair and honorable competition with the State

3. The Presbyteries are engaging more and more in high schools under their direct control and supervision; and in the prosecution of their mission work it is their fixed policy to send the Christian teacher and the school into every field. In this the Church is returning to the methods of our fathers.

4. The constant and steady benefactions of the whole Church would endow our schools with a steady revenue better than endowment funds, however desirable they may be, for along with these constant benefactions would come the sympathy and prayers which are needed in all Church work.

5. The recognized and invaluable services rendered by our college at Davidson for sixty years need only to be cited to make their own argument. The success of recent mission school work, and the recent movement in female education make their own plea. The very success of all these make larger help necessary, and give pledge that the help given will be wisely expended.

6. The moneys contributed to this cause are disbursed by the Synod's committee, one-half at Davidson College and one-half to schools of lower grade fostered by the Synod, or by Presbyteries.

7. The number of Churches contributing to this cause has steadily increased each year. Dear brother, will you not present this cause to your people with such full explanation and advocacy as will interest them yet more largely in this part of the Church's work?

8. Please have the collections sent to me either directly or through the treasurer of your Presbytery as may seem proper under your rules.

Yours fraternally,

J. B. SHEARER,
Synod's Agent and Chairman.

We Want You

to subscribe for the Presbyterian Quarterly. It is the one magazine all Presbyterians should read. Its articles are written by eminent Presbyterians—both clergymen and laymen—to Presbyterians. It is edited under the auspices of an association of ministers of the Presbyterian Church.

Every article in it is vitally interesting—it is orthodox—is progressive—stimulates study and investigation.

The Presbyterian Quarterly has always been $3.00 a year and has always been worth it. It is now $1.00 a year but is still worth $3.00. We have lowered its price because we want to put it in every Presbyterian's hands, but there has been no change in either the number of pages or the appearance of the magazine. A PLAN FOR AN INVALID ENDOWMENT FUND

Our Assembly in 1895 sanctioned the idea of raising an Endowment Fund for the better care of our aged and infirm ministers and for the families of ministers deceased. A large sum for permanent investment could be raised only by employment of special agents. The Executive Committee of Home Missions has sent to each minister a circular letter and a subscription paper. If any one who reads this feels inclined to contribute or to subscribe to this fund a communication to Dr. Craig, the secretary, will receive attention. If any one feels inclined to leave a legacy, he or she is requested to use this form of bequest: "I do hereby give and bequeath to the Board of Trustees of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States (popularly known as the Southern Presbyterian Church) the sum of———dollars, for the Invalid and Endowment Fund, and the Assembly is authorized to use both interest and principal of this legacy so as to expend the same within twelve or more years as in its judgment it may deem best."

For the N. C. Presbyterian.

A PLAIN STATEMENT.

The Executive Committee of Education for the Ministry have enrolled for the current year 217 beneficiaries, to whom we have appropriated $15,330 at the request of the Presbyteries. On this amount we have been able to pay $6,377,55, leaving a balance due our candidates of $6,952.45.

The bulk of this is due at our four leading institutions—Union Seminary, Columbia, Louisville and Clarksville. Our seminaries close early in May, and we ought to be able to remit to their candidates not later than April 28th. Not only have our November collections been lessened by the hard times, but several of our Synods have taken up collections for their Synodical work in November. Two important collections in the same month must necessarily cripple both.

In the month of April, however, we have a fair field, and we hope the churches throughout our bounds will send us prompt and liberal contributions. Brethren, our candidates are relying on you for this help. Many of them are in straits, and it will be a sad disappointment if they do not receive the promised aid. We desire especially to pay up those in the seminaries by the first of May. Those in the colleges and preparatory schools should receive what is due them by the middle of May.

Brethren of the ministry, what will be the effect of a failure to assist our candidates? Will it not discourage them and others from entering upon the work? And where will be the consistency in praying for more laborers if we are unwilling to assist those we already have to the small pittance of $75 per year.

We all know the stringency of the times, and other important causes are pressing, but now is the set time to help our candidates. May we not rely upon our ministers to explain to their Churches, Ladies' Societies and Sabbath-schools as early as possible in April the importance of this collection?

PRECIOUS BLOOD OF CHRIST.

First, without it is no atonement. The central truth of Old Testament revelation is found in the statement, "It is the blood that maketh an atonement for the soul." Lev. 17:2. The blood sheltered God's people, Ex. 12:13; the blood of the burnt offering, Lev. 1:5; the blood of the peace offering; Lev. 3:2; the blood of the sin offering, Lev. 4:6; the blood of the trespass offering, Lev. 7:2. spoke of acceptable sacrifice; and the blood sprinkled on the mercy seat told of the atonement, Lev. 16:15.

Second, without it is no remission. The central truth of New Testament revelation is contained in the words, "Without shedding of blood is no remission," Heb. 9:22. Our Lord Jesus Christ meant what He said, and said what He meant, as He exclaimed at the last supper, "This is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins." Matt. 26:28.

Third, without it is no peace with God. The condemned sinner is not in a condition to make, but only to accept, the peace which God offers, "Having made peace through the blood of His cross." Col. 1:20: for "the blood of Jesus Christ His Son cleanseth us from all sin," 1 Jno. 1:7

Fourth, without it is no justification. "Being now justified by His blood, we shall be saved from wrath through Him," Rom. 5:9: "Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation (translated mercy seat in Heb. 9:5) through faith in His blood," Rom. 3:25.

Fifth, without it is no sanctification. "Wherefore Jesus also, that He might sanctify the people with His own blood, suffered without the gate." Heb. 13:12. Hence the ascription of praise "unto Him that loved us, and washed (or loosed) us from our sins in His own blood," Rev. 1:5.

Sixth, without it there is no nearness to God. "Now, in Christ Jesus, ye who sometimes were far off, are made nigh by the blood of Christ," Eph. 2:13; and "having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus," Heb. 10:19.

Seventh, without it is no redemption. "In whom we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of His grace," Eph. 1:7. The saints who are in heaven know how they got there, and we find them saying unto the Lamb, "Thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood," Rev. 5:9.

Much more than this is set forth about the precious blood of Christ in the inspired and inerrant Word of God; and every text everywhere, shows us that the Gospel does not bring us a work to do, but a word to believe about a work already done.—Rev. J. H. Brookes, D D.

A POOR APPETITE.

Do not blame the cook when you need a physician. You sit down at the table and look over the menu and criticise the French, and wonder whether the consomme or the julienne will be the colder, and think that the red snapper is out of season and the turkey is likely to be underdone—and the fact is that what you need is not a dinner but an appetite for one. That is what an honest friend would have said to you last Sunday when everything went wrong at church. The tenor was way off the key, and the minister's tie was on askew and the ventilation was bad, and you could not remember what the text was but you knew that it was in wretched taste for such a congregation, and its treatment was worse. The fact is that you hadn't any appetite for religion or anything that pertained to it, and you are even yet spiritually "full of malaria." That is not to be wondered at considering where you make your home six days in the week, among money-lovers or pleasure-seekers. For you in your present spiritual condition St. Paul himself could not prepare the Gospel feast so that it would attract you. The social atmosphere you have been breathing is miasmatic, and the literature you have been drinking in is contaminated with moral sewage. Give your soul a new regimen and your heart a new environment, and exercise yourself vigorously unto godliness, and you can sit down to the homeliest dish ever prepared by a Salvation Army cook and find it "grand." What you need is not a new parson but a new heart. It is not the growing boy but the decadent dyspeptic who complains most of the chef in the kitchen. And you know it.—Interior.

HOPE ENABLES US TO BEAR TRIAL.

1. It prolongs life. How wonderfully do those who keep up hope struggle against disease. And how many triumphs of extended life have been won through such a struggle. Men need to keep some goal in sight always beyond them. The man who attains his ambition has no object for which to struggle, and is liable to early death. Be not dissatified. Aim high. Let a hope of something better ever bear you on.

2. Hope gives us the anchor of endurance. In the midst of hardest struggle, we hold on. It was the hope of planting the Gospel in India that led Judson to bear the awful sufferings of prison life those many months, and afterward to labor on for years, even though he did not see a single convert. Hope has stayed the hands and strengthened the hearts of all our missionaries who have entered upon new fields. Let us keep up hope. There is a sun-dial on the pier at Brighton, Eng., with this inscription: "'Tis always morning somewhere in the world."

3. Hope lights up death. With a good hope in the heart, how bravely have Christians everywhere met the king of terrors. Let us cherish the grace of hope. Let us live hopeful lives. Let us labor on in hope. We who have accepted Christ have a hope which, like an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast, enters within the vail, holding us steady in every time of stress.—The Treasury.

GOD'S CARE.

There is nothing so high as to be above God's care, and nothing so lowly as to be beneath it. He who keeps alive the unquenchable light of the star visible to a hemisphere, kindles the small taper of the glowworm that gleams in the twilight on the mossy bank. He who piles up and loosens the Alpine avalanche, shapes the crystals of each falling snowflake. He who guides and bridles the storm wave that breaks in thunder upon the reef, preserves each invisible coral animal that builds its lime cell beneath the booming surf. He who sees from His glorious high throne the seraph veiling his face with his wings, takes note of the sparrow falling to the ground.—Selected.

BOOKS.

The Divine Library; Suggestions How to Read The Bible, by J. Patterson Smyth, B. D, LL. D., is a recent book sent us by the publishers, James Pott & Co., New York. The binding did not please. But the contents throughout the 128 well written pages are excellent. The spirit is devout, the tone is conservative and sound, the piety is sincere and the subject important. The style is clear and the instruction is practical. The book is welcome and needed in these times of intellectual pride, literary criticism and unwholesome historical doubt.

April 11, 1897.—Acts x: 30-44.

Commit to memory verses 36-38.

Subject.—Conversion of Cornelius.

Golden Text. "Whosoever believeth in Him shall receive remission of sins." Acts x: 43.

CATECHISM.

Question 89. What is sanctification?

Answer. Sanctification is the work of God's free grace, whereby we are renewed in the whole after the image of God, and are enabled more and more to die unto sin and live unto righteousness.

Time. A. D., 40.

Place. Cesarea.

INTRODUCTORY.

After the raising of Dorcas, as recorded in our last lesson, Peter preached "many days" in Joppa. Peter lodged in the house of one Simon a tanner. There a vision was given him, as of a great sheet, let down from heaven to show him by the different animals that God was no respecter of persons, but that in every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness was accepted with Him. This was to prepare Peter for the messengers coming from the Gentile centurion Cornelius. This was in Cesarea and, about two days before Peter's vision, also saw a vision which he relates in this lesson. This was in order to the reception of the Gentiles into the Christian church on equal terms with the Jews. This seems an easy matter to us. But it was a burning question in that day and was to be settled only by this direct teaching from God and by His manifest direction and approval. We have seen in the lessons of the First Quarter how the way was prepared step by step for this and all leading on to the greater work of Paul the apostle to the Gentiles. Paul was now about 38 years old and in his native city Tarsus. The visions prepared Peter to go to Cornelius and called Cornelius as an earnest seeker, to receive more light.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 30. Cornelius, a Roman centurion, or captain of a company, stationed at Cesarea the Roman Capital and sea-port of Judea. Four days ago, long enough for the messengers to go to Joppa and return with Peter. At the ninth hour, one of the regular Jewish hours of prayer, three o'clock in the afternoon, the hour of offering the evening sacrifice. I prayed, for more and clearer light, for forgiveness of sins and assurance of salvation, for rest and peace in a holier life, for removal of doubts, victory over difficulties, that he might walk closer with God and have assurance of hope for the future. A man, an angel (vs. 3) stood before me, in an open vision, not a dream.

Vs. 31. Alms, gifts of charity and benevolence.

Vs. 32. Joppa, the modern Jaffa, thirty-five miles south of Cesarea. Simon, the old name of the apostle, whose surname is Peter. It was a test of the faith of Cornelius to send for Peter, whose coming would establish that faith and a proof that the angel was from God.

Vs. 33. I sent to thee, by two of his household officers and a devout soldier (vs. 7.) We all, the household and friends gathered to hear Peter, present before God, tell all God had commanded him.

Vs. 34. I perceive, by the vision he had in Joppa, that God is no respecter of persons, shows no favor on account of rank, race, color, education, property or power as among men. All must be saved on the same terms.

Vs. 35. In every nation. The stress is on this part of the sentence to show that nationality was no barrier to the preaching and reception of the salvation of God. Feareth Him and worketh righteousness. Shows a keeping of the commandments and that the true distinction before God is moral. It does not mean that all religions are equally good, or that missions are useless. On the contrary, all this care to bring Peter to Cornelius is a strong argument for missions.

Vs. 36. The word of the gospel which Cornelius needed to be saved, was sent to the children of Israel, first preaching peace, with God, of conscience, and among men, by Jesus Christ, the divine Saviour. He is Lord of all, not merely Jew or Gentile, and with a claim of Lord of all who are saved.

Vs. 37. Ye know, as it had been preached throughout the country of which Cornelius and his friends had heard and knew.

Vs. 38. God anointed Jesus, by His appointment and enduement with the Holy Ghost and power for His mission and ministry, against Satan, sin and sickness, and to provide redemption full and free.

Vs. 39. We are witnesses, to testify of His doing good, His sufferings and death.

Vs. 40. And of His resurrection and the proof in that God showed Him openly.

Vs. 41. Unto witnesses chosen as competent to testify and under conditions to give value to their testimony. These "were willing to seal their witness with their lives."—Pelonbet.

Vs. 42. Judge of quick (living) and dead. "God....now commandeth all men to repent because He hath appointed a day in which He will Judge the world in righteousness by that man whom He hath appointed, whereof He hath given assurance unto all men in that He hath raised Him from the dead." Acts xvii. 31.

Vs. 43. To him give all the prophets witness. "The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy." Remissions of sins, their removal, release from them by sending away as on the sacrifice for sin.

Vs. 44 The Holy Ghost fell as at the day of Pentecost ten years before and with like effect So Peter reported the case to the disciples at Jerusalem. Chapter xi. 15. This was proof that the Gentiles were admitted to Pentecostal power.

PRACTICAL POINTS.

1. It is important to notice the gradual progress of the plan of God.

2. It is instructive to study the correlative, intertwinings and working of God's Providence.

3. It is a blessing to know that God is no respecter of persons by reason of human conditions. His distinctions are moral. The touchstone and cleavage of men is the Cross of Christ.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, April 11th, 1897.

BY REV. B. E. WALLACE.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF MAN. 1 Jno. 3: 1-24.

Text for the week:

"He that loveth not his brother abideth in death. 1 Jno. 3: 14.

Daily Readings:

Monday, Christ's Brothers. Matt. 12: 46-50.

Tuesday, Weak Brothers. 1 Cor. 8. 1-13.

Wednesday, Poor Brothers. Lev. 25: 35-43.

Thursday, Helpful Brothers. 2 Sam. 10: 6-12.

Friday, All are Brothers. Acts 17: 22-31.

Saturday, Brothers United. Psa. 133: 1-3.

Sunday, Topic. 1 Jno 3: 1 24.

Points for Leaders:

1. Make this a missionary lesson.

2. Have different ones to read Sunday-school verses proving the brotherhood of man.

3. Show how Christ is our brother.

4. Show how we are our brother's keeper.

5. Put forth the strong condemnation that the Bible puts upon those who do not love their brothers.

Notes;

"This is my commandment, that ye love one another as I have loved you." This is the perfect standard and one by which every true disciple of Christ must measure his heart. The rich, the poor, the friend, the enemy, the black, the white, all our brothers and demand our Christian love. By our Christian love we mean Christ love, the kind that ministers, seeks another's interest above his own, the kind that is humble and always ready to lend a helping hand.

"The man who would in any way sacrifice his fellow-man for his own advantage is a brother of the tribe of Cain."

The number of this tribe is very large to-day and the sad part of it is, that such a large per cent is professing Christians. "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar." That is, if I am a member of the church (professing love to God) and use my brother as a tool, either in business or society to advance my own interest, I am living a lie. My fellow-men may not detect it, but my conscience and my God know it.

Ah where is the Spirit of the Master seeking not his own, but the good of his fellowmen. "Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in Thy name. * * * And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you." Oh brother remember that he that would be great in the Master's service must be as one that SERVES.

OPEN DOOR NOTES.

District officers of East Carolina District are: President, B. E. Wallace; Vice-Presidents, Mrs. Jackson Johnson, Miss Margaret Cromartie, Miss Ida Thomson. P. Heinsberger and R. W Miles were chosen as members of the Executive Committee.

The State Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E., will meet in Charlotte, April 22-25. Rev. G. W. White will remain in the city until after the convention.

The Faison Christian Endeavor Convention on last Friday was a great event. This was the second annual gathering of the endeavorers of this section and the attendance and interest was exceedingly good. The delegates arrived on Thursday night and were met by the Faison society with a cordiality peculiar to Faison people. We felt at home and with congenial souls the moment they laid hands on us. Our day's work began with the sunrise prayer-meeting led by Rev B.E. Wallace. Fifty-one were present. "Early will I seek Thee" was our spirit, and thus were we filled with strength for the day. It was an impressive service and one long to be remembered. At nine o'clock we began the program proper. Convention officers were Rev. B. E. Wallace, chairman, and Miss Winifred Faison, secretary. The subjects were all well handled. Each speaker bringing out with great clearness and earnestness the points of their respective work. Open discussion followed each paper which was spirited, instructive and very interesting. Dr. Faison gave the Endeavorers a lesson on Temperance topics that they will not soon forget. He is a speaker of great force and filled with Christian enthusiasm. It would take a volume to tell all about our convention. Everybody was happy, energetic, anxious to do some one good—lovely and of good report. They came with Bibles in their hands, words on their lips and truths in their hearts. We were loth to leave. The Faison people won all hearts and all look forward with great pleasure to the time when we come again.

All the delegates went home determined to do more work for Christ and the Church.

Yours in the work,
B. E. WALLACE,
District President.

BROWN. In Chadbourn, N. C., on March 10th, 1897, Miss Flora Brown, in the 37th year of her age. Miss Brown was a member of the Whiteville Presbyterian church. She had been a great sufferer for many months, her body often racked by pain, her life shadowed by many sorrows; yet she was sustained by faith in the Redeemer. Her spirit now unfettered has soared to the realms of endless day, where no shadows ever fall. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord.

McPHAIL. Robert P. McPhail fell asleep in the bright assurance of a home in heaven at Raeford, N. C., February 2d, 1897, in the 21st year of his age. He had been a professing Christian less than a year, yet his godly walk and growth in grace were noted by all. There was a decided change in his deportment from the day he was admitted to membership in the church. He followed his Lord loyally and died a triumphant death. A mother and seven brothers are left in sadness and sorrow. There is a priceless comfort in the fact that the loved one passed away trusting in God.

You think of Scott's Emulsion as only for those who have consumption or who have inherited a tendency to it. Almost its greatest use is for those whose condition is so impaired as not to be able to get the good they should out of their ordinary food. In nearly every case with these, Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil brings back appetite, stimulates digestion, restores color and plumpness, and controls the diseases of thinness. Book about it, free.

Dear Madame:—
Yours to hand. I recommend the Moore treatment because I have tried it, and know it to be just what he says it is. I was cured by it, and have remained so eight years; have known of many others being cured of the very worst cases. By all means get it.
Yours truly, W. E. PENN.

FOR THE FAMILY.

TRIBUTE TO THE MOTHER.

To her care have been intrusted
All the heroes of all lands;
Still the fate of church and nation
Holds she in her slender hands,
Guiding wilful feet and faltering
On through childhood's happy years,
On through youth with its temptations,
With its hopes, its doubts, its fears;
Cultivating all that's noble,
Gently chiding all that's wrong,
Till her children gather 'round her,
Men and women, pure and strong,
By the quiet ministrations,
In the little realm of home,
For the structure of the ages,
She hath laid the corner-stone.

"CATHARINE COLE'S BOOK."

With trembling hands no longer able to hold pen or pencil; with limbs that but illy respond to her will, Mrs. Martha B. Field—known to newspaper readers throughout the southland as "Catharine Cole"—remains almost a prisoner in her home at Carrolton. Her best work as a writer, on this and other papers, was devoted to the interests of poor and working women. She was one of them, and knew their needs, and sorrows, and hopes. While all classes recognized her great talent—and were charmed by her stories of travel, and tender touches of character, and bright bits of description, and sought her society—it was to the humble toilers among her own sex that she brought sunshine and roses, and gave comfort and strength. An invalid now, and needing the strength and aid she has so freely given to others, arrangements have been made for the publication of "Catharine's Cole's Book," to be sold to subscribers for the benefit of the stricken writer. The book will be a handsome volume of about 300 pages, illustrated with portrait and picture of the home of "Catharine Cole," and containing some twenty-eight selections from her writings, with short introductions by Joseph Jefferson and Mrs. M. E. M. Davis. Every reader who in the days gone by has been delighted with the beautiful word paintings of this gifted woman should become subscribers to this publication; and every one of her numerous friends should strengthen and show their friendship by owning "Catharine Cole's Book." —Picayune.

MUSIC AS MEDICINE.

According to a correspondent of the Boston Transcript, January 30th, music is now regularly used in the treatment of certain diseases in Munich. He says; "Owing to the fact that the Empress of Austria was treated some time ago for her neuralgic ailments, of long standing, and cured by certain strains of sound repeated at very frequent intervals, the 'music-cure' boom has grown in such strength that it has at last been deemed advisable to establish a 'music-cure' hospital in Munich, and already this institution is under way." The discoverer of the "cure," Dr. Paul Rivierra, says: "This 'music-cure' hospital idea is not a German delusion, very far from it. Only a very few years since the reality of hypnotism was regarded in the United States as an imposition, a fraud, but to day Bellevue Hospital, New York, is considering with great favor the idea of introducing a chair of hypnotism; our hospital, here in Munich, already has such a chair, and in constant use. The next things in my opinion, which this same Bellevue Hospital will provide for will be a chair of music, though I hardly think New York will have, at least for some time to come, a hospital devoted entirely to the 'music cure.'"

There is no message which brings more gladness to a true woman's heart than the sweet assurance that a little one is coming to bless her life and call her "Mother."

But in all her loving preparations for the expected little guest, a mother is liable to forget that her own health and physical condition is the most important provision which can possibly be made for the baby's happiness.

If the prospective mother is weak, nervous and anxious, this condition is bound to react on the baby's constitution. No daintiness of wardrobe will compensate for the loss of the natural, healthy vigor which a mother should bestow upon her baby.

As early as possible during gestation, the expectant mother should reinforce her bodily powers with the sustaining, health-bringing influence of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It gives natural, healthy vigor and elastic endurance to the organs specially concerned in motherhood. It makes the coming of baby perfectly safe and almost painless. It gives nerve-strength to the mother and vital hardihood to the child.

It is the only medicine devised by an educated physician specially to overcome all weaknesses and diseases of the feminine organs.

Mrs. Roscoe Vanover, of Robinson Creek, Pike Co., Ky., writes: "I wish to express my thanks to you for the good I have received from your 'Favorite Prescription.' I have used it at different times for the last five years, and always with the most gratifying results. But the greatest good received from the 'Favorite Prescription' was about four months ago when my last baby was born. I was afflicted with 'child-bed fever.' Instead of sending after a doctor I used the 'Prescription' and was cured. A lady friend of mine was similarly afflicted and sent after the doctor and took his remedies and died. I am 27 years old, weigh 147 pounds, the mother of five children and am enjoying the best of health."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation, promptly and permanently.

APRIL.

Here come the sunbeams and the soft, gentle showers,
As they play hide-and-seek in their hunt for the flowers.
First it rains, then it shines; then it shines, then it rains,
Till the fields and the meadows, the gardens and lanes
Are sparkling with tears and with smiles all in one,
Like diamonds reflecting the rays of the sun;
While zephyrs come stealing o'er mountain and lake
To kiss the red blossoms and bid them awake.

THE GRANGERS—A HAPPY FAMILY.

BY RACHEL RICHARDSON.

(Chapter 3 continued.)

If she had struck him Bob would have felt a great deal more comfortable, and many times during the dreary days and nights that followed, those words rang in his ears:

"Oh, Buddy! Buddy! me love you!"

She had loved him although he had been so rough and unkind. And when the crisis of her disease came, and the doctor's face looked grave and his mother's white face bent above their lovely little Rosebud that the Gardener Death seemed about to pluck, Rob slept but little, and hung about the door of the sick room, a very ghost of himself. "He prayed that night as he had never prayed before, because he saw, as he had never seen before, his need of God's help to aid him in breaking the bondage of this temper and the selfishness that lay behind it.

The burden of his prayers was: "O God save Rosebud's life and help me to govern my temper!"

And his prayers were answered, the crisis of the disease passed and the dear little child came slowly back to life, and to her beautiful mission of love. So far as I know, Rob has never been tempted even, to say a harsh or impatient word to Rosebud though two years have passed since then and he is now ready to enter college.

CHAPTER 4.

FRIDAY EVENINGS AT SUNNYSIDE.

Now, I am going to try to give you a description of one of the last Friday evenings of the month at Sunnyside. It will be hard though, for so many things were combined to make up the enjoyment of those evenings.

Mrs. Granger was always finding new ways of making them pleasant. She always prepared something nice to eat for the occasion. Sometimes it was cake, sometimes apples and candy, sometimes chocolate caromels, of which they were all fond.

Then they all dressed as carefully for the evening as if company was expected, and "played company" as their mother expressed it. That is, when that wonderful little bell tinkled, they all entered the sitting room, the boys escorting their sisters, or leading Mae and Bar. They went up to their father and mother and other grown people, just as they would do if they were invited guests, and spoke to each in turn.

"Good practice," Mrs. Granger said, that will save you many a moment of awkward agony some day."

Mr. Granger, who entered into the spirit of these Friday evenings as if he had nothing else in the world to do, generally began by reading the month's reports, both their school report and that which their mother kept, called the Behavior report or the "B" for short. Then the prize was awarded. After that began the entertainment of the evening. Some time during the time they gathered around the piano and sang very sweetly while their mother accompanied them.

The last Friday night that I spent there, they had a beautiful evening. I think that Mrs. Granger tried to make it especially attractive because Jerry had won the prize. He had not done so often enough for it not to be a great family event!

Besides, it was Ethel's birthday and birthdays were always important days at Sunnyside.

After reading the reports and opening the "Manners Box," and counting out the money, the little bell rang and Lucy rose and recited very prettily, a little poem called: "Birthday Wishes." Then Mr. Granger entertained us by telling how he was lost in an Italian City. His cab driver couldn't understand his Italian and so drove him miles away from his hotel, before he could make him understand. After this story, which was very funny as Mr. Granger told it, Ethel, looking very rosy, and trembling a good deal, recited Jean Ingelow's lovely poem, "Seven Times One."

Next came a song by the twins and then, the bell from the dining room rang. Every body looked surprized but Mr. and Mrs. Granger.

"Why, mama, what's that?" Came in a semi-chorus from the children.

"Mr. Granger replied, by making a low bow and offering his arm to Ethel. Moving forward then, he called out:

"Fall into line and follow us!" Mrs. Granger escorted me, and the bthers "fell into line" as readily as if they had been drilled for it.

When we reached the dining room door, what a pretty picture there was before us!

Mr. Granger had seated Ethel at his end of the table, where there was a prettily iced birthday cake decked with seven little wax tapers all set on card plates with something written on them. There was a wreath of carnations and geranium leaves around the base of the cake.

Besides this there were stands of fruit and other cakes and a beautiful basket filled with neatly wrapped bundles, and with a card attached, on which was written:

For Ethel with seven times seven good wishes for her birthday.

How every body clapped! and all said: "How lovely! how nice!"

Ethel was quite overcome with bashfulness, and had to be helped to open her bundles. There was a lovely doll, candy, a ring, two or three books, and her first pair of kid gloves.

Mr. Grager offered a short prayer, asking God to bless his little girl and make her a blessing, and then began a merry frolic.

Everybody was happy, but I must think that the happiest of all were the father and mother who had planned so much happiness for their children!

Jerry was not forgotten all this time, his prize was a box of French candy done up in white paper, and tied with bright red ribbon. There was a card on top addressed to Master Jerry Granger, and on it was the following verse which afforded much amusement:

Hurrah for Jerry!
Let's be very merry,
Because the prize he has won,
Ah! sometimes red strings,
Are very fine things—
And now my poem is done!

I think the angels looked down on no happier family that night, than the household of Sunnyside.

"YOU WORK FOR HIM."

Like many other girls who visited the World's Fair at Chicago, a few years ago, she wore a tiny silver cross. A certain morning found her in the Turkish village, studying the bright-faced merchants and laughing at the queer jingles with which they announced their wares. One of the men was more insistent than the others—so much so than she crossed to his booth and made some small purchase. As he was wrapping it, he looked up at her. "You work for Him, don't you?" he said.

For a moment the girl looked puzzled. Then she touched the tiny cross. "Do you mean this?" she asked in surprise. "Do you know what it means?"

"Yes," he answered, gravely. "'I H. N.—In His Name.' It must make you very happy."

Happy? She had known many hours of aimless impatience. Restlessness and discontent oppressed her friends as well. She and they called themselves Christians, yet one whom she might have thought a heathen had perceived her privilege and told her her duty. "You work for Him."

Did she? If she failed in the thing she had promised, how could she expect the reward of joy? The secret of the happy Christian life is service.—Ex.

LETTER-BOX.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I am a little girl nine years old. I read your little letters in the PRESBYTERIAN. I go to our Sunday-school. Mr. Dixon is our pastor. Miss Alice Norwood is our teacher. I have two little sisters—Sadie four years old and Mabel two.

Your little friend,
NEALIE BELK.

Monroe, N. C.

Dear Mr. Editor:—As you were so kind as to publish my other letter I thought I would write again. I am going to school to Mr. N. R. McGeachy. School will be out in two weeks. I will be so sorry. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday at Centre church and I have such a good teacher, Mrs. J. L. McLean. I have two sisters and one brother. My aunt sent me a nice Bible for a Christmas present. I will close hoping your good paper much success.

Your unknown friend,
LULA GRAHAM.

Floral College, N.C.

Dear Mr. Editor:—As I have not written to you I will write a few lines. I go to Sunday-school. Miss Mary Adams is my teacher. She gave her class a party Friday evening which we enjoyed very much. She has thirteen scholars. I will be eleven years old in October. I enjoy reading the little letters from the children. Now I will close hoping you will not throw this into the waste basket.

Your little friend,
NELLIE WITHERSPOON.

Statesville, N. C.

Editor of the N. C. Presbyterian, Dear Sir:—I thought I would write to you to-day for I thought I might take measles. Papa was the first one that took it. Now he is up and Brother Clair and sister are down. If you don't hear from me in three weeks you may know I have got the measles. We have three little lambs living and three dead. I will be glad when it clears off so I can go out to play. I will be glad when our school commences again. I hope I have not written too short a letter. So I will close, hoping to see this in print.

Your little friend,
E. MYRTLE WILKINSON.

Ridgeville, N. C.

THINGS USEFUL.

For the beginning of a felon, wrap cotton around the finger wet in camphor gum dissolved in alcohol.

For Hiccoughs.—A small piece of ice, or a lump of sugar wet with vinegar.

Iron rust Stains.—Draw the spot over a board so that it will be smooth; cover it with salt, and squeeze over it lemon juice, forming a paste of the salt, and lay in the sun. Another method is to tie a little cream of tartar into the spot, forming a ball, and boil it in clear water.

A delicious dessert cake is white layer. To make it beat it to a cream one and a half cups of sugar and three-quarters of a cup of butter. Add three-quarters of a cup of milk, two cups of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one teaspoonful of vanilla and white of four eggs. Bake in layers.

Maple suguar frosting gives a delicious flavor to plain cake. To make it boil one-half cup of white sugar, one cup of maple sugar and a little cold water. Boil till it forms fine hairs when dropped from the spoon. Add one-half cup each of butter and sweet cream; boil ten minutes and stir till cool.

WILL POWER.

There is no chance, no destiny, no fate
Can circumvent, or hinder, or control
The firm resolve of a determined soul,
Gifts count for nothing; will alone is great
All things give way before it soon or late.
What obstacle can stay the mighty force
Of the sea-seeking river in its course,
Or cause the ascending orb of day to wait?
Each well born soul must win what it deserves.
Let the fool prate of luck. The fortunate
Is he whose earnest purpose never swerves,
Whose slightest action or inaction serves
The one great aim,
Why, even Death stands still
And waits an hour sometimes for a will.
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

THE SPIRIT AGAINST THE FLESH.

In the best of men there is a tendency to do certain things they ought not, but the more they are filled with the Holy Spirit, the more it is true of them that they are kept from doing what otherwise they would. When I was a boy I used to go to the Polytechnic in London, where my favorite diversion was a diving bell, which had seats around the rim, and which at a given time was filled with people and lowered into a tank. We used to go down deeper and deeper into the water, but not a drop ever came into that diving bell, though it had no bottom and the water was quite within reach, because the bell was so full of air that, though the water lusted against the air, the air lusted against the water, because air was being pumped in all the while from the top, and the water could not do what it otherwise would. If you are full of the Holy Ghost, the flesh life is underneath you, and though it would surge up, it is kept out.—F. B. Meyer.

MR. DAVID WHARTON.

The subject of this sketch was born in Guilford county, North Carolina, December 18th, 1803. His father, Elisha Wharton, came to North Carolina from Maryland before the Revolutionary war, with his father, Watson Wharton, who entered a large tract of land and settled in what is now Guilford county. Elisha Wharton was a successful farmer and a highly respected citizen. He was an elder in Bethel church, Orange Presbytery, and exerted a great influence for good in the church and community. He was married twice: First to a Miss Schoolfield, and after her death, to a Miss Young. He raised a large family consisting of nine sons and four daughters, and their descendants are very numerous, there being representatives in thirteen States of the Union, besides a large number in North Carolina.

David Wharton, the subject of the sketch, was of the first set of children. He was named for Dr. David Caldwell, the pioneer of Presbyterianism in North Carolina, by whom he was baptized in infancy and whom he still remembers well. He received his education in the high school of the country at that day. Early in life he began business for himself and has been wonderfully successful.

He became a Christian in 1847, and joined Buffalo church, Orange Presbytery, under the ministry of that scholarly and godly man, Rev. Eli W. Caruthers. Shortly after connecting himself with the church, he was made a ruling elder, and then clerk of the session. The church owes much to his wise counsel and liberal support through these many, many years.

He has been the delegate from his church in a great many meetings of Presbytery, and in at least fourteen meetings of Synod. The Presbytery showed its appreciation of his ability by choosing him in 1854, as a commissioner to that important meeting of the General Assembly in Buffalo, N. Y. He has always been faithful and attentive in all these meetings of the church courts, taking a deep interest in the business of the church.

He was married on Oct. 24th, 1826, to Miss Elizabeth Donnell, daughter of Maj. John Donnell, who was a Major in the Revolutionary war. He says himself that much of his success in life is due to his wife who was his faithful companion for almost fifty-four years. This union was blessed with two sons and three daughters. One daughter married Rev. C. K. Caldwell and died shortly afterwards. The other children are all living. Both of his sons and sons-in-law are ruling elders, and his sons have both been commissioners to the General Assembly. On Oct. 24th, 1876, he celebrated his golden wedding, most of his children, grand children and great grand children were present, and participated in the festivities of the occasion. His wife died April 12th, 1880. He has twenty-three grand children living and six dead, and thirty-three great grand children living and seven dead.

On June 22nd, 1881, he was married to Miss Rachel Donnell who has been his devoted companion in his old age. Although Mr. Wharton is in his 94th year, his mind is vigorous and his memory good. During life he has come in contact with the prominent men of the State, and can give a great many interesting facts about persons and things which have never been recorded. He is well and strong, and regular attendant at church services.

Out of free religion has grown free irreligion, and out of infidel liberality, practical immorality.

There is a transcendent power in example. We reform others unconsciously, when we walk uprightly.

PERSONS AND PAPERS.

Criticism never hears the gospel. Mere genius never hears it. Broken-heartedness always hears it.—Dr. Joseph Parker.

The question of the freedom of the will may perplex philosophers, it need not Christians. Redeemed by the blood, we are free to be what Christ wants us to be. That is true liberty.—The Christian Index.

I have sometimes wished that I had nothing else to do but to dwell with God in prayer, praise and preaching! Alas! one has to come down from the Mount of Transfiguration and meet the lunatic child and the quarrelsome scribes at the bottom of the hill.—Spurgeon.

Do you desire to learn the secret of a restful life, to learn how you can be a man or woman of Christly power? You can only become such in so far as Christ has power over you and takes possession of you. * * You are to live a life of obedience to authority; a life in which there is but one dominating power—the omnipotent imperium of the Godhead.—Webb Peploe.

"CALLED CHRISTIANS."

"The disciples were called Christians first in Antioch." Some have thought that the name was given like that of "Methodist" or "Puritan" in ridicule. But that seems hardly probable as there was no condition to call for ridicule. There was no serious opposition. There was no persecution. There was popularity and power in the preachers Barnabas and Paul and their work. It seems rather more probable that these early disciples were called Christians from their likeness to Christ and their practice of principles taught by Christ. Of course they believed that Jesus of Nazareth was the Christ, the Messiah, and professed their allegiance to Him as Saviour and Lord who had redeemed them. But these disciples did not call themselves Christians. "They were called Christians" by others. That is manifest. The reason for this appears as we remember that others give us names according to their impression of our principles and practices.

This name was a witness to the preaching and teaching of the Apostle Paul and the Exhorter or Evangelist Barnabas. Christ was the center and life of all. He was indeed all and in all. This bound together the Old Testament and New Testament times. It is the link that unites the Testaments and the dispensations. It places the cross of Christ as the center about which all history is turned. All light before is focalized in Christ crucified and from His cross all light is coming now. All doctrines and influences proceed from and reach backward to this cross.

This became, as the record implies it was meant to be in God's providence, the family name of the disciples. They had their names as individuals and separate churches might have distinguishing names of local or circumstantial origin. This name of Christians bound all together as one. It is the name for all disciples now as including denominational divisions and before them. It is the duty as it is the high privilege of each disciple to be first a Christian, and then a loyal member of some Christian Church whose tenets as a denomination he may prefer. It is not a just inference that because this name was given in Antioch to the early disciples from the Gentiles that it requires all to have only this name. Indeed it smacks of arrogance to claim to be the only true disciples because of calling themselves Christians. The name is not what Christians choose for themselves. That makes the denominations, or divisions among disciples by their views of minor matters, or principles of administration and government or non-essentials. But Christians are called such by others as over and above or aside from these differences.

This name was a witness to the Christ-like lives and characters of the disciples. They thought and spoke and acted as became Christians. They sought to live like Christ. They were imperfect and but partially sanctified. Still those who gave them the name saw that they professed and really tried to live like Christ. Whether it was meant or not for them, for those of us who profess to be Christians it ought to mean a desire and a prayer to have the heart of Christ. That is mentioned but once in Scripture and that by Christ Himself when He said: "I am meek and lowly in heart." To be Christians indeed, is to be like Him in heart.

It is well that those who are deservedly called Christians by others should remember that the early followers of Jesus were properly called disciples. That means learners. The more truly any may be called Christians the more careful will such be to continue as disciples. It was in this thought that Jesus said: "And learn of Me, for I am meek and lowly of heart." As such Jesus is the Teacher to all true disciples, and He is the example which He would give to follow and to copy. A Christian is always a learner.

This all arose from the Sabbath-school lesson, in our columns this week, and in answer to the question which it called forth. "Why were the disciples called Christians?" Another question now arises. Would we who write, print and read this, be called Christians by those who know us best? With another we close. Are we Christians in heart and life-likeness to Jesus Christ?

WHILE DEATH and destruction are raging about at our doors, while floods and tempests are doing their fearful work in the West, we are prone to forget the thousands who are still perishing with hunger in India. The famine there continues and any relief extended will be in the interests of humanity. A friend suggests that we receive contributions. We will gladly do so and see that they are sent forward to their proper destination.

In contemplation of these calamities near and far how our hearts should arise in gratitude to God for His infinite goodness and mercy in sparing us, and how this should prompt us to extend the hand of help of those who are not favored.

On Sunday of last week the Greensboro Sunday-school raised $8.44 for the famishing in India.

LAST SUNDAY was a red-letter-day with the First Presbyterian church of this city. In the forenoon Dr. Hoge read a paper on the Personnel and Work of the Westminster Assembly; a paper prepared and presented in accordance with requirement of Presbytery. It was a most admirable compend of the history of that memorable time and should be preserved in permanent form.

At night the annual meeting of the Westminster League of the church was held. Dr. Hoge, as President, reported the work of the past twelve months. Dr. Edwin A. Alderman, by invitation of the League addressed the vast audience on the subject of "The Christian State." Our people had expected much of the speaker, who was born and reared in our midst, but were hardly prepared for all they received. In his introduction he said:

"Before I go forward in the matter of my thought, I have it in my heart to declare the great happiness I have in being within the walls of this noble and venerable church of God, touching my life, as it does, in all its tenderest and most sacred ways. The feet of my childhood were bent toward its portals. The godly men who performed its offices, and the godly women who illustrated its teachings, some of whom have entered truly into life and some of whom I see before me this night still unwearying in service—furnished forth my first permanent ideal of the dignity and wholesomeness of upright living.

"Here the beauty that lies in holy things, and in the things that are not seen, entered into my mind and heart. Here the mighty moving story of the Christ and the Christ life mingled with my being to abide there, I shall trust, through all the years alike a rock and a refuge. The sacred building is comelier to the eye and fairer now than then, as is very fitting and proper. But it must always be to me what it was in that golden day of childhood—the typical Presbyterian kirk, from out whose doors, whether situate on the glens and moors of Scotland, or towering to heaven in the cities of the new world, there passes into human society so unfailing a stream of clear-headed, clean-hearted, God-fearing manhood and womanhood."

He held the audience spell-bound for an hour, all too short, in an address which, for striking originality of conception and presentation, for elegance of expression and elevation of style, for profoundest thought and brilliant and masterful rhetoric—could hardly be surpassed.

On Monday evening a reception was given to Dr. Alderman in Abbie Chadbourn Hall, and here he met the friends of his youth and of his later years, who had come with their admiration for his genius and their rejoicings in his success in the past, and their heartiest well-wishes for the future.

A REQUEST. If any minister of our Church has done, (or if his church has done) any work among the Jews during the past year, he will confer a great favor if he will send me a brief account of it within ten days that we may report it to the Assembly.

Respectfully,

J. N. CRAIG,
Secretary.

DAVIDSON NOTES.

The social event of the past month was the formal opening of the new Medical College building last Friday week. Dr. Munroe celebrated the event by giving a general reception to the students of both colleges, the towns people and many visiting friends who came from Charlotte, Hickory, Lenoir, &c., to do honor to the occasion. The building is an architectural gem. It is of brick, four-storied, with two large recitation rooms, a handsomely furnished physician's office, and various other apartments, and is lighted throughout by electricity. On the evening of the reception, the medical faculty, assisted by several young ladies, formed the receiving party, the whole house was aglow with scores of electric lights, dainty refreshments were served to all comers, and every one left with regret declaring the event the pleasantest of the year. The number of "Meds" enrolled this year is the largest in the history of the school, and everything points to a still more successful future.

Dr. Martin lectures to-day before the Presbyterian College of Charlotte. Dr. Smith has recently returned from a lecturing tour in Georgia, South Carolina, and Eastern North Carolina. L.

LETTER FROM RALEIGH.

Our capital city has been "wide awake" all the winter. Especially since the first of January, all has been commotion. Members of the Legislature, lobbyists, general visitors, have crowded the hotels and thronged the streets and filled the churches. Pastors have been encouraged by large congregations, the presence of many strangers lending additional interest to the services. We Presbyterians have tried to keep step in the general "forward march." We have in the city two centres of influence, distinct, yet united. These are the church proper and

PEACE INSTITUTE.

As to the school, every teacher and officer within those walls is a Christian. With one or two exceptions, every one is a Presbyterian. Here, too, may be found within the student body of boarders about twenty-five communicants of the Presbyterian Church. The entire school, with few exceptions, may be seen in the Presbyterian church on Sunday mornings, making a handsome addition of about seventy-five to the congregation. On Sunday evenings, a quiet service is held amongst themselves, and God's word studied under the guidance of one of the teachers. The Young Woman's Christian Association carries on its work, with Miss Fanny Owen, one of the students, as its President, and has been recently much refreshed by a visit from the International Secretary, Miss Preston, of Marion, Va. The Society of Foreign Missions is doing efficient work and having delightful meetings under the general direction of one of the best informed and most earnestly consecrated Presbyterian women in the South or North, Miss E. V. Penick. In all these ways, the school is doing its work for Christ and for our Church; and in many other ways, that may be adverted to, but not made public. The individual cases of benefice wherein the one hand may not know what the other doeth,—wherein the law of usual just demand must yield to the law of love for Christ's sake and the Gospel's—these must await the revelation of all things. I opine that if our editors, our preachers, and our educators, could declare the inner, sacred history of the work under their charge, the public estimate of honor due would be materially changed.

THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

is moving. Within the past month, we have had two spirited meetings, the one in the interest of Foreign Missions and the other, of Home Missions. The elders here can talk, as you would believe if you could have heard Messrs. D. H. Hill, Seymour Whiting, James Dinwiddie and W. S. Primrose. And how you would have enjoyed the music! The full chorus of Peace Institute under that wonderful vocalist of the school, Miss Enid Smith, is hard to surpass. Do we ever think how much we owe to our faithful choir-people? There is one loving woman in our church whose name may not be given here, through whom a master of music now in Heaven seems still to breathe as in the days and years gone by, her service in the choir a Holy communion with him and a perpetual blessing to the church.

You may have heard that we are building a new church. Well, it is literally true. They who ominously said that the commencement of the work would not be seen, see it. About half the building will be devoted to the Sabbath-school, Bible-class rooms, parlor, infant class rooms, etc., and the other half to a handsome auditorium. The brick-work of the former will be finished in about a month, and we expect to occupy it this fall. In this, we can then worship until we build up the church proper. I regard it as an absolutely certain thing that the capital city will have a church edifice worthy of it. Methodists and Baptists and Episcopalians have poured their money into this central place from all over the State. As yet, the local Presbyterians have made no general appeal. And, until our home resources are exhausted, we shall not make any. But, with the blessing of God, we intend to put Presbyterianism here abreast of other denominational influences. We do much for the State. We gladly welcome resident officials who live amongst us for years, but hold their membership elsewhere. We hold up our banner of denominational worship in all our State institutions, our pastor preaching at the Soldiers' Home, the Asylum, the State Prison, and rendering pastoral service in other institutions. We must have a noble building here; and then—a second Presbyterian church!

OUR PREMIUM BIBLE.

Measures 5x7 inches when Closed, and Contains 1,600 Pages of Reading Matter—Several hundred pages of Useful Information, besides the Scriptural Text.

At length we find ourselves with pride and pleasure, able to offer a Bible premium to workers for the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN. The size and quality of type of our Bible is represented by the cut here given:

The binding is flexible, the edges are gilt and the references within are full. The Bible contains besides 1050 pages of Scriptural text, the HELPS to Scripture reading and study including Subject Index, Concordance, a most serviceable General Topical Index, a large number of pages treating of the Titles, Authorship, Distinctive Characters, Contents, &c., of the various books of the Bible, A Description of the Inhabitants, Physical Geography, Customs and Political Condition of the Holy Land at the beginning of the Christian era, the Botany of the Bible, Glossary of Antiquities, Customs, 12 maps, etc., being the Oxford Helps, acknowledged to be the very best, besides 124 full page illustrations of the Languages, Writing, &c., of the Old and New Testaments, of the bas reliefs and the like, discoveries in archæological researches, and now in the British museum—and very much else; making altogether the most desirable copy of the Scriptures for Bible students that has come to our knowledge. The book contains over 1,600 pages.

The Bible is an offer in connection with the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN—the only medium thro which one can become well acquainted with what is going on in the Synod of North Carolina—on the following terms:

We will give this Bible as payment for help rendered to any old subscriber who will send us the name of a BONA FIDE new subscriber along with $2.25.

The new subscriber gets the paper very cheap—we offer it to any bona fide new subscriber for $1.50 for the first year—and the worker gets amply compensated in a magnificently cheap Bible for his or her good work.

A new subscriber to get the Bible can subscribe for himself at $1.50 and then send another new subscriber with $2.25.

The Premium offered is the Genuine Edition of the Oxford Teacher's Bible.

We trust our friends will go to work promptly on this plan.

JOHN McLAURIN,
Manager N. C. Presbyterian.

That which we are, we are all the while teaching, not voluntarily, but involuntarily.—Emerson.

"Our Premium Bible" contains absolutely nothing that tends to discredit the plain Scripture narrative of "Jonah and the whale."

VALUE OF FORESTS.

From "that forbidden tree, whose mortal taste brought death into the world and all our woe," to the "Tree of Life, whose leaves are of the healing of the nations," the Bible is full of instances of the important part trees have played in man's history. We read of Abraham's planting a grove, and in the laws of Moses, the children of Israel were directed to plant fruit trees, and were forbidden, in b[illegible]ng a city, to cut down trees g[illegible]or food, for "the tree of the field is man's life." Absalom, caught by his head in the "thick boughs of a great oak," found the forces of nature working against the enemies of the Lord.

All through the Scriptures trees are used as types. The good man is described as "growing like a green bay tree beside the rivers of water." "The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree, he shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon." And in a beautiful ascription of praise: "All the the trees of the field shall clap their hands."

In secular history we all remember how Birnamwood did march to Dunsinane, bringing to Macbeth overthrow and death. In that epitome of wisdom, the New England Primer, we are told:

"The Koyal Oak, it was the tree,
That saved his royal majesty,"

when Charles II, fleeing from his enemies, took refuge at Boscobel.

In our own country we have had more than one celebrated tree. Besides the Washington Elm at Cambridge, under whose shadow the great leader first drew his sword at the head of an American army, there was the Charter Oak, which held in safe keeping for several years, the liberties of Connecticut. When blown down in 1856, its age was computed to be nearly one thousand years.

There are various quaint old Christian customs in England, connected with trees, among them being the custom of saluting the apple-trees on Christmas morning. Bringing in the Yule Log as part of the festivities, we are familiar with, at least by tradition, and even yet some of us would feel something was lacking if we had to do without holly and mistletoe.

Turning to things more practical, let us consider what would be the effect on our civilization if we had no trees, nor the wood we get from them. Without wood our civilization would be entirely impossible. It is built on wood. From the cradle to the coffin, wood is essential in the manufacture of comforts, luxuries, and even the necessities of life. Over half our people live in wooden houses. For our means of transportation we rely mainly on wood. Wagons, cars and ships are largely made of wood, and our railroads lie on not less than eighty millions of wooden ties. Many medicines come from trees, also rubber, cork, turpentine and spices, and by distillation, numerous new products are derived from wood, such as alcohol. From the bark comes indispensable tanning material. In this list I have not placed the goodly fruits of the trees, nor the shade, the comfort f which we do not estimate until we have to go without it.

Wood yields two-thirds of our population the fuel to warm their dwellings and prepare their food, and we should not forget that without the existence of trees in ages past, there would be no coal stored up in the earth for our use. We are told by the Chief of the Division of Forestry of the United States, that in the forest we find the means to satisfy every direct want of life, and if we realize that the adaptation of this material to man's needs is constantly increasing rather than diminishing, it will be seen how necessary it is that the supply of this most important article should be carefully protected.

Even if it were not for the innumerable, practical uses of trees, if it were only for their beauty we value them, their absence would make the world a very different and much poorer place to live in.

Which of the poets has not loved them, from Shakspeare, to go no further back, who has given us the beautiful picture of the Forest of Arden, to our own New England Lowell. The latter has many loving allusions to trees, and several entire poems devoted to individuals among them. He says:

"I care not how men trace their ancestry,
To ape or Adam; let them please their whim.
But I, in June, am midway to believe,
A tree among my far progenitors.
Such sympathy is mine with all the race,
Such mutual recognition vaguely sweet,
There is between us."

And which of the lovers of our dear old "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" can forget the personal affection he felt for the trees, or fails to find the benediction that awaits us in passing under a horse-chestnut, which he says: "holds its outspread hands over your head, and looks as if it were whispering: 'May grace, mercy and peace be with you.'"

A CHINESE PARTY.

DEAR LITTLE GIRLS:*—The pretty picture-book you made for the little children out here in China came last week, but I did not write to thank you then because I wanted to use it first so that I could tell you about it.

Mrs. Sykes has been here longer than I have and she can speak Chinese very much better; she has a little school for Chinese children and has a Chinaman to teach it. She goes there two or three times a week and talks to the children and explains to them what they are reading. They do not study anything but reading and writing, and they study those all day. When they learn to read a book they learn it by heart, so it takes them longer than it does you. All the mornings they read books written by Chinese men, and in the afternoons they study the Bible and catechism. There are ten little boys and girls in this school and one of them knows one or two catechisms and the whole of St. Matthew's Gospel and part of Mark's by heart; besides several Chinese books. He is about eleven years old.

Next Monday is the Chinese New Year and all the schools have a month holiday, they go to school all summer and this is their only vacation. When the school closed for the holidays Mrs. Sykes wanted to give the children a party, so she invited them to her house, and gave them each a colored paper ball that looks like the balloons you buy at the fair and at Christmas. They had lots of fun throwing them up in the air and catching them; then she gave them each a bowl of something the Chinese call "wun-dun," it is balls of pork meat floating in gravy; they all like it very much. Then we showed them the pretty book you sent and they all crowded around and had a good time looking at it, for the little Chinese children do not have pretty pictures in their houses as you do. When they went home she gave them each some oranges, nuts and candy. All these things for ten children, their teacher and some servants only cost sixty cents, so you see how easy it is to do good here. These little boys and girls are all poor and very dirty, some of them do not have enough to eat and enough to wear to keep them warm, but they love to play and have a good time just the same as you do.

I am glad you gave them a pleasure by sending them the picture-book. Now I want you to pray every day that God will bless these little boys and girls in this school, and that He will help them understand the Bible as they learn it, and will teach them to love and serve Him, instead of wooden idols.

Yours sincerely,

EMMA C. WORTH.

Wusih, China, Jan. 27th, '97.

[*This letter was written to the Fragment Circle of the Westminster League of the First church, Wilmington We trust that others of our little friends will save cards and make scrap books for the little ones in our heathen lands.]

"TILL HE COME."

Then he will come! For there is a glorious promise in those three little words. The world would be darker, sadder, more wearisome without the truth that they hold for us. All of life, with its discipline, its changes, its perplexities—its experience of every kind is touched and illuminated by that word of hope and joy which fell from our Master's own lips before he suffered.

We are to seek Him, serve Him, meet at His table, walk with Him on through the years of our pilgrim life, be they few or many—then, some day, some how, He will come, our pilgrim journey will be over, and we shall be at home forevermore.

To each of us individually the coming of the Lord is when the earthly life is ended, and He calls us to Himself, that "where He is, His servants may be." Surely it is much so to think of death for ourselves. But to his Church—his striving, often sinning, always imperfect, ever longing Church, the promise implied in "till he come" is beyond words precious and inspiring. The Church is to go on holding the faith, spreading the knowledge of it, keeping sacredly his own sacramental feast—on through the years to come as it has through the ages past—faithful, steadfast, loving, living, growing—till one day when the hour has struck and all things are ready, lo! He has come! The long warfare is accomplished, the victory won, the mansions of rest and triumph all prepared, and he has "come again, as he said."

When we sit at our communion table, thinking of the great sacrifice which we celebrate, resting our souls with penitent faith upon the atonement once made, gathering strength for the days of conflict yet before us, let us never fail to dwell also with great joy upon the bright promise of these three words.

Do any ask, as of old, "Where is the promise of His coming?" We answer, here it is, in our communion feast, wherein we "do show the Lord's death, until he come" Each passing year brings large numbers together around that communion table of glad prophecy. The time of fulfillment is in the Lord's own hands, as are also the manner and the accompaniments of his coming. We may try to grasp and interpret the Apostle's words on this subject, or those of the Master himself, but after all our efforts, the understanding of them will be imperfect, for it is poor human language which we must use, and that is not adequate to convey the whole of spiritual truth. The one clear, glorious fact that stands out from it all for our comfort and joy, is that the Lord will come again. Every time we celebrate His dying love at His table, we also proclaim our triumphant faith in the promise of His coming. That feast will never cease to be kept by adoring hearts on earth, until that prediction is fulfilled and its end accomplished—until the Bride is adorned for her husband, and the marriage supper is ready.

Who can be long cast down because of the hardness of the way, or in despair on account of the evil that is in the world, when this promise is ever shining forth out of the darkness, pointing to the advent of Him who will "make all things new?" This is no dream or vision or human speculation, but simple, strong, divine statement of fact. "When you do this that I command you, you declare a certain truth." "Ye do show the Lord's death till he come." There is a rock upon which to stand with unwavering faith and unfaltering fact, until:

"Hope shall change to glad fruition;
Faith to sight, and prayer to praise."

That will be when he has come!—Dorcas Hicks, in Presbyterian.

SMALL COURTESIES.

Habit counts for so much in little things that one cannot look too carefully after the small courtesies in one's own conduct. A writer in the Interior describes a visit to a home where the young people possessed the true politeness which habit had made natural.

One evening I entered a room where several young men with books and work were sitting around the lamp. The young man with the lexicon and grammar on the table before him was the busiest of the group, but he instanly rose and remained standing until I had taken a seat.

The little action was automatic; the habit of his family is to practice small courtesies, and the boys have been trained from childhod to pay deference to women; they always rise whenever a lady—their mother, sister, friend or guest of the house—comes into the room where they are at work.

Neither mother nor sister goes out after dark without an escort. One of the boys can always go out of his way, or find it in his way, to see her safely to a friend's door, or to the meeting which she wishes to attend. Most winning and sweet is the air of good breeding which these young men have acquired, which they wear with an unconscious grace.

"You should not care so much about the merely superficial in conduct, says a friend. "Veneering is only a polish laid on. I approve of the man or woman who is honest, sincere. I can pardon him a little brusqueness, which may be his only misfortune."

It is not veneering to be polite. We are apt to grow confused on this subject, and to fancy that there is a natural conflict between goodness of heart and elegance of deportment. The fact is, life would be a far more agreeable thing if politeness were more assiduously cultivated.—Ex.

"I AM THINE."

Who has so great a right to me as Thou hast? Created by Thee, I belong of necessity to Him who made me. Daily preserved by Thee, the life Thou maintaines ought to be consecrated to Thy service. But the closest tie of all is that Thou hast loved me, redeemed me from death, purchased me with the price of Thine own blood, and thus bound me to Thyself forever. O love amazing and Divine, why didst Thou do all this for one so unlovely and unworthy? It is but another instance of "Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in Thy sight," and, since is has pleased Thee to be thus gracious, and Thou hast made it possible for me to say, "I am Thine," it must naturally follow that I should add, "and all that I have," laying every possession and power at Thy dear feet; for what have I, Lord, of anything good or excellent, which is not Thine own gift to me?—Mrs Spurgeon, in Sword and Trowel.

CHRIST WITHIN.

A lady well known in the literary world writes thus in regard to a friend and herself:

She softens as she grows older, and she is always so lovable. Oh, I hope I shall do so! I hope I shall never grow hard or bitter, with increasing years. I've found the dearest little book—a friend of mine gave it to me. It's my great comfort. I put it under my pillow at night, and I read it the first thing in the morning. It is called "Christ Within." That's the secret of being happy in this world. Money don't bring happiness nor success, nor—no, not even youth.

This makes me think of what Christ said to the woman at Jacob's well: "The water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." It recalls also what Paul wrote to the Colossians; "Christ in you the hope of glory." This is what we all need, and it is all that we need. Commenting on the words quoted from Col. i. 27, Caird says: "If it would strengthen you in your difficulties and struggles to know that Christ was near, to hear him speak, to take hold of his hand—know that he is nearer still than this. Every pure thought that rises in your breast is Christ's suggestion; every holy desire and resolution the proof that he is at hand; every kindling of the spirit into devotion the unconscious recognition of his heavenly presence. Open the door of the heart to him, and the very mind and soul of Jesus will pass into yours; your spirit will be suffused with his; the very heart of Jesus will be beating within your breast."

Yes, "Christ within" is the headspring of the water of life.—Herald and Presbyter.

LITERARY JOTTINGS.

Charlemagne Tower of Pennsylvania, who has been recently appointed minister plenipotentiary to Austria-Hungary, has achieved much prominence in the world of letters. His scholarly work upon "The Marquis de LaFayette in the American Revolution" has won for him a high place among the historians of the country. Mr. Tower is a graduate of Harvard University and has studied in the principal universities of Europe, and has also travelled extensively.

William T. Adams, better known to the children, and especially the boys, as Oliver Optic, died on March 27th, at his home at Dorchester, one of the Water-front suburbs of Boston. Mr. Adams' first work which gained popular favor was the "Riverdale Series," which dwelt particularly upon the home and school life of children. "Young America at Home" and the "Young America Abroad" series were warmly received both in America and Great Britain, 100 000 copies having been sold of "Down the Rhine." From the age of thirty-four until his seventy-third year he wrote systematically, impelled by the love of working out the creatures of his fancy. In all he produced about one hundred and thirty volumes and more than one thousand short stories. Mr. Adams is described "as a man a trifle below the medium height with a round face; gray hair, considerably thinned on the top of his head; a short grizzled beard; the mildest of blue eyes with a half humorous twinkle in them and a slow manner of speaking."

McClure's Magazine is now published on the first day of each month.

A new picture of Charles Dickens, from the domestic s[illegible]y be expected in a book, "My Fath[illegible]l Recall Him," by the late Miss Mamie Dickens, revised by her sister, Mrs. Kate Dickens Perugini.

An interesting story comes to us from Boston, where they tell it with bated breath. It appears that the officials in charge of the Juvenile Department of the Boston Public Library have noticed for the past week or two an unusual demand for copies of Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress. This demand was so much in excess of anything they had ever known that they felt it necessary to investigate the causes of this unprecedented interest in Bunyan. Inquiry revealed the fact that the teacher of history in a well-known school had reached the colonial events of the seventeenth century, and had recommended to all her pupils the perusal of Bunyan's book as a part of the bibliography of the story of the Pilgrim Fathers!—The Bookman.

CHANGES OF ADDRESS.

Correspondents will please note the following changes of address:

Rev. W. C. Clark, from Shelbyville, Tenn., to Augusta, Ky.

NORTH CAROLINA.

St. Andrews, Wilmington:—The report of the past year of this church shows the best financial condition in its history; $700 more having been contributed than last year and $1,700 more than the first year of the present pastorate.

Charlotte:—The religious services which have been held at the First and Second churches have been resumed at Graham St. church.

On last Sabbath there were twenty-five additions to the First church.

First Church, Greensboro:—We have enjoyed a delightful meeting of two weeks in which the pastors, Drs. J. H. and E. W. Smith, were assisted by Rev. A. A Little, of Steele Creek Bro. Little's sermons were uncommonly able and eloquent. Fifteen of the pupils of the Sunday-school have been received into the church as a result of the meeting, making seventy-eight additions in the last twelve months.

Hub and Chadbourn:—Rev. Wm. Black, General Evangelist, recently visited Hub, in Columbus county, where there is no church of any denomination and in whih is situated one of the largest lumber mills in the South. There were several professions of faith and the eleven members who were received on profession and by certificate are petitioning for a church organization. They have subscribed $200 towards a pastor's salary. Mr. Black also visited Chadbourn where a subscription was given of $300 for a church building, and $100 for a pastor's salary. A group of twenty-two here are also anxious for an organization.

Durham:—Rev. W. T. Lingle, of Hampden Sidney, who so acceptably filled the pulpit of this church during March has returned to his duties at the Seminary. Rev. Dr. Jos. R. Wilson preached on last Sabbath and will remain in the city for several weeks.

Concord:—At the quarterly communion on the 4th of April the pastor of the First church, Concord, announced the names of fourteen new communicants received since January. Congregations are large. Our three Sabbath-schools and three prayer-meetings are well attended and the outlook of the work was never more hopeful. We thank God and take courage.

Orange Presbytery:—Met in the Presbyterian church, Mebane, under the call of the moderator, Rev. R. E. Caldwell, March 29th, 1897, to receive and act upon the resignation of Rev. H. C. Kegley, as pastor of Mebane and Bethlehem churches, and to dismiss him to the Presbytery of Western District, "if the way be clear." The way was clear, and Mr Kegley was dismissed accordingly, and has entered upon his new field of labor, as pastor of the Presbyterian church, Union City, Tenn.

Evangelization in Stokes County:—Evangelist R. W. George, conducted a union meeting in the Baptist church at Walnut Cove from the 14th of March to the 23d, preaching twice a day for ten days, except that the Rev. C. Miller preached one sermon. Mr. George does not claim to be educated, but he presented the truths of the Gospel in a plain, simple and practical manner He rebuked sin in unmistakable terms, calling every evil by its name in such language that no one could mistake his meaning, in every instance proving Scripture by Scripture.

Some of the results of the meeting, are that persons who had been unfriendly for years, laid aside their differences and met each other with forgiving spirits and agreed to live in friendly relations the remainder of their days. Thirty-five professed conversion, twenty seven whites and eight colored, (he preached two sermons to the colored.) The whites will join the different denominations, viz.: Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, and Episcopalians.

On the last night of the meeting he preached from Romans, 13:11. "Now it is high time to awake from sleep." He showed from the Scriptures seven points of despair to the sinner: No God, no Christ, no life, no hope, no peace, no excuse, no escape.

At the close of his sermon many stood for prayer, and the converted came forward and he gave them the hand of Christian affection. Altogether, Mr. George has done a great work in Walnut Cove. The town is reaping the benefit of his sermons, and he has made an impression that is imperishable. I. R.

Fifth Creek Church in Concord Presbytery—At a congregational meeting held in Fifth Creek church on March 28th, Mr. H. T. Foster was elected elder, and Messrs. T. P. Gillespie and S. P. Eagle, deacons.

VIRGINIA.

Galena, Wythe County:—Rev. J. Watkins Lacy has taken charge of the church here. He will also preach at Ivanhoe.

Third Church, Richmond:—Rev. C. R. Hyde, pastor. Three additions recently by letter and one upon profession.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Point Pleasant:—Rev. A. E. Grover, pastor. Five members recently received.

Malden:—The third anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. T. L. McCue was celebrated on March 15th. The report of the church and services at missions points was excellent.

ARKANSAS.

Pine Bluff:—Rev. R. G. Pearson recently closed a two weeks' meeting in the First church of which Dr J. L. Caldwell is pastor, The spirit of God was manifest among Christians and many were brought into the church.

KENTUCKY.

Louisville:—The good accomplished through the Moody meetings, in this city, last week, can hardly be estimated. It lies not so much in the direction of conversions from the world as in the stimulation of Christians to self-denial and to zeal in God's service. While it is evident that many worldly-minded Christians were not reached, for an opera the same week was largely attended, yet it is certain that many who were on the edge of worldly-mindedness were impressed with the greater preciousness of communion with God and work for him. Rev. Mr. Brown's preaching was also precious. He is a noted Baptist preacher of London, England The meetings did great good —Christian Observer.

GENERAL.

A large meeting of the members of the Victoria Institute took place on Monday week, to hear a paper on the present aspect of the question of "Evolution or Creation," by Dr. W. Kidd. Starting by reviewing the five lines of the evidence for the evolutionary theory, he quoted Professor Owen's remark in regard to what was called Creation as being "the continuous operation of the ordained becoming of living things," Referring to the various arguments in favor of the theory of creation by evolution, which extreme evolutionists have of late advanced, he pointed out that for the present their scientific value was very questionable; they were based on various lines of evidence, evidence afforded by classification, geographical distribution, rudimentary and vestigial characters, but in all these four cases the evidence was double-edged, whilst in Palæontology, one of our greatest living authorities, as also the late greatest European authority, Barrande, regarded the evidence as against the evolution theory; and Barrande, long a member of the Victoria Institute, was one of the closest observers of modern times. As regards Abiogenesis, Huxley had himself deplored that Biogenesis had "been victorious all along the line," and natural selection had been discarded by Darwin, whilst again it had been held that it was suicidal to advance arguments in favor of evolution from Embryology. In conclusion, Dr. Kidd remarked that it was necessary to study in the controversy as to design in general, that marvellous preparation of the environment for all life. In this region neither "evolution," nor "progressive transformation" "natural selection," "heredity," or anything else, not even "accident," could ever account for the amazing fitness of the organisms about to be. It could hardly be that by means of one mechanical law all vegetable and animal life had been evolved, their requirements being met by other blind laws, such as those of physics and chemistry, a matchless environment being prepared for each coming race Dr. Kidd urged that these considerations pointed to a very temple of design—supremely wise, supremely powerful. Professor E. Hull, F. R. S., Mr. D. Howard, F. C. S., and Professor H. L. Orchard, B Sc., and many others took part in the discussion which followed, the first drawing special attention to the great value in the controversy of the Duke of Argyll's new article in the Nineteenth Century.

The Institute has recently called attention to the late regrettable revival in certain quarters of the somewhat antiquated theory that man has descended from the ape, and has pointed to the fact that Professor Virchow—whose remarkable discoveries as to the cell theory were laid before Royal Society last year—when President of the European Anthropological Congress at Vienna, showed that, on this subject, the latest investigations had widened the chasm between the two, and that "to the anatomist the distinctions between man and the ape reached so far that almost every fragment of either sufficed for a diagnosis."—The London Rock.

PERSONALS.

We note that Rev. C. E. Hodgin, of Antioch, N. C., and a member of the Senior Class of Union Seminary, has received a call to the church of Bennettsville, S. C.

A letter from Rev. Dr. L. B. Turnbull written "On the Nile" and dated March 13th, states that all are well and enjoying the trip to the fullest extent. We bespeak for our readers much pleasure in the perusal of this letter which will be published in our next issue.

In a letter received from Miss Claude Grier, of Tokushima, she says: "To may be amused to hear that we use Webster's Blue Back Speller. It serves the purpose well as the Chinese wish to be taught spelling and pronunciation especially the latter, and require much drill in the vowel sounds.

Rev. J. A. Ramsey, of Hickory, has received a call to the church at Lebanon Ky.

Rev. Edward Mack, of St. Louis, has received a call to the First church of Norfolk, Va.

Rev. Dr. Jas. Y. Fair has accepted the call to the Independent church, Savannah, and will assume his new pastorate on May 1st.

Rev. W. G. White, of Charlotte, will leave for his distant field in California on the 26th inst.

We regret to note the bereavement recently sustained by Rev. W. E. McIlwain of Florida, and Rev. Robt. McIlwain of this State in the death of their mother which occurred on March 24th.

Our sympathy is extended Rev. A. N. Ferguson upon the death of his brother, Mr. John C. Ferguson, an elder in Union church.

Arrangements are about completed for Mr. E. B. Fincher, of the Senior Class at Louisville, to take charge of a group of churches in Paris, Presbytery, Texas, consisting of Campbell, Commerce, Cooper and Fairlie. Similar arrangements are under way for another senior from the same seminary to take charge of Sulphur Springs, Pittsburg and Mount Pleasant. Mr. M. P. Slaughter, a candidate in the seminary, is to supply the Green Hill church during the summer vacation.—Trans-Mississippi Presbyterian.

Dr. J. N. Craig, of Atlanta, delivered an interesting lecture to the students of Union Seminary last Wednesday night, March 31st, on the subject of Home Missions.

Mr. W. A. Gillon, of the Senior Class of Union Seminary has accepted a call to the First Presbyterian church of Covington, Tenn., and will begin his work there the second Sunday of April.

Rev. J. Ernest Thacker, of Louisville, Ky., has received a call to the church at Alexandria, Va.

Rev Dr. D. S. Sydenstricker, of Academy, Va., who has been ill is again able to resume his labors,

Rev. E. E. Gillespie, of Greensboro, a member of the senior class of Union Seminary, will have charge of the mission field in North Wilkes county, N. C. It is hoped Rev. Chas. Rankin also of the same city and class will accept the call to labor in the Stokes county field.

We regret to note the sickness of Rev. Dr. H. M. Woods of Tsing Kiang-pu, China. A letter to friends in this country stated that he would leave on Feb 23d for Shanghai where he would receive special treament, Dr. Jas. B. Woods accompanying him.

Rev. Dr. Jos. R. Wilson spent a few days in Wilmington last week to the great pleasure of many friends.

Rev. W. J. Sechrest, of Orange, Texas, is spending a month at Moscow in that State.

Rev. James N. Ivy, of Weatherford, Texas, a member of the Senior class of the Seminary at Clarksville, will take charge of the Cisco group of churches.

PROGRAMME.

The following is the programme for the Westminster celebration, by Concord Presbytery, April 29th, proposed by the committee appointed "to prepare a programme and select speakers for the occasion:"

1. Historical Introduction, by Rev. J. Rumple, D. D.

2. Presbyterianism and Education, by Rev. J. B. Shearer, D D,

3. Free Discussions by Presbytery, in which all the members are asked to take part.

4. The Theological Teachers and Teachings Pre-Determining the Westminster Assembly to Calvinism by Rev. Eugene Daniel, D. D.

For the N. C. Presbyterian.

LOUISVILLE SEMINARY.

In less than a month the fourth session of this institution will close. In many respects it has been a remarkably prosperous one, and evident tokens of the divine favor have rested on the work of the year. The Annual Announcement, soon to be issued, will show an attendance of sixty-seven students; and the teaching force has remained without a change. The students are an excellent company of young men, and they have shown diligence in study, an earnest spirit, and devotion to mission work in various points in the city. The health of both professors and students has been remarkably good, so that very little time has been lost through sickness. The new property on Broadway, which a liberal friend put into the possession of the Seminary, has been of very great value for class-room work, and for refectory purposes. This property is so spacious that additional buildings can be erected thereon, so soon as means is provided for this purpose.

The sermon at the close of the session will be preached by the Rev. S. M. Neel, D. D., of Kansas City, and it is expected that the missionary address will be given by Rev. A. A. Wallace, of Mexico, Mo., On April 29th, the closing exercises will be held, and the address to the graduating class will be given by Rev. Professor Hemphill, D. D. There will be some seventeen applicants for the B. D. degree, and several others will complete their course, so that about twenty will go forth to the active work of the ministry this year. Most of these have already fields of labor in view; and many of the students in the other classes will be engaged in mission work under their respective Presbyteries during the summer vacation.

For some time the Board of Directors, through its Executive Committee, and in conference with the Faculty, has had the matter of the Students' Aid Fund under serious consideration. At a meeting recently held it was decided to make no promise of aid from the resources of the Seminary to students for the coming session. For some time indeed this action has been contemplated, and the present was deemed an opportune time to inaugurate this change of policy. It is the hope of the Board and Faculty that friends of the Seminary will establish scholarships to be awarded by examination on the basis of character and attainments. It is also proposed to provide in certain departments some advanced courses of study which may prove useful to ministers and others who desire to spend only a single session at the Seminary. The advantages of a Seminary situated as this is, are evidently such as to attract students in sufficient numbers to render its work of large service to the Church. This year one-half of the students at the Seminary receive no aid from its funds.

Good rooms, well furnished, are provided free of charge. These, together with fuel, light, attendance and board at the refectory are provided at the rate of $3.00 a week, which barely covers expenses. Books are obtained at reduced rates, and the entire expenses for the session of seven months need not exceed $200. Reduced rates on the railways can also be obtained. By the end of this session the graduates of the Seminary will likely number forty-six. Five are already in the Foreign field, and others are ready to go. The liberality of its friends will, no doubt, soon establish the Seminary on such a solid basis as to fit it, by the blessing of God, to do a very useful service to the Church in sending forth godly men well qualified to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ.

FOREIGN MISSION RECEIPTS FOR MARCH, AND FOR THE YEAR ENDING MARCH 31.

By the blessing of God we have closed the year without debt. The receipts for March were $17,055.66, which is less than those of last March by $342.17. About $6,000.00 of the amount were received during the last three days of the month.

The receipts for the year were $143,709.46, being a gain on those of last year of $1,609.69. But we begin the new year with larger responsibilities and smaller resources than last year. The number of missionaries on the roll April 1st, 1896, was 141. The number now on the roll is 150. The balance in the treasury April 1st, 1896, was $10,223.57. The balance this year is probably less than $1,000.00.

Consequently, if we are to keep up with the demands of this year as they arise, we must begin at the very beginning to work and pray for larger contributions. There may be some slight alteration in the above figures when the books have been finally adjusted. They are as nearly accurate as can be given at this date.

S. H. CHESTER,
Secretary.

THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES

Will convene at Charlotte, N. C., in the First Presbyterian church, on the third Thursday (20th day) of May, 1897, at 11 o'clock a. m. The opening sermon will be preached by the moderator of the last Assembly.

The undersigned will be present in the Lecture Room of said church on Wednesday, May 19th, at 8 o'clock p. m., and also on the following morning at 9 o'clock, to enroll the names of commissioners.

JOSEPH R. WILSON, Stated Clerk,
ROBERT P. FARRIS, Permanent Clerk.

N. B.—Treasurers of Presbyteries are urgently requested to forward to the treasurer of General Assembly, at Charlotte, all sums due for Presbyterial assessments, as well for previous years as for the year 1897.

JOSEPH R. WILSON,
Treasurer.

We Want You

to subscribe for the Presbyterian Quarterly. It is the one magazine all Presbyterians should read. Its articles are written by eminent Presbyterians—both clergymen and laymen—to Presbyterians. It is edited under the auspices of an association of ministers of the Presbyterian Church.

Every article in it is vitally interesting—it is orthodox—is progressive—stimulates study and investigation.

The Presbyterian Quarterly has always been $3.00 a year and has always been worth it. It is now $1.00 a year but is still worth $3.00. We have lowered its price because we want to put it in every Presbyterian's hands, but there has been no change in either the number of pages or the appearance of the magazine. Send for a sample copy.

HIS FIRST CHANCE.

A young man had just joined the church. He was in the very first glow of religious elation, and eager to do something definite and important to prove himself worthy of the Christian name. It was a country church, old and conservative. There were few young people in it, and there did not seem to be any opportunity for practical everyday Christian work.

In the congregation was a man who had been a drunkard. To use a common phrase, he had reformed, and had become a changed man. He was thinking seriously of uniting with the church when his probation had ended.

One day, in stress of temptation, he was overcome by his old appetite. He remained under its debasing influences for about a week. Then he went in great trouble to a friend and said:

"What shall I do?"

"Do?" said the other. "There is but one thing to do. Go to the prayer meeting. Take your usual seat, rise at the usual time and tell the whole story. Ask the pardon of God and of the church. Do this, if you are sorry. If you are not sorry, stay away."

The poor fellow went, and did as he had been advised. Tremblingly he told of his temptation and of his fall. With tears he offered his confession and asked that the petitions of God's people might be offered for divine help, that he might never again be overcome by temptation: but not a word of encouraging response or a prayer in his behalf was offered by any of the members present.

The meeting ended. The people filed out past him on their way from the church. Not one of them approached him. It seems incredible—but this is no fiction. They who had vowed to cherish and help the penitent and the fallen, went out and left their erring brother standing alone in his shame in the house of God.

"It can't be true. He must be a hypocrite," one said to another as an excuse for this neglect.

"It is no use to coddle such men. They are a disgrace to the parish," said a third.

The young church member passed out with the rest. Some feeling of sympathy agitated his heart. He watched the retreating figure of the abashed and humiliated man as he slunk away from the church with bowed head. The sight troubled him. He went home, but could not stay. He wandered out again, and his anxiety led him to the drunkard's house.

He hardly dared to knock at the door. He grew hot and cold, wondering what he ought to do. At last, he thought he heard a woman weeping within, and, summoning all his courage he rang the bell, and then wished himself a thousand miles away. He had never spoken to the man in his life, and he thought that probably his intrusion would be considered impertinent.

The wife admitted him, weeping.

"Oh," she said, "help me! Maybe you've come in time to stop it John is going away. He's packing up. He's going for good! He's leaving me and the children! He'll never come back. He says he'll never set foot in this town again. He's so ashamed for what he has done and the way they've treated him. He never can hold up his head again. Oh! can't you plead with him and prevent him from going?"

The young man forgot his timidity. "I will try," he said. He went into the room with the discouraged penitent and shut the door. The sounds of pleading—then of prayer—came through the partition to the wife's eager ears. An hour later the visitor came out. Behind him walked a man whose head was erect.

"Well, Jenny," he said, "seems I've got one friend left in this place. As long as he sticks I'll try to stick, too."

Hope and determination were stirred. Another attempt for permanent reform would now be made The unselfishness of the young Christian, in doing what others did not do, had accomplished this. The man was saved to his family. His soul had been strengthened in its fight with evil. Such consecrated work by every Christian would win supreme honor to Christianity and hasten the universal reign of Christ in the hearts and lives of men.—The Youth's Companion.

A PRACTICAL RELIGION.

We want a religion that softens the step and tunes the voice to melody and checks the impatient exclamation and harsh rebuke; a religion that is polite, defferential to superiors, courteous to inferiors and considerate to friends; a religion that goes into the family and keeps the husband from being cross when dinner is late, and keeps the wife from fretting when the husband tracks the newly washed floor with his muddy boots, and makes the husband mindful of the scraper and door mat; keeps the mother patient when the baby is cross, and amuses the children as well as instructs them: cares for the servants besides paying them promptly; projects the honeymoon into the harvest moon, and makes the happy home like the Eastern fig tree, bearing in its bosom at once the beauty of its tender blossoms and the glory of the ripened fruit. We want a religion that shall interpose between the ruts and gullies and rocks of the highways of life and the sensitive souls that are travelling over them.—Ex.

TRANSFORMING POWER.

The test of the truth of Christ's religion is personal experience. Men who have never sought knowledge of Jesus by the way of faith may truthfully declare themselves Agnostics. But they are such from deliberate choice, and their nonfaith is met by the personal experience of millions who have realized in their lives that Jesus is the Christ. Here, for instance, is a man whose whole life has been transformed. It was not his own will that gave him power to master the evil appetites and the low passions which for a time dominated him. Of himself, as he well knows, he could have done nothing. But the Spirit came, and behold, all things were new. We may see such trophies of grace on every hand, if we will but open our eyes and look for them, men and women who were brutish in their ways, bound in chains to debasing sin, the willing slaves of the Devil, who suddenly shook off debasing habits and desires and companionships, and have since walked erect among their fellows, the Lord's freemen. Such amazing changes cannot be accounted for on material grounds. They present psychological facts worthy of the attention of the philosopher, but, more than this, they furnish a conclusive proof and illustration of the transforming power of the Gospel. St. Paul's words, written to the Church of Corinth, and recalling the contrast between the former estate of its members and their then present happy lot, is true of many in our own time. "And such were some of you—but ye are washed."—Ex.

SUPPORTING THE PASTOR.

Supporting the pastor is generally taken as a reference to salary paying. But let us apply it to the moral and spiritual support which people owe their minister.

Support him by attendance on his preaching, and by attention too. That parable of our Lord which we are accustomed to call the Parable of the Sower, the Germans name the "Parable of the Four Soils." And very fittingly, for the stress of the story is not so much on the seed as the different kinds of ground on which the seed fell. It teaches lessons to the hearer rather than to the preacher. "He that hath ears to hear let him hear." Be good listeners. Talk of the discourse afterwards. If a sermon has done you good tell your pastor. Whisper it in his ear along with a warm pressure of the hand, and if there be a tear with the quiet word or a choking utterance all the better. That kind of approbation will not turn his head, nor make him vain, but will greatly help him and also do yourself good. And support him in what he preaches. Stand up for him and back him up when in loyalty to God's Word he may preach some truth which is obnoxious to the carnal and gainsaying mind, whose only test of doctrine is agreeableness to the natural man and its harmony with an earthly taste. Resist the temptation which sometimes besets a membership, or a session, that the minister of the pulpit better not touch on those subjects which cut across the grain in an unrenewed heart. Edward Payson at one time of discouragement in his remarkably blessed ministry said as an effect of his preaching that every mouth seemed open to revile and "Christians instead of supporting me seem to think it will not do tell the whole truth, lest the world should be too much offended."

Support him in his work by yourself helping him therein. Paul speaks of his "fellow workers" and of his "helpers." The pastor is the leader indeed. But that implies that others are following. Otherwise he could not be called leader; he would be a lonesome traveller on the way. Correlative to the captain is soldiers of the line. Sometimes the people of a church are remarkably like the grammatical subject whose verb is in the passive voice—they think they are only to be "acted upon." They must wait for a pastor to warm them up, to "revive" them, and fairly carry them along, if not "on flowery beds of ease," yet in good strong arms. They seem to think of the whole church business as if they were each so much of inanimate substance, and that their minister is to "build them up" much as he would a stone wall, by sheer lifting power.

In this same mistaken spirit is another demand. They want a man who will "draw," as they call it. And they have a high standard of qualification for him of the pulpit in order to this "drawing." But let the Saviour's two-fold illustration of the matter by the branches of the vine which have life and sap in themselves, and the trees which yield fruit, give us a truer conception of what is meant by church life and growth. And when we wish for a minister who will "draw," let us also see the importance of a church that draws. Consider that side of the drawing question. By the example of intelligent and unvarying adherence to your own church, by uprightness of life ever "walking in wisdom towards them that are without," by kindly interest in the welfare of others, by Christian courtesy in the aisles, by due regard for the neat and seemly externals of the house of God, by a fidelity and cheerfulness in church work which can be seen and read of all men—surely these are some of the things that will help to make your church one that "draws."—Mid-Continent.

In time of revival there are accessions to the churches by certificate as well as on profession. It is a sign of revival when church letters are called for, or looked up and brought out of hiding places, and handed to the session. Many a pastor has found that it required as much personal invitation and solicitation to bring some people into the church by certificate as to lead others to a profession of faith. Church-membership sits too lightly on some, after they have changed their residence, and they do not identify themselves with the church in the new home as promptly as they should. A time of revival brings the certificates to light.—Herald and Presbyter.

The Same... Old Sarsaparilla.

That's Ayer's. The same old sarsaparilla as it was made and sold by Dr. J. C. Ayer 50 years ago. In the laboratory it is different. There modern appliances lend speed to skill and experience. But the sarsaparilla is the same old sarsaparilla that made the record—50 years of cures. Why don't we better it? Well, we're much in the condition of the Bishop and the raspberry: "Doubtless," he said, "God might have made a better berry. But doubtless, also, He never did." Why don't we better the sarsaparilla? We can't. We are using the same old plant that cured the Indians and the Spaniards. It has not been bettered. And since we make sarsaparilla compound out of sarsaparilla plant, we see no way of improvement. Of course, if we were making some secret chemical compound we might.... But we're not. We're making the same old sarsaparilla to cure the same old diseases. You can tell it's the same old sarsaparilla because it works the same old cures. It's the sovereign blood purifier, and—it's Ayers.

Second Quarter—Lesson III.

April 18, 1897.—Acts xi: 19-26.

Commit to memory verses 21-24.

Subject.—Gentiles Converted at Antioch.

Golden Text. "Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life." Acts xi: 18.

CATECHISM.

Question. What are the benefits which in this life do accompany or flow from justification, adoption and sanctification?

Answer. The benefits which in this life do accompany or flow from justification, adoption, and sanctification, are assurance of God's love, peace of conscience, joy in the Holy Ghost, increase of grace and perseverance therein to the end.

Time. A. D., 40-44.
Place. Antioch.

INTRODUCTORY.

In the six lessons from the Acts of the Apostles, we have traced the growth of the Gospel of grace in Judea and Samaria with final reference to the churches in Galilee and the conversion of the first Gentile convert Cornelius in Cesarea. We now turn back a few years in the history to trace in another direction the results of the movement from Jerusalem after the death of Stephen. The disciples have gone everywhere preaching the word. They have had great success in Samaria, Joppa, Lydda and Cesarea. Now we may follow them up the coast of the Mediterranean to the modern Beyrut and thence to Antioch to Cyprus, Cilicia and Cyrene. At Antioch many are converted from the Gentiles, and this city becomes a new center, both by its location and in the character of its disciples. "It is the first Gentile church and is the base of operations for the great missionary labors among the Gentiles all over the world." Peloubet. Peter meanwhile had returned to Jerusalem and had reported the work of grace in Cesarea.

LESSON NOTES.

Vs. 19. They. The disciples, which were scattered from Jerusalem by the persecution begun at the death of Stephen, the first Christian martyr. Phenice the same as Phenicia. Cyprus, a large island in the Mediterranean. Antioch, the capital of Syria, on the Orantes 300 miles north of Jerusalem. At that time the third city in wealth and population in the Roman Empire. To....the Jews only As the Gospel was offered to them first and these disciples had not yet learned to go to the Gentiles also.

Vs. 20. Some of them. The scattered disciples. Men of Cyprus. Jew natives of Cyprus and Cyrene who had been living at Jerusalem and spoke Greek, were less intensely Jewish than those who had always lived in Jerusalem. Spake unto the Grecians, as in R. V. Greeks, not Hellenists. This was the new departure to preach to Greeks.

Vs. 21. The hand. The symbol of the power and work of the Lord, the Head of the Church. Great numbers believed, thus proving that the Lord was saving them, as they turned to the Lord, accepting Christ as Saviour, becoming His disciples.

Vs. 22. These things. The report of these things which the Lord wrought. The church which was at Jerusalem was in a measure prepared for this new departure by the work in Samaria and the conversion of Cornelius. They sent forth Barnabas to learn the circumstances, to prevent abuses or discord and to encourage and instruct the new disciples, and preserve unity with the mother Church. The choice of Barnabas was wise because the Church at Jerusalem had confidence in his judgment and character and being a native of Cyprus only sixty miles from Antioch he was familiar with the place and people and knew the language; and being a GrecianJew he would be in sympathy with the movement.

Vs. 23. When he came. The result is recorded in three items of what he felt and what he did. He had seen the grace of God. The real source of the wonderful work. He could have seen many imperfections in the new disciples, but he looked to the results in spite of these and corrected them by the grace of God. Was glad. Showing what kind of man he was by what gave him delight. Here it was in the deliverance from sin, escape from punishment, bestowal of great blessings and the good they could do. And exhorted. Using his especial gift (10: 36) but more than mere exhortation, the word means gave comfort and strengthened from the same root as the Paraclete word. With purpose of heart. With whole choice of soul, with will and affection. Cleave unto the Lord. The only way to stand firm and strong.

Vs. 24. A good man. Not merely honest and upright, but generous, kindly, loving, conciliating. Full of the Holy Ghost. Who possessed him to work sanctification, give comfort and use in the service. And of faith. Which accepted and appropriated all that Christ did for him, now to make real in his life. As a result necessary from these three things. Much people was added unto the Lord.

Vs. 25. Then departed Barnabas. As the numbers were too great for one alone: an immense field was ripening and there was need of counsel and wisdom. But the especial need was of a teacher after the exhorter, as the pastor comes after the work of the evangelist. To seek Saul. "The word "seek" implies diligent and anxious search." Alexander.

Vs. 26. They. Barnabas and Paul met a whole year, with the Church at their places of worship and taught. First called Christians. Meaning simply belonging to Christ or of Christ's family, and first given as a name to the disciples by the Gentiles as they were not all Jews, but all accepted the Messiaship of Christ, believed on Him as Saviour and took Him as Lord

PRACTICAL POINTS.

The application of this lesson will notice specially the true Christian spirit in this whole movement. Two opposite tendencies of mind worked together in the planting and training of this Church. Barnabas had been the first friend of Paul at Jerusalem and now seeks him out in the retirement of Cilicia where he was preparing for the work.

1. Both these men were needed.
2. They reached different results.
2. Each could recognize the good in the other.

Together they were stronger than both separately.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S COLUMN.

Lesson for week ending Sunday, April 18th, 1897.

BY REV. B. E. WALLACE.

Different kinds of Death and the Conquest of them. 1 Cor. 15: 50-58.

Text for the week:

"But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept." 1 Cor. 15: 20.

Daily Readings:

Monday, Death Escaped. Ex. 12: 22-30.
Tuesday, Our Passover, 1 Cor. 5: 1-8.
Wednesday, Death Escaped, 2 Kings 2: 6-12.
Thursday, Our Ascension, Col 2: 8-15; 3: 1.
Friday, Death Escaped, Gen. 5: 18-24.
Saturday, Our Escape, Jno. 8: 51-59
Sunday, Topic, 1 Cor. 15: 50-58.

Suggestions for Leaders:

1. Use this for an Easter lesson.

2. Introduce your meeting with a special song service bearing on the Resurrection.

3. Read the account of Christ's resurrection and show how this is the Christian's hope of eternal life.

4. Make special prayers that He who is the Resurrection and the Life might bring to life the souls of your congregation "dead in trespasses and in sins."

Notes:

This a Live Lesson. Life out of Death. A mystery indeed, yet the most glorious truth of all the Gospel. If the dead rise not then is Christ not risen. If Christ be not risen then is our preaching in vain. We preach Christ crucified—the atonement for sin—the satisfaction of the law—the only substitute for the sinner. But this is not all. He is not a tenant of the tomb whom we preach, but a risen Savior. The arms of death could not hold the Prince of Life. The moulds and damps of earth could not decay the body of the Lord of Heaven and Earth. He conquered death, took away its sting and made the tomb but the entrance way to Heaven.

"He is not here, but is risen" is a theme too joyful, and a chord too sweet, and a sound too necessary to be heard by the sleeping millions of earth for Christians to be silent to-day—

Wake up ye singers of Zion!
Tune your harps,
Raise your voices,
That the dead souls of earth may hear the joyful message:
He arose! He arose!
Hallelujah, Christ arose!

OPEN DOOR NOTES.

A C. E. Society has been organized at Valdese, N C.

The Westminster League of Malden, W. Va, has a membership of fifty and is doing excellent work.

The Westminster League of Abiline Texas, recently celebrated its first anniversary. The society reports an increase of members in both the Senior and Junior branch, and much good work done.

HOW THE JUNIOR SOCIETY WAS STARTED.

As I watched the children while they gathered for their Junior rally last year in Des Moines, there passed before my eyes a picture of the first Junior rally ever held. Instead of the great Tabernacle with its audience of hundreds waiting for the children, I saw a school room where I sat quite alone, tired with the day's work. In place of the decorations, the flowers, were the blackboards still showing the day's successes and defeats. At four o'clock of a dull March day perhaps one's eyes see the defeats most plainly.

Instead of banner and song and the sound of hundreds of young feet, I listened for the familiar voices in the hall, fearing to miss every one of our promised number. Again I saw the bright young faces as our ten came in, and felt again the quick thrill of hope in their future, with all its possibilities.

It was not a day of broad views for one, at least, and I caught no sound of the coming march of Juniors all through our own country and in lands far away. But hope was strong that in one public school the power of early Christian living should be felt, until its whole tone should be raised to a higher standard.

Some of us recall Mr. Cowan's earnest words that day, and can see the light in his eyes, and hear again his strong, hopeful tone as he told us what he expected us to be and do. Our Sunday-school superintendent, Professor Fairfield, touched on the difficulties and dangers of our undertaking, and the pledge seemed a very serious and solemn thing as we slowly studied its phrasing.

I can see to-night the earnest attention of our ten as they listened, for I was at leisure to study their faces, and to try to read the signs of what was to come. And at last, as one and another quietly and thoughtfully wrote his name beneath the pledge, the March day seemed to brighten, and a new light touched the schoolroom walls; hope and courage rose high, and we elder people silently pledged ourselves to steady, persistent work in behalf of the new enterprise.

Said one of the charter members to me lately, "We had only one committee then;" and in thinking of it later it seemed we needed only one, for every member was a minuteman ready to do anything at any time, losing little time in debating as to his fitness for it, but doing his very best, and making use of failure to see how it could be a better best next time.

In the first few months we simply learned how together. No topic cards, no hints on Junior work, no other superintendents to consult, no organization as a model, we cheerfully blundered away together.

Though we had but one committee no society perhaps ever had a greater number of committee-rooms. Now it was a corner of the schoolroom, again a section of the hall, the wide old outside door, a spot on the play-ground, the sidewalk when our ways lay in the same direction or chance brought us together on the street. The very sight of each other was a suggestion that developed into some new plan.

And always it was our work. There must be a number here whose busy fingers worked away after school hours copying topics for our weekly study; always to help each other, to make our society better. So it was no mere task work, but real service, when the small fingers cramped over the pencil, and the bright head drooped over the monotonous task.

Dear little fellow workers, they taught their leaders more than they were taught. —Miss Belle E. Smith, in Golden Rule.

QUERY.—At Concord, N. C., March 2nd, 1897, little John Caldwell Query, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Caldwell Query, aged six years. "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

FERGUSON.—At his home near Cameron, N. C., on March 25th, 1897, Mr. John C. Ferguson in his 73rd years. He was a ruling elder in Union church, honored, efficient, and "faithful unto death." He was an older brother of Rev. A. N. Ferguson. His Christian character was ever above reproach. One of the purest and best of godly men has answered the summons to his last reward.

SCOTT.—At Mebane, N. C., on Monday, March 22nd, Mr. Walter H. Scott, 25 years of age.

Deceased was eldest son of Mr. Samuel K. Scott, in whose home he was lying, within a week of death with that dread disease consumption, when his father was so suddenly called away.

Mr. Scott was just in the prime of a young manhood of exceptional promise, when he was cut down. He was active and energetic in business, and naturally of strong and decided character, and the same qualities marked his conduct as a Christian and were stamped upon his religious convictions. He was whole hearted. Thrown by the requirements of his business at times into godless associations, he never hid his colors or forgot that the vows of God were upon him. Early in life he connected himself with Hawfields church. Later, upon removing to Danville, Va., he joined the Presbyterian church there. And wherever the calls of business carried him, he identified himself with the Sunday-school and church work of the place. In his last days his faith was clear and the anchor of his hope held within the vail. 'His sun is indeed gone down at noon—before the noon of life. but, we trust, to rise upon brighter and happier shores.
